The coming week will tell how able are the Italian forces to prevent their defeat turning into a rout. With Koritza, the main Italian base in Albania, in Greek hands, defence of the secondary base to the south of Argirocastro will be increasingly difficult and with good luck the Greek might conceivably threaten Porto Edda, the Albanian Adriatic port through which supplies and reinforcements are received from Italy.

If Germany acts in an attempt to put an end to Greek resistance, it will be through Bulgaria, and probably under the pretext of helping the Bulgarians obtain an outlet to the Aegean through Thrace. A few weeks ago Greek resistance to such a thrust, if made with the usual Prussian thoroughness, would have been considered hopeless, but no one underestimates now the fighting qualities of the Greek soldier and the generalship of his officers.

That Bulgaria is involved in German plans was indicated by a visit to Hitler by King Boris. Next week Bulgaria is expected to join the Axis, as did Hungary this week. Germany's penchant for showmanship also moved her to summon representatives of two countries already occupied by German troops, Rumania and Slovakia, to Berlin to 'join' the Rome-ly Greece and Turkey remained firmly opposed to the Axis. Yugoslavia's position was considered doubtful.

While Hitler and his entourage concentrated on diplomatic activity, the Nazi air force sought to duplicate the previous week's devastation at Coventry with heavy attacks on Midland towns and ports such as Liverpool and Southampton. The R.A.F. hit back at Berlin and at the southern ports of Brindisi and Bari in Italy. A hit on the liner Europa in Bremen Harbor was reported, while production at the great Krupp armament works at Essen was declared cut in half by repeated bombings.

Britain began a new session of parliament and heard a confident message in the Speech from the Throne, which was read, as in years of peace, by the King. Britain was cheered too, by increasing support from the United States, the latest measure being the famed Sperry bomb sight, which had been a military secret, together with 26 long-range bombers. In addition early transfer of 20 of the United States army's huge "flying fortresses" was promised.

Glancing back 25 years: The battle of Ctesiphon, 18 miles from Baghdad, was fought November 22, 1915, Sir Charles Townsend's Indian troops defeating the Turks and taking 800 prisoners. Allied forces in Serbia continued to retreat slowly toward the Greek and Albanian frontiers in the week of November 17 - 23, but positions in other theatres of war were unchanged.

NOT AN ITALIAN

Completing its picture of the new front line, the high command said Greeks in the central — Pindus mountain—sector captured Leskoviki and pushed on beyond the Albanian frontier towns of Erseka and Borova.

Along the coast—in the Epirus sector—the Greeks were reported to have shoved the last of the Italians across the border from the Greek frontier town of Filiates.

The Greek announcement that six Fascist divisions (72,000 to 90,000 men) had failed to hold Koritza despite their strong concrete defence positions guarded by barbed wire indicated that the battle for the key town was of greater magnitude than hinted in any previous reports.

The Greek high command said captured Italian equipment included eighty large and small guns, anti-aircraft guns, twenty tanks, more than 250 automobiles, more than 1,-500 motorcycles and bicycles, considerable quantities of munitions, and supplies of food and clothing.

Retreating Italians were reported bombed heavily by Greek and British planes swooping into mountain passes jammed with troops. Reports from Salonika said British planes alone were believed to have shot down 40 Italian planes within the past few days.

Greek accounts of the entry of their troops into Koritza, which the Greek press termed a "liberated Greek city", said the soldiers were greeted outside the city by the mayor, priest and a delegation of citizens. Cheering citizens were said to have lined flower-strewn streets, decked with Greek flags.

NOMINATIONS

Marmora and Lake

Marmora — (Special)—The possibility of an election for Marmora and Lake Township loomed at the nomination meeting held in Marmora Town Hall on Friday afternoon. John A. Bell was again nominated for Reeve and ex-Councillor Irwin McCoy also received nomination for that office. For the four seats on the council, six names were submitted: W. J. Pack, C. Kelly, A. Tompkins, G. Davidson, Bert Jones and G. Brown. The first four are the retiring councillors. Chas. Jones, Township Clerk presided for the meeting which followed the nominations.

Marmora Village

The Town Hall was the scene at night as in past years for Marmora are the returning councillors. Chas. Prentice, Village Clerk, presiding. Acclamation was accorded Reeve W. R. Linn and H. A. Burwash, D. P. Marett and T. E. Neal were re-elected as trustees on the Public School Board.

F. R. Wells returns as Hydro Commissioner with George Forestell as his new confrere in succession to Dr. D. L. Curtis who has left the village. An election may result through five nominations being received for the four seats on the council. In addition to last years' Councillors receiving nomination, John R. Hart elected to be nominated. The full list of those nominated is W. A. Sanderson, R. E Neal, V. Lynch, Lewis Phillips and John R. Hart. At the close of the nomination speeches were made by the nominees the five for councillorship declaring their intention to stand and those seeking re-election giving an account of their stewardship for the term expired.

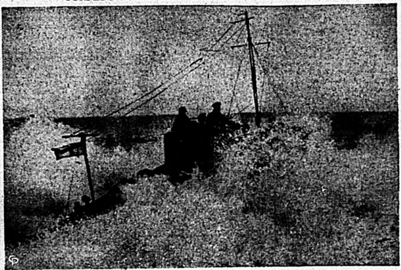
TORPEDO BOATS HELP PATROL ENGLISH COAST



Somewhere off the coast of England, this torpedo boat is really making the spray fly as it speeds along on patrol duty. So high does the water leap that it obscures the lines of the craft and gives it the appearance of a submarine. Scores of these tiny craft are doing a full-size job in protecting Britain from raiders.

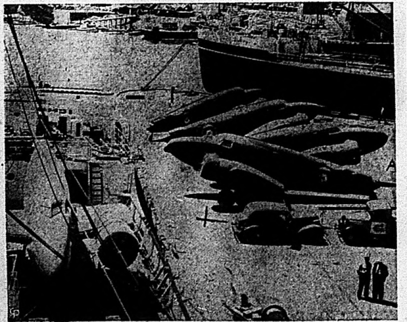
WED TO NAZI ?

Travellers returning from Europe report that Sandra Rambeau, former New York showgirl, has become the wife of 72-year-old General Franz Ritter von Epp, the man who planned Germany's war on Britain. The wedding is reported to have taken place quietly in Paris.

OVER THE FENCE—BUT NOT OUT

A Royal Air Force sergeant-pilot concludes a busy day with this leap over a fence enclosing a field a few miles from his home airport. While on a lone patrol, he encountered a flight of Messerschmidt 109's over the mouth of the Thames estuary. The enemy refused to give [illegible] and turned back. Tommy chased them clear to the French coast where he cut off and downed one. Over the channel on the way home, his Spitfire ran out of gas and he glided to this little field where he set his craft down in a perfect three-pointer.

MORE BOMBERS FOR BRITAIN



Lockheed Hudson bombing planes are shown being loaded aboard ship at Los Angeles for transportation to England where they will play their part in Britain's battle. Lockheeds have won the highest praise from Royal Air Force authorities for their reliability and their ability to "take it." First used exclusively as patrol ships in the coastal command. Lockheeds now are being used as fighters, bombers and reconnaissance planes.

ADDIS ABABA UNDER FIRE AGAIN

Just as it was under fire during the Italian campaign against Emperor Haille Selassie's kingdom several years ago, Ethiopia's capital of Addis Ababa again is the target for raiding planes. This time they are of Britain's Royal Air Force. This picture was made from a raiding plane and shows the result of a direct hit on the military airdrome, where a gasoline fire was started.

Italians Remove Part of Fleet From Taranto

Threaten to Push To Adriatic Coast Isolating Italians

Counter-Drive Possibly Keyed to a Plan for Greek-British Seizure of Italy's Dodecanese Islands

Athens, Greece, Nov. 25—(AP)—Dispatches from the front said today that Greek advance units had entered the outskirts of Argirocastro, main Italian military base in Southern Albania, and that the town was expected to fall before evening.

Heavy fighting also was reported southwest of Argirocastro where the Greeks were threatening to push to the Adriatic coast, isolating a large number of Italians.

These thrusts were part of a counter-drive against the thwarted Italian invasion which was described by military sources as a "full-fledged offensive" intended to wrest Albania from Italian control and possibly keyed to a plan for Greek-British seizure of Italy's strategic Dodecanese Islands.

Threaten Premeti

In the central sector, the Italians were reported to have abandoned their fortified positions on Mount Ostrovitza. Another Italian retreat continued in the Pogradetz area, north of the surrendered town of Koritza, where even Greek cavalry was unable to engage the main body of the fleeing Italians.

Casualties Small

Greek sources said that casualties of both armies have been comparatively small and attributed this to failure of the Italians to offer stubborn resistance to Greek attacks.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Snow crystals! Nature is always artistic, particularly so when she fabricates snow. Under the microscope the smallest snow unit is usually a thin six-sided crystal—sometimes three or twelve sided. These crystals are formed far aloft, and the different varieties are due to the different conditions of temperature and moisture. It is not very easy to catch snow crystals for inspection, for one must work in the cold and allow them to fall gently on a black cloth, then examine them with a microscope or photograph them with a suitable camera. But the pleasure of seeing the many interesting and beautiful forms is worth the trial.

ACCIDENTS CLAIM 6 LIVES IN ONT. OVER WEEKEND

5 TRAFFIC FATALITIES

(By The Canadian Press)

Crash of a Royal Canadian Air Force training plane and traffic accidents accounted for five deaths in Ontario during the week-end. A drowning brought the total to six.

At St. Catharines two R.C.A.F. instructors, Donald F. Whitaker, 25, of Waterloo, Ont., and F. E. Wellington, 22 of Toronto, were killed instantly when their plane crashed half a mile from the Air Training School here. Cause of the crash was not determined but officials who were among the many who witnessed the accident, said the plane appeared to turn just before crashing.

Marcel B. Gougeon, 26, of Ottawa, was killed Saturday on the Ottawa-Kingston Highway when his transport truck struck a pair of runaway horses and crashed into a tree.

Eight-year-old John Mervin Anderson of Tillsonburg drowned Saturday when he stepped from a raft into seven feet of water. He had intended to wade ashore and did not know the depth of the water.

The other two fatalities were results of previous accidents. In London Mrs. Mary Loune died Saturday of injuries received when struck by a car three weeks ago and in Hamilton, James Lee, 38-year-old Chinese, died of injuries received when struck by a car Friday night.

White House Denies Miss Perkins Has Resigned Post

New York, Nov. 25 (AP). — The New York Times said today it has "learned authoritatively" that Frances Perkins was resigned as Secretary of Labor, and that President Roosevelt has accepted her resignation.

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP).)—The White House said today that Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, had not submitted her resignation and "the President had not discussed resignation with her."

This assertion came from Stephen Early, press secretary, when asked for comment on a story in the New York Times that Miss Perkins had tendered her resignation and President Roosevelt had accepted it.

Guilty of Treason, Captain Given 15 Years

Manila, Nov. 25—(CP) — Capt. Rufo Romero of the Philippine Scouts was convicted by a general court martial today of conspiring to sell military information and was sentenced to serve 15 years at hard labo. in a military prison.

The West Point graduate, who offered to submit to a brain operation to erase from his memory any military information he might possess, was convicted as charged after the court martial heard briefly final summations of his case.

Romero denied he took maps from Fort McKinley with intent to sell them. The captain said he had been working on them in his official capacity and had intended to return them to his office.

Famine, Disease, Death Will Take Toll of Countless Lives in Europe

(By Stephen J. McDonough, Associated Press Science Writer)

Washington, Nov. 25—(AP)—The three horsemen of the Apocalypse who ride behind war—famine, disease and death—were said today to be already overrunning Europe.

In a report to Scientific Monthly, magazine of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Dr. Alonzo E. Taylor, of Stanford University, said that the aftermath of the war may be worse than the war itself.

Throughout Europe and particularly in the countries conquered by Germany the problem of food is already becoming acute, he declared, and shortages are necessitating strict rationing of available supplies.

In Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and France, he said, there will be inadequate supplies of wheat, meat, fats and oils because those available supplies have either been commandeered or used up by the armies and farmers have not been able to work their lands.

In addition, Dr. Taylor added, in most countries a special problem is the feeding of refugees.

On the heels of famine are bound to come thousands of cases of disease due to lack of food, neglect, poor housing, insufficient clothing and lack of fuel. Public health and other medical authorities paint a dismal picture of the coming winter for millions of Europeans of all nationalities.

Thousands of children, they say, will be born dead, thousands of mothers will die for lack of medical attention, diphtheria and pneumonia will kill other thousands, and if epidemics of influenza typhus, typhoid fever, measles and plague break out—which medical men fully expect—the toll of death and suffering will be much greater than that of the war itself.

British Photographs Disclose Movement Of Italian Navy

Battleship of Littorio Class Shown by Photograph Badly Down by Bows in Taranto Harbor—Second Picture Reveals Battleship of Cavour Class Beached on East Shore and Another Battleship About Which Some Activity is Apparent—Third Picture Reveals Another Battleship of Cavour Type Down by Bows and Beached

London, Nov. 25 (CP). — British naval sources said today the Royal Navy's bombing of the Italian fleet in the harbor of Taranto had forced the Italian navy to withdraw the major portion of its fleet from the badly damaged port to an undisclosed place of greater safety.

The Italian fleet movement was disclosed by photographs released for publication today. They were taken by British scouting planes making daylight flights as low as 6,000 feet above the fortified port.

Naval sources said the total strength in the whole of Taranto harbor, at the inside of the heel of the Italian boot, at the time of the first attack Nov. 11 was six battleships, 10 cruisers, 27 destroyers and a large number of submarines.

After the attack the Italians withdrew all ships except three battleships, all damaged, eight cruisers and nine destroyers.

The four photographs made public today were taken on a second scouting flight, Nov. 14, three days after the attack, and after a preliminary reconnaissance flight.

Save Three Trainer Planes on Three Lifeboats Lashed Together

Toronto, Nov. 25 (CP)—Crew members of the Canada Steamship Line's freighter Canadian said today they had aided the crew of a salvage vessel in recovering three trainer planes destined for the Royal Canadian Air Force from a foundering British freighter in the Atlantic recently.

They said the incident occurred on their last trip to Atlantic seaboard ports. The Canadian arrived in port here yesterday.

The Canadian sighted the sinking ship as a salvage vessel, answering an SOS, neared the scene, the Canadian's crew said. Huge waves prevented the salvage tug from getting close to the sinking freighter, but the freighter's crew managed to lower a lifeboat and brought back some men from the salvage vessel.

Together the men lashed together three large lifeboats and, with cargo booms, managed to raise the planes and lower them to the lifeboats. They said the planes then were towed out to the Canadian, nearly a half-mile away. A $5,000 cargo of glass also was removed from the sinking ship to the Canadian.

'We just managed to get the cargo safely on deck when the freighter went to pieces and sank," one of the Canadian's crew said.

POPE PIUS PLEADS FOR 'GOLDEN RULE' FOR WARFARE

Urges Combatants Conduct the War as Humanely as Possible

QUIET CEREMONY

Vatican City, Nov. 25 (AP)—Pope Pius XII, in an impassioned prayer for "peace in our days," pleaded anew on Sunday for an end to "the whirlwinds of war that in the light of day or in the dark of night scatter terror, fire, destruction and slaughter on humble folk."

The Pontiff, vigorous of voice, broadcast his twenty-minute homily from the Basilica of St. Peter's, where he had just concluded a special Mass for the war dead.

He called for a new golden rule of war, urging that combatants, under no circumstances, "do to others that which they would not have done to themselves or their country," and to fight war as humanely as possible

For the text of his homily the Pope referred to Christ's answer to the Apostles as to what would be the sign of the world's end, concluding:

Smartly - Uniformed Air Observers Make it Known They Want to Fight

GIVEN WEEK'S LEAVE

(By Douglas Amaron)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 25.—(CP Cable) — Eager to be posted to bomber stations so they "can take a business trip to Berlin", the first contingent of Canadian graduates of the Empire Air Training scheme arrived in London today.

The smartly-uniformed air observers with the Canada tab on their blue coats were not adverse to accepting a week's leave, which they hope to get shortly, but made it known that they have come to England to fight.

"It's great to be here at last" said Sergt. Herb Easton of Winnipeg. "We're here on business and the sooner they let us visit Berlin the better we'll like it".

German Newspaper Says Metaxas' Claim Greece is Fighting on Behalf of All Balkans is Dangerous

Berlin, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Informed sources made the surprising assertion today that the Hungarian, Rumanian and Slovak signatures to the three-power pact ended the present series of acquisitions to the Axis.

They said nothing was known as yet about Bulgarian leaders coming to Berlin. Bulgaria previously had been viewed as most likely to become the seventh member of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Alliance.

This backing down came a short time after Germany sounded her first warning to Greece since the Italian invasion in a statement in the semi-official Deutsche diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, calling Greek Premier John Metaxas "a tool of the British policy of spreading war".

HUNDREDS OF MEN PLAY NEW PARTS

Some Officers Arrive from Britain to Help Reshape Canada's Army at Home in Modern Warfare

An East Coast Canadian Port, Nov. 25 —(CP)— Brought from Britain to play new parts in the war, hundreds of men of the Canadian and British fighting services dispersed through the Dominion today to take up their new jobs.

Some of those returning were C.A.S.F. officers who will help reshape Canada's army at home in modern warfare, their teachings based on close to a year's experience in the theatre of war.

Hundreds of British Tars who will man overage destroyers obtained from the United States arrived on the ship. The destroyers were waiting for them in this port.

A number of R.C.A.F. pilots were aboard including FO. Lawrence Jones of Saskatoon and FO. John Kerwin of Toronto.

Jones was decorated for saving a big Sunderland boat during a Nazi air raid at Andalsnes by starting it up and zig-zagging it about a fjord. Then he took it up and shot down a Messerschmitt.

Kerwin shot down three German planes before he was wounded Sept. 1.

Horned Toad Derby Called Off Because Toads Refuse to Budge

Hemet, Calif., Nov. 25 — (AP)—Two dozen desert racing toads got the hot-foot here but they're still as stubborn as two dozen desert mules.

The management of Hemet's annual turkey show had planned a "Southern California horned toad derby" as a side-attraction yesterday, but just before the scheduled race-time it was discovered that all the warty entries had gone on a sit-down strike.

The weather, it appeared, was too brisk for the thin-skinned amphibans, who customarily hibernate in the winter. Set down at the starting gate they refused to budge.

The crowd was beginning to get impatient when the official starter got an idea. Electric heating pads were placed under each "contestant."

One by one the toads opened their eyes, crawled lazily off the pads onto the cold earth—and went back to sleep. The starter threw up his hands. Soon, over the public address system, came this announcement:

"Ladies and gentlemen, the management wishes to state that due to circumstances beyond its control the horned toad derby will not be held."

Conviction Grows Nazis May Try Landing in Britain

Boulogne, Calais, Brest and Lorient, Concentration Points, Heavily Bombed

By J. F. SANDERSON

London, Nov. 25 (CP Cable)—The Royal Air Force pounded Hitler's French invasion ports over the week-end in the bitterest bombardment of the war while the conviction grew in official circles that the Germans may make another attempt to land an expeditionary force in this country.

Tons of bombs were rained on Boulogne, Calais, Brest and Lorient last night where it was known the Germans had recently gathered naval vessels and troop-carrying ships. It was group bombing—the most devastating form of aerial attack—and lasted for hours. The rumble of the bomb explosions could be heard on the Kent coast across the the 22-mile width of the English Channel.

STORM ISOLATES TEXAS PANHANDLE

Amarillo is Without Power or Water and All Communications Are Down

Dallas, Nov. 25 (AP)—Amarillo and parts of the Texas Panhandle were isolated today by a storm which snapped the communication lines, littering highways and streets with poles, wire and trees.

Amarillo, without power or water, sent and received its news thru' amateur radio stations operated by gasoline-driven generators.

No reports had been received from Borger and Pampa.

Panhandle highways were strewn with trees, wires and poles which snapped like straws beneath a five-inch coat of frozen mist which had been gathering for 24 hours. The Southwestern Bell Telephone Company rushed 32 crews from all over Texas with 12,000 new poles.

In central East Texas rains continued to send flood waters over thousands of acres of rich farming land.

R. L. Rolfe and Henry Nelson, operating amateur radio station W5DAM, transmitted Associated Press dispatches from Dallas to Station W5CYX in the office of the Amarillo News Globe. Reports that fires, started by broken power lines, were burning in several parts of Amarillo were denied by W5CYX.

The ice-bound area extended from Amarillo 25 miles south and east and northwest into Colorado and New Mexico.

The rains, which blanketed virtually the entire state, ranged as high as 14 inches in some places over the week-end.

HOPE FOR FINDING MISSING FLIERS ALIVE DWINDLES

Second Storm Adds Foot of Snow to Hamper Search Parties

DOGS BEING USED

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

East Lake, Que., Nov. 25 (CP)—Although many of them believed their task to be well-nigh hopeless, some 600 men pressed on today in their land and air search for three Royal Canadian Air Force fliers who have been missing since a week ago Sunday when they abandoned an Atlantic patrol plane by parachute.

Antoine Plourde, a former bushman who operates a hotel at nearby Escourt, voiced the opinion of many of the searchers when he said it would be a "miracle" if the men still lived, but the hunt continued in the spirit expressed by an Air Force man who said "we'll never give up hope."

With sub-zero temperatures prevailing here during the last two night, Plourde said he did not believe the men could live long unless they had an axe and matches.

Yesterday, a snowstorm, the second in two days, piled a foot of snow over the area. R.C.A.F. planes operating from East Lake and United States Army bombers working from a temporary base at St. Hubert Airport, near Montreal, were grounded during the storm and the efforts of the ground parties were hampered.

TWO KNOCKED DOWN BY PASSING CARS

Two boys sustained injuries as the result of being knocked down by passing motor cars on city streets Saturday.

Eleven-year-old Jimmie Brockway, 8 Warham Street, sustained a serious leg abrasion and bruises when he ran directly into the path of a motor car being driven south on Front Street by Kenneth Burley of Roslin, directly in front of the Belle Theatre late Saturday afternoon. The injured lad was taken home by Mr. Burley and later attended by the family physician, Dr. G. S. Cronk.

Billy Gill, another teen-aged lad who resides on West Bridge Street, also sustained slight cuts and bruises when he walked into the side of a passing motor car while crossing Front Street south of the main intersection. The lad was attended by Dr. E. McDonald at the hospital.

PROPERTY DAMAGE RESULT OF COLLISION

Property damage of considerable extent resulted after two motor cars collided at the intersection of Everett and Catherine Street late Sunday evening. Earl Leonard, 279 Front Street, is said by Constables Evans and Arnott to have failed to observe the "stop street" sign while proceeding north on Everett Street, with the result his automobile was in collision with a west-bound motor car, being driven on Catherine Street by David Wannamaker, of Coe Hill. The bumpers, headlights and fenders of both vehicles were badly damaged during the impact. Charges are pending, the investigating officers intimated.

2,000,000 POUNDS OF CANNED GOODS SHIPPED IN WEEK

Over 2,000,000 pounds of canned goods were shipped out of the Picton harbor last week when three vessels of the Canada Steamship Line docked at the Prince Edward County port and left with heavy shipments. The indications at present point to a near record tonnage being registered when this year's shipment is totalled.

Last year, one of the busiest seasons on record for the Picton harbor, most of the canned goods were for export trade, but this year, with most of the overseas market cut off a heavy market opened in the western provinces and a large percentage of the canned products are slated for home consumption there.

MARAUDING ANIMALS BELIEVED WOLVES

What is said to be members of a pack of animals alleged to be part timber wolves that are roaming the districts near Huntingdon Township and attacking sheep, were brought to the office of County Treasurer James Haggerty over the week-end by George Palmateer, farmer residing on the 8th concession of Huntingdon.

Palmateer shot the two animals, a perfectly matched male and female in a field on his farm. He states that a pack of the marauders are roaming the district and committing depredations on sheep flocks.

The animals have grey heads, and dark brown bodies and a full brushed tail. The markings of the head resemble the wolf family. The pelts were forwarded to government experts in Toronto for identification and approval of the $15 bounty paid for pelts of bona-fide wolves.

LARGE ONION WEIGHT 1½ LBS.

Amateur gardeners of the district are giving the professionals keen competition in the raising of garden produce. Indicative of some of the fine specimens of vegetables raised by the amateurs is a large Spanish onion grown by a Mrs. Drewry of Brighton R.R. 2, which tipped the scales at one and one-half pounds.

Mrs. Drewery secured the seedlings on the Belleville market and planted them in her private garden.

Skilled Workmen Soon in Demand

A contract awarded to the McFarland Construction Company, for the amount of $65,000 for the construction of new buildings at the Trenton Airport is expected to furnish work for a number of carpenters and other skilled workmen from the Belleville area, it was learned at the local Employment Service this morning. It is expected that a start on the construction of the buildings will be made this week.

When the construction of buildings at the Mountain View Airport is commenced in the near future, there will be a greater demand for carpenters and buildings, it is expected.

Practically all the available workers now registered at the local Employment Service are laborers, with these applicants coming in from out of town

ARCHBISHOP VISITS ST. THOMAS CHURCH SUNDAY

Most Rev. McAdam Harding, Archbishop of Rupert's Land, Preaches Sermon

The Most Rev. McAdam Harding, D.D., Winnipeg, Archbishop of the Diocese of Rupert's Land, visited the parish church of St. Thomas on Sunday morning and delivered the sermon at Matins. He was welcomed by the Rector, the Rev. Rural Dean A. Beauchamp Payne, who served in the Province of Saskatchewan under the Archbishop when he was Bishop of the Diocese of Qu' Appelle with residence in Regina.

His Grace, when a young man served in the Diocese of Ontario under the late Archbishop Lewis, the first bishop of the diocese and he recalled that fifty-one years ago he visited his old friend the late Canon Burke, then Rector of the parish, and preached in the Church of St. Thomas. Of his friendship with Canon Burke he spoke in feeling terms and told of the great service Canon Burke had rendered over a period of many years to the Church in the Diocese, the Parish of St. Thomas and the City of Belleville. He was a Father in God to all and his memory is revered by all now living who knew him.

His Grace referred to the fact that the day was the last Sunday in the Church's year, that next Sunday will be Advent Sunday, the beginning of a new Church year. "Many such days," he said, "had been observed in the parish by parishioners, who have gone to join the Church Expectant in Paradise and he urged the present parishioners not to be forgetful of those men and women and the clergy who worshipped in the same church in days gone by and had passed on to them the old parish church to preserve and to pass on to those who shall come after."

The Archbishop's visit to the parish was much enjoyed and appreciated by the Rector and the parishioners.

Recital of Sacred Church Music Held

Under the auspices of the Belleville Ministerial Association a recital of sacred church music was given by the members of Christ Church choir, directed by George N. Maybee, and in aid of the Red Cross in Christ Church Sunday evening.

The program, which consisted of the various types and phases of church music from the pre-Reformation period to that of the more modern composure, was narrated by Rev. G. G. Wright, rector of Christ Church, during the presentation. The program was purely educational as the numbers presented by the choir depicted the trend of church music tempo throughout the respective periods.

"Plain song dominated the 9th century of the pre-Reformation period, while during the actual Reformation period church music turned toward an influence of simplicity", explained Rev. Mr. Wright as numbers composed by Richard Farrant, 1552 and Dr. Christopher, 1558 were rendered by the choir.

"During the Georgian period the church music was written in contrast to the architecture of the period", added Rev. Wright as the choir gave four numbers with Tommy Hyland, Bruce Woods and Arthur Simpson taking solo parts throughout this phase of the program.

The next period of church music was the Victorian type, that was written more to satisfy the listener. Three numbers including Dr. Samuel Wesley's "Wash me truly from my wickedness", one of the best compositions of the period, were heard with Jack Shaddock and Gordon Watkins singing in duet and accompanied by the choir chorus.

Lastly came the modern tempo of church music. "In this type we find the composers endeavouring to preserve the ideals of the earlier days and also retain the good of the Victorian period", pointed out Rev. Wright as a trio of modern pieces of the more inspiring nature, including one by Sir Walford Davies, the King's musician, were featured.

Church hymns interspersed the program, while prayers for peace were offered up. The recital closed with Stanford's National Anthem.

Important Changes Made in Directory

An important change has been made in the new Bell Telephone directory for Belleville and vicinity, 10,000 copies of which are now being distributed. Of these books, about 4,000 are being mailed to subscribers here.

The list of long distance rates to out-of-town points most frequently called is contained in the introductory pages of the classified section.

Since this issue contains hundreds of new and changed listings in the alphabetical directory alone, the importance of destroying the old books and carefully consulting the new ones before placing calls is obvious, if the wrong number nuisance is to be avoided.

Police Blotter

Attempts to enter the premises of the York Trading and Tweed Milling Companies were investigated by Detective Fred Isard early today.

Window screens were found to have been removed from the windows leading into the office of the York Trading building, while office windows were broken at the Tweed Milling Company nearby.

"It appears to be the work of mischievous boys, but further investigations are being conducted in an effort to stamp out this type of destruction of property," revealed Detective Isard after viewing the situation.

Weathervane Stolen

Dr. M. E. Branscombe, Queen St., reported the theft of a six-foot weathervane over the week-end. The weathervane was removed from the rear of Dr. Branscombe's premises sometime during Saturday night, as it was found missing the next morning, he told police. A complete description of the weathercock was given the authorities.

17 QUALIFY TO CONTEST THIRTEEN SEATS ON COUNCIL

Nine Running for Six Seats on School Board and Two for Utility Commissioner

TWO IN FOR MAYOR

Seventeen potential city fathers will vie for aldermanic honors at the municipal elections held here December 2nd., while nine candidates will contest the six vacancies on the Board of Education. Two contestants will seek commissionership on the Public Utilities Commission.

These are the official figures released shortly after nine o'clock Saturday night by City Clerk Wilfred Holmes, after the above had presented election qualifications. Nine members of last year's council are again in the running, Aldermen A. McLean Haig, Edson Logan, Reuben Cooper and Robert Graham withdrawing from the municipal arena.

Seeking election for aldermanic honors are Alderman H. J. Allin, Harold Armstrong, O. E. Butler, H. J. Clarke, William Harvey, Thomas Jeffery, Andrew Kennedy, R. W. Pringle, Harry Rollins. Newcomers are Ex-Alderman Thomas Marshal, C. R. Clapp, Thomas Cushing, Russell Wotten, Jack Holley, Francis C. Potter and Frank Follwell.

Candidates for trusteeship on the Board of Education are Carl W. Crosby, W. J. Harrison, H. J. Legate, P. C. McGuire, B. C. Sisler, Ross Stiver, George Wishart, Rev. W. J. Walker, Ray Zufelt. Six to be elected.

Ex-Mayor George A. Reid will conduct a two-way fight with Commissioner Clifford Baragar for the seat on the Public Utilities Commission.

As was before reported, the mayoralty contest will see Mayor Glencoe E. Thompson defend his seat against Ex-Alderman Charles L. Hyde. Both candidates filed qualification papers on Saturday.

Election guns will boom along the entire front this week, with the election scheduled for next Monday, December 2nd. With the short time at their disposal, all candidates are expected to wage a brief intensive campaign, with meetings scheduled in various parts of the city.

Naturally the famous "Wharf St. Debating Club", will hold their annual pre-election "bun-feed" where no punches are pulled and the prospective city fathers are expected to state their platforms in ordinary English.

Two questions will also be placed before the electorate, one concerning two-year term for council and the other an opinion on transference of water and gas from P.U.C. to the Corporation.

Epidemic of Alleged 'Hit-Run' Accidents Reported in City

An epidemic of alleged hit-and-run motor drivers was reported in Belleville over the week-end, when three distinct cases of such unlawful practices were investigated by police. Considerable property damage resulted, but fortunately no personal injuries were sustained.

Edward Bowers, 15 Harvey Street, parked his motor car for a few moments on East Dundas Street early Sunday. During his absence a truck was seen to sideswipe the parked vehicle and speed away in an easterly direction without stopping.

J. E. Danford, Coe Hill, likewise parked his motor car on East Bridge Street Sunday evening and during his absence some rolling object struck his parked car damaging the fender without reporting the incident.

P. C. Wright apprehended a member of the R.C.A.F. and questioned the airman relative to a hit-and-run crash, which had occurred early Sunday evening on Coleman Street when a motor car bearing Quebec licence plates was seen to strike a parked vehicle and speed away. The Air Force man informed police he had loaned his motor car to another airman and if such was the case the other person was undoubtedly responsible. This matter is being more thoroughly investigated.

"If this practice of carelessness in driving that results in damage to parked vehicles does not discontinue more drastic measures will have to be taken," warned Chief Kidd in commenting upon such matters as hit-and-run drivers, today.

OBITUARY

ROBERT W. ADAMS

Robert W. Adams died suddenly at his residence, 1 Forin Street, on Sunday morning, Nov. 24th. He had been in failing health for some time.

The late Robert Webster Adams, who was in his 79th. year, was born in Scotland and at an early age he left his native country and settled in the United States. After living in that country for a few years he came to Belleville to reside and for the past fifty years he made his home in this city. For many years he was engaged in the insurance business, but for some time past he lived retired.

Robert Adams was a good citizen and took an interest in the advancement of his adopted city and served as an Alderman during the years 1910 and 1911; he was also a valued member of the Court of Revision for many years. He was well known and in the regard of many friends he held a high place and to them his death has brought sincere regret.

In religion Mr. Adams was a member of the Presbyterian Church and over a long period of time he was the efficient treasurer of John Street Presbyterian Church. Fraternally he was a member of Belleville Lodge No. 81, I.O.O.F., and The Belleville Lodge No. 123, A.F. & A.M.

Surviving him are a daughter, Mrs. Isabel J. Anderson, Belleville, and a son, Mr. John A. Adams, Kingston; two sister, Mrs. Joseph Beaton, and Mrs. Mary Colville, both of Philadelphia, Pa.; one brother, Mr. Hugh Adams, Ailsa Craig, Ontario. His wife died some years ago.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street; the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

HARRY SMITH
(Marmora)

Marmora, (Special)—After an illness of six months bravely borne, Harry Smith passed away at his residence in Deloro on Saturday morning in the fifty-seventh year of his age. Born in Manfield, Durham, England, the late Mr. Smith had been employed at the iron works in the north of England before coming to this country. For about a quarter of a century he was in the employ of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company Limited and for the greater part of that time was a foreman of the Silver Plant, enjoying popularity among his fellow employees as well as discharging his duties faithfully for the company.

He was deeply interested in the activities of the Safety First Committee and such movements which tend to the good and welfare of the community in which he lived. He was a member of St. Paul's Anglican Church and loved to speak of the church of his boyhood days in England. His passing is deeply mourned in Deloro and Marmora.

Besides his sorrowing wife he is survived by nine children, Harry, Marmora; Norman, Deloro; Simeon, Kingston; Richard, Sudbury; Mrs. George Brooks, Deloro; Iris, Mae, Betty and Marjorie at home. A son William, predeceased him four years ago.

The funeral with Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell officiating, will be held on Tuesday and will leave his late residence at 1.30 p.m. D.S.T. for service at St. Paul's at 2 p.m. Interment will take place in Marmora Protestant Cemetery.

LATE CHARLES W. COLE
(Thurlow Township)

The funeral of Charles Walton Cole took place on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 23rd., from his residence in the 4th concession of Thurlow Township, to Salem United Church in Tyendinaga Township, where an impressive service was conducted by the Rev. W. J. Davis of Cannifton assisted by the Rev. W. Sterling of Shannonville. Many friends were present.

Interment was made in Victoria cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. John Weese, Samuel Sherman, Daniel Hagerman, Wesley Bradshaw, John Ritz and William Yateman.

The late Mr. Cole was a member of Loyal Orange Lodge No. 242, Shannonville and the last rites of the Order were conducted at the graveside by officers of the lodge.

The deceased is survived by his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Sabra Minerva Reid; his father, Mr. John Cole; one daughter, Mrs. John Foote, Smithfield; one son, Mr. Grant W. Cole, at home; a step-son, Mr. Dorland Ross, Tyendinaga Township; one sister, Mrs. Robert Miller, Thurlow Township, and one brother, Mr. Earl Cole, Belleville.

French-Canadians of Quebec Are Truly National Subjects

Cardinal Villeneuve Declares Canada is Fortunate in Having Population Composed Mainly of Descendants of Such Nations as France, Great Britain and Ireland—Canadians Can Pray With Confidence for Aid in War

Moncton, N.B., Nov. 25—(CP)—Cardinal Villeneuve of Quebec, speaking at a civic reception here last week pointed to the part Quebec is taking in Canada's war effort to answer to what he described as "mischievous rumors" of a separatist movement in Quebec Province.

"What happened in Quebec last year and this year?" the Archbishop of Quebec asked his listeners. "Has it not been the greatest single blow struck for Canadian unity in the past century at what seemed to be unity's darkest hour?"

According to the false rumors, the Cardinal said, "French-speaking Canadians who compose the overwhelming majority of the Province of Quebec were contemplating to establish separatism in their province, and that the dominant influence of such a separatist movement was the Catholic Church under the leadership of the Cardinal Archbishop of Quebec."

Cardinal Villeneuve, who said he took "all occasions to put an end to such mischievous rumors", added that not much notice was taken of "this group in Quebec, where no responsible person attached undue importance to it."

Canada's Population.

The Cardinal believed Canada is fortunate in having a population composed in the main of descendants of such nations as France, Great Britain and Ireland.

"Are not French-Canadians of Quebec truly national subjects? Have they not shown their true Canadian spirits and their loyalty to the crown? Have they not obeyed the laws and answered to the call, even of their blood?" he asked. "Are they only hyphenated citizens, who would be first French and then Canadian, because they speak French and are of French extraction?

"I say no, and you say no with me."

Pray With Confidence For Victory.

Cardinal Villeneuve added that Canadians could pray with confidence for aid in the war. "We know that we are trying to resist things that cannot be according to God's will," he said.

A spirit of Christianity should be maintained even more necessarily in wartime because it brings "peace where we need it, peace of soul."

"The church will bless such a spirit," the Archbishop said, "God will reward it, our country will triumph with it and liberty of tomorrow as well as human history shall praise it forever."

Intense Study Given Wheat Problem Says MacKinnon

Elevators Already Jammed and Export Sales of Only About 175,000,000 Bu. in Sight

LACK OF STORAGE

By CARL REINKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 23 (CP)—Canada's wheat policy for the next crop year will have to be based on the prospect of elevators already jammed when the new crop is ready and prospective export sales of only 140,000,000 to 175,000,000 bushels in 1941-42, Trade Minister MacKinnon says.

The Minister, who is responsible for wheat marketing, gave that warning in the House of Commons Friday as he stated that intense study was being given to the whole wheat problem. Policy for 1941-42 would have to be declared sometime in February, he said. Possible plans for the new crop year "and ensuing years" now were being considered by the Advisory Committee to the Canadian Wheat Board.

Only thing which might reduce the prospective glut of wheat next year would be unexpected developments overseas, Mr. MacKinnon said.

The Minister gave no direct hint of restriction production. Production matters came under Agriculture Minister Gardiner's jurisdiction, he emphasized.

However, he did state that the information regarding seeded acreages contained in 300,000 statutory declarations involved in establishing present delivery quotas would be "extremely valuable in connection with arrangements which may be made before the next crop year."

Mr. MacKinnon was the seventh and possibly last, of the Cabinet Ministers to report to the Commons on the state of their departmental activities. It is not expected at the moment that Labor Minister McLarty will speak before Parliament adjourns, probably sometime next week, for two months or so.

In connection with the wheat situation, two members proposed yesterday that Canada should open her granaries and give Britain the wheat she needed, the farmers being paid a fair price by the Canadian Government. The suggestion was advanced by Dr. H. A. Bruce (Con. Toronto-Parkdale) and R. T. Graham (Lib. Swift Current).

Dr. Bruce sharply criticized Agriculture Minister Gardiner for "boasting that he had made millions for Canadians" by his shrewd bargain in Britain. Mr. Gardiner retorted that the Canadian delegation had merely accepted the prices Britain offered; there had been no bargaining.

Raises Delivery Quota

Mr. MacKinnon, in a detailed review of wheat developments, announced that the general delivery quota, made necessary by lack of storage capacity, would be raised from eight to ten bushels an acre next week. More than 70 per cent of shipping points already had a quota of more than eight bushels and some went as high as twenty bushels.

Despite delivery restrictions, the Minister stated that actual marketings his year from August 1 to November 15—223,819,000 bushels—exceeded both the 10-year and three-year average. The value of crop marketed up to November 15 was almost $10,000,000 above the 10-year average at that time and only $21,000,000 less than the average of the last three years to date.

More important, the farmers still had more than $120,000,000 of wheat undelivered. The crop had a higher percentage of No. 1 Northern than in any previous year, he said.

Private agencies had refused to advance loans on farm-stored wheat because of the lack of adequate storage. This suggested that a loan program for open farm storage might be subject to wide abuses if undertaken by the government. The government thus had "no alternative" to making as extensive provision as possible for deliveries from the farms.

Arrangements were being made so all 1940 wheat could be delivered to the Board before July 30, the end of the crop year.

"Any storage that has to do with the 1941 crop will probably involve increased storage in elevators and farm storage", he added.

Mr. MacKinnon said the department now was considering alleviation of possible hardships on certain Maritime flour mills resulting from the processing tax of 15 cents a bushel on wheat ground for domestic consumption.

Protect the Farmer Policy

He submitted that the burden which had been assumed by the Government in connection with wheat proved that it stood "squarely behind a policy of giving the utmost protection to the farmer."

He said he was not suggesting that all wheat growers were in a happy position today. "They are not unmindful of the responsibilities that Canada is assuming and although the 70-cent per bushel advance payment may not give many farmers even a meagre profit over cost of production, they are accepting this as part of their contribution to the war effort. We are undertaking to see that they do not bear an unfair share of the burden."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c

Marmora— The Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's United Church held their November meeting at the home of Mrs. P. G. Fletcher on Tuesday afternoon. Following the singing of the National Anthem Mrs. W. P. Fletcher led in prayer. Mrs. W. J. Pack supply secretary, reported a meeting at which blocks for a quilt were cut out and these will be pieced together for the quilt for the bale. Mrs. Davis took the report of books read and sick and stranger calls made by the members. Mrs. W. A. Sanderson gave a short paper on "Temperance". Mrs. Pack then took the worship service and after the singing of a hymn and prayer, Mrs. J. Sproul read the Scripture lesson. The program for the afternoon took the form of a memorial service for the late Miss Shipley, a missionary to Honan, China, who recently passed away.

Those taking part in the service were Mesdames W. P. Fletcher, P. Sweet, W. A. Sanderson, and H. W. Sabine with solos interspersed with the different essays. Dr. W. P. Fletcher gave an interesting story of the life and work of Dr. Djang, a missionary in far off West China. Prayers were offered for the missionaries now in China for Chinese comrades in the World Church and for the people of China. The meeting closed with a hymn and prayer.

Mr. Charles Kelly of Malone, has been forced to return to Belleville General Hospital for further treatment to his injured arm.

Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell visited the parishes of Roslin and Tweed on Wednesday.

Circle No. 3 of St. Andrew's Women's Association held a quilting bee at the Royal Hotel on Wednesday afternoon. Afternoon tea was served the members by Mrs. B. Regis.

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Wells are spending a few days in Toronto this week.

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Hoacke are visiting relatives in Toronto.

Mr. E. D. O'Connor made a business trip to Toronto this week.

Mr. J. A. Paquet is in Windsor for a few days on business.

Miss Kathleen Rice of Toronto, is visiting at her home here.

Rawdon

Rawdon — Wellman's Young People's Sunday School class held their November meeting at the church with twenty-five in attendance.

The meeting opened with several familiar hymns and the President, Miss Hazel Dunham was in charge. The pastor offered prayer and Mrs. Gladys Pauley read the first Psalm. Mr. Carl Sharp gave the financial report and money was voted to the Sunday School and to missions.

Miss Mabel Sharpe read a selection. Miss Dorothy Hinds and Mrs. Burton Morton sang a duet.

Mr. Arthur Duncan of Stirling was guest speaker and gave a splendid address in unique style based on the theme "The Sicology of Mother Goose." Rev. Beckel introduced him to the audience and after his address he was tendered a hearty vote of thanks.

Miss Betty Hulin sang a solo and Mr. Jim Watson gave a reading.

Miss A. Poynter and Mr. Duncan of Stirling sang a sacred number. Miss Barbara Whitehouse gave a reading composed by herself and using the name of each class member. Mrs. Morton led in a series of games which all thoroughly enjoyed.

This will be the last meeting for the year as the class will devote their time in December in practicing for the annual Christmas concert.

The meetings have been most helpful and the class members are loud in their praise of their social evenings together.

Benny Benoit Tells of Days Spent in Woods Before Being Sighted and Rescued by Plane

Chute Caught in Tree and Serves as Guide for the Rescue Plane

COLD IN BUSH

(By Harold Freeman, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Nov. 25—(CP)—Leading Aircraftman Benny Benoit has decided that his five days of cold, hunger and sleeplessness after the crash of a Digby bomber near East Lake, Que., will be an experience "not too bad to look back on—if only they find the other chaps."

Resting easily in hospital after being brought here by plane yesterday, Benoit still was concerned less with himself than with the three crew members still missing. The Atlantic patrol plane of the Royal Canadian Air Force crashed a week ago.

"The fellows took things very coolly when it became obvious that we would have to bail out," he related. "We had been 14 hours in the air then. We tried to land a couple of times at a Maritime airport, but the fog was too thick.

"We tried to run for Montreal. With a good tail-wind, and our remaining gas thinned down, we might have made it. But the wind was against us, and there's a limit to the amount of thinning you can do to gas.

"We saw it couldn't be done, and after that it was just a matter of getting out as quickly as possible. No use waiting until the engines conked and the plane took us down with it."

By pre-arranged rules, Benoit was first out of the plane. The emergency handle of the rear door was pulled to let the wind rip the door clear of the ship. Then Benoit stepped out.

Pulled Cord at Three

"They tell you to count up to 10, and then pull the rip-cord. I got as far as three, and let her go. Guess it was a lucky thing. I did too, because about eight seconds later I hit the top of a tree. I had landed on a hill.

"It was a big fir tree in the middle of a bit of a clearing. The chute was caught pretty firmly in the top branches, and I was dangling in the air. I was able to work my way along a branch to the pole of the tree, and then I released the chute and slid to the ground.

"That was about one o'clock Sunday morning. I stayed right there and shivered all that night. Next day, I wandered around a bit but never went far from the chute.

"The chute was nicely caught, and was blowing out like a big sail—just what I wanted. I knew there would be search planes out, and I decided that my best bet was to stay by the chute where they could find me."

It was a smart decision, but the young aircraftman confessed he had a hard time keeping to it during the days that followed.

"I figured there was no use going any place, because I had no place to go," he said with a grin. "Just the same, it was hard just staying there doing nothing. And it was cold.."

No Rescue Planes Sighted

Monday passed, slowly and drearily, and Monday night seemed endless. The weather made flying impossible, and no rescue planes came near the chute.

"Tuesday I saw my first plane I saw several that day, but it was not until late that afternoon that one saw me It was an R.C.A.F. amphibian, a blue goose as we call them".

The plane dropped rations—Benoit's first food since Sunday—and a note saying a ground party would come. The note also promised to return shortly with a sleeping bag.

TO ATTEND LABOR CONVENTION

Sir Walter Citrine, famous British labor leader, photographed on his arrival in New York. Sir Walter will go to Washington, D.C., before attending the convention of the American Federation of Labor in New Orleans.

"I thought a lot about that sleeping-bag", Benoit confessed, "but I never got it. It was too late in the day. The plane came back all right, but it was dark and it couldn't locate me.

"It came back the next day, but they didn't see me, and I didn't see them. I was on a trip".

That trip was Benoit's only straying from his parachute. He headed north through the bush most of the day hoping to find some sign of civilization.

"North was the only direction I could figure out", he explained. "When I couldn't find anything, I retraced my steps right back to the chute, and stayed there. But I had to go on that trip to satisfy the urge and to do something.

"It was cold that night. I propped myself up between two trees and dozed. I knew that if I lay down, I'd freeze".

Late Before Being Rescued

The following day, Thursday, brought rescue, but it was late in the afternoon before the ground crew fought their way through the bush to the young flier.

"There was some excitement then, all right", he continued. "We all danced and yelled, and slapped each other on the back. I think one of the men kissed me, but it's a bit hazy now.

"When we started back, I walked for quite a way, until we came to a bit of a camp, with a fire. Then they put me in a sleeping-bag and took me out on a stretcher.

"They took me four miles on the stretcher and it took 23 men four hours to get me over that distance".

Benoit hopes to be out of hospital soon, and he expects to get a leave then and visit his mother, Mrs. E. J. Benoit, in Ottawa.

"I haven't been home since last March", he added. "Funny way to get home on leave, eh?"

The jump into the snow-filled blackness was Benoit's first parachute jump.

"I had a sinking feeling in my stomach before the chute opened", he said, "but after that it was all right. I wouldn't mind making another jump. Only next time I'd rather see where I'm going to land!"

Royal Arch Degree Is Conferred on Three Candidates

Marmora — The conferring of the Royal Arch Degree on three candidates in the Orange Hall on Thursday evening drew a good attendance of visiting brethren for L. O. L. 319's regular monthly meeting. On the conferring of the degree, officers of the Marmora Lodge were assisted by brethren of Springbrook and Madoc lodges. Visiting brethren were also present from Peterboro, Stirling, Malone and Eldorado. In course of the evening refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. James Dostanko and son Nicholl and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dikum left on Friday to visit friends at Ottawa and Montreal.

Rural Dean and Mrs. A. B. Caldwell were guests of Rev. and Mrs. L. Harding at Stirling on Friday afternoon.

Among those leaving for training camp in Peterboro on Friday were: M. Melville, Hubert Hollingsworth, Bert Johnston, George Bateman and J. Moyer.

Germany Will Have To Undergo Complete Change of Heart

London, Nov. 25 (CP)—Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Vansittart, chief diplomatic adviser to the British Government, said in a broadcast Sunday night that Germany will have to undergo a "complete change of heart, and adopt a new set of morals and values" if it is to live with other nations of the world.

"The world must never again take anything for granted in Germany, or be led by its illusions," he said. "Before the war, people wanted to believe the best of Germany, but they failed to see ahead."

There had been Germans who hated the Nazi regime, he said, but "we are not dealing with individuals."

"The German often has a moral character—the Germans never. And it is the Germans who count."

Hitler was the "natural product" of a nation which had been warlike through history. It was necessary to examine the past record of Germany to see ahead.

"The real German reformation is yet to come," Sir Robert said. "There have been reformers in the past, but they have always been a weak minority."

Germany's past had been both "plain and ugly," and the ground had been prepared for Nazism before Hitler came to power, "and sowed the dragons' teeth."

Salem

Salem — Dr. Empson visited Blessington school on Tuesday morning and inoculated the children for diphtheria for the second time.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Lazier called on Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Wannamaker Sunday evening.

Mrs. Clarence Hagerman, Bernice and Carl spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Sam Sherman.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Anderson and John also Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Emerson spent Tuesday night with Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hagerman.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Reynolds took tea at Robinson's, Sunday night.

Mrs. Albie Sine of Stirling spent several days visiting her nieces,—Mrs. P. Milligan and Mrs. W. Liddle.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Mason and Bobby of Belleville were dinner guests on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hanna.

Mr. and Mrs. George Badgley took tea Sunday night with Mr. and Mrs. Jean Badgley, Melrose.

This community was shocked to hear the sudden death of Mr. Charlie Cole of Bethany. Friends extend deepest sympathy to the sorrowing widow and family.

Those who attended the Sunday School Convention at Shannonville on Tuesday, were: Mr. and Mrs. Jim Sills, Mrs. Fred Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. George Badgley, Miss Ruth McClaren, Miss Bernice Robinson, Miss Helen Hicks, Mrs. Merle Robinson and Mrs. Everett Hanna.

Mr. and Mrs. Merle Robinson spent Saturday night at Mr. and Mrs. A. Wright's, West Huntingdon.

Mrs. J. Cole, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sherman. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hagerman, Bernice and Carl took tea with Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Sherman on Wednesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Milligan, Corbyville, and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Milligan of Belleville were Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carman Milligan, Melrose.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Robinson spent Sunday night with Mr. and Mrs. Homer Demille, Melrose.

Mrs. Bruce Sherman spent last Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sherman.

About seventy-five friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Wannamaker on Wednesday night to spend a social evening with them before they moved to their new home at Mount Pleasant.

An address was read by Mrs. Hanna and was signed on behalf of the Salem community by Mr. Merle Robinson and Mr. Everett Hanna.

At this time Mr. and Mrs. Wannamaker were presented with an occasional chair, a smoking stand, a large fruit bowl and a cake plate.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Wannamaker made very suitable replies. All sang "For they are jolly good fellows". Lunch was served and the remainder of the evening was spent in cards and dancing.

Religious Education Council, Thurlow Township Convenes

The annual convention of the Thurlow Township Religious Education Council was held in Bethany United Church on Thursday, Nov. 21st, afternoon and evening sessions.

The afternoon session opened with a Worship Service by Bethany Sunday School and led by Rev. W. J. Davis.

Mr. Clayton Eggleton, superintendent of Bethany School gave the address of welcome. Mr. S. C. Gay, Township President, gave an interesting address. The minutes of the last convention and the financial reports were given by the Sec. Treas., Miss Mildred Jones, and adopted. Mrs. J. Moore of Plainfield favored with a solo. The reports from the different departments were presented by their superintendents as follows:

Children's Work, Mrs. P. Reynold's report read by Miss H. Davis; Girls' Work, Mrs. Noble Brown's report read by Miss Bradshaw; Boys' Work. Mr. C. Wilson; Young People's, Mrs. G. Priest; Adult, Mr. E. Huffman; Home, no report; Missionary, Mrs. E. Denyes; Temperance, Mrs. C. Mills; Leadership Training. Rev. E. M. Cook.

Rev. H. L. Morrison of Tweed led a very interesting Round Table Conference where many problems of the "Sunday School and Home" were discussed. Fifty answered the roll call during the afternoon session but many more were present in the evening. A delicious supper was served in the church by the Bethany ladies and a social period was enjoyed by all.

The evening session opened at 7.30 with a song service led by Mr. B. Martin. The Front Road S. S. conducted a very impressive worship service.

The report of the nominating committee was received and the following officers were elected,—

President, Mr. F. Searles, Halloway; 1st vice president, Mr. C. Eggleton, Belleville, R. R. 6; 2nd. vice president, Mr. A. Clazie, Belleville R.R.4; Secretary, Miss Helen Davis, Foxboro; Children's Work, Mrs. H. Harrison, Plainfield; Girls' Work, Mrs. Noble Brown, Belleville R.R.4; Boys' Work, Mr. C. Wilson, Foxboro; Young People's, Mrs. G. Priest, Foxboro; Adult Dep't., Mr. S. Homan, Corbyville; Home Dep't., Mrs. A. Armstrong, Corbyville; Missions, Mrs. P. Osland, Belleville R.R.6; Temperance, Mr. J. Patterson, Corbyville; Leadership Training, Rev. E. M. Cook, Foxboro.

Rev. W. J. Davis conducted the installation of officers. Mrs. Mackenzie presented the report of the Resolution Committee.

Rev. H. L. Morrison gave an inspiring address taking as his subject: "The Home as an Agency of Religious Education." The convention closed with singing hymn 256 "Take my life, and let it be" and the National Anthem followed with the Benediction.

The place of meeting for the next convention was not decided. Two invitations were extended.

Letters From the Troops

Somewhere in England,
October 29, 1940.

Dear Sir:

The photo that you will find inclosed in this letter is seven of the boys from the good old city of Belleville.

You will notice that three of the boys are holding beer bottles. But we have information that comes from a very good authority that the bottles were as empty as our quartermaster's stores or the boys' pockets a few days before pay day.

The canes that you see in the picture, aren't to make you believe that we have been wounded in the grand Battle of Britain. But we find that they make a very good substitute for golf clubs as we had just finished a round of golf when this photo was taken. But don't let me make you believe that the average day of a Canadian soldier over here is all play.

You can, believe you me, that we do a lot more hollering than fore.

Folks from home have written to us telling us of that motion picture the Fighting 69th, which is now playing over there.

The boys in this photo are from one of Canada's oldest regiments called the Fighting 56th, or who stole the lock off the hen house door?

We were wondering if it would be possible to have this photo published in your newspaper, as we look forward very much to getting our regular copies of the Ontario Intelligencer over here:

I know that we are not Walter Winchels, but we would like to do you a favour before we sign off and let you in on the biggest scoop of the year—"the Germans are in Berlin".

Here is something that might amuse your readers:

One day last week we were on a march through one of the towns close to where we are billeted here in England. We were swinging along and putting on the dog for the benefit of the spectators along the curb. There was a little fellow and his mother, standing watching us. As we were passing Mother said to little Johnny: "What do you think of the soldiers, Johnny?" Johnny, feeling very pleased with himself, spoke up: "They're not soldiers, mummy, they are Canadians."

We will sign off now, with best regards and all the best to you and the readers of the Belleville Ontario Intelligencer.

Thumbs up, and don't forget that we're winning.

CANADA AND THE SEAS

The Dominion of Canada, bounded by the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans, must in the nature of things be important in sea-power. The growth of the Canadian navy and merchant marine has been marked especially during the war and this will continue to develop throughout the war period. At the close of the struggle Canada will be in a strong position as far as naval and shipping resources and strength go.

It was announced only last week that it is the hope of Canada to be able to build destroyers and even cruisers in this country and to this end assistance of skilled experts from the Admiralty dockyards or private yards in Britain has been sought.

By the end of March, 1942, Canada hopes to have 250 ships and 23,500 men in the naval service. Already the Dominion has 150 ships and 13,273 men. A naval college will be established in Canada. This college will provide opportunity for young men who wish to follow the naval career as their lifework. It may be that the institution will be purely a naval institution or it may be that after the war it will become a place to which young men who wish to train for the merchant service can go and receive the training necessary to fit them for that important life of sea-faring work, the Hon. Angus Macdonald stated.

The Canadian navy is one of the forms of service which has had a wide appeal to Canadian youth. There is now a strength of 1,620 officers and 11,653 other ranks as compared with a total of 1,774 at the beginning of the war less than fifteen months ago.

The life of the sea in the navy and in the merchant marine is one that is of importance in developing trade and in making a nation of importance to the world of nations. Britain for instance as a great naval and sea-faring power has been able to become the advance guard of progress.

Canada is on the Empire route. The war has developed trade and the impetus shipping has received and the inspiration it has given will not disappear. The fact as stated by Mr. Macdonald that since the beginning of the war 3,500 ships have departed from Canada carrying cargoes of 21,000,000 tons is a proof of the vast importance of shipping and of the navy.

Canada, in looking forward to an adequate navy which will take Canada's part, has the outstanding example of the British navy and the British merchant marine as guide.

Canada's sons who have enlisted in the navy and the more who seek enlistment are but the first of those who will make their career upon the sea. On the two coasts are populations which are accustomed to the sea and on the lakes are others who are water-lovers and even in the inland centres there will be a deep interest in the life of the sea. The sea builds strong characters and has its appeal to the best in manhood.

ENCOURAGING MATERIAL AID

The unceasing flow of munitions from the United States to Great Britain is one of the bright signs of this time and a source of great satisfaction to the British people. 26 huge long range bombers are now available and besides the Sperry bombsight has been released to Britain by the United States and there are indications that the next form of aerial assistance may be twenty "flying fortresses." The use of the huge bombers with their 3000-mile range will have a far-reaching effect.

The United States is letting no time pass in lending material aid to Britain in her fight against Germany and Italy.

The press of the United States has come out very strongly for a speed-up to the highest degree of aid in materials to the British. The sympathetic expressions of the United States people are more and more marked as the war proceeds.

HITLER'S ACT AT VIENNA

Adolf Hitler who went to Vienna last week to see Hungary swept into the Axis net along with Japan likes to make a melodramatic appearance on the world stage. Everyone remembers his appearance in Vienna, three years ago after the "Anschluss," his later visit to Prague, Czecho-Slovakia, then his coming to Warsaw, Poland, through a country devasted by his slaves and defiled by the behavior of the Nazi forces and his coming to Paris where he was photographed looking at the mausoleum of Napoleon, surely no good omen. Then he went to Vienna to see Hungary sign up with the Axis.

Vienna is the capital of the old Austro-Hungarian Empire, and Hitler was born in Austria, later to betray it into the hands of the German Reich because he admired German militarism. He went to Vienna to see Hungary sign on the dotted line rather than to the capital of Hungary, Budapest, which means nothing to theatrical Adolf.

Then he had to make a show to detract attention from Italy's mess of the invasion of Greece.

Typically he makes extravagant claims as to giving Hungary the benefit of being the first to accept his "new order in Europe." But what of Hungary's liberty of action! It is gone.

The world knew this was to come and there was little if any surprise.

Hitler wants to look upon this as a triumph but the fact stares him in the face thit his "new order" is only nominal. No great nation recognizes it. It has no foundation for he will have to fight to the end of his career for Britain will never accept him or his order. Well might Hitler try to impress the weaker nations with his expansion through force and fear for no real triumphs awaits him.

Though trials are ahead, the power that Britain has shown is that spirit and equipment are better than a dragooned Reich even with its vast preparations which crush individuality. Hitler wants to be a terror to the weaker peoples, but they are ready to be inspired by Britain. There is not a race in Europe that does not see hope and pray for Britain's victory.

Surface Raiders Have Value Only As Nuisances

(By Kirke L. Simpson)

Washington, Nov. 25 — (AP) — Events in Southeastern Europe, where the fall of Koritza dramatized the failure of Italy's attack on Greece, serve to obscure a hardly less favorable circumstance for Britain on the sea front.

Appearance Nov. 5 of a powerful German surface raider, presumably a Nazi pocket battleship, in a vital mid-Atlantic hub of Britain's shuttling sea traffic caused apprehension three weeks ago.

But instead of "complete destruction" of a score of cargo craft, as Berlin claimed, only four out of thirty-eight ships were lost. The hero ship of that action was H. M. S. Jervis Bay, which engaged the Nazi raider until most of the cargo carriers had scurried to safety.

The important fact is that there has been no similar raid since. The raider seemingly had been driven to cover by British sea power. However, yesterday a raider appeared again, shelling what apparently was an isolated British vessel off the West Indies. It is to be expected an intense search of that area will force this raider into hiding.

Speaks Volumes for Navy

The first distress call from the attacked convoy Nov. 5 brought British fighting ships surging so swiftly that the attacker fled silently to escape them. It was two days before her version of the incident reached Berlin to be given out with loud outcry, that it spelled the end for British hopes of survival.

The first wireless peep from that fleeing raider would have given Britain's hunting seadogs a clue to her whereabouts. The fact that the Royal Navy has successfully screened merchant convoys for nearly three weeks from a repetition of the raid speaks volumes for Admiralty efficiency.

Prime Minster Churchill referred in Parliament the same day that the surface raider struck to a need for naval bases in Eire. Probably he had not yet heard of the incident as he spoke, for he talked only of the Nazi U-boat menace to Britain's sea life lines.

It was the closer-in bottlenecks he had in mind. All tonnage destined to English west coast ports must converge through the North Channel into the Irish Sea, or via St. George's Channel at the south entrance of that sea.

Those are Britain's danger points, the hunting grounds for Nazi U-boats based in German-occupied continental ports from Norway to the Bay of Biscay.

Can Spare Ships Now

As the lapse of many days without renewal of attack farther at sea by surface raiders proves that phase of the Nazi counter sea blockade is relatively unimportant. With the Nazi invasion spectre laid Britain can spare the ships to deal with any sporadic appearances of Nazi surface craft.

Had Nazi strategists sent out all available big ships earlier while Britain was concentrating her home fleet against the invasion peril, a far heavier score in tonnage destroyed might have been chalked up. Presumably such ships, like much of the Nazi U-boat flotilla, were assigned to guard a barge-ferried attack on Britain if and when it came.

If that is the case, appearance of the raider on Nov. 5 was fresh and convincing evidence of Berlin's abandonment of the invasion idea weeks ago. Even though they may be repeated, such raids now take on the character of either bolstering German home morale or a mere nuisance for the Royal Navy. The incident has been greatly deflated by the final loss accounting and the Nazi failure or inability to follow through.

Dog Meat

Minneapolis Star-Journal

News from Berlin that dog flesh is finding a Government-approved place on German tables is probably not as shocking as it sounds to us who prefer—and have a plentitude of—beef and pork and lamb and fowl.

But just the same there is irony in the episode, for Germans so abhor dog flesh that only 30 months ago a major piece of domestic Nazi propaganda was built around it.

When Hitler decided to demand Czecho-Slovakia's Sudetenland for the Reich, he pondered how sentiment for its return could be built up among Germans. Herr Goebbels, put to work on this problem, found an eccentric hermit of Germanic stock, in the Sudetenland, who was fond of eating dogs. The hermit, for the mark equivalent of $20, permitted photographs to be taken of him, butchering dogs and eating the meat. These pictures were then taken back to Germany and printed, by command of the propaganda ministry, in German newspapers and magazines, over captions which declared indignantly that Germans in the Sudetenland so lacked equality of economic opportunity that they had to eat dog flesh to subsist.

German indignation welled at this state of affairs, and within a fortnight Hitler had the "popular support" at home which he needed for his claim to the Sudetenland.

Controlled by a thermostat, an electric warming plate has been invented to be installed in refrigerators to keep butter at the right spreading temperature without heat escaping from the device.

The following is the English text of a speech in French which Miss Madeleine Carroll, the motion picture actress, delivered over the French Network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation recently. Miss Carroll, whose sister was recently killed by a bomb in London, was herself in France when the Germans over-ran that country and she escaped with difficulty.

In these hours of anquish and tears, all men and women who are still free instinctively seek to rejoin each other and unite together, in order to draw from their collective soul the necessary inspiration and bravery to wage "their battle." To ignore that solidarity would constitute not merely a betrayal but would be sheer folly. Similarly, just as we must all accept personal sacrifices to ensure along with the salvation of humanity our own salvation, we need one another to defend ourselves against the two monstrous nations that seek to enslave us. It is also incumbent upon us to help ourselves to understand the danger that threatens us, and understanding it, to seek the means of escaping it. Now, I was in France last June, in England during the air raids, I saw that danger with my own eyes: I personally felt its effects. To me, it is not a vague threat, but something quite real, something abominable that one must turn away at all costs from the American soil.

France, which is my native land, though my father is a British subject, tried to do so and failed. She failed because she did not understand in time that Hitler's ambition, backed by the meaner ambition of Mussolini, aims not merely at extending Germany's economic sway, but at conquering in the first place, then at throwing into confusion the civilized world by imposing upon it his "new order," which is in reality but a universal reversion to the times of barbarism, to the times when wars were waged to secure slaves. France understood too late, and her most acute suffering at this hour, you may rest convinced, is not famine nor revolt that rumbles within her boundaries, nor again the shame of defeat, but the humiliation at having failed momentarily in the magnificent task she assigned herself of enlightening and guiding the world.

Indeed, there were in France, as well as in England, the United States and Canada, clear-sighted men who sounded the alarm. There were thinkers, writers and speakers who took seriously, and properly so, the book in which Hitler avows shamelessly his inhuman intentions. We have all read, a few months and even a few years before the war, some of those prophecies that have since come true in every respect.

But that systematic blindness in face of the facts, the very blindness the American historian, M. Henrick van Loon, denounced last Sunday when taking part in this series of addresses, was fatal to all conquered countries, just as it will be fatal to us if we do not open our eyes fully to reality.

In the words spoken to me confidentially in France after the catastrophe of last June, and throughout the heavy correspondence that continues to reach me from that country, through courtesies and facilities I cannot specify, there recur repeatedly, like a leit motiv, the same admissions: "We were lulled to sleep by a false sense of security, we did not prepare ourselves as we should have done. We would have had to make greater sacrifices beforehand in order not to have to endure sacrifices afterwards that were a thousand times more painful. In particular, we should have forgotten our petty divisions, our little personal grudges, to see only the foreign menace. The men who diverted us from our essential task, the newspapers which distorted the war aims or put them in the background, after party quarrels, revealed themselves dangerous enemies. Let you beware of the fifth column. It assumes all shapes, all disguises."

In their sorrow, French mothers, those admirable French mothers who, like my own mother, always merged love of country with maternal love, went so far as to accuse themselves of having raised their sons too softly, of having ill fitted them for their part as champions of sacred causes. "We have been too liberal, too tolerant," they said. We allowed our children to live selfishly, to forget the great law of sacrifice, joyous sacrifices freely accepted which vivify and prepare for noble tasks. We badly defended the traditions of economy, labour, attachment to the family and devotion to the motherland, which constituted the glory of our nation."

Quite frankly, I do not consider those mothers as guilty as they profess to be. They no doubt did their best in an era when everybody was drifting into a life of comfort and pleasures. Far from blaming them for a result of which they are but slightly if at all responsible, we should be grateful to them for having reminded us opportunely that the education of a people counts as much if not more than their arming. It is certain that after the harsh lesson of recent months, it is necessary to prepare children for their coming task. In the world fraught with peril which Hitler and Mussolini created for us, only children reared without softness, in a word, brought up heroically, will know how to defend their parents and their motherland. We need many brave and generous children to continue to carry aloft the torch of human freedom.

In accepting, even with great reserve, the admission of the French mothers, it is advisable to call attention to the stern resolve that imbued them in all cases, the resolve to set everything in motion henceforth with an eye single to revenge. That is quite important, for, let us not forget, eternal France, France which you and I love with all our heart, all our intelligence, is not dead, thank God!

She was defeated, but she was not vanquished for all time Her armies were scattered, but her soul has remained unconquered. The Germans may strive their utmost, they may use all their wiles or visit the harshest punishments upon the people, they will never own it. For, France is noble, and the Boches took her by treachery; for France is a Christian country and she cannot abide the pagan doctrine of racism, and finally, France remains France, the daughter of Freedom, and one does not disown one's mother.

There has already started in occupied France as well as in unoccupied France another war, the war between the German spirit and the French spirit. In the families, hearts are being armed in anticipation of the days that will follow a British victory, the victory of allies to whom the immense majority of Frenchmen has remained faithful. In the street, the army of occupation has seen jesting remarks appended to its propaganda posters. The four million Boches now in France hear themselves referred to as "tourists."

(The people started off by calling them Doryphores, and when the Germans understood that the systematic pillaging of museums and private homes caused them to be compared to your potato bugs, they struck this word from the vocabulary by the imposition of heavy fines.)

Moreover, the word tourist is much more expressive. It connotes a state of transition. Tourists pass through, they do not remain and you may rest assured the French will do nothing whatever to retain that type of tourists. Rather, they await but the favorable opportunity to throw them out As in the darkest days of 1916 and 1917 we hear on all sides in France, spoken quietly between closed teeth the words: we will get them. The long months of waiting, the hard road to travel back, the many sacrifices that will be called for, all that is secondary: we will get them.

We will get them, the French say, because they have faith in their spiritual strength and the victory of the British. What a magnificent faith and how worthy of fulfilment, since in sharing it we ensure our own salvation. What a moving faith especially for us who have French blood in our veins and who, still free, have the power to foster it first and bring it to fruition afterwards!

If there is a lesson to be drawn from the greatness of the soul of France, there is a lesson especially to be drawn from the cause that made possible her misfortune. History later on will place where they belong the responsibilities of the men involved in this abominable drama, it will define the political follies and crimes committed for the benefit of Hitler; it will pass judgment on the events we have just witnessed. Let us leave to it that academic task. Our present task is to interpret those events in relation to our defence and the salvation of humanity. France has fallen, but she is striving to stand again. We are still standing, but we must strive still harder so as not fall by her side and in falling drag the rest of the world down with us.

Our efforts in that regard will find expression in a thousand ways, for there are a thousand ways to serve one's cause, and a citizen can use his talents and apply his whole soul. One thing is certain, we must serve if we do not want to be enslaved We are facing a powerful, crafty and ruthless enemy. It will require all our resources, all our strength and all our courage to down him. But when we have found our peace again and restored freedom to the world, we will be able to look into one another's eyes without blushing and our French heart will beat a little faster.

You may be asking yourselves by what right and for what reason I tell you these things. Allow me to conclude with an anecdote.

I knew a young Englishman like there are so many, pretty, fond of laughter, and a good comrade. She did not believe in wrong, for she could not even conceive it. But she believed in life, in her right to love and happiness. She also had a French mother who had instilled in her among other qualities, the sense of duty. When war came, she wanted to do her share like others. She was made to understand that she was performing a great service by remaining at her post and continuing, by her good humor and her unwavering faith in the victory of our arms, to sustain the morale of her associate. Hence, she remained at Harold's, the big London store But every day she sought an opportunity to make herself useful, either by helping a weaker companion, or by preaching in her environment the gospel of resistance.

Then came the big air raids. Ever smiling, ever confident, she continued to perform her humble daily task. She was the first to banter after a bomb had exploded close by; it was to her the little comrades, whom a German raider had bereft of a close relative in the night, used to go. And when people congratulated her on her devotion to work and her pluck in braving the perils of this war which civilians face just like the armed forces, she would reply: "Bah! our airmen and our sailors are performing a much greater task. And Jerry would be happy if he frightened us."

As you can gather, she was not at all heroic, but she did embody some of the virtues of the two great peoples who down the course of history have always shown themselves generous towards the weak and brave in the presence of the strong. And she simply gave the example of the attitude to take in this struggle for our survival, a struggle wherein only the courage to hold out and the will to win will ensure us victory.

This young girl was killed recently by a German bomb. She was nineteen years of age. She was my sister.

What is "All" Aid?

(From The New York Herald Tribune)

In times as tensely critical as these the one course more disastrous than having no policy at all is to decide upon a policy and then fail to apply it. The United States has decided upon its policy—all aid to Britain short of war. The time has come to implement it.

The British situation is not critical; it is always serious — so serious that no one can safely count that the British people will win through unless they are backed with every energy the United States can command. Their main needs are several and may be broadly catalogued as follows: (1) Airplanes, in the greatest possible quantities, other munitions and factory capacity to maintain the supply; (2) Maintenance of the sea routes over which these supplies must be sent; (3) Protection of the British rear against the threat of Japan; (4) Money, and (5) The moral effect on the totalitarians and their enslaved populations which would be produced by a powerful democratic front, strong in its own defence, rich in its resources and energetic in constructive action.

Meeting the first four needs will largely supply the fifth; and in respect to each of the four the United States can do more—perhaps a great deal more—than it is doing now. To take them in order:

(1) Here the first requisite is to increase our own production to the actual maximum permitted by the supply of skilled labor and machine tools, and the second is to make the largest possible share of what we produce available to Great Britain. We dare not cripple our own defence but it would be folly to lose the decisive battle abroad through withholding material which we might prefer to keep but did not absolutely need.

(2) To maintain the sea routes calls for destroyers, merchant shipping and shipyard capacity. The last we can provide and, it is understood, soon will be providing, but it will be a long while before it yields completed ships. Meanwhile we have a considerable existing merchant fleet. We can pool it with the British merchant marine, operating it so as to release British tonnage now in the Indian and Pacific Oceans for the more dangerous service in the Atlantic. Should that fall, we can sell it into British hands without violation of neutrality. But there is also the naval problem. With only 149 destroyers remaining in the American fleet, we could hardly transfer more unless we were guaranteed against entanglements elsewhere. We could immensely relieve the strain on the British convoy system by using our own forces to convoy merchant shipping to mid-Atlantic, where they could be picked up by war vessels based on the European side. In that case, of course, our ships would be liable to attack by any German or Italian raider that could reach them—unless we made the convoying forces strong enough to defy attack.

But no American naval action in the Atlantic can be taken without reference to the Far East. The defense of the British rear against Japanese aggression is really only another facet of the broad problem of keeping the sea lanes free. The United States is certainly entitled, by the threat to her own safety, to ask definite guarantees from Japan and to place a sufficiently powerful naval force in Manila and Singapore to secure their observance. If we did so, it seems probable that the guarantees would be peaceably given, one form of pressure on the British would be greatly relieved, and British forces would be released for service in the Atlantic. But no such action could be taken without definite acceptance of the possibility that it might end in a naval war in the Pacific—a possibility which would hamper any American naval action in the Atlantic. The calculation is a delicate and difficult one, and obviously cannot be made without fullest cooperation with the British and most careful weighing of all relevant military and diplomatic factors. But whether such a course ever seems desirable or not, the United States cannot afford to shrink from a realistic contemplation of it.

(4) Money is the fourth British need, less urgent than the others at the moment, but not to be forgotten. Already there are proposals to repeal the Johnson act and permit British borrowing. To this paper it would seem far perferable to take from the beginning a wider view of the realities of the international finance, international psychology and equity to pile up no debts to complicate and exacerbate the future but provide whatever Britain needs as an outright gift from the American to the British people.

Here are the elements of a real program of aid, and "all" aid, to Britain. At no point is it clear of difficulty. But out of these elements we believe that a concrete program which will be clear and definite must be fashioned — and fashioned soon.

Mayor, Council in Picton Elected by Acclamation

Contests Will be Held for Reeve, Deputy Reeve and Utility Commissioner

Picton, Nov. 25 — Local electors will go to the polls a week from today to elect a Reeve, Deputy Reeve and a Public Utilities Commissioner.

Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon is unopposed for a fourth term.

In the Reeveship contest, the present Reeve, H. S. Colliver, is opposed by this year's Deputy Reeve, Ralph Warren.

[illegible] qualifying for Councillors were Douglas Farley, Ross Pearsall, C. H. McGibbon, William Henley, Harry Campney, George J. Ovens, being given acclamations.

School trustees were given acclamations.

Public Utilities Commissioner H. B. Tully is seeking re-election, opposed by M. E. Knox.

Electors will also be asked to say whether or not they favor a two-year term for council.

In Sophiasburg Township the entire council was returned by acclamation. Members are: Reeve, Roy Ketcheson. Councillors, Burt Katchapaw, Hubert Goodmurphy, Curtis Doxsee.

In Bloomfield Village Council is returned by acclamation: E. B. Purtelle, Reeve; Sidney Brogden, George Taylor, George T. Jackson, William Campney, Councillors. There will be a vote on the two-year term by-law.

Celebrate Anniversary

The Salvation Army in Picton is celebrating its 56th anniversary this week. Special services commenced on Sunday and continue throughout the week. The week end services were featurerd by addresses by Lt.-Col. and Mrs. Best of Montreal. Monday night, the Belleville Salvation Army band is giving a concert; Tuesday evening Capt. Cecil Bonar of Tweed will speak; Wednesday evening Major and Mrs. Stevens of Kingston; Thursday evening, Capt. and Mrs. Hewitt of Trenton; Friday evening, a young people's rally.

When the Salvation Army was first established here the initial meetings were conducted by Staff Captain Madden. Capt. Goodall and Lieut. Fisher then took charge of the Corps. From that time onward the work had continued and grown until today it is doing a wonderful service. At the present time, not only is the regular work being carried on but much war work is also being done.

Several of the officers who have been in charge here have become prominent in the Salvation Army. Major Harvey Kendall is noted for his evangelistic campaigns, Col. Ernest Sims later became Social Secretary for the S. A. in Canada, and Brigadier Elias Owens became Divisional Commander in Canada and is now in charge of all police court and prison work in Toronto. Capt. and Mrs. Rankin are the officers in charge at the present time.

Fire Alarm Installed

An automatic fire alarm is being installed in Prince Edward County hospital, this being of the most modern type.

This week, the Red Cross Society has a display of their war work in the Hydro window. All kinds of articles make a very attractive display. Included are articles made by the Junior Red Cross branches and the Red Cross Society at the Collegiate Institute.

Boxes have been placed by the Legion Ladies' Auxiliary in several stores where donations of tobacco may be left. These are gathered weekly and shipped overseas to Hastings and Prince Edward regiment.

The L.O.B.A. held a successful bazaar on Saturday. The display of articles, many suitable for Christmas gifts, attracted many buyers.

Mrs. A. H. Walton and son David spent the week end in Toronto.

Mrs. P. A. Vanderwater who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Mitford and George Mitford in Toronto, returned home Friday evening.

Viscount Craigavon Dies of Heart Attack

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Nov. 25 (CP)—Viscount Craigavon, 69, first Prime Minister of Northern Ireland and bitter opponent of proposals for union with Eire, collapsed and died Sunday night at Glen Craig, his County Down home near here. His death was attributed to a heart ailment.

Lord Craigavon, who had been Prime Minister of Northern Ireland since the establishment of the Ulster Government in 1921, worked right up to the end.

He attended the last session of the Northern Ireland House of Commons Tuesday and was occupied even Sunday with Government matters.

The Prime Minister had not been well recently, working under the severe strain of wartime conditions.

Uncompromising in his hostility to Eire, the six-foot two-inch "giant" of Ulster repeatedly proclaimed Northern Ireland's devotion to the Crown and retorted to Eire's demands for a united independent Ireland: "All that we wanted in the past and all that we want in the future is that the South should leave us alone."

Son of a Farmer

He was born James Craig, sixth son of a Craigavon farmer and justice of the peace, at Strandtown, Jan. 8, 1871, and created a baronet in 1918 for his services in the Great War. He was raised to the peerage in 1927.

Surviving are his widow and two sons, one of whom, the Hon. James Craig, succeeds to the title.

FISH MAKES SUGGESTION

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)— Representative Hamilton Fish suggested Saturday night that Great Britain might meet part of her need for additional funds and naval forces by selling her western hemisphere islands to the United States. The New York Republican said in a broadcast that the United States should seek outright possession of the islands in exchange for cancelation of the British war debt.

NO WITNESSES LEFT

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 25 (AP) — George Maxey, 68, was called by police today to identify three men suspected of abducting, robbing and beating him Friday night. He identified them and prepared to swear to warrants. Then he collapsed. A few minutes later he died—of a heart attack. The suspects were released. There were no witnesses left.

DEATH ACCIDENT JURY'S VERDICT

Members Find Little Girl Ran Into Side of the Car

Stirling, Nov. 25—(Special)—As a result of the evidence given by police constables Patterson and Grayling and four witnesses at the inquest into the death of June Preston, 6-year-old daughter of Lance-Cpl. Harry Preston, C.A.S.F., now in England, and Mrs. Preston of Sine Post Office, the jury after a brief recess returned the verdict of accidental death. The inquest was conducted by Dr. J. S. Demorest of Stirling, coroner, and the witnesses were questioned by S. G. Robertson, County Crown Attorney. Dr. J. J. Robertson acted as medical witness in the case and as first witness called described the scene of the accident at the time of his arrival and stated that death was caused by a compound fracture of the skull and multiple body injuries. Constable Patterson of the Provincial Police, the next witness called, testified that he, in the company of Officer Grayling, conducted the investigation at the scene of the accident, after being called about six-thirty Tuesday night, Nov. 19th.

Lying on Shoulder

On his arrival the body was still lying on the shoulder of the road with the feet on the pavement pointing toward the guard rail, portions of brain matter were also found at a point forty-five feet from the body. The body lay fifty-five feet from the side road. He testified that visibility was good at the time of the accident and it appeared the impact occurred on the west side and threw the body to the east side. He identified the handle of the car door as the one removed from the car after the accident and stated his belief that it was at this point that the first impact was made and also described an indentation on the left rear fender. Constable Grayling gave evidence in collaboration to that of the previous witness, adding that the sideroad was marked by a highway signpost to north going traffic. Both officers asserted there was no sign of liquor in the car or any evidence of drunkenness.

Child Dashed Out is Claim

John Dougall of Marmora, driver of the car, was then called and in response to questioning stated that he first sighted two children when fifty feet from the sideroad and as he approached the road a third child dashed out of the same road running into the side of his car before he could do any moving to avoid her. He applied his brake at once and summoned a doctor and the police.

Other witnesses called were Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Cuddy and Mrs. Hilda McQuigg, passengers in the car and their testimony was similar to previous witnesses. A jury composed of R. W. Meiklejohn, foreman, Frank Woodbeck, J. S. Whitehead, Fred McGee and Robt. Williams returned the aforementioned verdict after a brief deliberation.

HOLD CHRISTMAS BAZAAR

New York, Nov. 25 (CP)—A Christmas bazaar at which thousands of dollars worth of toys, books, games and other gifts for children will be sold, opens Dec. 2, the British-American Ambulance Corps announced today. The articles to be sold have been donated to the corps by United States manufacturers and publishers, and the proceeds of the sales will go toward the aid of bomb-harrassed boys and girls in Great Britain.

ARRESTED FOR ACT

Indianapolis, Nov. 25 (AP)—Fourteen shots rang out from a south side tavern. Several police squads hurried to the place and prepared for a homicide investigation. But the noise was only Edwin Ludeman, 37, the barkeeper, shooting in the Sunday quiet at small iron deer on an indoor target range. He was arrested on a charge of shooting inside the city limits.

RUGBY CHAMPIONS ARE HONORED

Stirling High School Wins Championship of District in Two Straight Games

Stirling, Nov. 25 (Special)—Finishing the regular playing season in second position, a youthful, hard-fighting team representing Stirling High School, moved forward to take the finals by downing Tweed in two straight games. Tender in years and experience and very much lighter in weight the Stirling squad created an upset by downing the strong Tweed contingent and the entire Stirling district join the student body of the school in expressing justified pride in their brilliant efforts. The personnel of the two opposing teams that battled in district championship play-off are as follows:

Tweed—B. McCrea, D. Connor, K. Fisher, B. Retan, B. Vance, L. Rivers, T. McTaggart, G. Doyle, J. Meaghan, H. Shannon, J. Wager, C. Cassidy, Alternates: J. Beatty, C. Connor, B. Wallace, W. Rivers.

Close Games

Although both games were close the Stirling team was never headed, taking a lead in the first game played on their own field. They stretched the gap wider when they journeyed to Tweed for the final fixture. Great credit is due to the fine efforts of E. R. Mundy, Rev. A. M. Laverty and early in the season James Ward for their unstinted help and interest as well as to each player on the team.

Banquet and Dance Held

So to honour this group who brought championship honours to Stirling the rugby season activity was climaxed with a fine banquet on Friday night in the Community Service Building and followed by a school dance in the High School gymnasium, later the same evening.

The tables for the banquet which accommodated the hundred or more guests were artistically decorated in the school colors and the table of honor decorated with the championship ball and streamers. The proceeds of the function were given to the local branch of the Red Cross.

Fine Program of Toasts

Mr. J. L. Good, M.A., Principal of Stirling High School, was toastmaster for the evening and following the toast to the King, a period of rousing community singing was enjoyed under the leadership of "Bob" Paterson, popular song-leader. Coupled with patriotic toasts to Canada and the Empire were the names of Mr. C. A. Wells, Principal of Stirling Public School, and W. C. West, Reeve of the Village of Stirling. A toast to "Our School" was proposed by Russell Pyear representing the team and student body and response was made by Mr. Ewart Bailey, chairman of the Stirling Board of Education. Associated with the toast to "Our Team" were the names, Mr. E. R. Mundy, physical instructor, and Bill McGee, captain of the team.

Splendid musical contributions to the program were made by Wm. Jones and Wm. Reynolds singing vocal duet and instrumental numbers by Mr. Jones. Mr. G. L. Clute presided at the piano.

Address by Rev. A. M. Laverty

The speaker of the evening was Rev. A. M. Laverty, B.A., B.D., minister of St. Paul's Church, Stirling, who delivered a fine address on the subject, "Sports and Life." Particularly interested in sports and young people's activity, Rev. Laverty drew attention to four essential reasons for the inclusion of a sports program in education. Sport develops team play and cooperation of one individual with the other, it breaks down all barriers of isolation and promotes the much desired brotherhood attitude. Team play reveals what concentrated individual effort can do when directed into proper channels. Sport creates manliness and courage that in later days will aid the studens when faced by the problems of industrial and economic life. A student participating in sports at school learn the art of "taking it."

Seated at the table of honor were E. R. Mundy, coach; Captain Bill McGee, and the following players: B. Bastedo, D. R. Tanner, D. McIntosh, D. Patterson, R. Pyear, R. Vandervoor, D. Francis, F. Eggleton, D. Hulin, N. Murray, C. Pidgeon, E. Sine, J Thompson and Rowan Walker.

After the banquet a dance was held in the school gymnasium to which the public were invited and the student body along with other supporters of the team enjoyed a pleasant evening.

ADMIRAL LEAHY TO BE AMBASSADOR FROM U.S. TO FRANCE

Hyde Park, N.Y., Nov. 23 (AP) — President Roosevelt announced today through a secretary that he would appoint Rear Admiral William D. Leahy, retired, now Governor of Puerto Rico and former Chief of United States naval operations, Ambassador to France to succeed William C. Bullitt.

The Secretary, William D. Hassett, said it had not been determined when Leahy's nomination would be submitted to the Senate for approval.

RECOVERED FROM LAKE

Ludington, Mich., Nov. 25 (AP)— The body of a tall, red-haired man, believed to have been a member of the crew of the sunken Canadian freighter Anna C. Minch, was recovered from Lake Michigan Sunday near Big Point Sable Coast Guard Station. The Canadian ship and the United States freighter William B. Davock both sank with all hands of their region in a storm Nov. 11. In the clothing on the body found yesterday there was no indentification, but the presence of a Canadian postage stamp in the pocket and Canadian soles on the shoes led to the belief that the victim had sailed with the Minch.

The election of officers for 1941 as follows: Convener, Mrs. M. Burgess; Co-Convener, Mrs. J. McEwen; Secretary, Mrs. R. Blakely; Treasurer, Mrs. J. Fox, Pianist, Mrs. C. Hogle; Birthday Box, Mrs. Laughlin; Flower Committee, Mrs. E. Mifflin, Mrs. W. Harrison, convener of the war work. After the election of officers a hymn was sung and all repeated the Mizpah. A dainty lunch was served. A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Brodie for her kind hospitality.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, November 24

Sunday's horoscope holds testimonies of a rather singular, sudden and probably breath-taking occurrence which may have its final denouement far into the future. Such visitation may be radical and thrilling in its peculiar nature and its happy culmination depends on much discretion, discernment, and wise choice when confronted by dilemma.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of adventure and experience quite out of the routine. There may be dramatic, romantic, or startling visitations reaching far into the years for their real significance. These should be met with wise decisions.

A child born on this day should possess remarkable talents, with originality, freedom from all conventions and regulations, independent in thought and action. These are supported by subtle insight, strong intuitions and marked ingenuity.

For Monday, November 25

Monday's astrological forecast is for a lively and enterprising day, with the energies and faculties under fine stimuli for success in new projects or where static conditions need aggressive and forceful readjustments. Push these with vigor and zest, especially in connection with well organized groups, but be alert to snares or petty treacheries.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a fair success, with matters of new interest or innovation in old methods under particularly enterprising sway. It is a time for pushing with aggression and initiative in combination with well founded groups, but with a keen eye to deception, intrigue or small trickeries.

A child born on this day should be forceful, resounceful, energetic and have much executive and constructive ability, alert, powerful and resolute.

Tots' Becoming Bloomer-Frock

By ANNE ADAMS

Even a very young lady's clothes can show bright originality! Here's gay proof in Pattern 4614, an Anne Adams dress that's simple as can be to stitch up at home, with the Instructor Sheet for aid. The front has a novelty treatment, with both the button-trimmed yokes and the side-front panels cut in unusual and decorative shapes. Do play up the panels by making them in a colorful contrast, perhaps with a small collar to match. The back of the frock is in straight, easy seams. Well-cut bloomers or panties are included in this captivating pattern which you'll like so well that you'll want several versions in two or three different fabrics.

Pattern 4614 is available in children's sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6, dress, takes 1⅝ yards 35 inch fabric and ⅝ yard contrast.

Send twenty cents (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly Size, Name, Address and Style Number.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Young Lady Prefers Him to Other Boys

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I went with a girl for three months "steady" and we had a quarrel and broke up. I didn't ask for another date for six months. After that we went together for a few months more and had another quarrel.

Now she has gone to college, and I wonder if you think it would be all right to write her a letter and make up again, or do you think I'd better drop it? She told me she liked me better than any boy she had gone with.

Would you advise me to try again, and carry on a correspondence with her while she is at school?

Tall, Dark and Homely

By all means, write to the girl who likes you better than any boy she's met. Don't quarrel too much. Sometimes these spats become permanent.

Eighteen, Can Have No Boy Friends

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl past 18. My parents are quite strict and do not let me bring any boy friends to the house or to go out with them. I choose my friends wisely and know how to take care of myself, but my parents won't give me credit for this.

I graduate from high school next February and have a job on Saturdays. I think I'm old enough to go out like other girls. Please tell me what to do. When the girls talk about their dates, I must always keep silent.

Desperate

If you follow my column you must know that I urge parents with all the vehemence at my command to let their daughters have girl and boy friends. It's so much wiser than to try and bring up a girl as if she were on a desert island and put the temptation in her way to sneak out on the sly.

To my way of thinking, sensible parents encourage girls to invite their friends of both sexes to their homes. They can then decide which are desirable and which are undesirable, and with a little finesse can weed out the latter. Many wretched marriages are made by girls who were kept too strictly.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

FOLLOW ACCEPTED FORM IN SIGNING YOUR CHRISTMAS CARDS.

Before you order your Christmas cards, you should know what form of name is proper for you to use on them. You should be sure when it is or is not correct to use your name with its title.

Christmas cards are of two kinds, formal and informal. If you decide to have formal cards, the message is expressed in the third person; the name is put above the message; and the title — Mr. and Mrs. or Mrs., or Mr., or Miss — should be used before the name.

Here, for example, is a usual and correct form for a formal card, either engraved, printed, or written by hand:

Mr. and Mrs. John Holiday wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year

We should keep in mind that the following form is not correct:

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year
Mr. and Mrs. John Holiday

Nor is this in good form:

Best wishes for a Merry Christmas from
Mr. and Mrs. John Holiday

Why aren't these forms correct? Because a name at the end of a message is a signature, and a signature in informal. That is, it is not prefixed with a title.

Therefore, if you wish your name to appear after the message on your Christmas cards, here are correct forms for the signature (engraved, printed, or hand-written):

Mary and John Holiday
Mary and John
The John Holidays

In the majority of cases the names on Christmas cards, when they are put after the message (that is, as signatures to the cards), and whether they are engraved, printed, or handwritten, have the wife's name first — Mary and John or Mary and John Holiday. This form is considered more polite.

Also logical is the point of view that when the wife writes the signatures, courtesy demands that she write her name last.

Either form is correct, but customarily the wife's name is first.

However, when children's names are included in the signature, the father's name always comes first: John and Mary and Baby, or John and Mary and Johnnie, or The Holidays — John, Mary, Johnnie, Polly, and Bob.

COURTESY TIP

You should answer immediately an invitation to a party where the number of guests is a consideration. For example, a dinner, luncheon, bridge party, buffet party.

Music and Its Value In Schools

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

I am fifty-six years old. One Saturday afternoon, when I was a boy about twelve years old, I heard bagpipe music rendered by two traveling Scotchmen. It started up a few hundred yards away, on the hill in front of a neighbor's house.

Nothing I had ever heard sounded so wonderful to me. Excepting the harmonica, organ and banjo, I had never heard a musical instrument. However, we did do some singing at home, church and school. A good many thousand other persons my age had no more exposure to instrumental music in their childhood, especially in rural places.

At the first teachers' institute I attended at the age of 16 when I began to teach, a hired string quartette played. Even in [illegible] began lecturing at teachers' institute, the music was supplied from outside the schools. It was some years later before I heard an orchestra by school children at such meetings.

School Musicians

A year later when I lectured before the county teachers' [illegible] of Franklin County, Pa., which I first attended as a teacher 33 years before, excellent music was furnished by orchestras and choruses of school children, most of them rural children. During the last 15 years the music supplied at conventions of teachers and parents in all the cities, counties and states where I have lectured has practically always been rendered by school children, and it has been of very high quality.

In Leesville, Crawford County, Ohio, is a good sample of a forward-looking music program by rural children, nearly all of whom live on farms. Out of the total enrollment of 248 children (69 grade children and 179 from grades 7 to 12 inclusive), 43 children of the grades and high school are in band and orchestra classes. The school band has 27 children; orchestra, 27; drum corps, 12; chorus, 30. Then there are various ensembles as string, woodwind, trios, vocal groups, which have appeared on many programs and have broadcast on the air.

Special Direction

As you might suppose, there is leadership in this place. Mr. H. L. Bland is the musical director. He is known nationally, being the author of the 30-minute series which include "Santa Claus," "Lincoln", "Washington," and "Pilgrims," each centered about music of the time indicated. These famous little operettas have been worked out by Mr. Bland with the aid of the rural school children of the Leesville area.

In these days of million-dollar stadia, used a few times a year, and bulging gate receipts at football games, it might be well to consider the character value of group music at school.

Virginia Bruce always looks charming and beautiful

By HELEN FOLLETT

Tell me, gentle reader, are you the kind of a woman who rushes pell-mell through a terrific day, tears home at the last minute, gets herself into hope-to-die clothes and arrives at the party breathless and flurried? If so you aren't the only one.

Give yourself half an hour for a pick-up beautifying treatment, to pull yourself together and cool off the heels of your nervous system. You'll look better, feel better, have a jollier evening. No sense starting out tired.

Stop, Look, Listen

Put on the shower cap, cream your complexion, relax in a warm bath. Use the bath brush with vigor; frictioning the flesh stimulates the functions of the skin and restores energy.

Remove the cream. Dip a heavy washcloth in ice cold water, place over the eyes to bring freshness and sparkle. Relax to your little pink toes and don't think about anything at all; let your thoughts roam where they will.

Don't jump into your clothes. Take time. Tranquility is a charming attribute of beauty and it won't be with you if you hurry. Men aren't crazy about girls who wilt before the party is at an end.

Many women are afraid to use oily cosmetics, having heard that they inspire a growth of fuzz on chin or lip. Nothing to it. Superfluous hair, it is believed, is caused by some slight glandular disturbance.

If you cling to this old notion, then remove the cosmetic in half an hour, never leave it on over night. During that brief period it will give smoothness and freshness to the skin, will not have time to penetrate into the pores.

A soft downy growth on the cheeks should not be tampered with. When the hairs develop into bristles they can be removed with the electric needle.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

We were eating supper and ma noticed me trying to look as if I was enjoying it more than I really was, and she said, Benny, you're having trouble with that tooth again and there's no use trying to disguize it.

Aw G, ma, you ought to go in the dwetective business, I said, and ma said, I'm in it already, so far as you are concerned.

Wich she is, and pop said, He can stop in at the dentists on his way to school in the morning.

Aw G, pop, good night, G, willickers, I said, and pop said, On the contrary, the dentist is our friend and benefactor and we ought to fly to him with a grateful hart and an open mouth and pay his bills with pleasure and alacrity.

Your father is quite right ma said, and pop said, Dr. Climber is an excellent dentist and spent many expensive years in college learning to nip a small cavity in the bud with a minimum of discomfort to the owner. Wise people visit their dentist every 6 months or so just to hear his friendly voice assure them that their teeth are all right, he said.

Your father is quite right, ma said. In the morning he'll go over to Dr. Climber's with you and take the opportunity of having his own teeth checked up, she said, and pop said, Well now mother, dont you think that's spoiling the boy, I mean dont you think he's old enough to go to the dentist under his own steam, when it's necessary?

As far as my observation reports, no member of your sex is ever old enough for that, ma said. I'm tired of answering Dr. Climber with non-committal vagueness when he asks me when you're coming around for a check up, and I should think you'd be only too glad to set Benny a practical example, she said.

I am, I am, confound it, there's nothing wrong with my teeth, why should the innocent suffer with the gilty? pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum just relax and put it temporarily out of your mind, I'll remind you both in the morning.

FIVE LUMBERMEN INSTANTLY KILLED BY FAST EXPRESS

Truck is Hit as Lumbermen Return to Camp After Holiday at Their Homes

EIGHT INJURED

Rimouski, Que., Nov. 25.—(CP)—Five lumbermen returning to camp after a holiday at their homes were killed early today when the Canadian National Railways' Maritime Express struck their truck beside Rimouski station.

Eight other lumbermen on the truck were injured when the Montreal-Halifax train crashed into the vehicle in a blinding snowstorm and dragged it 350 feet from a level crossing to the station platform.

The dead:

Isidore Lepage, Mario Landry, Hector Desrosiers, Jean-Daniel Lepage and Isidore Cote.

The injured:

Rosaire Lepage, Albert Lepage, Herve Lepage, Joe Huard, George Huard, Willie Proulx, Rene Tremblay, Armand Tremblay, and Rolland Labbe.

All were residents of the neighboring parish of St. Odile.

A 14th occupant of the truck, Gerard Lepage, escaped with only a few scratches when he was able to grab a hold on the locomotive and hang on until the train came to a stop.

One in Truck Heard Bell

Lepage said he heard a bell and saw the train about 25 or 30 feet away. In the next instant there was the crash as the heavy train bowled over the truck. Although the Halifax-bound train was slowing for the stop, it carried the wreckage right up to the station platform. Most of the dead and injured were spilled along the right-of-way.

Most of the survivors were on the rear of the truck, covered by a tarpaulin, and had little idea of what happened.

About 100 residents of this town, 400 miles northeast of Montreal, were waiting on the platform to greet the train, a nightly custom of citizens in most French Canaidan towns. They heard the crash and screams of the victims but, because of the storm, were unable to see the accident.

HOUSE PROBABLY WILL ADJOURN AT END OF WEEK

Christmas Recess Will be Called Until First of Next Year

Ottawa, Nov. 25.— (CP)—Parliament begins another week of its new session today—possibly the last week of deliberations before the Christmas recess.

The House of Commons has spent almost all of the 11 business days so far in debating the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. Seven Ministers have presented reviews of their departmental activities and the eighth—Labor Minister McLarty—is expected to speak Tuesday.

Leaders of Opposition groups and private members on both sides of the House also have taken part in the debate. However, it is expected that a number of other opposition members will be heard in the last few days of the debate.

One of the principal subjects of private discussion on Parliament Hill is the forthcoming meeting of Dominion and Provincial government representatives, called for Jan. 14 to consider implementation of recommendations made by the Rowell-Sirois Royal Commission.

Last Friday, Prime Minister Mackenzie King said in reply to a question in the House that the Throne Speech debate would have to be finished before it would be possible to say whether provision would be made before Christmas recess for a debate on the Rowell-Sirois report.

If no such debate is held, it is probably adjournment will be taken at the end of this week until next February.

Gardiner May Speak Again

Hon. Grote Stirling (Con. Yale), a former National Defence Minister, will be the first speaker when the debate is resumed today. It is thought possible that Agriculture Minister Gardiner, who already has given the House the results of his recent trip to Britain, may speak again before the recess is taken.

During the week-end it was announced by the Finance Department that D. Alex Skelton, chief of the Research Department of the Bank of Canada, has been appointed Secretary of the Jan. 14 Dominion-Provincial Conference. He served as secretary to the Rowell-Sirois Commission. Mr. Skelton's assistant will be Paul Fontaine of the Justice Department.

Government officials said they did not know whether the conference sessions would be open to the public. This was a matter of high policy, and it was unlikely any decision would be reached before the representatives of the various governments meet and discuss the matter.

However, on the basis of precedent established by previous Dominion-Provincial Conferences, it was considered probable that the Jan. 14 meeting might be mostly behind closed doors.

Two Nominated for Reeveship and Seven for Councillors

REPORTS HEARD

Tweed, Nov. 25 (Special).—Nominations for Reeve and Councillors were held in the Township Hall on Friday. There was a very small crowd, the smallest in more than a decade, when Clerk G. D. C. Morton declared the nominations closed and read the following list of nominees:

For Reeve—Reeve C. H. Kerr, S. B. Rollins.

For Councillors—S. B. Rollins, S. A. McCarey, E. W. Jones, Jos. Fobart (present councillors), and C. E. Way, S. R. Curry and S. B. McGee.

For Public Utilities Commissioner—A. J. Maynes (acclamation).

Clerk Morton acted as chairman and referred to the trying period through which Tweed, in common with other places, has passed since the last nomination.

The High School report was given by the chairman, Dr. W. A. Paul. Receipts for the eleven-month period were $9,398.16 and expenditures $9,290.68. Both these would be increased for the remaining month of the year. Dr. Paul explained that the High School Board had advanced to the staff $100 with which to purchase war savings stamps to be distributed for sale by the High School students. Some of the major expenditures of the school, said Dr. Paul, were for repairs made necessary by the fact that the school had been in operation only one year short of a quarter century.

Defective Wiring.

A serious situation was found in the lighting system. It was discovered that the metal lath throughout the school was charged with electricity. It is not known how the condition came about nor how long it has continued, but only a miracle has prevented a fire.

This condition will make necessary some new wiring and new fixtures.

Dr. Paul commended the staff for its efficient work. During the year 1939 two students had won scholarships. Gerald Wagar won the McMaster Scholarship entitling him to four years' free tuition at McMaster University. Earl Varty had won the Second Carter Scholarship in competition with the nine other secondary schools of Hastings County. Herbert Leal, a former student, had won the Rhoades Scholarship. All these, observed Dr. Paul, speak well for the training given at the Tweed High School.

Parks Board Report.

Clerk Morton gave the Parks Board report. Total receipts from dances were $1512.15. This amount was more than $400 in excess of the best previous year which covers a ten-year period. This increase was the direct result of the excellent manner in which the dances are conducted at Memorial Park Pavilion. The Parks Board, reported Mr. Morton, is practically free of debt for the first time in its history.

Hydro Commission.

Reeve C. H. Kerr gave a comprehensive report of the operations of the Hydro Commission. Total revenue for the year amounted to $14,104.39. Power costs were $9,703.33. Total cash on hand is $7,131.07, almost enough to discharge the total indebtedness of $8,500 owing on debentures. The Commission is considering the question of whether more than one of the remaining five debentures should be paid in December, or whether the surplus should be loaned to the government for war purposes. This matter will be decided at an early meeting. During the year the domestic rate had been lowered 2 cents per kilowatt hour.

Clerk G. D. C. Morton who is completely conversant with every phase of the finances of the village gave a clear picture of the financial situation, showing that the finances are in excellent shape. No trouble is experienced in securing a line of credit from the bank. During the past few months relief costs had dropped rapidly. This is in part due to the fact that no relief can be obtained unless the application is approved by the district officer in Peterborough.

Reeve C. H. Kerr discussed at length the various departments over which the council has jurisdiction. In 1930 the total debenture debt was $151,000. At the present time it is about $99,000. Of this amount more than half is self-supporting representing the Waterworks and Hydro.

Two-Mill Decrease

Discussing the mill-rates for the various services, Reeve Kerr reported that the village rate is 4 1-2 mills lower, but certain increases in other departments resulted in a net decrease of approximately 2 mills.

Discussing the two-year term for the Council, Reeve Kerr stated that 26 of 28 municipalities in Hastings County are doing as Tweed has done in the matter as no petition had come from the ratepayers to call for a public expression of opinion on the matter. It was pointed out later by Mr. S. R. Curry that many of these municipalities hold their elections in January and petitions signed by the ratepayers to put the question to a vote may still be presented.

Reeve Kerr stated that no council composed of reliable men is likely to take advantage of its two-year tenure of office and spend the municipality's finances recklessly.

The matter of the Council's stand on the Daylight Saving question was explained by the Reeve. It was not generally popular in Tweed during the past summer especially among the rural part of the district on whom it worked considerable hardship and inconvenience . This was particularly true among the children transported in the buses to Tweed Consolidated School. It would work considerable hardship and be detrimental to the health of these children especially during the winter.

It was also pointed out by Mr. Kerr that our power comes from a small plant at Healey's Falls near Campbellford which serves Marmora, Deloro, Madoc, Tweed and Sulphide. As the first three places are on Daylight Saving Time danger of a peak-load is lessened by the last two places being on Standard Time. Moreover nothing authentic has ever been received directly from the government by Tweed Council. The Council's action was taken with the best interests of the municipality in mind and with no thought of opposing the government.

Reeve Kerr told of the Council's efforts to persuade the Railway Board not to withdraw C.N.R. service from Tweed. No definite decision has been received by the Council regarding the matter which would means a loss of 10 or 12 families to Tweed and $500 in taxes.

Enlarging upon the debenture debt, Reeve Kerr said that the Consolidated School debentures would be retired in 1943, Sidewalk in 1947, Sewage disposal 1950, and Waterworks 1960.

50th Year Since Incorporation

Mr. S. B. Rollins, oldest councillor, drew attention to fact that Tweed will observe its fiftieth anniversary as an incorporated village on January 1st, 1941. He gave a brief history of the affair, recalling a number of interesting highlights. He said there was strong opposition to incorporation, as strong as ever was made against waterworks, high school or purchase of the Hydro system. After a successful vote was taken the first council was elected, Adam McGowan was the first Reeve. He had favoured incorporation, but everyone of the councillors in the first council had opposed it. Mr. Rollins commended Reeve Kerr for his excellent work during the year, noting that he was highly regarded on the County Council. Mr. Rollins has been a resident of Tweed since 1888 and has spent 21 years in the council, 15 as Reeve.

Joseph Fobert spoke briefly noting that all deputations who waited upon the council during the year came with reasonable requests. He expressed the council's thanks to the people of the village for their cooperation.

New Water Users Added

Referring particularly to the water sebrvices of Tweed, E. W. Jones, Chairman of the Waterworks Commission, said that at present there are about one hundred water users without metres. This situation should be corrected and every user should be on a metre. During the past year 12 new water users had been added and 11 during the previous year. This rate of increase will tax the town's wells to the limit in a few years, as there are about 75 properties along the present system who are potential water-users. Councillor Jones expressed the opinion that some effort should be made to attract new industries to Tweed with its excellent facilities of railway, highway and hydro. He had only one fault to find with Reeve Kerr, that he worked too hard at his job, taking long hours away from his own business, receiving no pay for his services and not enough thanks.

Councillor S. A. McCarey spoke briefly of several matters which called for the council's consideration.

C. E. Way, former Councillor made inquiries about the financial state of the village as he had not heard the previous discussion owing to arriving late. He commended the council for its work during the past year.

S. R. Curry, nominated for council, stated that he was not eligible for the office as he was a member of the High School Board. He paid a tribute to the Reeve and council for their efforts on behalf of the village and noted Reeve Kerr's popularity among his colleagues on the County Council. Commenting on the small attendance Mr. Curry said that it might be interpreted as a vote of confidence in the council. Everyone was apparently satisfied with its work.

Expressing opposition to the "two-year term" Mr. Curry said that he felt people should have a chance to express themselves on this question, and that this act of the Provincial Legislature was a step to lessen the powers of smaller municipalities.

S. B. McGee, also nominated for the council, announced that he was not a candidate. Mr. A. J. Maynes, re-elected as Hydro Commissioner, was not present when his name was called.

WHEREAS

World civilization faces the awful prospect of being wiped out by Hitler and his Nazi government, plus the other totalitarian powers.

The Nazi-Fascist-Japanese Pact is further evidence of the intention of the totalitarian powers to conquer the world. They seek to control the world from a military, economic, social viewpoint.

Great world civilizations have died before because the people were asleep & corrupt, or simply unprepared. Democracy everywhere must rise to its own defense, and every democracy must rise to the defense of the others, otherwise we miserably commit our several suicides.

Today the totalitarian powers everywhere march against democracy. In London and over England are the hideous and cruel bombardments of civil populations, and England is on the brink of destruction. We must not permit that destruction, for it is our first and possibly last line of defense.

The heroism of the people of London and other English cities is unparalleled in the world's history. The privation they endure, their courage in the face of death screaming from the skies, by bombardments, by all manner of attack, is one of the most beautiful pages written since the beginning of Man: NOW, THEREFORE,

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE COMMISSIONERS OF THE CITY OF SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS:

That, first of all, this country defend itself by building the greatest Army in the world, plus a two-ocean Navy, able to protect the Western Hemisphere, and sail the Seven Seas.

Second, that we express to all the nations of the Western Hemisphere—Canada, Mexico, and those nations of Central America and South America—a most sincere friendship, which shall include military and economic cooperation against attack.

Third, that we memorialize, praise, and send our heartfelt best wishes to the Lord Mayor of London, the Councilmen, the fire-wardens, members of the police and fire departments, the health department—the latter working so hard to prevent epidemics. But more than anything else we send our heartfelt sympathy to the civilian population of that great City of London and other English cities, to the men, women and children now enduring with great courage the cruel and brutal attacks made upon them, and ask them to realize that we also realize that we face the same possibilities and fate.

Fourth, that our country give all possible aid to the British Empire. Let it be in the shape of "Flying Fortresses" in such number as shall be sufficient; that we also extend credit, food, commodities, munitions in such amounts as England shall need, and that the Johnson Act, requiring cash for purchases be repealed as to England.

Fifth, that we call upon the people of our city and all American people, for UNITY. Let those that have differences bury them in this hour of peril; let all of us Americans work together for the preservation of our great Republic.

PASSED AND APPROVED THIS THIRD DAY OF OCTOBER A.D., 1940.

PUBLIC CAN AID POSTAL SERVICE

Proper Way to Address Mail Going to Members of Naval Services

By properly addressing mail intended for members of the Canadian naval service, the general public can greatly aid the Postal Service in facilitating delivery of letters and parcels, it is revealed in a letter from the Postmaster General.

Where the sailor has supplied an address for his mail, the address given should be followed exactly, while the rank of rating, as well as well as the name, should be given if possible.

If no special instructions as to address have been given by the sailor, but the name of the ship is known, the letter should be addressed to him as follows: If in waters east of Canada—H.M.C.S. (Name of Ship) c-o Fleet Mail Officer, Halifax, N.S., or if in waters west of Canada, the address should read—H.M.C.S. (Name of Ship) c-o Fleet Mail Officer, Esquimalt, B.C.

If it is not known on which side of the continent the ship is serving the letter should be addressed c-o the nearest of the above two places.

If the sailors address is not known, his name and rank or rating should be shown as fully as possible and the letter addressed c-o The Fleet Mail Officer, Halifax, N.S., or Esquimalt, B.C., whichever is the nearest.

Bowmanville Defeats B.C.I. 10-4 in Return Game for Right To Play in C.O.S.S.A. Finals

Five-Point Lead Gained by Locals Wiped Out in Third Period Drive

LACK CONDITION

Bowmanville Squad Given a Break When Referee Rules Against Locals in Third Quarter

Removing their ace backfielder, Bill Brown, from the picture for a scant few moments, the Bowmanville High School unleashed a formidable third period power attack that netted them nine points and a final 10 to 4 victory over the Belleville Collegiate Senior Interscholastic gridders, on the abbreviate Bowmanville campus gridiron on Saturday. In victory the Bowmanville kids advanced into the senior C.O.S.S.A. finals by defeating Belléville "Collegians" 31 to 30, the local students having blown a five point lead, which they hauled into the Rubber Town.

Throughout the initial half the Schrieder-led "scarlet scourge" from the local Church Street seat of knowledge dominated the play and walked off the field leading 3 to 1 at the half-way mark, thanks to a placement kick from the shoe of Archie Clare, as the homesters were hel to a single point booted by Brown.

In the third quarter, however, it was pitiful. The Belleville line of scrimmage faded into practical oblivion as every one of Coach Longworth's Bowmanville squad played inspired football and made the Belleville front line of defence look woefully weak In the initial half the locals had halted Bill Brown, Bowmanville's triple threat ace, but Coach Longworth switched tactics and used "Sandy" Coville and McIlvenn in a series of powerhouse driving plays that literally rented asunder the local defence.

Luck is a Factor

Bowmanville made seven consecutive first downs early in the third quarter, but Lady Luck was also on their side in their driving effort towards vctory. After Colville and McIlvenn had carried the ball to Belleville's 20, Brown pitched a 25 yard forward into the unprotected Rickard's hands for a touchown, which Brown converted. The irony of the game came when Brown later attempted a kick for a singleton, but the oval struck the goal post and bounced to Belleville's five, where a Bowmanville player fell on the loose ball for possession. Protest on the part of the Belleville squad claiming possession proved futile in the ears of Umpire O'Brien. Brown tried a placement and this time the ball again hit the goal post and hovered in midair before it fell over for three points, making twice in succession the oval had struck the Belleville goal posts for exceedingly unfortunate results. This was Bowmanville's final drive, but it gave them sufficient points to win, despite the fact both Theobald and Pigden took forward passes for Belleville gains and Clare punted to the deadline for a single.

Game Statistics

Bellevill aettempted eight forward passes and completed but two while Bowmanville tried six and made three click. Bowmanville made eleven first downs to Belleville's four. Coach Longworth fielded a well-conditioned squad, while the Belleville team outwardly showed the dire need of condition, which spelled defeat for the locals and victory for Bowmanville, who now advance to the C.O.S.S.A. finals and carry the good wishes of the locals in their efforts.

The line-ups: Belleville Collegiate—Snap, Zufelt; insides, Sharpe, Pickering; middles, Jones, Mulholland; outsides, Campbell, Theobald; quater, Pigden; halves, S. McBride, Cronk; fullbacks, W. McBride, Clare; subs, Warren, Kerr, Tripp, Bradford, Gardner, O'Connor, Row, Hunter, Smith and McGeachie. Bowmanville High—Snap, Underhill; insides, Venton, Denson; middles, Cashbourne, Rickard; ends, Allin, Payne; quarter, Tamblyn; halves, Slemin, McIlvenn; fullbacks Brown and Colville; subs, Elliott, Hutchinson, Fisher, Mitchell, Moses, Sumerford, Lambourne, Ferguson and Towe.

Referee—H. Townsend, Belleville.
Umpire—J. O'Brien, Peterboro'.

The Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Syd Howe, Detroit's Red Wings' dependable marksman, maintained a two-point margin over his closest competition among National Hockey League pointmakers by scoring his team's goal last night in a 1-1 draw with Boston Bruins. Syl Apps of Toronto picked up a goal against Chicago to take over sole possession of second place, while George Allen and Mush March of Chicago and Gordie Drillon of Toronto remained deadlocked a point behind. The last spot in the Big Seven is shared by Bryan Hextall of New York Rangers and defenceman Alex Motter of the Wings. The leaders:

	G.	A.	Pts.
Howe, Detroit	4	6	10
Apps, Toronto	4	4	8
Allen, Chicago	5	2	7
March, Chicago	3	4	7
Drillon, Toronto	3	4	7
Motter, Detroit	4	2	6
Hextall, Rangers	3	3	6

NEWMAN . . . SMALLMAN . . . BIGMAN

Here are the smallest and the biggest gridiron warriors of Newman Preparatory School Lakewood, N.J. They are Joe Bannon, 3rd, who tips the scales at 65 pounds and stands 54 inches in height, and Jim Donovan, 6 feet 3 inches. Newman Prep starts its football teams with the Midgets in the first form and carries on right up to the Varsity team — the sixth form. Young Master Bannon is on the Midget squad; Donovan plays back on the Varsity team.

These huskies may appear to be doing a Morris dance but it was a far more serious encounter than this huddle might indicate at first glance. Toronto Argonauts fighting every inch of the way as the Ottawa machine tore into the action in the second game of the were two-game series with an 11-point advantage. What apparently has stalwarts stymied is the exact location of the pigskin. The picture shows where the elusive ball got to. It appears at knee level. Coming in are Monyhan (50) and Charbonneau (76).

RANGERS LOSE

New York Team Suffers First Defeat of Season Losing to Bruins

By ROBERT CLARKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Seldom does a National Hockey League season go by without a new scoring sensation being uncovered, and this season it seems likely to be Tony Demers, the "little Hercules" of Montreal Canadiens.

The bulging muscles that help him pack 180 pounds into a five foot seven-inch frame have also given him one of the hardest shots in the league. That blazing shot is rapidly making Demers the scourge of the league's goalies.

Demers is regarded as a rookie, despite the fact he signed a professional contract at the end of last season and took part in a couple of games. It was his second jump into the monied ranks for he turned pro once before with Canadiens three years ago. However, he broke a leg in pre-season training and saw action only in a few games at the end of the season.

Scored Five Goals

Demers, who disclosed at the start of this season that it has always been his ambition to play pro hockey, has accounted this season for exactly one-third of the 15 goals marked up by his team. Those five goals are enough to give him a share with George Allen of Chicago Black Hawks of first place among N.H.L. goal-getters.

Two of Tony's goals came during the week-end, as Canadiens split a pair of games with New York Americans. Demers got one as the Flying Frenchmen won their first game of the season by beating Americans 3-1 in Montreal Saturday night. He scored the other as Canadiens went down 2-1 to Americans in New York last night.

There seems no reason why he can't keep close to his present pace for Coach Dick Irvin has ironed out the one fault that could be found in Demers' game up to this season. Tony just used to let his shot go from the blue-line, never bothering to bore in but Irvin has him firing from close range now.

Joe Benoit, who played amateur with Trail Smoke Eaters last season also played a prominent part in Canadiens' first victory. He shot home two goals in 37 seconds in the Saturday contest. Americans' lone goal in that game was scored by Norm Larson, while their Sunday night goals went to Johnny (Peanuts) O'Flaherty and Charlie Conacher.

In other week-end games, Boston Bruins topped New York Rangers 2-1 on Saturday night and then drew 1-1 last night with Detroit Red Wings, while Toronto Maple Leafs defeated Chicago Black Hawks 4-2 in Chicago last night after dropping a 1-0 decision to the Hawks in Toronto on Saturday.

Leafs' Saturday loss brought an end to a five-game winning streak, the best compiled by any N.H.L. team in the still-young season. Cully Dahlstrom scored the winning tally in the second period and Goalie Paul Goodman did the rest by turning in a spectacular netminding effort.

Goodman, however, wasn't quite so fortunate in stemming the Leafs in Chicago as Dave Schriner accounted for two goals, and Gus Marker and Syl Apps one apiece. The Chicago scores went to Joe Cooper and Rookie Red Mackay. Apps' goal came on a breakaway late in the third period as Hawks put on the pressure in an attempt to deadlock the score.

The Rangers, last team in the league to leave the unbeaten list, were sent into the loss column for the first time as Roy Conacher found the range for a pair of goals. The only Ranger score went to Dutch Hiller. Art Jackson scored for the Bruins against Detroit, with Syd Howe being credited with the Red Wing score. The Bruins protested that Howe swung a high stick at the puck, making the goal illegal. Referee Frank Clancy maintained that the puck went in off Dit Clapper's hand, and therefore gave him no alternative but to award a goal to the Wings.

Balmy Beach, Rough Riders To Play Two-Game Series for Championship of E. Canada

TOO MUCH POWER

Whether East-West Game Will be Played Still a Mooted Question

By Scott Young
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A flurry of football activity in Committee rooms and on playing fields over the week-end left the Canadian football situation clarified in some aspects and confused in others.

Clarification Dept: Ottawa Roughriders and Toronto Balmy Beach entered the Eastern Final, eliminating Toronto Argonauts and Sarnia 2-26 Battery respectively.

Confusion Dept: The Canadian Rugby Union ordered a two-game, total-points eastern final, but Fred Hamilton, president of the Sports Service League, Toronto, still thinks his organization can arrange an East-West game.

Ottawa and Balmy Beach will play in Toronto Nov. 30 and in Ottawa December 7. Undaunted, Hamilton is trying to arrange an exhibition game for Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Western champion, in Toronto December 7, and another game between Winnipeg and the Eastern champions in Toronto December 14.

Saturday Ottawa beat Argos 8-1 to win the Interprovincial Union Crown 20-2 and Balmy Beach blanked Sarnia 12-0 to take the Ontario Rugby Football Union Title 24-0. But even in the heat of the two battles, much fan-interest was centered around the East-West game turmoil.

Sunday night the wires were hot with statements from the various parties concerned.

Fred Hamilton: "I have asked Balmy Beach and Ottawa to consent to the winner of the Eastern Final meeting Winnipeg in Toronto December 14 with process to be split between Eastern and Western war charities and the sports service league. I have asked John Bannerman of Calgary, C.R.U. president, if his body would object to such an exhibition contest".

Joe Ryan, manager of Winnipeg Blue Bombers: "We agreed to play a game or games in the east to aid war services. We are still waiting to play if the east will provide an opponent. If we don't know for sure by Tuesday, Bombers will disband for this season".

James McCaffrey, manager of Ottawa Roughriders: "We don't play in an east-west game without the sanction of the C.R.U." (The C.R.U. voted last week that it could not approve or arrange such a game.)

Western Clubs were barred from C.R.U. competition this season when they failed to use C.R.U. playing rules. Winnipeg, Dominion champion in 1939, thus will not have a chance to defend its title officially, perhaps not even unofficially.

In Saturday's tussle Argos tried everything against Ottawa, but Flash faded before sheer power. Sammy Sward scored seven of Ottawa's eight points, kicking two singles in addition to dribbling the ball over the Argos line for a touchdown and the best Argos could do was a single on Earl Selkirk's long punt in the first quarter.

Beaches didn't have even that much trouble. For the second straight Saturday they played cosy Football, waited for the breaks and got them. A pass from Art Walker to Johnny Manson went for a 25-yard gain and a touchdown in the final quarter, just after Hugh Tunnicliffe's Field Goal, second of the game for Balmies. Don Crowe had booted the other in the first quarter.

Out of the general scramble of week-end events emerges one clear fact: Ottawa should be favored to win the Eastern title. Balmy Beach, unbeaten and untied in O.R.F.U. competition, lost 10-0 to the Roughriders in a pre-season contest.

IN DEFENCE RACE

Louis Zamperini, one of the world's front-rank mile runners, is shown busy at his job of spotwelding in the Lockheed Aircraft factory in Burbank, Cal., where he is doing his bit in the race to make the U.S. aggressor-proof. Zamperini, former national intercollegiate champion, plans to enter the big indoor meets in the east this winter. He has run the mile in 4 minutes, 7 6-10 seconds.

WEEKEND STARS

(By the Canadian Press)

Roy Conacher, Boston, whose two goals gave Bruins a 2-1 victory Saturday night over New York Rangers.

Paul Goodman, Chicago, whose fine net work gave Black Hawks a 1-0 Saturday victory over Toronto Maple Leafs with Cully Dahlstrom scoring the winning goal.

Tony Demers and Joe Benoit, Canadiens, who each scored twice as Montreal split a pair of weekend games with New York American, winning 3-1 on Saturday in Montreal and losing 2-1 last night in New York.

Charlie Conacher, Americans, whose second period goal at New York last night proved the winner against Canadiens.

Syd Howe, Detroit, who continued to spark the Red Wings' attack by scoring a third period goal to give the Wings a 1-1 overtime tie with Boston last night. Howe is the league's leading pointmaker with four goals and six assists.

INDIANS, BARONS STILL TOPPING THEIR SECTIONS

Both Teams, However, Suffer Defeat in Weekend Games

BUFFALO WALLOPED

Normie Mann Star of Providence's Victory Over the Barons

(By the Canadian Press)

Springfield Indians and Cleveland Barons are still breezing along at the top of their respective sections in the American Hockey League, despite the fact that each team suffered its second loss of the season during the week-end.

Springfield's loss came Saturday night when they bowed 2-1 to the Barons in the first meeting of the year before a crowd of close to 10,000 fans in Cleveland. The Barons were tripped up 4-2 Sunday night by Providence Reds as Springfield topped Hershey Bears 5-2.

The Indians hold a six-point edge in the eastern section over the second place New Haven Eagles while the Barons are four points up on Hershey in the western division. The Indians have 17 points from seven victories, two losses and three draws, while the Barons have 14 from seven victories and two losses.

Card Featured by Meeting

The Saturday meeting between the two clubs featured the weekend card, with goals by Bill Summerhill and Les Cunningham giving the Barons the victory. Fred Hunt, the league's leading pointmaker, tallied the Springfield goal. The two Cleveland goals came while player-owner Eddie Shore was serving a 10-minute misconduct penalty.

In other Sunday night games New Haven topped Indianapolis 3-2 and Buffalo Bisons defeated Pittsburgh Hornets 3-0. Other Saturday night games saw Pittsburgh beat New Haven 4-0 and Philadelphia Ramblers defeat Indianapolis 3-2, while Hershey walloped Buffalo 6-2.

Normie Mann Stars

Glenn Brydson and Larry Thibeault paced the Indians to their Sunday night victory over Hershey, with the former scoring three goals and the latter chipping in with two. The Reds' goals went to Harry Frost and Jenkins.

Normie Mann was the star of Providence's victory over the Barons, scoring twice as Babe Tapin and Mariucci added singles. The two Cleveland goals were scored by Don Deacon. George Mantha of New Haven was another player to bag two goals, getting a pair against Indianapolis while other New Haven scorers were Allan Shields and George Patterson. The Indianapolis goals were scored by Joe Fisher and Jennings.

Bob Gracie, Cunningham and Waldriff scored for Buffalo against Pittsburgh as Goalie Bill Beveridge kept Hornet marksmen off the score sheet.

Overtime Goal Helps

Rookie defenceman Bill Judza's overtime goal gave Ramblers their victory Saturday night over Indianapolis. In the first period Foster and Smith scored for the Ramblers while Brown and Fisher scored for Indianapolis in the second and third periods respectively.

Hershey Bears scored five goals in the first period in winning over Buffalo Saturday night. Joe Krol fired two of these tallies, while Jenkins, Kilrea and Lauzon got the others. The Bisons tightened their defence and stopped the Bears in the second period and cut down the score on tallies by Gracie and Rimstand. The last Hershey goal went to Kilrea in the third period.

The Hornets scored in every period to blank the Eagles. The four Hornet goals were divided by Harry Currie and Johnny Sherf.

Between the Lines

Agreeing condition was the principal factor that proved the difference between victory and defeat, insofar as the Bowmanville-Belleville senior Interscholastic series was concerned, it cannot be denied that "old lady luck" at no time smiled on the B.C.I. "Scarlet Scourge" of 1940.

Take for instance in the initial game of the series when some rather inadequate timekeeping, that ultimately gave the Rubber Town kids ten points after the regulation time had expired, resulted in the locals being literally shorn of a lead that would have assured victory on the round. But in the return games on Saturday the factor of luck was even more dominate.

Despite an inspired third period attack, that netted Bowmanville six points, the Belleville kids were still two up when Bill Brown attempted a field goal, the answer of which is rather pitiful. The oval hit the goal post, bounced back to Belleville's nine, where a Bowmanville player pounced on the loose ball for possession. We questioned Umpire O'Brien about that play after the game, as Belleville contended it was a B.C.I. first down. O'Brien stated Bill Pigden had touched the pigskin, but this corner will never be convinced of that fact.

However, to make the irony more flinching, Brown (and he's tops as an Interscholastic rugby player on any club's squad) attempted a placement. Again the oval hit the cross bar and slowly dribbled over for three points that gave the homesters victory and if those two plays aren't a brace for Ripley—well; aw—.

So much for the ill-fates of football and the ill-fortunes that can happen. Paramountly luck proved the greatest factor of the Bowmanville-Belleville series, but there was another dominate feature and that was condition. In both contests the Longworth - coached Bowmanville kids proved to be in much superior condition. After last year's playoff with Peterboro the local squad should have learned the advantages of condition. They didn't—and they lost. Despite the lack of good luck the local squad might have eked through had they been in the "pink." Then there's another angle —the woeful attempt at tackling in Saturday's third period headache. The front line just wasn't there and coupled with some smart strategy by Coach Longworth, in keeping has ace (Bill Brown) in the background as McIlvenn and Colville ran amok, it was all over in a few short minutes.

The Bowmanville team appeared on the field with brand new white trimmed with small stripes of red and black, jerseys, thus defying the old adage of "new uniforms mean defeat in their initial appearance." On the contrary the Rubber Town kids possessed plenty of courage, which was one of their features throughout the entire series. After the game the Bowmanville students royally entertained Principal P. C. MacLaurin, Coach Schrieder and the Belleville team at a banquet held in the school.

Perhaps the most awe-stricken person in Bowmanville on Saturday was Coach Eddie Schrieder, who stood in puzzled amazement as the Bowmanville squad drove through in their early third period successful march. "I couldn't believe my eyes. Why the line seemed to melt away and the tackling of the secondary was even worse. I didn't think three short weeks could leave a team in such a weakened condition," Coach Schrieder told us after the game as he shook his head in a manner that would lead one to think he was broken in heart and spirit.

Saturday's game was the last senior Interscholastic appearance for several of the B.C.I. squad and they had entertained high hopes of winning a senior C.O.S.S.A. title before graduating. Jack Zufelt, Ross Clare, the McBride boys and Ronnie Warren are some of the squad who will not be back another season. To such as these Saturday's loss was a bitter pill to swallow, but they congratulated the courageous Bowmanville squad, who should have little difficulty in winning the C.O.S.S.A. championship of 1940.

With the exception of the city junior Interscholastic six-man rugby finals, sport will be at a standstill in Belleville from now until the hockey season opens, sung their "swan song" on Satursand their "swan song" on Saturday.

Do you remember when a record Interprovincial Union crowd of 19,239 saw the Canadian football champions of the previous year Toronto Argonauts, fall to Ottawa Roughriders, 28-6 a year ago today. Ottawa's victory moved them into the eastern final, which they won from Sarnia, only to lose to Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the Canadian final.

Congratulations are the order of the day for S. B. "Sandy" Burrows, who was elected to the executive of the O.H.A. for the fifth consecutive time on Saturday. With Mr. Burrows well established in this capacity by now, there is little reason why adequate groupings for local teams should not be assured. After all Jim Sutherland took great care to see Kingston hockey teams were well protected for many years, but now it's another story. Bill Cook entered the Belleville Juniors on Saturday while Claude Tice represented the Reliance Aircraft, and the R.C.A.F. entry is assured.

SPORT SLANTS — Ask George Digby how to get free ducats for N.H.L. games from the management of the local junior team. . . After years of absence Lena Blackburne is back with the Toronto Maple Leafs as manager. . . . Blackie was with the Leafs when they played at the Island Stadium years ago. . . . The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Greece appeared today to be well-launched on a campaign to liberate Albania from Italian tyrannical rule, but a suggestion came from Berlin that Greek and British forces might soon have to meet German assistance to the inept Italians.

There appeared little reason to doubt any longer the ability of the Greek ground forces and the Greek and British Royal Air Forces to kick the Italians out of Albania, but a stiffer battle presumably would arise if Germany came to Italy's assistance.

Germany pulled little Slovakia, remnant of Czechoslovakia, into the so-called Axis over the weekend but Bulgaria apparently was balking. Nazi officials admitted there would be no more signings for the present.

Bulgaria's forced entry into the alliance for the "new order" had been expected ever since Greece started giving Italy a thrashing, for Bulgaria is the best highway German troops could use to help their hard-pressed Italian friends.

Other developments among the still remaining Balkans were less clear. Yugoslavia unofficially warned Bulgarian Revisionists that they would be well-advised not to seek any Yugoslav territory, while Turkey appeared to be virtually on a war footing, though without any indication that she would fight unless provoked.

Turkey has indicated previously that she would get into the war if Bulgaria made a move against Greece. It has not been made clear, however, whether Bulgarian permission for German troops to march against Greece would be considered a military act by Bulgaria, provided her own troops did not march with the Germans.

In the Italian fiasco itself there appeared increasing grounds for belief that the hand that held the dagger struck revenge in Albania. It is less than two years since Italy's troops bombarded Durazzo and went ashore to force King Zog, Queen Geraldine and their newly-born son to flee their country and there is not much doubt that the fierce Albanians have been biding their time.

The opportunity to demoralize the Italians by pestering them as much as possible while Greek ground forces and British planes have struck their blows almost certainly has been seized. When the whole story is known it probably will be disclosed that Albanian sabotage was a sizable factor in the Italian rout.

Disclosure that British noncombattant troops had been landed in Greece to help the Royal Air Force once again placed British ground troops on European soil, presumably for the first time since they were forced to withdraw in the heroic retreat to Dunkirk and the evacuation through that port.

The numbers and type of the troops were not mentioned, but it was said they were "specialist," presumably meaning they were technical men such as aircraft riggers, instrument repairmen, engine mechanics, engineers and the like.

There was no indication when British land combat troops would be landed in Greece but there was an indication that it could be just about when the British High Command chose to send them.

The convoy which took the noncombattants to Greece reported it encountered neither Italian aircraft nor ships.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was standing around the letter box with Glasses Magee and Shorty Judge talking and arguing about everything in general nothing in particuler, and Lucky Leroy Shooster went passed saying, I have to go a couple of errands, come on with me, somebody.

Like heck, we're comfortable right here, Shorty Judge said and I said Sure, good inght, it's too bad slave days are over or you could get yourself a slave to follow you around taking orders, and Glasses said, Sure, G wizzickers what you need is a private valley saying yes sir and no sir all day long.

Aw baloney, Leroy said.

Being a bum answer, and he kept on going trying to look as if he thought it was a good one, and just then Puds Simkins started to come out of his house, reminding us of his berthday party next Sattiday, he saying, Hay, did anybody get a invitation to Pud's party yet? and Glasses saying, I'm invited all right, I know that much, because Puds told me personly.

He told me too, but I wont feel safe till I get a reguler written invitation, I said, and Shorty said, Me neither, Puds claims he's going to stick them under the fellows doors any day now, but he's certainly got a pane in the wrist about writing them.

Wich just then Puds started to go passed us fellows saying, High, Puds, where you going, Puds?

Oh, just some errands, Puds said, and we said, We'll go with you if you want, do you want us to go wit you, how about us going with you, Pud.

Okay, you can if you feel like it, it's mutual to me, Puds said.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Argentine Nights"

Sparkling with new songs, fast comedy and an array of colorful dances, the Universal musical, "Argentine Nights" opened Sunday midnight at Capitol Theatre with the Ritz Brothers and the Andrews Sisters as its co-stars.

Never have the three comedians cavorted to more hilarious effect. Their antics brought more spontaneous laughter from the audience than anything they have offered since their earliest film successes.

Auspicious Debut

For the Andrews Sisters, famous swing trio who are presented for the first time on the screen the picture marks an auspicious debut. In the same spectacular style of singing which has lifted them to favor on phonograph records, the radio and stage, the girls introduce four new songs, "Hit the Road", "The New Lick", "Oh, He Loves Me" and "Rhumboogie', and register a definite hit. The Ritz Brothers present "The Spirit of 77B" a musical satire, and "Brooklynonga" as important highlights of the film.

Constance Moore and George Reeves, a screen newcomer, are delightful as the romantic interest in the screenplay. Miss Moore sings "Once Upon a Dream" and "Hall of the Mountain Queen", and Reeves contributes "Amigo We Go Riding Tonight".

'Fatal Hour"

Thrills and chills and plenty of action are a feature of "The Fatal Hour", the second feature with Boris Karloff in the leading role.

There are four murders in this picture, and one of them occurs right in police headquarters, before the eyes of the law. The first killing is that of a policeman too, but then the scene shifts away from the police department as Wong and Captain Street follow the crooked rail of smugglers, gangsters and jewel thieves all over San Francisco right back to their own front door.

Suspense is keen right up to the very last moment of the film, when Wong confronts the murderer in his own territory and hears his confession, although he knows he may never get out to reveal it.

Boris Karloff is a sauve Mr. Wong, giving a sure, polished portrait of the celestial super-sleuth. Marjorie Reynolds plays Bobbie Logan, newspaper woman and rival sleuth, and much of the comedy is in her hands. Grant Withers again is Captain Street, this time vindicative at the death of his best friend.

AT THE BELLE

"Knute Rockne"

One of the most unusual screen stories in recent times will make its local debut next at the Belle Theatre when Warner Bros.' new film, "Knute Rockne — All American," opens.

It is a film life story of one of America's greatest and wisest heroes—Knute Rockne. The picture traces Rockne's life from his early childhood in Norway to his tragic death in 1931. His life was full of excitement, despair, love and triumph. The film, with Pat O'Brien cast as the Notre Dame football wizard, faithfully portrays those elements and keeps alive the true 'spirit of Rockne.' His vigor, his astute philosophy, the great teams he built, the developing of the famous 'Four Horsemen' are all told with a skillful blending of power and subtlety in "Knute Rockne — All American." O'Brien is said to have given such a realistic portrayal of the real "Rock" that Knute's closest friends were amazed at the startling likeness in even the smallest gesture.

The brilliant supporting cast consists of Gale Page as Bonnie, Knute's wife; Donald Crisp as Father Callahan, President of Notre Dame, and Donald Reagan in the greatest role of his career, that of the renowned George Gipp. The players that portray the roles of the "Four Horsemen" have all seen action on the gridiron. They are, Kane Richmond, as Elmer Layden; Bob Bryne as James Crowley; Nick Lukats as Harry Stuhldreher and William Marshall as Don Miller.

Lloyd Bacon, whose forte is action films, has kept his record unmarred in the direction of this greatest of film biographies. Robert Buckner wrote the original screen play based upon the private papers and reports of Rockne's intimate associates and friends.

"Knute Rockne—All American" is more than just a great life story, it is a guide to something we should never forget—the true spirit of America.

New Laugh Feature

Presenting the most promising crop of Hollywood newcomers in months, headed by the comedy antics of Frank Morgan, "Hullabaloo" promises an evening of laughs when it arrives as the companion feature attraction. "Hullabaloo" which presents a behind-the-scenes comedy of radio, tells the story of an ex-vaudevillian, portrayed by Morgan, who attempts to land himself a job before the microphone. He succeeds, only to thrust himself out of a job by perpetrating an unintended hoax upon the listening public. The notoriety re receives for his escapade brings three ex-wives descending upon him, all demanding back alimony. The children of the respective wives, however, get together to rescue their father from bankruptcy and a marriage for money. In the roles of the three wives are Billie Burke, last seen in "Dulcy" Sara Haden, the lovable Aunt Millie of the Hardy pictures, and Connie Gilchrist, New York stage actress, who makes her screen rebut in this role. The children are portrayed by Virginia Grey, recently seen in "Golden Fleecing," Larry Nunn, who gave a hit performance in "Strike Up the Band" and little Leni Lynn, who wins her first important singing role. Romantic interest centers about a triangle comprised of Miss Grey, Dan Dailey, Jr., and Ann Morriss.

The popular Belle news of the day will also be exhibited on the same program.

"Young People" Funny

Chuck full of fun, song and dances "Young People" the 20th Century-Fox film which stars Shirley Temple, Jack Oakie and Charlotte Greenwood, assures the spectator a rollicking good time. "Young People" is Shirley Temple's twenty-second picture and it is her happiest hit. In it Shirley sings five grand tunes written by Mack Gordon and Harry Warren, "Fifth Avenue," "Tra-La-La," "I Wouldn't Take a Million,' "The Mason Dixie Line" and "Young People." Jack Oakie is at his best in a thoroughly humorous role while Charlotte Greenwood is leaner, lankier and funnier than ever.

"Rivers End" Thrilling

"River's End" the most action-jammed adventure story to ever come from the pen of James Oliver Curtwood is the 2nd feature picture.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Holiday"

Your last grand opportunity to see one of the most delightful romantic comedies ever made, Cary Grant and Katharine Hepburn in "Holiday," is now currently showing at the McCarthy Theatre, at the same time that it is again playing in all large cities throughout Canada and the United States.

Lew Ayres, Edward Everett Horton, Doris Nolan, Binnie Barnes, Jean Dixon and Henry Kolker, screen favorites of wide popularity, are in the supporting cast of 'Holiday." When a picture is popular entertainment from the first scene until the final fade-out, reviewers are certain to put same in the "must see" classification for all who are looking for swell entertainment and "Holiday" for example, is one of the few pictures capable of playing a second time over a wide area of the theatre field and holding the record of receiving higher praise now than many first-run features ever capture. "Holiday" is a "must see" for all who go regularly to the movies and "Holiday" is a "must see" for all who take pride in selecting out the best.

"The Warning"

A film showing Britain's answer to her foes entitled "The Warning," which was produced in England under the aegis of the National Defence Services is also now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, plus latest Fox News events.

Dodd's Kidney Pills

"THE GORGON'S MASK"

by Van Wyck Mason

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

"But how did Ishi's body come to be floating off the island of Maiu?" asked Kilgour.

The intelligence captain, after a short pause, asked, "Doesn't all the oil at Kaanapal and those chaps at the Floating Lily with their greasy clothes and their bruised heads suggest anything?"

"It does, now that you mention them together; it suggests a submarine. I thought of that when those odd-looking beggars at the Floating Lily didn't walk like ordinary sailors. Subs are in port ninety per cent of the time," he explained, "so their crews don't get sea legs as a rule. Caught a U-boat captain that way once."

"Right!" chimed in North. "I was pretty sure it was a submarine the minute I saw Ishi's body. They must have shot him out through a torpedo tube when pretty far down. He was crushed by the pressure."

"By Jove!" Ideas now were crowding the English agent. "A submarine, by Neptune! A Jap sub!"

"Hardly that," North protested, "unless there's been an unsuspected mutiny in their fleet."

Kilgour shrugged and settled back. "Suppose, Hugh, that you air a few of your theories?"

"I will. I'll venture that this mysterious sub is owned or chartered by the Transpacific."

"Nonsense! Where could they find one for such a purpose?"

"Please remember that Nadia Stefan is interested in this—there were several serviceable submarines in Russia when the Bolsheviks came in."

"You can't seem to get that woman out of your mind," Kilgour remarked. "I say, aren't you stressing her part a bit too much?"

North promptly changed the subject with, "I can't understand Kanamura's position. He's against me; and the Teodora murder would indicate he's determined to cripple Nadia's efforts for the Soviets."

"But I still can't make out where this unfortunate Teodora Mazro fits."

"I've believed from the beginning that she is the axis upon which this whole mystery revolves." North leaned forward, gray-blue eyes intent. "The two marks 'O.G.P.U.' and 'Traitorous Spy' found upon her body indicate it."

"O.G.P.U.?" Kilgour looked startled. "You've said nothing to me about that?"

"Sorry—thought I had—well, here it is." North produced that sketch of Teodora's mark and shoved it across to his companion, telling of his pre-autopsy discovery.

"So this girl had once been tattooed?"

"Yes." North made a slightly impatient gesture. "In Russia, some people believed in wearing their hearts on their skin. In this particular case I think the use of a tattooing needle is indicated."

A little silence fell in which could be heard strains of the hauntingly melodious "Kamehameha Waltz" played by a distant string orchestra. Suddenly Kilgour got up and began to fling out brief jerky sentences.

"I think I see it, Hugh. To begin with, Teodora was one of your friend Nadia Stefan's organization. She sold out to Kanamura, von Rentner and the Stefan woman found it out, turned her over to Captain Karen for liquidation."

"Bright boy," North murmured, "go to the head of the class."

"Karen took her aboard this submarine. Had her killed in his own peculiar fashion; then, as a grisly gesture, scratched those Red ideographs on the traitor's neck. Through von Rentner he knew that Kanamura would be dining with Abner Polk that night. So, to let both von Rentner and Kanamura know what had happened, he indulged in a macabre bit and set her body adrift from the sub. How's that for a reconstruction of events?"

"Quite good!" North applauded. "And now I'll put in my two cents' worth. Nadia Stefan"—he flushed in spite of himself—"got it out of poor young Clark that I was coming and tried to scare me off twice. When it didn't work she must have warned von Rentner. He saw me take that hairpin from Teodora's hair, and promptly let Nadia know about it. She must have bribed someone on the hotel switchboard to check on my conversation, and so learned that Miss Belknap was expected at twelve. Her impersonation completely fooled me."

"A bright girl, your lovely Nadia," was the English agent's comment. "Kind to animals and fond of her mother, no doubt; but, all in all, rather dangerous."

"The big thing I don't understand," North went on imperturbably, "is Polk's part in this business. Last night it seemed to me he was on the outs with von Rentner, who is supposed to be his partner. Furthermore, he had Kanamura, von Rentner's deadly enemy, to dinner. Odd, isn't it?

"Then there are some other obscure points." Without checking himself, the speaker hurried on. "For example, I've yet to learn why Wang Tso Kin came to life so abruptly at the end of April. And for what purpose is this lethal submarine cruising about the island? I want to know her new base."

"Incidentally, I think it's the unfortunate Mr. Ishi we have to thank for that abrupt departure from Kaanapal. If only Kanamura wouldn't keep gumming our game! We could have swooped down on Maui and captured that sub."

The American agent raised a quizzical eyebrow at his companion. "Do you know, that 'I Fourteen' in the cipher may refer to her!"

"Seems very likely—I-14. Yes, by Jove!" Kilgour smote his thigh a resounding slap. "There was an I class of Jap boats built at Kaigun—" In full career Kilgour faltered. "I-14! Looks like it's a Jap boat, after all. Rather knocks our theories about a bit, doesn't it?"

"It does," was the intelligence captain's moody assent. "Better look up that class as soon as you can. In the meantime, I think there's only one thing to do and that is, interview Abner Polk."

"He may not talk to you," Kilgour objected.

"Somehow I think I can persuade him." North predicted just before ringing up Kalua.

Kilgour listened intently to his colleague's conversation with Abner Polk.

"This is Howard Nevins. . . . Yes, quite well. . . . May I drop by this evening? . . . You're having a dinner party? Well, then, I'd like a few minutes of your time afterwards . . . No. I assure you it's very important; something to do with your investments in China. . . . You haven't any? Nonsense, I know better. . . . Too busy to talk? I'm sorry, in that case I'll have to pay my call on the superintendent of police tonight. . . . What? . . . Just what I said. . . . Then you'll expect me for dinner? Splendid! Delighted! On second thought, Mr. Polk, I'd like to talk to you before dinner. . . . All right? . . . Good! I'll be out by 7:30."

Captain North nodded over the telephone as most people do when they are listening.

"Oh, one thing more," he added. "My friend Mr. Kilgour is with me tonight. He was charmed with your garden that night. . . . Bring him along? I'll call him and see. . . . All right, then, I'll telephone you if he can't come—we'll leave it that way. Good-bye, Mr. Polk." The receiver went click!

"Dinner at eight and be on time." North announced. "I think we're going to see some real action tonight."

What the nature of that real action would be, he was still wondering when his cab swung past an elaborate iron grilled gate and sped up a magnificent driveway to the vast white bulk of Kalua. At last it came to a halt before an exquisitely carved teak door.

Odd, North reflected with a faint stir of uneasiness, those massive doors had not been closed the night before. Odd, too, that lights blazed in almost every room of the mansion. Odd, also, this growing presentiment of menace which was invading him like subtle fever.

"Misser Polk say plees come right upstairs," a white-clad footman murmured as he took the intelligence captain's panama.

Up a broad, winding flight of stone stairs North followed the diminutive Filipino, and presently came to a halt outside a white-painted door. On this the servant rapped softly.

"Misser Nevins, sirr."

The door was opened at once by Polk himself who beckoned in the intelligence officer. It was a luxurious bedroom.

The steel magnate, aggressive and handsome, was more powerful than North had imagined, for beneath a silk shirt, muscles stood out in bold relief. In silence the two surveyed each other, mentally gauging each other's capabilities. Here, North decided, was no case for subtleties, innuendoes, or tactful hints.

"It appears, Mr. Nevins," began the millionaire, "that I made a mistake in being so intimate with you aboard the Malolo."

"Did you?"

"My friend Baron von Rentner seems to think so."

"What do you think?"

"I don't know—better sit down," Polk added. "I'm told you're not what I thought."

"A sportsman?" queried North.

"Dont fence—you're an army intelligence officer."

"I am," the visitor admitted, then he added casually: "And I may arrest you, Abner Polk, on a charge of high treason."

The steel magnate's mouth grew tight as he scowled, "Treason?"

Cold, precise, and emphatic came the intelligence captain's voice: "Yes. For conspiring against the peace and security of the United States."

After a grim pause, Abner Polk rasped, "You're mad!"

"I'm not mad, and I shall arrest you, unless—"

"Unless WHAT?"

"Unless you do your duty as an American citizen."

The master of Kalua fixed his visitor with stern, staring eyes. "You're bluffing, Captain North, but"—he shrugged a little—"last night I made up my mind to do just that. I won't explain now why I did what I have done. The main thing is, I want to remedy that harm while there still is time."

"Just a minute!" North raised a detaining hand. "Before you begin—from whom did you learn who I really am?"

"I don't know," Polk confessed with a simplicity that lent authenticity to the statement. "A woman 'phoned this morning and told me you were Captain Hugh North of the United States Army Intelligence."

North inquired crisply: "Sure you have no idea who it was?"

"No. I don't think I ever heard the woman's voice before; it was pleasant and cultured." Polk paused in the act of lighting a gold-tipped cigarette. "I think she expected her information to achieve another result than it did."

"I imagine so," North agreed soberly.

LOOK OUT FOR YOUR LIVER

It may be the cause of YOUR troubles Buck it up the RIGHT way. Feel grand

Your liver is the largest organ in your body and most important to your health. It pours out bile to digest food, gets rid of waste, supplies new energy, allows proper nourishment to reach your blood. When your liver gets out of order food decomposes in your intestines. You become constipated, stomach and kidneys can't work properly. You feel "rotten"—headachy, backachy, dizzy, dragged out all the time.

For over 35 years thousands have won prompt relief from these miseries—with Fruit-a-tives. So can you now. Try Fruit-a-tives—you'll be simply delighted how quickly you'll feel like a new person, happy and well again. 25c, 50c

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 25—(CP)—Mining stocks moved upward on Toronto Exchange today. Other issues held mostly steady. Trading was light with 110,000 shares traded. Preston, Powell Rouyn, McKenzie, Slavek Lake and Arntfield were fairly active and stronger and Dome was 1-2 up at 25. Steep Rock, Noranda, Pend Oreille and Sherritt were the strong spots in the base metals.

Home Oil firmed 5 cents to 2.55, Royalite weakened narrowly and other Western Oils were steady and dull.

Few industrials recorded changes. Bell Telephone eased down 1-4 and Steel of Canada dropped 1-2.

The shares of Beauharnois Power Corporation, Limited, were delisted today at the request of the company preparatory to re-organization.

WALL STREET

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—Efforts to stretch out an early rally in today's stock market eventually encountered opposition.

The list moved up fractions to two points at the start, with steels in front. Selling then cropped up and extreme advances were substantially reduced or cancelled near the fourth hour. Dealings slower on the letdown.

Prominent on the forenoon drive were shares of U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, United Aircraft, Air Reduction, American Can, International Paper Preferred, Great Northern, Eastman Kodak, Kennecott and Texas Corp.

Dome Mines and Hiram Walker, in the Canadian group, advanced small fractions. McIntyre was easy. Canada 4s, among bonds, dipped ½ of a point.

Top-Grade Eggs Drop 2c. Per Doz.

Toronto — An easy price trend was still evident in fresh eggs on the Toronto open produce market Saturday. Butter remained firm at previous levels.

Very quiet trading continued to depress prices on top grades on the egg market. Grade A-large and A-medium in the graded division closed at the nominal rates of 39c and 38c respectively as these two grades declined 2c a dozen to 44c and 42c in the retail section. Lower grades cleared satisfactorily at former prices.

The butter market maintained a firm undertone in the face of light trading. With offerings not heavy, the first grade Ontario product held unchanged at 30 1-4c a pound.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Nov. 25 (CP).—Produce market prices here Saturday, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 31c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 30 1-2c. Receipts for the week, 4,011 boxes, compared with 6,322 a year ago.

Cheese: Western white, current receipt price, 13 11-16c to 13 7-8c; colored, current receipt price, 13 7-8c to 14 5-16c; white and colored. Receipts for the week, 16,517 boxes, compared with 12,994 a year ago.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used, free cases, sold at A-large, 45c to 46c; A-medium, 40c to 41c; A-pullets, 37c. Receipts for the week, 11,429 cases, compared with 5,860 a year ago.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Nov. 25.—(CP)—Cattle trade was slow with prices generally steady up to mid-session on the livestock market here today. Lambs were firm. Veal calves and sheep were steady. No price was established for hogs but indications were they would be steady. The holdover from last week was 1,800 head of cattle supplies today included 2,000 stockers.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were—Cattle 3,680, calves 1,470, hogs 1,140, sheep and lambs 1,940.

Prices in the cattle section were: medium to good weighty steers $7.25 to $8 with a few choice at $8.50, butcher steers and heifers $5.25 to $7.50; butcher cows $4 to $5.50; canners and cutters $3 to $3.75; bulls $4.25 to $5.50; fed calves $8.50 to $10.50; good stock calves $7 to $7.35 with other stockers $5 to $6.75.

Calves sold at $10 to $11 for choice with common vealers selling downward to $6. Grassers sold at $5 to $5.25.

Lambs sold at $9.50 to $9.75 for good ewes and wethers with some westerns up to $9.90, heavies and bucks at $8.50 to $8.75 and culls at $7 to $8.

Sheep sold at $2 to $5.50.

Hogs closed previously at $10.75 dressedweight and $8 lightweight.

Montreal, Nov. 25 (CP).—Trading in livestock moved slowly today and few prices were established on the Montreal livestock markets, according to a report by the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Receipts — Cattle 1,165, calves 2,413, hogs 2,483, sheep 2,833.

A couple of lots of medium quality steers sold up to $6.75 and a few good cows up to $5.50. There were not enough early cattle sales to establish prices.

Veal calves held steady while other kinds dropped 25 cents or more. Good veals brought $11, with mediums from $10-$10.50. Drinkers were $5.25-$8. Grassers made the bulk of the offerings, selling from $4-$5, mostly $4.50-$4.75.

Hog prices were not established in early trading.

Good ewes and wethers were steady with last Monday, selling at $9.75-$10. Culls and bucks were cut $2 per hundredweight. Sheep sold from $3.50-$5.50.

TRIALS MAY SOON OPEN

Vichy, France, Nov. 25 (AP) — Installation of telephone booths and telegraph wires near the supreme court building at Riom indicated today that the war-guilt trials of former Premiers Leon Blum, Edouard Daladier and Paul Reynaud and Gen. Marie-Gustave Gamelin might open soon.

Daring Exploits by Trenton Pilot in R. A. F. Recounted

PILOT IS HURT

Trenton, Nov. 25 — Daring exploits of one of the Canadian flyers in the Royal Air Force were told in a letter received by Mr. A. A. Vanderwater of Trenton recently. The letter was from Alen Vanderwater, a son, who journeyed to England on a cattle boat and joined the Royal Air Force in June of 1939. The letter in part is as follows:

"Last week we were on our way back from a daylight raid on Norway and still had some bombs left. There were three of us in formation flying at about 7,000 feet when I sighted a submarine on the surface about two miles to our right. I gave the signal and we dove down to the attack. The Jerry sub thought we were German aircraft so he stayed on top of the water. We let go with our bombs and now Germany has one less submarine than she had.

"We've been in ten fights in the last two weeks over Norway but have only lost one aircraftman, that was yesterday. Two air gunners were wounded on Tuesday and one killed on Sunday. We sure are giving Jerry a taste of his own medicine. He was around here dropping bombs last night but didn't hit the airdrome and no one was killed.

The C.O. of the station has a scheme now where all the Colonials have one week-end off a month and we go and stay with someone around here. Last week-end, Eric Walsh, my co-pilot, Mr. Weaber, an Australian and myself stayed at a Mister Carlow's home at Lever. He owns a number of coal mines, so has plenty of money. He has three cars and we had one to drive around in all the while we were there. We had a glorious time and are looking forward to going there again next month."

Flying Officer Hurt

Flying Officer Sidney Arnold Bushell of Hazell Hill, Nova Scotia, was injured last night, when his plane crashed at the Trenton airport. Another officer flying with him escaped injury.

According to the officials at the airport the accident happened during a night flying expedition. No indication was given whether the plane crashed while taking off or landing.

Flying Officer Bushell was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital suffering from facial injuries. His condition is reported as fair today.

This is the first accident that has happened at this busy station in three months.

Fight for Mayor's Chair

Mayor O. Alyea and Ex-Mayor Harry R. Cory will again contest the mayoralty for Trenton this year. Mr. Alyea and Mr. Cory were the only two out of six nominated to qualify on Saturday. The two met last year with Mr. Alyea winning the seat but at that time there was a third candidate in the field.

Ten nominees qualified for the six council seats. They are Ross Burtt, Kenneth J. Couch, Thomas Cain, Walter Gainforth, Henry LaFleur, William Wentworth Miller, Hugh O'Rourke, Victor Ryan, Richard J. Whitley and Douglas O. White.

George Sprental and Albert A. Farr will contest the seat on the Public Utilities Commission. Four nominations were made for the seat but only these two qualified.

E. Arthur Blakely, Rolland Whitley and Charles V. Wilkins were returned as school trustees by acclamation.

Enjoyable Tea Held

A very enjoyable tea was held by the Trenton Red Cross Society on Friday, November 22nd, at the Trenton Red Cross rooms, at which a successful raffle was held. Prize winners of the raffle were: 1st, Mrs. H. B. MacDonald, Brighton; 2nd, Miss Agnes Hyland, Trenton; 3rd, Mrs. A. N. Sharpe, Trenton; 4th, Mr. Ernest Parker, Montreal. The tickets were drawn by the Red Cross President, Mr. B. Joyce and Mr. Seeley of the Trenton R.C.A.F.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Nov. 25 —(CP)— Prices were unchanged at Brantford, Chatham, Hull, Peterborough and Stratford, in bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Liveweight: Chatham $7.

Dressedweight: Brantford $10.15 plus transportation, Chatham $9.70, Hull $10.10, Peterborough $10.10 plus transportation, Stratford $10.25 plus transportation.

NOMINATIONS

MARMORA

Marmora, (Special) — Elections will be held in Marmora Village and in Marmora Township on Monday, December 2nd., due to qualification on Saturday of all nominees. In the Village, while Reeve W. R. Linn was returned unopposed for a fifth term of office. Five nominees qualified for the four seats on the Council. Last year's councillors namely W. A. Sanderson, R. E. Neal, V. Lynch and Lewis Phillips are joined by John R. Hart in this year's contest.

In the Township, Reeve John A. Bell, reeve for the past four years, is opposed by Irwin McCoy, who is a former councillor. All of the retiring councillors, namely, W. J. Pack, G. Davidson, C. Kelly and A. Thompkins seek re-election and new aspirants to that office are seen in the persons of George Brown and Wilbert Jones.

HOPE

The storm cleared in the late afternoon, but only the R.C.A.F. planes were able to get into the air and they were given only a half hour of daylight for their scouting.

Several hunting dogs in the district were being used for the search and two trained Royal Canadian Mounted Police dogs were to be flown into the district from Ottawa today.

The men, F.O. J. G. Richardson, Flt. Lt. G. F. Clay and Lac. H. E. Howard, became lost eight days ago after they parachuted from the plane when it ran out of gas while trying to reach Montreal. The plane was unable to land at its base because of fog.

Three other crewmen, P.O. U. J. H. LeBlanc, Lac. E. J. Benoit and Ac. Elmer Johnson are safe, the latter two being treated in hospital at Montreal, for the effects of five days' exposure in the woods.

GRADUATES EAGER

The small group of Canada-trained fliers—all have the rank of sergeant or pilot officer—may have their wish fulfilled soon. The Air Ministry announced they would be posted shortly for active service in the Royal Air Force.

The Canadians, who arrived at a west coast port over the week-end, are the vanguard of the Empire Scheme graduates. From now on pilots, observers and air gunners will be arriving in the United Kingdom at frequent intervals in ever-increasing numbers.

Crossing Uneventful

The Atlantic crossing was uneventful though rather rough.

Sgt. Jack Smith of Toronto, said he understood the Germans claimed they had sunk them en route and that they had been taken prisoners.

"Well, you can say we're safe and you can say the same thing after the first flight to Berlin", Smith added.

The party was in charge of Pilot Officer John Gellner, a Czechoslovakian who went to Canada after the outbreak of war and received an air training commission there.

Pilot Officer R. W. Alexander of London, Ont., was anxious to see England and London and other boys wanted to know where they could find Canadian Air Force and Army units so they can deliver messages from home.

As members of the R.A.F. the Canadians will receive R.A.F. pay while in England but the Canadian government makes up the difference between it and R.C.A.F. pay and credits it to their accounts in Canada.

MONGREL, SPANIEL IN CITY POUND

Two dogs were found wandering at large over the week-end and are being held at the city dog pound, Thomas Thorne, the pound custodian announced today. One is a female mongrel pup, while the other is a well-bred male Springer Spaniel of chocolate and white coloring. "I am anxious to locate the owner of the Spaniel as the animal is sick with a mild case of distemper," added Mr. Thorne as he revealed the dogs would be held the conventional 48 hours, as required by bylaw, and if not claimed they will be destroyed.

BRITISH

What Photographs Reveal

One photograph, according to British naval experts, shows a battleship of the Littorio class—probably the 35,000-ton Littorio Veneto, badly down by the bows in the middle of outer Taranto harbor. Salvage ships and tugs are shown alongside and evidences of oil appear on the water, they said.

The second photograph shows a 23,622-ton battleship of the Cavour class beached on the east shore of the outer harbor. The picture shows the ship with heavy list to starboard and the whole length of its starboard side submerged as well as its stern, aft of the rear gun turrets.

There were no signs of activity about her.

The same photograph shows another battleship of the same class, around which some activity was apparent, perhaps indicating she also was damaged.

The third photograph shows another battleship of the Cavour class down by the bows and beached on the northeast shore of the outer harbor, with auxiliary craft alongside.

Possible Damage to 2 Cruisers

Naval sources saw in the picture evidence of "obvious attempts to make her seaworthy so she could be towed out for repairs."

The fourth photograph shows two cruisers, one of the Trento class and the other of the Bolzano class. The experts said there was evidence of a considerable quantity of oil on the water and "it is fair enough to say this probably indicates some damage to two ships, although no damage can be seen."

THREATEN

A neutral military source estimated that the Greeks have taken 6,000 prisoners. About 1,000 arrived in Athens today.

Accompanying the land drive, the Greek Air Force bombed the Albanian towns of Berati, Elbasani, and Tepelin, while Italian planes also were reported in action after several days of quiet.

Greek spokesmen said that without even reaching the Italians' second line of Albanian defences Greek troops over the week-end:

1. Seized heights commanding strategic Argirocastro, the Italians' principal South Albanian base, 19 miles from the Greek frontier. (A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Belgrade said the Greeks had fought their way into the outskirts of Argirocastro.)

2. Captured Konispolis, in extreme southern Albania, in a supporting drive to push the Italians back toward Porto Edda (Santi Quaranta) on the Strait of Otranto opposite Italy.

3. Reached Frasheri, more than 15 miles inside Albania in the central, Pindus Mountain, sector.

4. Occupied Machopolis, 11 miles west of captured Koritza, and reached Pogradetz, guardian of the highway to the Albanian capital, Tirana, in the northern sector.

The push to Pogradetz, 25 miles north of Koritza and slightly more than 30 miles inside Albania, was the Greeks' deepest penetration of the Italian defence to be reported.

A Greek spokesman said stiffening Italian resistance along some of the Fascist routes of retreat indicated a "tendency" to establish a second defence line but added the Greek pursuit had not been stopped.

British Specialists Arrive

The High Command reported "our air force bombed three enemy columns in retreat with great success" and dispatches from Ochrid, on the Albanian-Yugoslav border said British planes and Greek artillery pounded retreating forces Sunday.

British non-combatant troops—their number undisclosed—were reported authoritatively to have been ferried across the Mediterranean by files of transports and landed at Greek ports where cheering, flag-waving Greeks welcomed them.

The British—many of them veterans of the last stand in Flanders and the retreat through Dunkirk—were specialists in equipment, transportation and supplies. They were sent as an operating force to work with the Royal Air Force in Greece rather than as reinforcements for the Greek army.

Reports said considerable forces of British and Greek troops were massed in an "expeditionary" army on the Greek army of Crete, awaiting the "zero hour" for a direct assault on the strongly fortified Dodecanese Islands.

Such an attack, it was indicated, might be sprung as soon as the British naval blockade in the eastern Mediterranean weakens the Italian bases on the Islands.

The High Command communique said today that 1,500 prisoners were captured and quantities of guns seized in mopping up operations around Koritza.

Greek newspaper dispatches from the Koritza front said the Greeks found 10 Italian airplanes burned at the Koritza airport, but that large quantities of food, munitions, tanks and guns were found in good condition.

These dispatches said stores the Italians left behind included quantities of martial law declarations printed in Italian and Greek—and surmised these had been printed for use in Greek towns the Italians thought they would capture.

CONVICTION

A report circulating this morning that the Germans are planning to invade Eire and seize naval bases there is dismissed in official circles as "mere conjecture".

Constant Watch Kept

Ever since mid-September, when Hitler's invasion plans were shattered by R.A.F. fighters, a constant watch has been kept by coastal command planes on German-occupied French ports.

It is understood that these reconnaissance flights disclosed a steady trickle of German shipping concentrating in French channel ports. Apparently the High Command held off the bombers until enough shipping was grouped together to guarantee success of the raids.

The most important German port, Hamburg, also was attacked by the R.A.F. during the night, with docks and oil refineries the chief objectives.

The raids topped off widespread week-end bombing forays which included blows at the heart of Berlin and at Italian arsenals and motor plants at Turin.

Quiet in London

London had one of its quietest week-ends since the air siege began but a communique today said one section in the west of England was attacked heavily with damage to buildings and some residents killed and injured, from dusk to midnight last night.

British fliers who carried the air war into Germany and Italy Saturday night and Sunday morning brought back accounts of flaming destruction at Berlin, Essen, Leipzig and Duisberg-Ruhrort in Germany, at Boulogne, Brest and Lorient in France, and at Turin, where the Italian Royal Arsenal and the big Fiat works were attacked.

Bombs were dropped on the Krupp Works at Essen and large fires were started in long, heavy attacks on the Pulitzstrasse and Lehrter freight yards, the Potsdamer station, and rail yards between the Potsdamer and Anhalter stations, all in Berlin.

Pilots said they could see Berlin's famous Unter Den Linden and the Tiergarten clearly.

Anti-aircraft fire and fighter plane patrols beat back many of the German and Italian planes which attacked Britain in relays yesterday but the raiders broke through after dark.

Several Buildings Hit

Continuous relays of bombers concentrated on a town in western England where a home for the aged, two churches, two theatres and several shops were among the buildings hit.

When the attack dwindled near midnight townspeople toured the debris-strewn streets to view the damage.

A communique said "high explosive and many incendiary bombs were dropped and houses and commercial buildings were damaged by fire and blast. Some persons were killed and others injured".

Elsewhere, the communique added, "casualties as a whole were few although a small number of persons was killed".

British coastal guns this morning began their own bombardment of the German-held coast of France.

POPE PIUS PLEADS

"You shall hear of wars and rumors of wars. See that you not be troubled. For these things must come to pass, but the end indeed is not yet come."

"We must not be troubled.... In the preaching of the gospel," he said. "But nonetheless the present hour is a phase in the solemn story of humanity predicted by Christ."

Oil and Minerals Blamed

The Pontiff blamed the "contentious aspirations" of raw materials as reponsible for the war, saying oil and minerals in the earth "disturb the aims of man and upset his peace."

Today's conflict, he said, "instead of subsiding, goes on to gather new ferocity," so that the "din of war seems to overcome and drown our voice."

"Grant us, oh Lord," he prayed, "peace in our days

"May justice and charity on one side and on the other be in perfect balance so that all injustice be repaired, the reign of right restored, all rancor and discord be banished from men's minds, and may there arrive...... true and well-ordered peace that will permanently reunite as brother.... all peoples of the human race."

The Pontiff refrained from asking special protection for the Vatican, but called attention to "this altar and this cross which dominates . . . . this tomb on which we reverently stand (that of St. Peter), this cornerstone of a church known and venerated in the face of nations". He coupled this statement with an appeal to his listeners to unite with him in "the divine sacrifice of appeasement".

At the Pope's orders, the usual pomp and color marking a Papal ceremony in St. Peter's was dispensed with today. The only color was afforded by the uniforms of a long procession of Cardinals, prelates and guards who accompanied the Pontiff as he walked slowly through the great nave.

For the first time since he became Pope, Pius XII walked into the Basilica, instead of using the sedia cestatoria (throne chair), in which Pontiffs usually are carried on the shoulders of red-uniformed attendants.

Reviews Peace Efforts

Referring to his efforts toward peace, before and since the war began, the Pope said:

"We have done everything for peace among nations, conscious as we are that it is ours to be a servant and minister of peace, bringing the King on High who makes peace not through the blood of battlefields, but through the blood of His Cross, both as to things that are on earth and things that are in heaven.

"From the outset of the conflict our attention and thoughts have never ceased to secure, in so far as we could, that divine purpose and human aid might be extended to those whom the clash of arms has caused loss and suffering. For the charity of Christ presseth us . . .

"This vale of tears is now so inundated with fresh tears to be dried on the faces of children, mothers, men and aged ones who feel a sense of cruel abandonment in their loves and souls, especially in this turbulent hour when the terrible conflict, instead of subsiding, goes on to gather new ferocity".

In asking prayers for restoration of peace he said: "To Him we raise the sorrowing cry of our heart, imploring Him for better days for the human race, better dawns and better sunsets to our days".

He prayed for "The peace of eternal rest" for civilians as well as combatants who have "been swept to their death in this whirlwind of war", and for "peace and consolation" to those "overcome by the sorrows and tribulations of war's calamities, to exiles, to refugees, to unknown wanderers, to prisoners and to the wounded who trust in Thee".

"Give to the combatants together with heroism in full token of their duty", he continued, "even to the supreme sacrifice, in defense of their native land, that noble sense of humanity by which they will not no matter in what circumstances, do to others that which they would not have done to themselves or their country. . . . .

"Peace among men which Thou desirest is dead. Bring it back to life, oh Divine Conqueror of Death. Through Thee at last may the land and sea be calmed".

12 AXIS SHIPS

Before dawn, however, tugs which had been standing by steamed away and heavy smoke ceased to pour from the stacks of the ships.

The ships still had all lights burning and despite poor visibility across the harbor the running lights of the neutrality patrol destroyers could be seen offshore in the Gulf.

No warships of other powers had been seen in the vicinity.

At the office of the Port Captain it was said the German and Italian merchantmen had clearance papers but no information could be given on when they might depart.

At the German and Italian consulates in Mexico City staff members were at work at 2 a.m., apparently in touch with Tampico.

Both consulates said they knew preparations had been made aboard the ships but had no information when they might leave port.

65,000 Tons Shipping Involved

The German ships are the Orinoco, the Idarwald and the Rhein. The Italian boats are the Lucifero, Stelvio, Genovano, Fede, Atlas, Americano, Vigor, Toscana and Marinare.

(Lloyd's register of shipping lists the tonnage of the vessels as follows: Orinoco 9,660, Idarwald 5,033, Rhein 6,031, Lucifero 4,000, Stelvio 6,963, Fede 7,884, Atlas 2,005, Americano 7,008, Vigor 6,511, and Toscana 9,442. Lloyd's does not list a Genovana but does have a Genoano O. 6,067 tons. The Marinare, likewise, is not listed but the Marino O. is listed at 5,480 tons).

The three German ships were among the four which attempted to dash to sea November 16, but returned when the fourth, the Phrygia, was scuttled by its crew.

The Mexican foreign office on Friday night in its first official statement on that incident said it had concluded the three vessels fled back to port and the fourth was abandoned in the belief they had been hailed by British warships when destroyers of the United States neutrality patrol flashed a request for identification.

NAZIS ASSERT

This statement, the nearest yet to any German suggestion that Greece is fighting not only against Italy but against German interest in the Balkans, followed by only a few hours yesterday the signing of tiny Slovakia as the sixth member of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Alliance.

Slovakia Follows Hungary, Rumania

Slovakia, remnant of pre-war Czecho-Slovakia, followed Hungary and Rumania into the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo 10-year military and economic alliance with the customary ceremony in Berlin yesterday.

Premier Bela Tuka signed for the 20-month-old republic and pledged the "blood of Slovakia's Sons" in upholding the pact, which requires the nation to come to the aid of Germany, Italy and Japan if they are attacked by some power not now at war.

Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische quoted Metaxas as saying that he was fighting for all the Balkans and declared the statement was "extraordinarily risky and dangerous".

Say Bulgaria Seeks Outlet

(German circles in Sofia, Bulgaria, predicted Bulgaria would "seize the golden opportunity to obtain an outlet to the Aegean from Greece" after signing with the Axis. Bulgaria has wanted such an outlet ever since she lost it at the close of the First Great war, in which she was a German ally.

(Bulgarian Revisionists, on the other hand, were warned by the Yugoslav press to beware of adventures designed to annex territory from Southern Yugoslavia. The semi-official paper Vreme charged that Peter Doumanoff, who raised Bulgarian claims on Macedonia during debate in the Bulgarian parliament, was an "agent provacateur who sought to embroil Yugoslavia with Germany and Italy", and added "Yugoslavia is no house of cards".)

ROOSEVELT MAY DISCUSS QUESTION OF FINANCIAL AID

CREDITS NEEDED

Washington, Nov. 25—(AP)—President Roosevelt was on the way back to the White House today for a week which may give added force to talk of granting financial assistance to Britain.

Some time during the week, Mr. Roosevelt expects to confer with Marquess of Lothian, British ambassador to the United States, who said on his return to America from London on Saturday that Britan was approaching the end of Britain was approaching the end of Whether the envoy would raise that point in his meeting with the President or limit himself to a discussion of other war problems and United States aid in the form of armaments, remained to be seen.

The President has given no indication whether he would favor or disapprove the extension of loans to Britain, which must now pay cash for purchases of war equipment in the United States.

He asserted last Friday, apparently referring to the executive branch, that there had been no talk in the government about credits.

Before loans could be made, Congress would have to repeal or amend the Johnson Act which bans credits to countries which defaulted on their first Great War debts, and the Neutrality Acts which forbids loans to belligerent nations.

WORKERS DEMAND HIGHER WAGES

Ask Increase of $2.20 Weekly to Meet Higher Costs of Living

London, Nov. 25 (CP)—Workers are demanding higher wages to meet the higher cost of living.

The Confederation of Engineering and Shipbuilding Unions, comprising about 40 organizations, has decided to ask the Labor Ministry to set up a special tribunal for dealing with demands for a 19-shilling — $2.20—increase a week on both the engineering and shipbuilding sides. Such a tribunal would supersede the existing National Arbitration Tribunal.

The governing body of the Amalgamated Engineering Union has been summoned to meet at Southport Thursday to decide its course in the face of refusal of employers to grant a three pence—about six cents— an hour increase on basic rates and restoration of pre-June 1931 working conditions.

Three Railway Trade Unions shortly will place before the railway companies a unifirm claim for further wage increases, the exact amounts of which have not been disclosed but which are expected to be between five and 10 shillings a week.

On Wednesday the staff side of the National Whitley Council for Civil Service, representing about 450,000 Civil Servants, will present the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Kingsley Wood, with a request for a higher cost of living bonus. This action follows a deadlock in negotiations.

Employers refusing workers' demands have argued that increased wages would mean a still higher cost of living, thus nullifying the wage increases.

FIFTEEN PLANTS IN CAN. MAKING HIGH EXPLOSIVES

START NEW PLANTS

Ottawa, Nov. 25 —(CP)— Production of high explosives and "propellants" in Canada now exceeds one-third of the full output scheduled to be available by the middle of 1941, the Department of Munitions and Supply announced today.

"The manufacture of explosives and chemicals for war purposes has entailed the construction in Canada of 15 plants, several of which are comparable in magnitude to anything of a similar nature in the Empire today," a Department statement said.

"Rapid progress has been made in this program, and more than 10,000 men are employed on construction.

"Two new plants are in production. One devoted to the manufacture of trinitrotoluol (TNT), already is attaining its capacity output of this important high explosive. Sufficient rifle cordite is being made to meet present needs, and production of cannon cordite, the propellant explosive for shells, will be started in January. The second plant, 'somewhere in Quebec,' began full operation last week. It will manufacture hexchlorethane, a chemical for making smoke screens.

"The present chemical and explosives program will provide all the necessary materials to fill all shells, bombs and mines which will be made in Canada, and it will also permit the export of large quantities of explosives and chemicals overseas, or to the United States, for shell filling purposes there. All projects should be complete and in production by next July."

80 Millions Invested

Administration and supervision of 14 explosive, chemical and other similar projects are handled by Allied War Supplies Corporation, a government-owned and controlled company. Total investment in the projects is about $80,000,000, the major part of which has been financed by Great Britain.

In another statement, Munitions Minister Howe said deliveries of single-engine training planes for the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan will be completed about 15 months ahead of schedule. Production which was originally expected to take 26 months will be completed in 10 months, he said.

The Department ordered 808 trainers from Fleet Aircraft Ltd. and DeHavilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd. Contracts provided for delivery of 16 of these planes per month by each company, commencing April 10. So far 575 training machines had been turned over to the air services and with production rates "tripling the output called for in original contracts," the manufacturers are expected to complete deliveries by the end of January.

"Both companies will then devote their entire facilities to the manufacture of other types of aircraft," Mr. Howe said.

A third statement said orders will be placed shortly for 40 more craft in the department's small boat construction program. The orders include refuelling scows, aircraft tenders, bomb-loading dinghies, flat scows, and derrick scows.

To date orders have been placed on behalf of the three fighting services for more than 350 small craft, and half of them have been completed and delivered, the statement said.

Problem of Britain's Financing the War Should be Faced

New York, Nov. 25 (CP)—The New York Herald Tribune said editorially today the problem of Britain's financing the war "should be faced by the American people in its broadest terms."

"It is not for Americans to wait on British pleas: It is for Americans themselves to decide how they are to meet the financial necessities of the American policy to which they are committed," the paper said, adding:

"The policy of 'All Aid' is not a policy of only such aid as the British can beg or borrow the money to pay for, it is a policy of all aid that the United States can give, because the United States has a vital interest in British survival.

"That means not only ships and planes, not only loans, but subsidies. In the financial as in every other field it means the broad view and the boldest action. Little means will not serve great ends, and the ends of the 'All Aid' policy are very great indeed."

SIXTH BODY RECOVERED

Port Colborne, Ont., Nov. 25 (CP)—The body of an unidentified crew member of the freighter Anna C. Minch, which foundered off the pier at Pentwater, Mich, November 11, floated ashore during the week-end, officials of the Sarnia Steamships Ltd. said today.

It was the sixth body recovered. Twenty-one went down with the ship.

Unit of Medical Corps Performs Operations on Scene of Bombings

Surgical Teams From Montreal Unit Work Among Civilians and Servicemen Alike

CARE FOR CHILDREN

By SAM ROBERTSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Nov. 25 (C.P. Cable)—A montreal unit of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps is in the civilian front line fighting against death that flies by night.

In addition to caring for 140 children placed in the comparative safety of a Canadian general hospital after being evacuated from children's hospitals in bomb-scarred Midland city, the units has established surgical teams for performing operations on the scene of bombings.

It had been suggested that medical units of the British army should be used for such civil work throughout the United Kingdom. While the suggestions were receiving official consideration, Col. A. E. Lundon, commandant of the Canadian Hospital, hurdled red tape and established the surgical teams for work among civilian and servicemen alike.

Service Within 5 Mile Radius

The teams composed of two surgeons, an anaesthetist and the required number of orderlies are subject to call at any hour day or night for operations within a five-mile radius of the hospital. The British-American Ambulance Service is co-operating in the scheme. A First Aid post has been established at the Canadian Hospital for the care of bomb casualties until they can be safely moved to a civil hospital.

The children, who are receiving the expert attention of the commandant and his medical staff of 22 officers, range from six weeks to twelve years. All are from poor families and there are many surgical cases among them.

The hospital was being outfitted for opening around Christmas, but when the need arose for evacuating children from the bombed city the Canadians hurried their plans and were ready to receive the tots in a few hours. The Canadian Red Cross sent feed bottles, clothing and amusements for the children.

A small staff of nurses who accompanied the children from their own hospital are being assisted by khaki-clad orderlies.

'Kids' Have Been in Front Line

"It was a shock when we found a baby in one hand and a feeding bottle in the other," one brawny orderly confessed, "but we are used to it now and it's good training. I hope to have babies of my own some day."

"These kids have been in the front line," said another. "They are as deserving of army medical attention as anyone else."

When Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in the United Kingdom, and Mrs. Massey paid a week-end visit to the hospital the only adult patient was Sgt. Don Butt of Montreal. He suffered head injuries in a motorcycle crash.

POLICE COURT

Thomas G. Cook, Warkworth, was sentenced to serve 24 days in the common jail after being convicted of intoxication and also of the theft of a fountain pen, when he appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's city police court.

Cook was given 14 days on a drunk count and ten days after being convicted of stealing a fountain pen and despite his pleadings to have the terms run concurrently, Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson pressed for consecutive sentences under the circumstances and His Worship agreed, thus Cook will serve out the entire 24 days.

Cook admitted he was drunk, but said he did not remember taking a pen from the premises of the Haines Shoe House. The pen was identified and Cook convicted.

Reduced Charge

"Perhaps it would meet the ends of justice to reduce this charge from the theft of a motor car to that of 'joy riding,'" suggested Crown Attorney Robertson when John Thompson Rossmore, appeared on the initial charge today. Chief Kidd agreed to the suggestion and Thompson pleaded guilty. A fine of $25 and costs, amounting to $40.75 in all, was guaranteed by the young man's father who appeared in court.

While intoxicated police stated that Thompson removed a used motor car from the Hastings Motors lot, but only drove it one block when the vehicle ran out of gasoline recently.

Language Disgusting

Two local youths appeared charged with creating a disturbance on Front St. Saturday night. "They were shouting and using profane language and it was disgusting," testified P. C. Taylor who apprehended the boys. Costs amounting to $11.75 were assessed the respective youths.

Three inebriates fattened the city's coffers somewhat after paying fines for violation of the L.C.A. to conclude the morning's procedure.

ALLOWED MORE DIVERSION

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)—The United States Supreme Court authorized the sanitary district of Chicago today to increase temporarily its diversion of water from the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence system through the Chicago draining canal.

Gen. Weygand Occupies Strategic Position Ideal for Bargaining

(In Europe since 1938, Milo M. Thompson, chief of the London bureau of The Associated Press, helped organise AP's war coverage. His duties took him to all the principal capitals. He has been in London during all the air attacks by the Germans. He returned Saturday by the Atlantic Clipper from Lisbon. In the following story he gives a vivid account of the British situation and life in London today.)

By MILO M. THOMPSON

New York, Nov. 25 (AP)—Britons, tremendously stimulated by events of the last few weeks, are starting to rebuild their pock-marked capital as earnestly as Hitler's forces try to tear it down.

They feel they have won the battle for survival.

They seem to have lost any fear whatsoever of bombing or invasion. The bombing of the Italian fleet at Taranto gave them a tremendous lift. The successes of the Greeks to date confirm their expressed belief that Italy is the Achilles' heel of the Axis, and that they will no longer fight alone. Most recent of the stimulating suggestions reaching them is bound up with the presence of General Maxime Weygand in Northern Africa.

In that connection I have it from a diplomat who talked to Weygand himself that the French military genius, though at present identified with the Vichy Government, has placed himself intentionally in a trading position so that if German demands are too great and German terms of peace too dishonorable, in his opinion, he can swing the military forces of Algeria (possibly Syria, too) in a new direction.

This will not be a matter of joining the Free French forces of General Charles de Gaulle. Weygand is not disposed to play second fiddle.

Flow of Supplies Impressive

Another source of comfort to Britain is the accelerated speed of supplies from the United States. Both Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production, and the Marquess of Lothian, Ambassador to Washington, have told me that the arrivals now are more than gratifying.

At the time of Britain's greatest need—when invasion was imminent and the Germans began to pave the way for it with that recklessness of aircraft attack which enabled the Royal Air Force to down more than 180 on a couple of days, and more than 130 on others —American planes and war material were so slow arriving as to be an unimportant part of the picture.

Now that machine tools have been put to their task on each side of the Atlantic and assembly lines are operating full time, the flow has become impressive. Scarcely less impressive relatively is what Canada and Australia have been doing.

Britain worries about the availability of supplies less than about some means of financing it, because even her wealth is not inexhaustible.

Agree British Claims Low.

I have just completed a flying trip from the centre of the battle along with returning members of an American military mission and the British authorities lean over backward in claiming war successes.

Take the number of German planes knocked out of the sky, for instance. The neutral militarists say you have to increase the figures by approximately 60 per cent. to arrive at something like a true figure, so insistent are the British officials that they have absolute proof a plane is down before they claim it.

The same thing is true of figures of industrial losses. It is not propaganda when the British authorities say that most of the bombing has had small military significance.

This is not to diminish in any respect what has been happening in London or to take away from Londoners any of the respect due them for their will to withstand and to keep going under the hail of bombs.

The world's largest city probably will bear forever the scars of the present conflict and there are appalling gaps in its lines of homes and business buildings.

They Still Grumble.

The figures of property loss, if they could be compiled, would be astronomical. But London has a citizenry determined to die at its posts if necessary and proving night by night that this spirit can belong to shopkeepers, stenographers, factory workers and porters, as well as to a uniformed soldiery.

"I had heard it said of sailors in a storm at sea that all is well while they are shouting and swearing; one can begin to despair when they are hushed in prayer alone.

The British grumble.

Typical is an incident with a taxicab driver the other day. I listened to his plaints for blocks and blocks —the detours around closed streets —holes in the road—petrol rationing —damage from falling fragments—irregular meals—damaged homes—nights in poorly ventilated shelters.

"But," said I, "it is something one has to stand or give in."

He stiffened and grew stern. He drew up the car and said:

"Ye haven't pyed me and I myent get a tip, but I have to say ye're a lousy . . ."

"And why?" said I.

"For even suggesting the possibility of giving in."

"You were doing the complaining," I reminded him.

"'Twas just my way of talking," said he.

2 SHIPS REPORT ATTACK NEAR THE IRISH COAST

Mackay Radio Says British Steamship Attacked by Submarine

RAIDER NEAR W. INDIES

New York, Nov. 25 (AP)—MacKay Radio picked up a message today reporting a submarine attack upon the British steamship Temple Inn off the northern coast of Ireland.

Another message, from the Swedish steamship Anten which reported Sunday that she was being torpedoed, advised that she was still afloat but was breaking up amidships.

The Anten was reported about 200 miles off the northwest coast of Ireland. Thirteen men still were aboard with only one life raft remaining. The message said the ship was listing badly.

The Temple Inn, meanwhile, reported her distress from a position about 1(0 miles off the Irish coast. She is one of the newest British commercial ships, having been constructed at Glasgow only this year.

She is of 5,218 gross tons and registered in the port of London.

Meanwhile, a belligerent raider cruised in West Indian waters after bringing the 9,430-ton British freighter Port Hobart under shellfire.

The attack was made about 75 miles outside the Pan-American neutrality belt at a point where British ships from South America converge with those from the Panama Canal. Two brief messages from the victim yesterday, picked up here by MacKay Radio 25 minutes apart, said first that the Port Hobart had sighted "a suspicious vessel" and then that she was "being shelled by raider."

The fate of the freighter and the identity of its attacker was then blanketed in silence.

Shipping circles advanced the theory that the latter might be one of Germany's two pocket battleships or one of the new Nazi freighters reported to have been armed and dispatched into the Atlantic to prey upon shipping.

WESTERN TOWN BEARS BRUNT OF NIGHT ATTACK

Nazi Bombers Fly Singly Arriving "Almost Continuously" for Several Hours

London, Nov. 25—(CP)—A western town bore the brunt of last night's German air attack, with bombers flying singly arriving one after another "almost continuously" for several hours, it was announced today.

(The Germans claimed that this town was Bristol.)

The first of the invaders dropped "scores of incendiaries," causing fires which served as guides for succeeding planes with high explosives.

"Large numbers" of parachute flares also were dropped. Fires illuminated the entire town and two of its largest stores were set ablaze.

An intensive anti-aircraft barrage throughout the concentrated attack caused shell fragments to rain down upon houses in many parts of the town as the bombs were falling.

Bulgaria's Relations With Soviet Russia On a Sound Basis

Moscow, Nov. 25 —(AP)—Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, today printed addresses made in the Bulgarian parliament saying that Bulgaria's relations with Soviet Russia "are now established on a sound political basis."

The newspaper printed a two-column dispatch from Sofia reporting demands made in parliament for settlement of Bulgaria's territorial claims on her Greek, Yugoslav and Rumanian neighbors.

The dispatch cited speeches in the debate, which started Nov. 21, urging particularly that Bulgaria gain an outlet through Greece to the Aegean Sea.

Also printed were addresses mentioning Bulgaria's "friendly relations" with Germany and Italy and her relationship to the U.S.S.R. and referring to "the menace" in Turkey's attitude toward Bulgaria.

ONE INDUSTRY ONLY COMPLAINED SAYS GARDINER

Communications With Company Over Calling Up of Employees Referred to

POSTPONEMENT CASES

No Conflict With Defence Minister on Question of Military Training

Ottawa, Nov. 25 (CP).—War Services Minister Gardiner told a press conference today that Fleet Aircraft Limited of Port Erie, Ont., was the only industry which complained of its employees being called for compulsory military training.

He revealed that the president of that company, W. J. Sanderson, was the man referred to in the House of Commons last week when Mr. Gardiner said that one factory manager had objected to employees being called for training.

(Speaking in the House of Commons last Friday Mr. Gardiner said the refusal of one factory to release men for training and correspondence on the same topic with others, provided the basis for criticism of certain plant managers in his broadcast address of Nov. 17.

"Prepared To Back It Up."

(He told the House he was "prepared to back that up".

(Mr. Gardiner's explanation to the House came after H. A. Bruce (Con., Toronto-Parkdale) accused the minister of threatening industry, saying in effect "do what I tell you or else", as he addressed "patriotic industrialists".

(In his address in the broadcast series of talks "Let's Face the Facts" Mr. Gardiner said at one point: "Factory managers who contend they cannot produce to capacity without interfering with the training of men may have to be told by someone, just as they are being told in Britain, that they as factory managers are not good enough for wartime.")

Asked To Submit Plan.

The minister told newspapermen today that in common with other industries Fleet Aircraft was asked to submit a plan by which those of its employees eligible for training could be called without interfering with production.

The company did not submit a plan but sent a letter stating that the danger of retarding production of aircraft by calling up men was great.

Mr. Gardiner said the company informed the Toronto district War Services Board under the chairmanship of Mr. Justice J. G. Gillanders it would follow a policy given it by Ottawa authorities.

Postponement Granted.

The board then referred the matter to the Department of National War Services which asked for a report. The report indicated 23 men from the plant had been called for the training period starting Oct. 9. On Oct. 6 the company asked for postponement for all these men and it was granted Oct. 8.

For the second training period, starting Nov. 22, 26 Fleet employees were called and the department received a letter Nov. 7 requesting postponement for them.

Mr. Sanderson appeared before the board on Nov. 11, the minister said, and was told to select twenty men who could be spared for the November training period and to advise the board of their names by Nov. 13.

On Nov. 14 a letter was received from the industrialist stating none could be spared, the minister said.

Seven Out of Twenty Called

Mr. Gardiner said he had instructed the Board to call the men they required from the Fleet Staff and the Board had called seven out of the 20 it was first proposed to call. The company, Mr. Gardiner said he was informed, employed about 240 men on the outbreak of war, had increased its staff to 1,000 and proposed to employ 4,000 more.

"So far as I know," said the Minister, "this is the only firm which did not submit a plan and which has complained."

The Minister reviewed reports on the postponement of training for men engaged in war industries by administrative divisions across the country.

Postponements Granted

In Division A, London, he said, eight industries had requested and received 56 postponements on the October call and on the November call 14 industries had requested and received 146 postponements. Plans had already been submitted and mutually agreed upon for postponements on calls between January and May, involving 364 men.

In Division B, Toronto, 60 industries requested 62 postponements for the October call and received 130. Reports for the November call were not complete. The Fleet Aircraft Company is in this division.

Kingston Division

In Division C, Kingston, for the October call four companies submitted plans involving 55 men which were accepted. In Division D, Port Arthur, for both the October and November calls two companies asked for and obtained seven postponements.

"The position I take, said Mr. Gardiner, "is that when we set up this plan of training there was considerable discussion of what provision should be made for industry. We finally entered into an arrangement with industry, whereby each industry would submit a plan under which they considered their men could be called without interfering unduly with production.

"Satisfactory arrangements have been made in all districts and there are very few individuals complaining so far as we know," he said.

More Intensive Training

Mr. Gardiner said there was no conflict of view between himself and Defence Minister Ralston on the question of military training. Both he and Col. Ralston felt it would be necessary to give more intensive training to a greater number of men in the future if the war was to be won.

"Col. Ralston has indicated certain methods of obtaining men may be helpful to industry," said Mr. Gardiner. "So far as this department is concerned when the Defence Department has determined on any training program and how many men they desire to train under the plan for a certain period of time it is our duty to provide the men."

The total cost of National Registration last August would be under $1,000,000, the Minister said. This was less than was expected and due to the large number of persons who gave their services voluntarily.

MARINES SEARCH 5,000 WORKMEN

Gov't. Receives Report an Attempt Would be Made to Blow Up Boston Navy Yard

Boston, Nov. 25 (AP)—United States marines searched nearly 5,000 day shift workmen at Boston's big Navy yard today while a large detail of police stood guard as a result of a report that an attempt would be made to bring a time bomb or dynamite into the yard.

A squad of 75 policemen were rushed to the yard where several destroyers are under construction and others are being fitted out in round-the-clock shifts, after Capt. Bernard Graham, night police superintendent, received a call for aid from the yard.

Graham quoted a navy yard spokesman, whom he did not identify, as saying:—

"Information has been received from a most authoritative source that an attempt would be made at 7 a.m. by a navy yard workman to bring in a time bomb or a quantity of dynamite when he went to work."

No trace of an explosive had been found after the greater part of the day shift had reported for work. Marines conducted the actual examination as police stood by. The marines examined both clothes and lunch boxes and inspected workmen's cars.

TRAINEE DIES OF PNEUMONIA

Pte. M. Cohen First Victim of Fatal Illness in Toronto District

Toronto, Nov. 25 (CP). — Dr. Thomas Carson, chief medical officer at Christie Street Hospital, said today that Murray Cohen, 21-year-old Toronto youth who died after being brought to hospital from Long Branch Compulsory Military Training Camp, had caught a chill when he took a shower of his own volition while suffering from bronchial pneumonia.

Cohen died yesterday of pneumonia, the first death among men training in the camps of Toronto district. A member of the first training camp at Long Branch, Cohen paraded sick Nov. 5 and was transferred to the military hospital here the next day.

"Everything humanly possible was done," Dr. Carson said.

His father, Saul Cohen, said: "During the last three days they did everything in their power to save my son but it was too late. Had they done one-quarter as much earlier on it might have been different.

Dr. Thomas A. C. Carson, chief medical officer, said "it is rather surprising" that the parents "did not come to me if they had any complaint. I will inquire into it tomorrow."

Mrs. Cohen, the young man's mother, said that on Nov. 7, the day her son' straining should have ended, she received a telephone call from a boy who said Murray was in Christie Street Hospital. She said her son had seen the boy in the hospital and given him five cents to make the call.

Dr. Carson said hospital doctors, under regulations, were compelled to notify next-of-kin if patients became "seriously ill".

30,536 MEN TRAIN IN CAMPS

Number Exceeds Objective by 936 Men War Services Minister States

Ottawa, Nov. 25 (CP)—The turnout for the second military training period under the National Resources Mobilization Act exceeded the objective by 936 men, War Services Minister Gardiner announced today.

He told a press conference attended by 11 newspaper reporters that 30,536 men aged 21, 22 and 23, reported at training centres on Nov. 22 against an objective of 29,600.

The capacity of the 39 training centres was 29,750. Rejections on medical grounds likely would reduce the number who would remain for training to something like 28,250, well within the capacity of the centres, Mr. Gardiner said.

ALBERTON SOLD FOR $65,000

New Landlord Bought Town in Maryland, Lock, Stock and Barrel

Alberton, Md., Nov. 25 —(AP)—Alberton's 800 residents have a new landlord—he bought the town lock, stock and barrel for $65,000.

The new owner of this century-old mill town on the Patapsco river is C. R. Daniels, Inc., of New York, who has been operating the mill making cotton duck for the last month under a temporary lease.

The only bidder Saturday, Daniels got for his money the old mill itself, 118 company homes, the grocery store, and other assorted pieces of property.

The "company town" was built and operated by James S. Gary and son, until hard times came along and the company went into receivership. Escaping sale were the Catholic church and a railroad right of way, on which the owners had leases.

Residents gathered 'round as Auctioneer Charles Hobbs tried to drum up trade. He asked $100,000.

Britain Developing New Type of Army Co-operation Plane

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 25 (C.P. Cable)—Britain is developing a new type of army co-operation plane which air experts said today will make the German dive bombers that pulverized resistance in France and Flanders look obsolete.

Taking a leaf from the German book, Britain has made elaborate plans for co-ordinating the work of the air force and army in land operations, looking forward to the day when the offensive can be taken.

The new Army Co-operation Command will be under Air Marshal A. S. Barratt who commanded the R.A.F. in France last Winter and Spring.

Working on the theory that joint action between land forces and air forces is here to stay, the new command will have an elaborate set up. In its essence it will be a joint force of airmen and soldiers subject to the Royal Air Force for training but under the operational control of the army during battle.

Jervis Bay Survivor Arrives in Toronto

Toronto, ov. 25 (CP)—Ab. Walter Darnborough, whose report "vessel bearing red 90" sent the armed merchant cruiser Jervis Bay into the suicide battle against a Nazi surface raider, arrived at his Toronto home last night, recovered from shrapnel wounds that kept him in an eastern naval hospital after being rescued and brought to Canada.

Darnborough, 20, had served in the Jervis Bay five months. Of the battle with the raider, which allowed 34 of the 38 ships in the Jervis Bay's convoy to escape, he said: 'I never would believe there was so much real courage, but that night I saw it."

Darnborough was on a raft for 11 hours being rescued. Eleven of the original 45 on the raft died before rescue came.

BUILD NEW LABORATORY

Washington, Nov. 25 —(AP)—Cleveland was chosen today as the site for an airplane engine laboratory for which the United States Congress appropriated $8,400,000.

John F. Victory, Secretary of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, announced the selection after a survey of scores of sites.

This War Most Costly World Has Ever Known Says Sir Kingsley Wood

Glasgow, Nov. 25 (CP)—Describing this as the most costly war the world ever has known, Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said today that Britain's average daily war expenditures has risen from £5,300,000 ($23,585,000) for the first year to £9,100,000 ($40,-495,000) for the first 77 days of the second year.

Sir Kingsley speaking at the opening of War Weapons Week in Glasgow, said the rise in expenditures was a cause for gratification "provided always that the increase means output and not merely senseless increases in prices or wages or wasteful use of resources."

The Chancellor explained that new and expensive weapons had resulted in the big increase of war costs.

"An airplane costs something like seven times as much as it did between 1914 and 1918," he said.

Referring to losses suffered by the Italian Air Force in the battle of Britain, Sir Kingsley asserted that "an inferior airplane, as the Italians are discovering to their cost, is largely money thrown away."

He declared that the response of the British people to the War Savings Campaign had "confounded the gloomy prophets......and we can look forward to the future with confidence and hope."

St. Leonard's Church Virtually Destroyed

London, Nov. 25.—(CP)—St. Leonard's Church, one of London's oldest and a favorite place of worship of Dr. Samuel Johnson, has been virtually destroyed in recent air raids.

The Government permitted publication today of the fact that a bomb fell in the churchyard and demolished the 17th Century part of the structure, although some parts of the 14th Century building still stand.

Creamerymen of the Bay of Quinte district and Belleville in particular won signal honors at the recent convention of the Ontario Creamerymen's Association when the Bay of Quinte Butter Club team comprised of Bernard Reid, Glen Roy Creamery, Belleville; Ralph Dudgeon, Belleville Creameries, and Arthur Coukell, Trenton Creameries, Trenton, won first prize in butter-judging, the grand championship of the convention, and finished second in cream-judging.

Runners-up were the Frontenac County Club which annexed second place in butter-judging and second place in the grand championship.

Mr. Reid had the highest scoring points in butter-judging of one hundred entries from all parts of the province which competed in the show.

Creamery Instructor W. R. Dunlop, Belleville, in whose district the prize-winning teams operate, accompanied the contestants to the convention held in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto.

SCALP LACERATIONS SUSTAINED IN CRASH

When the automobile in which he was riding east of Brighton on Highway No. 2 skidded and turned over in the ditch early Sunday morning, Norman Walden, of 176 Quebec Ave., Toronto, sustained painful scalp lacerations. The injured man was attended at the scene of the accident by Dr. Clarke of Brighton, the injuries being of such a nature it was necessary to remove him to the Belleville General Hospital for treatment. Motorcycle Patrolman Morden investigated and assisted at the scene of the accident. Mr. Walden sustained his deep lacerations as the result of being struck by flying glass when the windshield of the car was shattered as it turned over in the ditch.

PICTON PASTOR ACCEPTS CALL TO TORONTO CHURCH

Toronto, Nov. 25. —(CP)—Rev. George H. Tranter, Picton, has accepted a call to become pastor of Woodbine Heights Baptist Church, it was announced Sunday. His letter of acceptance was read at each of the services.

The new pastor is a graduate of McMaster University and the Toronto Bible College.

The pulpit has been vacant since the resignation of Rev. James A. Grant, pastor for .7 years.

RAISE SUNKEN BARGES

Amsterdam, N.Y., Nov. 25—(AP)—Salvage crews worked today to raise two sunken barges blocking traffic on the State Barge Canal. The barges, loaded with 18,000 bushels of grain sank near lock 10, Granesville, yesterday.

Probabilities

Lower Lake Region — Winds increasing to gales from eastward tonight; snow tonight and part of Wednesday, probably changing to sleet or rain in some districts.

Italian Retreat May Be Cut Off if Argirocastro Falls

Greeks Report Passing Key Town Of Pogradetz and Cavalry Chasing Italians to the North

Athens, Nov. 26 (AP)—A counter-attack by fresh Italian troops newly brought from Italy to stem the Greek advance into Albania was reported today to have been repulsed, and the Greeks continued their drive.

Although the 42nd. Regiment, direct from Rome, made a desperate effort to halt the Italian retreat troops, reports from the front declared it was overwhelmed by two Greek bayonet charges.

In the north, the Greek forces were believed to be pushing ahead. Reconnaissance pilots reported that the Fascist troops were offering little resistance in withdrawal.

Retreat Toward Adriatic

The retreat was in a general westerly direction toward the Adriatic Sea, across which lies Italy.

(A report from London said Greek troops had landed on the Adriatic shore in Albanian Epirus and had got behind the Italian flank.)

A dispatch from the central sector said: "The Italians made a final effort yesterday—a frantic, rear-guard effort—to halt the quick advance of the Greeks. They failed, however, in a way which was tragic for them. An attack by the Greeks at bayonet point was followed by a second attack which overthrew everything."

Battle Fiercely

Greek troops also were reported battling fiercely for Argirocastro against desperate Italians whose retreat might be cut off by fall of the town—Italy's last "invasion" base in southern Albania.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Cold and wind! The recent plight of the western duck hunters caught by the cold and wind is just another example of how wind intensifies the effects of low temperatures. There seems to be little difference in the amount of clothing necessary in 15 degrees below or 50 degrees below zero if there is no wind. Explorers state that low temperatures with calm are much more to be desired than higher temperatures with dampness. The town of Verhoyansk, in northeastern Siberia has a recorded minimum temperature of 94 degrees below zero, and an average winter temperature of 53 degrees below. Yet even there people live the year round, in winter using tents made almost airtight.

Supreme Court Refuses Leave To Appeal Judgment

Ottawa, Nov. 26 (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada Monday refused to grant Omer Derouin of Cornwall leave to appeal against a judgment of the Ontario Courts upholding a town by-law dealing with amusement machines.

The by-law provided no person holding a licence from the town should keep any slot machine on the licenced premises and that if such a machine were kept the licence was cancelled.

Derouin operated a restaurant and had a licence. He moved before the Ontario Weekly Court to quash the by-law, contending it was beyond the powers of the Town Council. The motion was dismissed April 26th last and an appeal by Derouin to the Court of Appeal for Ontario was dismissed on Sept. 27 Derouin's motion before the Court of Appeal for special leave to appeal was dismissed on Nov. 1 and he then applied to the Supreme Court of Canada for special leave to appeal.

Princess Royal Visits 2nd Divisional Signals

(By Ross Munro)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Nov. 26. —(CP Cable)—The Princess Royal, in the khaki uniform of the Auxiliary Territorial Service, today visited the 2nd Divisional Signals and showed deep interest in a new Canadian facsimile development and in cable-laying device.

The King's sister is Colonel in Chief of the Royal Signals, with which the Canadian formation is affiliated. Maj.-Gen. Victor Odlum, general officer commanding the 2nd Division, and Senior Signal officers accompanied the Princess.

A guard of honor commanded by Capt. W. P. Shirreff of Kingston, Ontario, gave the royal salute on her arrival and Lieut. E. P. Turton of Montreal, demonstrated the facsimile with Signaller E. G. Brockman and Lance-Corporal Andy Parks, both of Edmonton.

A message in the Princess's own handwriting was transmitted over the facsimile machine. It read: "I am delighted to be able to visit the 2nd Canadian Divisional Signals today. Mary, Colonel in Chief". After the departure of the Princess Royal dozens of copies were run off as souvenirs.

War-Time Restrictions May Keep The Windsors From Visiting U. S.

Nassau, Bahamas, Nov. 26.—(AP) —War-time restrictions of travel outside the British Empire may keep the Duke and Duchess of Windsor from their hoped-for visit to the United States for several months at least.

Ever since the Duke came here as Governor three months ago, he has talked of a trip to his American-born Duchess' nearby homeland. But so far, no opportunity has presented itself for combining such a pleasure trip with a tour for business reasons.

During wartime, the British Empire frowns on travel outside the area where sterling money is used. The government, buying expansively for war needs, is attempting to conserve all its United States dollars for essentials.

A resident of the Bahamas, for instance, can get permission to visit the United States' only for necessary medical treatment or some important business that will result in financial benefit to the colony of the Empire. Any attempt to stretch the restrictions purely for pleasure is considered unpatriotic.

Thus, the Duke, as representative of the Crown, can hardly pay a call on his American neighbors unless there appears to be some justifiable business reason for the journey. Of course, officials feel that any such trip could be considered a good-will job, justifying itself for the tourists it would attract to this winter resort.

But this role of good-will ambassador is one that the Duke himself has rather insistently avoided, on his expressed theory that he was sent here as governor of a British colony and not for such extra-curricular activity.

The Duke himself says these is no trip in sight, unless the government finds something specific for him to do in the United States.

London, Nov. 26—(CP)—German raiders returned to the attack today on the town in the west of England which was hard hit in a heavy raid Sunday night. (Germans have claimed this town to be the port of Bristol.)

Reports were lacking immediately in London on the extent of this raid, launched in the afternoon. It was the same town the Germans apparently had picked for a heavy assault last night, which was blocked by bad weather.

Admiralty Officials Disbelieve Reports From Nazi Sources

London, Nov. 26 (CP).—Admiralty officials expressed disbelief today concerning indications from Berlin that two new 35,000-ton battleships had been added to the German navy.

They said it was significant that these indications came out shortly after the British air raid Nov. 11 on the Italian base of Taranto, where three Italian battleships—half of Italy's capital ship strength—had been seriously crippled by aerial torpedoes.

The indications took the form of pictures published in German publications of a battleship, apparently either the new Bismarck or Tirpitz, showing steam up and seamen on the decks.

"It is not thought that either has joined the fleet," said a British officer. "It is not thought that the Tirpitz has even completed her trials."

Both battleships were laid down in 1936 and normally would have been completed this year. (The Bismarck was built in the much-bombed Blohm and Voss shipyards at Hamburg; the Tirpitz at the naval base of Wilhelmshaven, also the target of frequent British air raids.)

Will Strive to Insure Integrity, Independence if Bulgaria Stays Out

Under-Secretary Butler Reads Written Statement in Commons From Foreign Secretary Halifax Concerning Eventual Peace Settlement as Concerns Bulgaria if She Neither Joins Nor Assists Either Actively Nor Passively the Enemies of Great Britain Nor Attacks Her Allies

London, Nov. 26 (CP)—Great Britain made a bid today for Bulgaria's neutrality in the war with a promise that Britain will strive to ensure Bulgaria's integrity and independence in any eventual peace settlement.

Richard Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said in a written statement in the House of Commons:—

"Lord Halifax (the Foreign Secretary) welcomes this opportunity of stating that, provided Bulgaria does not join or assist, either actively or passively, the enemies of Great Britain, or attack her allies, it is the intention of His Majesty's Government to do their best to insure that in any eventual peace settlement to which Great Britain is a party, the integrity and independence of Bulgaria shall be fully respected.

(The proposal that Bulgaria not attack Britain's "allies" obviously was a reference to the latent threat, reported from the Balkans, that Bulgaria might attempt to wrest from Greece a corridor to the Aegean Sea through Macedonia, with Axis encouragement.)

Ottawa, Nov. 26 (CP)—Private members of Parliament want more to do. They want a greater say in what is being done—and who is doing it. They want to know how expert the "experts" are. They want a chance to "help the Government to win this war."

The case for the private members was stated last night by Walter Tucker (Lib. Rosthern), fluent and earnest Westerner, during the Throne Speech debate in the House of Commons. Back-benchers of all parties suggested how they felt about it by their frequent, loud applause.

U. S. Officials Believe Britain Has Financial Resources for Another Year U. S. Purchases

Supply of Gold, Securities and Other Assets May Last Even Two or More Years

LONG CONTROVERSY EXPECTED

Washington, Nov. 26 (AP).—Some of the highest officials in the United States government estimated today that the British government had financial resources for at least another year of American purchases. Several said they thought the supply of gold, securities and other assets might conceivably last even two or more years.

In these quarters the apparent general belief was that the Marquess of Lothian's recent statements on Britain's dwindling resources were intended primarily "to set the stage" for some future date when it may be vital for the empire to obtain credit. The British ambassador said yesterday, however, that financial assistance was one of the problems his country would have to meet "in the first half" of 1941.

The high officials who estimated that Britain still had financial reserves indicated that if the question of extending loans should go to congress eventually, approval could not be expected without a long controversy. That fact, they indicated, might explain why the British plea was being made "so early".

According to available information the facts of British spending and assets appeared to be these:

1. Since the outbreak of war, Britain has contracted to buy about $2,500,000,000 worth of goods in the United States, of which only a fraction has been delivered and paid for. In the next year, British commitments for airplanes and other supplies are expected to total $4,000,000,000.

2.—In the first 12 months of the war, actual shipments of all kinds of merchandise, including large amounts of normal commer-

Lieut. Randolph Churchill Says Army Should Not be Launched on Offensive Until it Can Perform Something Effective

It is Already a Better World He Says Because Today 'We Are Resisting Evil'

London, Nov. 26 (CP)—Lt. Randolph Churchill, the Prime Minister's son, who was elected to parliament from Preston in a by-election several weeks ago, made his maiden speech in the House of Commons today.

His father sat with his back to his son, perhaps so as not to embarrass him with a paternal eye.

The House cheered as young Churchill said, "do not let us urge that the army should be launched upon the enemy until it is capable of doing something really effective."

To members who "frequently inquire why we do not seize the initiative, carry the war into the enemy's country and knock Italy out of the war with a few well-directed bombs at St. Peter's," he said:-

50,000 CARLOADS OF WHEAT ASKED

Unoccupied France Asks for Shipments From Nazi-Held Area

Lyon, France, Nov. 26 —(AP)— An appeal for 50,000 carloads of wheat to be sent from the German-occupied zone of France into the unoccupied zone was made today by Pierre Caziot, Minister of Agriculture.

Addressing a meeting of the Federation of Agriculture Syndicates, he said the unoccupied zone was hardest hit by the low 1940 harvest and was short 8,000,000 quintals (about 29,328,000 bushels) of wheat.

The unoccupied zone is threatened with a stock feed shortage of 30,000,000 quintals, he said, because of reduced production of oats and barley and the loss of normal imports.

Although the lack of motor fuel "aggravates the need for horses," Caziot said, the number of horses has been diminished from 623,000 in 1938 to less than 500,000 now.

Eskimos Can't Imagine People Getting Angry Enough to Go to War

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Montreal, Nov. 26 (CP)—Father Stephen Bazin had a hard time explaining the war to his Eskimos far up in the Arctic on Melville Peninsula because they couldn't imagine people becoming angry enough to fight.

The 37-year-old Oblate missionary who was 11 years in the far north without visiting civilization said he finally told his flock at Igloolik that the war came about "because one people tried to steal another's property."

"I told them that one people—Germany—tried to steal Poland," said Father Bazin. "I told them that the 'big boss'—England—and France tried to stop the theft and had to fight Germany.

"The Eskimos who I believe are the most peace-loving and the happiest people in the world know now that there is a war going on though they think still that it's strange. By nature they are very calm and patient. Anger is a grave crime with them."

During the long Arctic winter, the temperature hangs around 50 below zero at Igloolik and blizzards last as long as a month, but Father Bazin said he'll be glad to get back.

He first went north as a missionary in 1929 and when he reached The Pas, Manitoba, last week it was his first trip out.

Father Bazin remarked on the changes that have come about during the years he had been away from civilization.

"Traffic moves terribly fast now. When I was in Winnipeg last week I walked about but was afraid to cross the street the automobiles moved so fast.

"Their shapes have changed since I last saw them. Clothes have been altered too."

The Priest who is broad and wears a thick black beard said he is not "greatly attracted to civilization — I

De Mok Seaplane Base and German Airdromes Are Hit

Docks at Hamburg And Willemsoord Again Attacked and Great Damage Done

London, Nov. 26 —(CP)— British bombers attacked the German naval base and dockyards at Kiel and Wilhelmshaven, docks at Hamburg and Willemsoord, the De Mok seaplane base and German airdromes during the night, the Air Ministry announced today.

One of the bombers was lost.

The communique follows:—

"Last night, our bombers attacked the naval base and dockyards at Kiel and Wilhelmshaven.

"Other aircraft attacked the docks at Hamburg and Willemsoord the De Mok seaplane base and several enemy airdromes.

"One of our aircraft is missing."

The Press Association said it learned authoritatively that Wilhelmshaven and Kiel were the R.A.F.'s main objectives. The British bombers were believed to have found their targets at both places in spite of "not too good" weather, the agency added. Other pilots, running into thick fog over their main targets, flew on to secondary targets.

Searchers Believe Lost Fliers Dead

East Lake, Que., Nov. 26—(CP)— Searchers today continued their hunt through a densely-timbered area in this southeastern Quebec district for three missing Royal Canadian Air Force aviators.

Among the 600 men trudging through three-foot snow drifts in sub-zero weather in search of the fliers, there were few who believed they were not dead but the search went on, R.C.A.F. officers said, because "there is always a chance that they may be alive."

The missing men, FO. J. G. Richardson, of Saskatoon, Lt. G. F. Clay of New Westminster, B.C. and Lac. H. F. Howard, bailed out of a falling R.C.A.F. Atlantic patrol plane a week ago Sunday. The plane, a Digby bomber, attempting to reach Montreal after it was prevented by fog from landing at its base after a patrol, ran out of gas and crashed near here shortly after it was abandoned by its crew of six.

The other three crew members, FO. U. J. H. Leblanc, Lac. E. J. Benoit and AC. Elmer Johnson are safe.

59,534 Tons Shipping Destroyed by Enemy In Week Ending Nov. 17

London, Nov. 26— (CP)— Seventeen British, Allied and neutral merchant ships totalling 59,534 tons were lost through "enemy action" during the week ended Nov. 17, the Admiralty reported today. This compares with a weekly average of 58,787 tons since the war began and represents a reduction of 12,000 tons from the losses of the previous two weeks.

It included 14 British vessels totalling 50,449 tons, two Allied totalling 7,769 tons and one neutral of 1,316 tons.

The Admiralty said that during the week the Germans claimed to have sunk 131,340 tons of merchant shipping and commented "this represents an exaggeration of 120 per cent on actual losses."

Naval officials said minesweeping had been "intensely complicated" by air attacks, and that after a harbor entrance or channel had been swept clear of mines, it could not be considered safe for more than 24 hours.

Therefore, they said, the task of minesweeping was virtually continuous day and night.

The past week's losses were approximately two-thirds of the weekly average since the end of May, when an intensive drive on shipping was inaugurated, they said.

Toronto School Pupils Will Not be Required To Salute Flag

Toronto, Nov. 26.—(CP) — Toronto school pupils will not be required to salute the flag, the school management committee decided yesterday. The ceremony is not stipulated in Department of Education regulations and the committee agreed that the school board has no power to add to these.

"There is one proper patriotic demonstration and that is the singing of the National Anthem", said Dr. C. C. Goldring, superintendent of Schools.

"I would rather see the flag saluated at some real ceremony once a week than have it perfunctorily done as a matter of form every day, if it is to be done".

24 SHOPPING DAYS TILL Christmas

MINOR BLAZES CAUSE OF RUNS

Two alarms were answered by the Belleville Fire Department on Monday, this being the first day since more than one week ago that the brigade had been out. Both alarms were for minor blazes, however, the first being for a pipe blaze at 176 Church St., the residence of G. B. Holgate, while the second was for a rubbish fire on College St., early last evening.

ENTIRE HARBOR COVERED WITH ICE

Fully one-half inch of ice and in some places more, covered the inner harbor on the Belleville waterfront on Tuesday morning as the result of a cold north wind over the night which sent temperatures down to register the coldest night of the season. The entire harbor, from the C.P.R. bridge to the south end of Victoria Park, was almost one solid sheet of ice.

The usual date for the freeze-over at this particular point is about one week later, and sometimes goes into the second week in December, state old-time waterfront men. Opinion is divided, however, as to whether the present sheet of ice will remain in the harbor, or whether warmer weather will cause it to disappear.

MATTER OF DAMAGES AMICABLY SETTLED

Avoiding a head-on collision with another motor car, that was emerging from a nearby gasoline station, an automobile driven by Earl O. Shaughnessy, Plainfield, collided with a parked automobile, owned by Russell Smith of the City Battery, near the intersection of Coleman and Bridge Sts., Monday afternoon.

Shaughnessy told P. C. Taylor he was forced to swerve his motor car sharply to the left to avoid a head on crash with a motor car that suddenly drove out of a nearby gasoline station. As the Shaughnessy car veered to the left it struck Mr. Smith's parked car. The matter was later amicably settled, considerable fender and body damage having resulted.

NOVEMBER PANSIES

November pansies with all the delicate coloring of their Spring prototypes were brought to the offices of The Ontario Intelligencer Monday afternoon. They were grown in the garden of Mr. David Murray, 27 Donald Street, and were exceptionally fine specimens of outdoor growth at this time of the year.

DR. WELSH ATTENDS BANQUET AT STIRLING

Dr. Harold Welsh, popular Roslin physician and member of the provincial legislature for East Hastings, made his first public appearance on Monday night since his confinement to hospital and home with a serious illness. Dr. Welsh attended the Rotary Club intertown meeting at Stirling where he heard the Hon. Gordon Conant, Ontario Attorney-General, give an address.

The doctor is recovering slowly from an attack that sent him to bed for a protracted period, but will not resume his practice for some time yet. He received the best wishes of a large number of friends at the banquet.

REPORTS MAN SEEKS BOGUS SUBSCRIPTIONS

Peterborough authorities advise that care be maintained by the public against the activities of a man who is soliciting subscriptions for a newspaper purporting to be published about the life and training of trainees now in training camps. Officers of the camps state that no such authorization has been given, nor is any paper being printed.

SAUCY YOUNGSTER NEED A PADDLING

There is a young "racketeer" in town who is mulcting Front Street pedestrians out of large shiny nickles. His pleas for funds are mixed with an independent attitude that brings snarp answers to curious "givers" who question him as to the need of the money. He generally asks for two nickles, and when queried as to what he is going to use the money for, the following conversation generally ensues:

"Gonna buy ice cream for m' sister."

"What are you going to do with the second nickel?"

"That's none of your d—— business."

FIRST COLD WAVE MAY BE ACCOMPANIED BY SNOW AND SLEET

Thermometers hovered dangerously near the zero mark early today as the first cold wave of the season sent the mercury down to 8 and 9 degrees above zero; stenographers looking for fur coats; anxious householders scurrying down cellar to look at coal bins; and coal dealers for new order forms.

Farmers, however, who depend on the swamplands for their wood supplies, greeted the more or less sudden turn in the weather with appreciative eyes. "It will freeze the water in the bottom of the swamps and establish a solid footing should snow come before a thaw" was their opinion

Advices from the northern sections of the county revealed yet lower temperatures. The lakes are skimmed with a glistening covering of ice, and the mercury flirted with the zero mark overnight.

In the city, young blades, and old ones, too, for that matter, went winter - overcoat - minded, and merchants didn't discourage them.

Department stores added to their already colorful Christmas decorations as season weather renewed memories of a certain number of shopping days to Christmas. Hardware stores featured heating accessories and placed fishing and hunting gear in winter hibernation with tennis racquets and other summer sports accessories.

However, weather reports bring hints of snow, sleet and rain in the offing, another whim of the ever-changng weatherman.

Bicycles Congest Holland's Roads

Amsterdam, (via Berlin) Nov. 26. (AP)—What this country needs is more bicycles built for two.

German authorities complain that military traffic is congested by various cycling traffic law violators, principally couples who hold hands while pedalling down the road.

In addition to cash fines, one form of punishment inaugurated since the German occupation is to deflate the offenders' bicycle tires and remove the valves.

But such deflation, although working a hardship on love, adds little to the traffic problem's solution, because there are some 4,000,000 bicycle in this country of 8,000,000 persons.

Belleville Soldier Chats With King and Queen

Takes Best Wishes of Residents of This City to Their Majesties—"Belleville's Sons in C.A.S.F." Write Letter to Paper

ARE GRATEFUL

Dear Sir:—

We are deeply grateful to you for your kindness of printing our last letter in the Ontario Intelligencer and we also extend our thanks for your very prompt reply.

Well, the boys here are feeling fine and we hope that our relatives and friends in Belleville are the same, as it is so seldom we hear from home that we often worry about our friends in Canada. We hope in the future, however, that our friends will cheer us up by writing oftener. It is raining out and cold here today, but with hope we'll soon be through it.

Only Jimmy Archer has had to go to the hospital so far. We have our own Canadian hospitals here, also our doctors and nurses are Canadian. They are all from Western Canada with the exception of one, who is from Kingston, and they all treat us fine. Jimmy is at present in a rest camp and has had a pretty hard go of it, but three weeks' rest in the hospital is just like going on a holiday.

The hospital in which Jimmy has been invalided is a Red Cross hospital but better known as the Lady Astor Hospital and it is there that we get the free smokes and sweets which are sent from Canada. These free smokes and sweets are sure a great help to us here and we shall certainly do our part on this side of the sea and elsewhere.

We attend numbers of shows and also, of course, have our sports. We have been up to London and will never forget the Royal Palace as almost all of us have been there and have drunk toasts to the King and the Queen. Windsor Castle is sure some place and so is the great London Bridge.

Jimmy Archer has talked with the King and while doing so remembered the people of Belleville to him. On another occasion he spoke with the King and Queen. So three cheers for Jimmy, he certainly has nerve and plenty of it. We miss him here while he is in the hospital but he has now only about one week to stay and then we'll be all back together again.

Private Jimmy Archer, somewhere in England with his unit, who took the best wishes of the people of Belleville to Their Majesties the King and Queen.

Well, this has been a very happy day for us here. I am going to see Jimmy Archer tonight and will take him the copy of the Belleville paper.

Wishing you all the best luck possible, we remain your Belleville sons of the C.A.S.F.—Art Munns, C. Styles, G. Brant, G. Cook, J. Dracup, B. Anderson, Calbury Brothers, G. Yorke, B. Boyd and J. Archer.

P.S.—We are enclosing a picture of Jimmy Archer and hope to send more of the other boys soon. Many thanks to you and to all the staff of the paper.

Inventor of U. S. Bombsight To Remain Unknown to Public

Authorities Refuse to Reveal Identity Lest Life be Endangered

'SIGHT' VERY ACCURATE

Washington, Nov. 26—(AP)—The "Mr. X" who developed the No. 1 United States military secret—the jealousy guarded, high accuracy bombsight—is being shielded so carefully, it was learned today, that authorities decline to reveal his identity lest his life be endangered.

"Mr. X" is the man responsible for the instrument known as the "Norden bombsight". Although not a navy man, he worked closely with that department for 15 years in perfecting the invention.

Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, spoke of the secret device as the "Norden Bombsight" when he emphasized last week that it would not be part of the equipment on the giant long range bombing planes just being released for sale to Britain.

The army chief made a pointed distinction between the Norden sight and an earlier instrument, the Sperry bombsight. The Sperry sight, he disclosed, had been made available to the British.

Gen. Marshall, said that the "Norden" development had been adopted as standard equipment for United States army and navy bombers, superseding the Sperry instrument.

Until Marshall used it, the name "Norden" had been generally unknown. Efforts to obtain additional information, however, met an official wall of silence. Although the secret sight was developed originally for the navy, department officials refused to disclose the inventor's first name, initials or whereabouts.

"Do you think an effort might be made to kidnap him and extort the secret?" one was asked.

"It might be", he replied.

One familiar with the sight's performance said that it was an exaggeration to say, as some reports have had it, that the sight could plump a bomb into a pickle barrel unerringly, from the altitude of 20,000 feet. He asserted, however, that a small group of bombers equipped with the Norden device could spread a deady bomb "pattern" over a small target from a great altitude. Pattern bombing is used, it was explained, to offset the slight margin of error caused by varying air currents that bombs encounter as they drop.

Rank of Corporal May Be Created In O.P.P. Force

Toronto, Nov. 26.—(CP)—Creation of the rank of corporal in the Ontario Provincial Police is under consideration, Attorney-General Gordon Conant announced today. Such a rank would be given on merit and seniority to officers in posts where more than two Provincial constables are located.

At present the Provincial force has sergeants and inspectors but no intermediate rank between the constables and sergeants. Mr. Conant said this system is not very satisfactory, citing the example of the post at Kirkland Lake which has four men who are required to report to headquarters at Haileybury. "In police or military work there should always be a commanding officer when there are more than two men concerned", he added.

Declines to Control Prices of Turkey And of Caviar

London, Nov. 26—(CP) — Lord Woolton, Minister for Food, declared today "It's not my business to control luxuries" and declined to take a regulatory interest in the prices of turkey and caviar.

"It's my business," he said, "to control the price only of those things essential to the life of the nation."

CHARGE FRAUD AND MISREPRESENTATION

Walkerton, Ont., Nov. 26 (CP).—Charges of fraud and misrepresentation were laid today against Jason Bedford, grey-haired 74-year-old resident of Exeter, alleged to have toured the district in a Canadian military uniform soliciting funds. Police said that Bedford had no connection with any military unit.

$1,150 Surplus Shown For Trenton in First Ten and Half Months

Trenton, (Special) —Nov. 26.—The financial statement of the Corporation for the Town of Trenton, recently released by the Town Clerk reveals that there is a surplus of $1,150.52 for the first ten and a half months of this year.

This surplus remains in the treasury although the town was put to the extra expenditure of installing traffic lights costing $1,244.30 at the corners of Dundas Street and Front Street and also at Dufferin Avenue and Dundas Street. There was also the extra cost of installing a water main to the Hinde and Dauche Company costing approximately $700.00. These costs were in addition to the levy for current expenses.

Much Speculation on Election

The forthcoming municipal elections have the men on the street, in the stores and around the stoves guessing with neither candidate for the mayoralty seat being picked as the winner.

Many predict that Mayor O. "Buster" Alyea will be returned for his second term, while many predict that ex-Mayor Harry Cory will be returned to office. The two men met during the election of last year, but at that time a third candidate was in the field. Mayor Alyea's majority last year was 62 over Mr. Cory. The third candidate received almost 400 votes and it will be the balance of these votes that will probably swing the election.

The Mayor and Council elected this year will be returned for a two-year term or the duration of the war.

Gripping Picture Of Civilians in War

"The Warning," a half-hour film running at the McCarthy Theatre, shows how British civilians were prepared to meet German air raids. Here are demonstrated in all their thoroughness the services which guard the civilian population, warn of raids, rescue the people when they fall victims of raids, fight fires, patrol highways guard health and clear up debris, and keep communications open.

The picture indicates British thoroughness at its best. This thoroughness is an essential element in the spirit which makes it possible for the people to laugh at the Hun invaders and foil them.

"The Warning," is dramatic, it opens with the threat of war and with the coming of enemy bombers. It is directed with great skill and is illustrated with the most vivid of documentary realism. It shows air raiders and defence squadrons, anti-aircraft defences at work.

Weese and Barber To Contest Reeveship In Ameliasburg Twp.

Nomination meeting at Ameliasburg was largely attended Friday afternoon. Everyone seemed interested and close attention was given all the speakers.

Reeve Howard Weese, who will seek re-election, spoke at some length, stating in a clear manner a complete record of the council's work in the interest of the ratepayers during the past year. The Reeveship will be contested by James Barber. Deputy-Reeve Alf. Dymond spoke of his work during the year at the County Council, Picton. He will run again as Deputy-Reeve and will be opposed by Councillor Earl Onderdonk.

Ross Burr, Councillor, was heard briefly on the work of the township that he had been chiefly interested in during the year. He will run again for councillor. Arza Pulver, I. Nightingale and Harry Redner will also run as councillors.

Councillors Gerald Anderson and Earl Onderdonk were also heard during the afternoon. Their remarks were mainly of an interrogatory nature. Gerald Anderson withdrew from running for office.

Ashton Sills, township secretary-treasurer gave the financial report of the year's work of the township, and acted as chairman after nominations were taken by the Clerk Fred File.

Nominations for Northern Twps.

Police Blotter

Federal Police of the United States are seeking the assistance of the R.C.M.P. in the possible locating of Robert Neill Megaw of New York City who is suffering from a mental ailment and has disappeared from his home.

Constables Wm. Beatty of the local detachment of the R.C.M.P. gave Megaw's description as being a young man of 20 years of age, standing 5 feet 10 1-2 inches tall and weighing about 160 pounds. He has brown hair and blue eyes and a noticeable scar beneath his chin.

Excessive Speed Charged

City police, while on patrol last night, apprehended Phillip J. Connors, Belleville, on a charge of driving a motor car at an excessive rate of speed on East Dundas Street shortly after midnight. John Thompson, Mountain View, was also stopped by the police while driving his truck in the downtown area. Upon investigation it was alleged that Thompson's car was being operated with defective brakes and charges were preferred in this case also. Both men were permitted their liberty to appear in police court on Friday.

Gasoline Stolen

Charles Miles, Belleville, complained to the police that a radiator cap and three gallons of gasoline had been stolen from his parked automobile in a Pinnacle Street parking lot on Saturday. The matter was not reported until Monday night, however.

Only eight transients appeared at the police station seeking shelter last night, despite the sudden drop in the temperature making out-of-doors slumber a practical impossibility.

HALF-HOLIDAY BY-LAWS PASSED AT LAST MEETING

By-Laws Already to be Ratified but Cannot be Passed Until Certain Time

OTHER BUSINESS

The by-laws granting a half-holiday for ten months of the year to the various groups in the city are ready for ratification by the City Council excepting that of the Grocers' Group, which is in the checking stage, but the members were informed by the City Clerk that the by-laws could not be passed longer than two weeks and not less than one week before the by-laws were to come into effect, at the regular meeting of the Council held on Monday night. The by-laws will be passed at the last meeting of the Council for 1940 and will come into effect on the first Wednesday in January, 1941.

Report Received

A report by the committee appointed to investigate the parking on Pinnacle Street was tabled in the Council with certain recommendations, which the members adopted and which the City Engineer was instructed to carry out. The report of the committee is herewith given,—

November 20th., 1940.

His Worship Mayor Thompson and Aldermen of the City Council, Belleville, Ontario.

Re: Pinnacle Street Parking.

Gentlemen:

Your committee appointed to consider the request for no parking along the west side of Pinnacle Street between Riggs Garage and Victoria Avenue beg to report as follows:

On Tuesday, November 19th, we inspected the area in question and would recommend that five "no parking" signs be erected to restrict the parking of vehicles between, First, the south driveway of Dr. Noble's property near Riggs Garage and the main entrance to the doctor's office near Campbell Street; Second, from the north line of Campbell Street to a point 30' northerly to provide a clearer view of oncoming traffic emerging from Campbell Street; and Third, between two signs erected in front of the Thompson residence, said two signs to be set approximately 50' apart. The construction and installation of the five signs will amount to approximately $13.00.

We would also recommend the removal of a section of pavement curbing, as requested by Mr. Harold Sanders, for a distance of 50' in front of the Belleville Sargeant Plant to provide a space for large transport trucks close to the sidewalk and out of the line of traffic while unloading and re-loading merchandise, etc. at this factory. Crushed stone will be placed in the levelled boulevard as a roadway surface during the winter months. This work will cost approximately $20.00.

Yours truly,

A. M. Kennedy, Chairman of Fire; H. Rollins, Chairman of Public Works; Charles A. Mott, City Engineer.

Report Tabled

Another committee appointed to investigate the request of George K. Graham respecting an adjustment of taxes in previous years gave their report to Council and it was adopted. Following is the report,—

November 25, 1940.

Report of Committee Re: Graham Taxes.

Your Committee have gone into this question very carefully and as a committee in view of the City Solicitor's opinion the committee feel that this Council have no authority to make any adjustment in this claim.

From further information obtained from the City Solicitor during our deliberations the committee is of the opinion that this is a matter solely for the Court of Revision to which application for a hearing might be made by Mr. Graham under Section No. 125 of the Assessment Act.

Respectfully Submitted.

H. J. Armstrong, J. E. Logan, H. J. Clarke.

Under the heading of motions Alderman Pringle sought to get suspension of the rules to introduce a motion, "That should George K. Graham make application to the Court of Revision for adjustment for the year's 1938-39 or for the cancellation or reduction of the taxes for the above mentioned years against his property at 365 Front Street, they assume jurisdiction under Section 125 (C) of the Assessment Act or such section as may be appropriate and render such decision as to them may seem fair and just having regards for all the circumstances." The member failed to gain the suspension of the rules. Aldermen Harvey, Jeffrey, Kennedy, Allin voted against the suspension with Rollins, Logan, Armstrong, Clarke, Butler and Pringle voting for, but there not being a three-quarter majority the motion could not be introduced Immediately Ald. Pringle gave notice of motion and a straight majority will carry the motion at the next meeting.

Turn on Lights

The Christmas lights will be turned on on November 29th and continue through the month of December, according to a recommendation passed. J. C. McCarthy was sold a piece of property for $200 and Len Fozard was also the purchaser of a lot at the corner of William and Bridge Street east at a price of $600, the purchaser agreeing to erect a house on the property within a year at a cost of $4,000 to $5,000. The City Engineer was given permission to repair some of the roofs of property now owned by the Corporation. A new Dodge truck was purchased from C. R. Clapp for $890 with a trade-in allowance of $390 allowed for the truck now owned by the city.

Frank Sparks was again given the contract to keep the snow removed from the city streets at the same price as last year. A new contract will be drawn and ratified by the Corporation. S. H. Wannamaker purchased the property on Cannifton Road for $800 cash and an agreement was ordered covering the purchase. The public meeting will be held on Friday night as usual at which time the candidates for offices will address the electorate. Ald. Allin requested that the brief prepared by the City Solicitor and presented the hearing when the Municipal Board visited the city with respect to the widening of the North Front Street bridge be given in detail so that the citizens might know the action the Corporation took on this question. Ald. Rollins suggested that the C.N.R. be asked to place lights on the bridge but Ald. Allin explained that the Board had stated that the bridge was the "baby" of the city and if anything was done, the city would have to do it. Ald. Allin suggested "Narrow Bridge" signs be placed at each end of the bridge and reflectors placed on the bridge and these suggestions may be implicated. Only one by-law was passed which was an agreement between the city and F. H. Hayward for purchase of city property.

634 Samples of Cheesemakers' Art Will Be on Display at Exhibition

Prize Cheese From All Over Canada Will be Judged To Win $1,200 in Cash Awards-Record Broken for Large Number of Exhibits

SPLENDID PROGRAM HAS BEEN ARRANGED

Gleaming in all their golden beauty, six hundred and thirty-four outstanding samples of the Canadian cheesemaker's art, will vie for titular honors when the British Empire Dairy Show and Cheese Convention gathers here on December 2nd, 3rd and 4th.

There will be new cheese and old cheese. Big cheese and small cheese. From the far-flung parts of the Dominion they will come, in quest of the title of the champion cheese of the Empire. And Ontario's honor and top-ranking spot held by this province for the past decade will be at stake.

From the white neatly-kept factories of Quebec will come serious threats to Ontario's outstanding manufacturers. From the Western Counties will come the cheese that has been a large contributing factor in keeping Canada's cheese, the choice of the world markets.

On their sides will be placed the handsome red-white and blue insignia of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers Association, sponsors of the Dairy Show, adopted this year. The colorful slogans will be in direct keeping with the patriotic color scheme, which professional decorators will garb the City Hall and Market Rooms where the exhibition will be displayed.

Cash prizes amounting to nearly $1,200 will be offered.

Outstanding cheesemen, dairymen and agricultural from the provincial and federal department of agriculture will deliver addresses. There will be a banquet on the evening of Wednesday, Dec. 4th at which not only distinguished speakers will go into action but the newly-elected Ontario Dairy Queen will receive her crown and the homage of her loyal "subjects."

The Dairy Show and Cheese Exhibition will be by far the most elaborate since its inception, four years ago. The entry list is not only an imposing one, but has broken all records of the association. Last year 500 entries competed. This year that number is increased to 634.

Outstanding Dairymen to Attend

Included among the speakers are such outstanding men as Joseph Burgess, Chief Grading and Market Services, Ottawa; F. T. Hart, Inspector Weights and Measures, Belleville; H. L. Waters, Montreal; Dr. A. L. Gibson, Supt. Eastern Dairy School, Kemptville; Geo. Gardiner, President Ontario Cheese Producers' Association, Seeley's Bay; O. E. Lackner, Director of Dairying, Toronto; Prof. W. H. Sproule, O. A. C., Guelph; H. B. Sandwith, Chief Dairy Instructor, Kingston; E. G. Hood, B.S.A., Chief Dairy Research, Ottawa; Thos. J. Hicks, Montreal; J. F. Singleton, Associate Director, Marketing Services, Ottawa; Oscar Boisvert, Inspector Dairy Branch, Quebec; L. C. Roy, Supt. Agriculture, Eastern Canada for the C.N.R., Montreal and others.

A special speaker will be Dr William T. Allen, Federal Representative of Agriculture in the United Kingdom, recently arrived from England. The guest speaker at the banquet will be the Rev. William J Johnstone.

Delegates will be formally welcomed by His Worship Mayor G. E. Thompson, Warden J. L. Churcher of Hastings County and Sam J. Anderson, resident of the Cheese Makers' Association.

The banquet, at which a fine program of entertainment will be given will also be the scene of the presentation of the cash prizes and handsome silver trophies. Many business organizations and county associations have donated trophies and money, awards. Prize winners lists will be posted in the Exhibition Rooms at one o'clock on Monday, Dec. 2nd.

Commencement Exercises At Madoc High School Held

Madoc, November 25—One of the largest crowds ever to attend Commencement Exercises in Madoc was in attendance at the Madoc High School Auditorium on Friday evening, November 22, when graduation diplomas and proficiency prizes were awarded to successful students of the school. A short address by G. L. Thain, B. A., Principal of the High School, opened the program, after which the school orchestra, directed by Miss F. A. Phelan, delighted the audience with the rendition of a popular number.

Proficiency prizes of two dollars worth of War Savings Stamps were awarded to the following pupils: Highest aggregate, Grade IX, donated by C. N. Whytock: Madeline Palmer; Highest aggregate, Grade X, by F. C. Naylor, Doris Palmer; Grade X, French, by Miss F. A. Phelan, Prudence McIntosh; Grade IX, Business Practice, by W. E. Connor, Verna Embury; Grade IX, British History, by A. C. Anderson, Jean Love; Grade XII, Geometry, by Miss E. E. MacDermid, Fay Fleming; Grade XI, Canadian History, by Miss L. West, Lorne Keene; Grade XII, Chemistry, by G. L. Thain, Margaret White; Grade XII, French, by T. E. Burnside, Hubert Harris; Grade XIII, Literature, by Dr. Eagleson, Verna Stevenson.

Diplomas Awarded

Graduation diplomas were awarded to Leona Blakely, Douglas Blue, Eric Dafoe, Fay Fleming, Frank Ferguson, Elizabeth Haggerty, Hubert Harris, Thomas Hawthorne, Hilda Kilpatrick, William McBain, Margaret O'Connell, Ruby Parks, Margaret Pigden, Verna Stevenson, Wilfred Thompson, June Walker, Margaret White, Douglas Wylie.

Proficiency Trophies

The Proficiency Trophies were won by the following: The Charles Johnston Trophy, Lee Churcher, Grade VIII; Dr. Grant Fraser Trophy, Hubert Harris, Grade XII; George West Trophy, Doris Broad, Grade XI; Mel Caverly Trophy, Keith McCoy, Boys' champion. All proficiency prizes, diplomas, certificates and proficiency trophies were presented by Chas. Whytock, a member of the school board, in the absence of the chairman of the board, Dr. Eagleson.

The program consisted of a military dance, directed by Miss L. West and choral verse speaking by Grade IX pupils, which was followed by a laughing song. Two vocal renditions by a double mixed quartette, directed by Miss L. West, and other selections by the school orchestra were much enjoyed. A French song 'A La Chaire Fontaine' won the approval of the audience, as did a gymnastic display, directed by Mr. A. C. Anderson.

A one act comedy "Rich Man, Poor Man" staged by school pupils under the direction of Miss Edith MacDermid, brought the Commencement program to a close. The pupils taking part in the play were: Doris Broad, Helen Downey, Everett Harrison, Betty Haggerty, Fay Fleming, Doreen Bassett, Joanne Tosh, Audrey Smith, Ted Poulter, Douglas Wiley, June Walker and Evelyn Moore.

Foxboro Orangemen Hold "At Home"

Loyal Orange Lodge No. 3, and Royal Black Preceptory No. 382, Foxboro held an "at home" to their families and friends on Tuesday, Nov. 19, in the Sunday School parlors of the United Church, with Sir Knight M. C. Reynolds, Grand Master of the Grand Black Chapter of Eastern Ontario, presiding. It was a decided success.

Community singing was led by Mr. Frank Tummon with Miss Tummon at the piano. Inspiring addresses were given by Rev. Mr. Cook and Rev. Bros. McDonald, Beazer and Mercer. A lengthy program was rendered consisting of two readings by Miss Marion Daniels; songs by Mr. Frank Tummon and Bernice McCaughan and Betty Elder. Music was furnished by Wagner's Orchestra and Messrs. Rombough and Demill with Miss Myrtle Hubble at the piano.

The chairman gave a short account of the early history of L.O.L. No. 3, referring to the late Bro. Stephen Fulton being the first Worshipful Master and holding that office for six years. The lodge was instituted fifty-three years ago. Bro. Fulton's two daughters, Mrs. Lillian Gowsell of Foxboro and Mrs. Blanche Murphy of Vancouver, were in attendance and were asked to stand when they were given a great ovation, to which Mrs. Murphy very fittingly replied. Refreshments were served and the evening's entertainment was closed with singing God Save the King.

Chicago Livestock Exposition May Set New Record

Chicago, Nov. 25 (AP)—Entry statistics proved today that the 41st International Livestock Exposition Nov. 30 to Dec. 7 would continue the big farm show's virtually annual custom of breaking its own records.

Manager B. H. Heide said the exposition would have its broadest geographical spread this year, entries for the stock show and the 22nd grain and hay show combined having come from 36 states and five Canadian provinces, Alberta, British Columbia, Ontario, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

The war had a reserse effect on Canadian participation, he said. Instead of fewer Canadian entries and exhibitors there will be at least as many and perhaps more than usual. There were no important Canadian shows this year because of the war, so Dominion stockmen and grain growers apparently were determined to show in at least one big agricultural exposition, the International.

The biggest single judging assignment went to Canada, too, this year when J. Charles Yule of Cairstairs, Alta., was selected to judge steers, finishing only when he awards the purple ribbon for the grand champion steer, considered the choicest award of the show.

A week ahead of the opening, exposition officials encountered trouble finding room in the huge amphitheatre for all the animals entered. Heide said there would be at least 13,000 cattle, horses, sheep and swine even though two breeds of cattle, milking Shorthorns and Red Polled, were eliminated this year. In 1939 there were 13,332 head.

Accent on youth is more than an idle phrase at the International, what with the junior feeding and judging contests and the 19th 4-H Club Congress which brings representatives of 1,300,000 boys and girls from most of the states.

Exposition exhibitors will take away $100,000 in prizes and realize about $1,000,000 from sales of animals. The public will see, besides the animal blue bloods and prize crops, 12 horse shows, sheep heading exhibitions, a national championship sheep shearing contest and displays of how to buy, cook, carve and serve all manner of meat.

OCTOBER MOTOR FATALITIES IN BRITAIN TOTAL 1,012

London, Nov. 25—(CP)—Transport Minister J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon said today that British motorists are doing some "very bad driving" when the first nightly air raid alert sounds and warned them to be more careful.

"Somethng is very wrong," he said in a message to drivers, since accidents increased while the number of vehicles on the road decreased.

The number of motor vehicle fatalities in Britain in October was 1,012, compared to 920 in October, 1939, but the number resulting from the blackout fell from 565 to 501.

Parliament Passing Laws Should Assume Blame for Enforcing Same Says Conant

Attorney General of Ontario Addresses Combined Rotary Club Meeting at Stirling

DISCUSSES LAW

The Parliament or Government passing laws or regulations concerning defences which involve fundamental principles or controversial issues, should assume the responsibility, or more correctly, the blame for enforcing such laws and regulations, the Hon. Gordon Conant, Attorney-General of Ontario, declared in Stirling Monday night.

Speaking before two hundred Belleville, Trenton and Campbellford Rotarians and their guests at an inter-club meeting in the Stirling Community Hall, the Attorney-General said, "Justice must be administered and laws and regulations enforced no matter by what jurisdiction they are passed, but the proceedings should be instituted by the Dominion authorities and their responsibility for such proceedings should be evident throughout."

The British North American Act, the distinguished speaker pointed out, provides that the Provinces shall have jurisdiction over the administration of justice, but there has never been any definite agreement as to what this involves and how far it extends

"A very loose practice has grown up," he charged, "whereby the provinces enforce certain, and in fact, most of the Dominion laws and regulations, but not all of them."

New Alignment May Help

A new alignment in the field of administration of justice and a clarification of the law enforcement responsibilities of the respective jurisdictions are required. The recommendation of the Sirois-Rowell Commission as to regular Dominion-Provincial conferences with a permanent secretarial staff might provide the means of meeting the situation, Mr. Conant said. In any event a clear-cut and decisive allocation is needed, based not upon the situation in 1867, but upon the requirements and exigencies of a nation which has far outdistanced anything that was ever dreamed of by the Fathers of Confederation."

Quoting a paragraph from the British North America Act, namely, "The administration of justice in the Province including the constitution, maintenance and organization of provincial courts, both of civil and of criminal jurisdiction, and including procedure in civil matters in these courts," the Attorney-General stated that out of this paragraph has risen an 'anomalous situation"—the anomaly of legislation enacted by the Parliament and regulations passed by the Government of Canada, which the Attorney-General of the Province is expected to enforce."

"This situation is not only anomalous," he said, "but unfair in the results and particularly the stigma that attaches to a Provincial Attorney-General for endeavoring to enforce certain types of Dominion legislation and regulations."

Sir John A. Macdonald, one of the Fathers of Confederation, the speaker declared, described the B.N.A. as "a mere skeleton and a frame work which would not tie us down." Nothwithstanding these dicta, the Act has, in fact, become rigid and has none of the flexibility which those who prepared it intended it should have.

Scope Constantly Changing

The scope of Parliament is constantly changing, he continued, and the problems which face them today were no more envisioned in 1867 than were the plane or radio. "It is virtually impossible to meet the problems of the machine and industrial age with the legislation of the horse and buggy days."

At the time of Confederation, the offences in the minds of the legislators were "common-law" ones such as murder, robbery, theft, etc. As to these and similar offences, no difficulty arises, but under modern civilization with its manifold complexities many laws were passed creating 'statutory" or special offences, such as loitering in the vicinity of a protected place or premises used for essential purposes; an employer to declare a lockout and an employee to go on strike prior to or during a reference of a dispute to a conciliation board, or for an employer to entice an employee away from another employer. All these are regulations dealing with fundamental principles.

"I want to make this perfectly clear," Attorney-General Conant told the clubmen, "that I am not offering any criticism whatsoever of such legislation or regulations, but I certainly do not think it is "fair or reasonable to expect the Attorney-General of a Province to assume the responsibility, or to put it bluntly, take the blame for enforcing such laws and regulations."

Difficult in Enforcement

"It is not difficult to prepare and pass such laws and regulations," he continued, "but the difficulty inevitably and invariably arises in the enforcement. And without adequate enforcement, a law is not only futile but brings into discredit all other laws and regulations."

"The person affected by the enforcement of any law or regulation invariably blames—and I do not think there is a better word— the jurisdiction and the official enforcing the law."

Quoting examples, the speaker stated that "we have ample and elaborate laws in Canada against lotteries—laws passed by the Dominion Government. The Province has absolutely nothing to do with the enactment, amendment or repeal of such laws."

"I hope all within the sound of my voice, will bear this in mind. But—if the Attorney-General of this Province were to 'crack down' on all service club car lotteries, bingo games, and other similar activities, who do you suppose would be blamed? Would it be the Dominion Parliament? There is no doubt about the answer. It would be the Attorney-General."

Blamed on Attorney-General

"I am equally certain," Mr. Conant continued," "from a very recent experience, that the raiding of gambling resorts is blamed on the Attorney-General. In the recent episode and all the stuff, that was in the newspapers, I have not seen a single reference to the fact, that the law making gambling resorts illegal, is the responsibility of the Dominion Parliament. No, the monster with the horns and the spiked tail is the poor old Attorney-General."

Prior to this theme, the distinguished speaker paid tribute to the Belleville Rotary Club which he said, "was one of the finest in Ontario." It would be a sad day for the world, he added, if Rotary were abolished as it is in some countries of Europe.

Attorney-General Conant was appropriately introduced by Harold Carr, M.P.P., Northumberland and the appreciation of the joint clubs expressed by R. D. Arnott, M.P.P., West Hastings. Dr. Harold Welsh, M.P.P., Hastings East was also a guest, and received the well-wishes of a host of friends on his gradual recovery from a recent serious illness. Other guests included Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson, Inspector Frank Gardner, O.P.P., Belleville, W. H. Ireland, and a number of other political stalwarts of both parties.

In keeping with club traditions, the "fine-box" was passed and each member assessed 25 cents. As a result, the amount of $40.55 was handed to the Stirling Red Cross through President I. G. Hefkey, President of the Belleville branch of this society.

Percy McGuire Presides

President Percy McGuire, of the Belleville Club was in the chair, and Presidents Jim Holmes, and Steve McGuire of the Trenton and Campbellford clubs were introduced to the gathering. President Ernest Sarles of the Stirling Community Club, who were present in a body, was also presented to the clubmen.

Appreciation of the fine repast tendered by the ladies of Stirling was voiced by Ex-Mayor Jamieson Bone of Belleville. The musical part of the program was in charge of Jack Deacon, and Leo Riggs. The former not only led the community singing but favored his audience with solos as only Jack Deacon can sing them. Charles Dolan was again in fine fettle and his part of the entertainment added a fine touch.

The entire program was in charge of Inter-Club Committee Chairman Howard Clarke of the Belleville Club.

BEAT FOOD RATIONING SYSTEM

Berlin, Nov. 25 (AP)—About 100 Germans beat the food rationing system today when a truck spilled 200 apples on Berlin's main street. Hundreds of pedestrians ran into the street and scrambled for the fruit.

Some got three or four apples. Some got one or two. An Associated Press correspondent was among 50 who "also ran" and got none.

EXPERIENCED OPERATORS NEEDED

Ottawa, Nov. 25 (CP)—The Royal Canadian Air Force is in immediate need of a large number of experienced tractor operators for maintenance of some 100 airdromes of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, it was announced today.

Felt Tired, Rundown Stomach Out of Order

Relates How Syntona Ended Gas, Cramps, Acidity, Nausea, Headaches and Dizzy Spells. Appetite Improves and He Sleeps Better

All who suffer from disorders of the stomach, liver, kidneys or bowels, or any of their long train of distressing symptoms will be interested in the experience of Mr. William Sanger, Glanford Station, Ontario, as reported recently. Read his sincere statement:

"In the last four or five years I suffered terribly with stomach gas and indigestion. I felt so rundown and miserable that I often could not work at all. Food I ate just fermented and caused a burning feeling and sour liquids would rise right up into my throat. Often I couldn't keep any food in my stomach at all. I would get dizzy, bilious spells accompanied by floating spots before my eyes and throbbing headaches.

"I had tried all kinds of medicine, but nothing was helping me. Then my boss' wife persuaded me to try Syntona, and I have found it excellent. It helped my stomach and bowels right from the first, and now after a few weeks, I am feeling just fine again. I enjoy my meals I sleep well and I have more energy. I don't get those awful headaches and dizzy spells any more and my whole system feels more healthy than it did in years."

MR. WILLIAM SANGER

If you, who read this, suffer like Mr. Sanger did, make up your mind to begin taking Syntona today. See how much better you, too, can be feeling in just a short time.

GREEKS INSPIRE NATIONS

Surprise after surprise has been given the entire world by the Greeks, surprise to the Italians whom they have defeated in a continuous series of battles and to the rest of the world which has been very careful not to exaggerate the importance of the events with the possible result of having underestimated what the Greeks have really achieved. More and more it is being shown that not only have the Greeks shown the spirit of their race in delivering terrific blows against the Italian army but these victories of the Greeks and these crushing defeats of the Italians are having a very potent influence on the course of events. The Free Franch have been greatly cheered and inspired by the news from the eastern end of the Mediterranean for a large part of the French Empire lies on the south of that sea. Italy is discredited, her prestige sinking to the lowest it has occupied in generations.

The masterly strategy of the Greek command, the courage and resourcefulness of the Greek soldiers, the naval and aerial activity of the British against southern Italy with the heavy smashes at Italy's sea-power at the battle of Taranto have all combined to affect the phase of the Mediterranean war. Prime Minister Churchill spoke encouragingly of the outlook in Egypt.

The steadfastness of the Greeks against the threat by Mussolini has stood democracy in good stead. The decision of the Greeks to resist him at once placed at the use of the British as their ally the important base of Crete and allowed the British an opportunity at Corfu and in the Strait of Otranto and in the east Mediterranean.

Greece has been strategically important because the Dodecanese Islands have been the scene of much Fascist activity for some years. It was said yesterday that the Greek command may wrench Albania from the Italians and that the British may look after the Dodecanese Islands.

Greece has had the ability to see her importance in the world of democracies and she was clearsighted enough to know the menace which Italy along with Germany meant for the free states. If any nation is determined to live its own national career it is Greece. That is the very good reason she is on the British side and that she is fighting Italy.

May the great events which she has performed and inspired continue to roll up against the foe.

MR. CHURCHILL ON PARLIAMENT

Prime Minister Churchill was eloquent on the institution of Parliament last week. He spoke in majestic words of the "time-honored ceremonial and procedure" as carrying "the balm of confidence and certainty." "We feel the inspiration of the old days and feel too, the splendor of our political and moral inheritance."

"Today, in inaugurating this new session of parliament, we proclaim the faith and sincerity of our resolve to keep vital and active, even in the midst of our struggle for life, even under fire of the enemy, those parliamentary institutions which have served us so well and which the wisdom and civic virtue of our forbears shaped and founded and which have proved themselves the most flexible instruments for securing, amid unceasing change and progress, that while they throw open the portals of the future they carry forward the traditions and glories of the past, which in this solemn moment of world history, are at once our proudest assertion of British freedom and the expression of unconquerable national will."

These great liberties won and enshrined in the institution of Parliament have been yielded by the people only for a short time. The Prime Minister goes on:

"Immense surrenders of our hard-won liberties have been made by the British people, in order in time of war to serve better the cause of freedom and fair play for which they will keep nothing back. Parliament stands the custodian of those ancient liberties and its most sacred duty will be to restore them in their fulness when victory has crowned our exertions and perseverance."

Given highest powers of any Britisher in history, Winston Churchill will use them only for the time being and he reminds the Parliament of its duty to restore these liberties to the people at the war's end.

Mr. Churchill's spirit is the spirit of the people who have known freedom and of those who will surrender it under occasion to perform a difficult task and then resume it when the duty is performed. It is such things as this which make freedom what it is, which lends it strength to endure against the greatest obstances and finally to triumph.

HON. ERIC CROSS RELINQUISHES CABINET POST

Hon. Eric Cross who has handled the Department of Municipal Affairs and Public Welfare is retiring because the enlistment of his legal partner calls him to devote his attention to law business. These Departments now disappear, the older of the two, that of Public Welfare, having been established in 1929 with the Rev. W. G. Martin as head, David Croll following as minister. The Department included social services of Children's Aid, Old Age Pensions, Mothers'. Allowance, the School for Boys at Bowmanville and Unemployment Relief. Hon. Norman Hipel, Minister of Labor, will take over the affairs of the Welfare Department. When Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, takes over the business of Municipal Affairs, he takes over the work of a department which had to do with the government supervision of municipal finances in a number of municipalities. This department had as branch the Ontario Municipal Board which will fit into the portfolio of Public Works and Highways.

Mr. Cross, one of the younger men in the Government, who has carried through the work of the departments with, success, is now to give his time to his own business, though he remains a member of the Legislature. Mr. Cross is a native of Madoc. He took over the duties, he is now resigning, at a time when they required especial attention. Today minicipal finances are in a better condition and the great question of relief aid does not now demand the attention it used to usurp because relief lists are greatly reduced for various reasons.

TRAINMAN FALLS FROM BOX CAR

Hawkesbury, Ont., Nov. 26 (CP)—Russel Conley, 40-year-old Canadian National Railways trainmen was seriously injured Monday when he fell from a box car while his train was engaged in shunting operations here.

Railroad officials said Conley lost his balance while climbing a ladder on the side of the car. He was treated for a fractured ankle and possible internal injuries and removed to his home at Ottawa.

Conley is a native of Portland, Me.

New Canada Speaks

(Translated Extracts From Foreign Language Publications in Canada)

New Slavic Bloc

"Gazeta Katolicka" (catholic Gazette) Polish-language weekly, Winnipeg: "No stretch of imagination is required to foresee that in the course of the present war Great Britain and Poland will strengthen mutual confidence, will mutually appreciate their values and will create foundations for future pacific collaboration. Great Britain will need Poland as a factor on which she will be able to rely in the new balanced order of European nations. And Poland will need Great Britain for the realization of her political and pacifistic plans as well as for her economic reconstructions.

The present war will bring about the collapse of the influence and importance of the Romanic nations, as Italy—on account of her alliance with Germany—France — which has already abandoned her previous world position by her voluntary capitulation—and Spain — which will finally collapse after the defeat of her Rome and Berlin protectors.

In such circumstances, the Slavs, freed from their present dependence will be in a position fully to develop their vital forces and become a crystallizing centre in post-war Europe. It may also be assumed that the course of the war itself will turn Poland into the centre of a new Slavic bloc of nations that will be strong, thanks to its cultural value and its geopolitical position, bringing at the same time Great Britain and the United States into a new supreme world hegamony and a close pacific cooperation."

Agents of Stalin

"Ukrainsky Holos" (Ukrainian Voice) Winnipeg, commenting on the suppression of Ukrainian Communist organizations in Canada: We have been, for many years, warning the people of the criminal work of Moscow's agents. We have also been warning of the criminal work of Berlin's agents which differed from that of the Communists only as much as the right hand differs from the left. Exactly as the Communists were shielding themselves with the argument that they were caring for the Soviet Ukraine as the "only Ukrainian state in the world" but were taking from Moscow instructions how to serve that country, so the Nationalists (or rather Nazis) are shielding themselves with the argument that they are only thinking of the liberation of the Ukraine but are receiving from Berlin instructions how to serve that Ukraine. In this way, they are exactly in the service of Berlin as Communists are in the service of Moscow."

In a London Movie

"Zwiaskowiec", ((Alliancer), Polish-language weekly, Toronto, reprints from the London "Dziennik Polski" (Polish Daily) the following description of an evening in a London movie theatre:

Nine p.m. On the screen a bunch of gangsters is seen fighting with the police. The large hall resounds with revolver shots and with the explosion of a bomb with which the gangsters are trying to blow up a bank safe.

Suddenly the lights in the theatre die away. The screen is dark. A gentleman in a tuxedo appears on the stage and addresses the surprised crowd: "Pardon me, but tonight it has started a little earlier."

The whole audience bursts into laughter. Everyone knows what it means. The air raid alarm, which up to now used to come sharp at 9.30, was sounded this time half an hour earlier.

The gentleman in a tuxedo continues: "The sirens just went into action. The authorities recommend staying in air-raid shelters during an alarm. The show in our theatre will continue. Whoever wishes to remain here will do so at his own risk."

Not a person leaves the hall. All remain in their seats. And the hall once more echoes with gangster shots from far-away Chicago.

Bombing Has Cut British Output Citrine Says in Plea for U. S. Aid

New Orleans, November 26—(AP)—A British labor leader, appealing for "planes, planes and more planes," recently said German bombings have become so intense they are affecting "our output," and added that United States labor can defeat Germany "without firing a shot."

Sir Walter Citrine, general secretary of the British Trades Union Congress, told the American Federation of Labor convention:

"I say to you something that no British statesman has yet said: Bombing is having an effect upon our output. Speed is of the essence now as never before, because our output cannot keep upon full schedule because of the bombings."

Sir Walter said that since German bombings had rendered "practically all British eastern ports no longer usuable for large ships, we have to use the western ports."

"How long we can continue, depends not merely upon our will but also upon the will to hit back. The only thing the Nazis understand is the power to make them suffer."

He said the three aims of the British Labor Party are to prosecute the fight with "inflexible resolve," safeguard the rights of the citizenry and widen the range of the movement.

Appealing for faster production of war supplies in the United States, Sir Walter said: "American labor can conquer the Nazis without firing a shot. I want you to make your workshops the first line of defence for all democracy."

"We must place our profound duties in the factories and produce as never before, so that our friends may win this battle. Our cry is, 'Hurry, hurry, hurry, America ar/send to Great Britain all the strength she needs, so she can win quickly'."

Referring to British morale, Sir Walter said:

"When I speak of inflexible resolve I am speaking for the whole British nation. I know that our present Prime Minister, Mr. Churchill, in the eyes of many is the embodiment of the determination and doggedness of our people."

But if anything "unforeseen" should happen to Mr. Churchill, Sir Walter said, the Prime Minister would be "the first to attest that . . . the confidence of the people would be reposed in his successor as doggedly as it is in him."

Although British labor in the emergency has relinquished the right to strike, Sir Walter said it is determined to prevent bureaucracy because "we are not going to have tinpot Hitlers built up in our constitution during the course of the struggle we are making against Hitler.

"How could we haggle or argue? We had said we'd be destroyed if Nazism should succeed. When Winston Churchill took over as Prime Minister he told labor we'd have to think in terms of the next 24 hours. We can't haggle with property owners over the right to spread fortifications across their property and we can't hold up work because of differences between masons and other laborers on a project.

"Restriction of the individual is an inescapable concomitant of the war.... I am not afraid to trust the people with the exercise of power who can use that power but I demand the right to keep a vigilant eye upon them in the prosecution of the struggle to see that they do not misuse that power."

Unless democracy is intelligent enough to perceive means of speed and action, he said, it is impossible "for us to combat dictatorship."

Great Britain has never been threatened by such dangers as those now assailing it, he continued, and "never before have we had such a magnificent response from a neighbor, such as you gave us."

Denying that any aristocracy, whether of birth or wealth, has the right to rule, Sir Walter declared:

"In our country we have used the instrument of taxation to effect a very extensive redistribution of the wealth of the country. We have succeeded in putting the burdens on the backs of those the broadest to bear it."

There are only 1,000 people in Great Britain with yearly incomes exceeding $50,000, he said, and these people have an annual income approximating $900,000,000 a year.

Through taxes and death benefits, he declared, the Government takes back $800,000,000 of the $900,000,000 income.

"Out of every $50 income of the richest people of our country, $4.37 is taken in taxation," he said.

A Scot Stays With His Pal

London, (By Mail)—The story is told of how two privates of the Royal Scots escaped from their German captors last May. One was shot and died from his wound. The other safely reached a British unit. After their capture they crawled during darkness into a drain, but found that it led them farther into the enemy's line. Their only way back, they edcided, was across open country and they set off with no real cover.

In the light of dawn they were seen and machine-gunned. One of them was hit in the neck. The other bandaged him and together they continued their attempt to crawl to safety. The wounded man fainted. His friend, unable to carry him, sat by him till he died some hours later. The survivor crawled on to a canal, the bridges of which had been blown up. He swam across and, again waiting for the dark, went forward to where he believed the British to be. The sound of soldiers marching drove him to cover, but he caught a brief glimpse of them and, to his joy, found they were the Royal Irish Fusiliers. To these the Scot promptly attached himself.

FLYING FEAT.

Australian Press Union.

The feat of Aircraftsman L. G. Fuller, of the Wagga Air Training School in successfully landing two large R.A.A.F. reconnaissance planes which had become locked together after a collision, will earn a special place in the annals of the R. A. A. F. and of aviation.

It is remarkable not only for the freakish accident that made it mechanically possible to keep the planes in flight, but also, and more especially, for the serene courage of this trainee who, when it seemed that the lanes were about to go into a spin, brought them on to an even keel and then, when the other three trainees had taken to their parachutes, coolly reflected on the value of the machines, and the need, from a purely financial point of view, to try to save them.

Italian Fliers No Match for British Fighters

(By Louis Hunter)

London, Nov. 26.—(CP Cable) — Canadians played a daring part in smashing the first Italian air raid against Britain Nov. 11, accounting for at least three of the thirteen Italians brought down, it was disclosed tonight.

A Canadian flight commander from Edmonton, outlining his experiences in a British Broadcasting Corporation talk, disclosed he shot down one, and then when his ammunition ran out, he feigned three head-on attacks, making five Italian craft turn tail for their bases in France. He said the leader of another Hurricane squadron, a friend of his, also from Edmonton, "bagged a couple".

The flight commander said he sighted formations of strange planes so he did not "like to rush in baldheaded" without having a good look at them. He decided to attack when he realized they were not British.

"I singled out one enemy and gave him a burst", he said. "Immediately he went into a loop. I thought he was foxing me as I had never seen a bomber do that sort of thing, so I followed him.

"Suddenly he went down in a vertical dive. I still followed, waiting for him to pull out. Then I saw a black dot move away from him and puff like a white mushroom—some one bailing out. In the next second the bomber seemed to start crumbling up suddenly in a burst of hundreds of small pieces. They fell to the sea like a snowstorm. I must have killed the pilot. I think he fell back, pulling the stick with him, causing the loop".

The Canadian airman then piled into another dogfight with bombers, one of which plummeted past him like a flaming torch. He turned to still another dogfight with a Fiat and gave him three bursts of gunfire in quick succession. His ammunition ran out, so he decided to try to knock the enemy out of the sky scaring "the living daylight out of him".

"Just before I would have crashed into him I felt a very slight bump, but I did not see him again. Somehow I do not think he got back."

The Canadian pulled a similar trick to another Fiat trying to down a Hurricane, and also scattered a formation of three Fiats worrying another British fighter.

His only worry was when his plane started to vibrate badly, but the Canadian managed to land safely. He found six inches missing from one propeller blade and nine inches from the other.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

James W. Barton, M.D.

Saneness is Another Name for Self Control

Another physician and I were just one hole behind another couple of palyers on a golf course and were able to see their reactions to their individual strokes.

One of the players made a poor drive from the top of a hill and threw his club with all his strength after the ball.

"What would you call that reaction?", I asked my companion.

"Oh, he is just blowing off steam; there's nothing wrong with him mentally".

A little later, the other player made a poor drive, took one look at his club, which was wooden, and then broke it across his knee.

My companion remarked, "There is a man who may never need to enter a mental institution but he is not far from it. He is blaming his club for his poor driving and the fault is in himself. The one who threw the club away, didn't try to damage it".

The difference between those of us outside mental institutions and those inside is that we on the outside despite all our natural inclinations to do things that are not right (and we all have these inclinations to some extent), do our best to repress or control these inclinations and so we do not come into opposition with what is best for society in general. Nor do we blame others for our mistakes.

There are times, of course, when illness, grief, financial reverses, domestic troubles occur, and we may not be able or may not try to repress these unsocial inclinations or desires and our behaviour is such that the authorities are justified in confining us in a mental institution until we learn to behave as we should.

Very often a man or woman is trying to solve some difficulty or problem and he turns first one way and then another and then back and again forward until his mental judgment is so upset that he is unable to thing clearly and he does foolish things. Before the mind loses its clearness, the body is upset in various ways and it is correct some physical condition—indigestion, rapid heart beat, frequent desire to pass urine—that he may consult his physician. Unless he tells the physician about his mental "conflict", the physician can give him but little help.

Stewart Says—

U.S.-Mexico Deal Seen as Defence Hook-up Similar to Canada

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Central Press Canadian Columnist

Chas. P. Stewart

Whether or not Uncle Sam definitely has concluded an agreement with Mexico granting the U.S. naval and air bases in the neighboring republic's harbors and on its soil, it's about as certain as anything can be that the deal virtually is concluded.

Mexico City's story is that the bargain actually has been signed. Under-Secretary of State Sumner Welles says it hasn't been—not yet. Anyway, it's safe betting that the dicker's terms are mutually understood, even if formal signatures are lacking. Supposing that they are, there's every indication that they'll be affixed shortly.

It's to be remembered that the executive branch of the U. S. government lately for entering into what were described as amounting to international treaties without congress' approval, which constitutionally is required to validate them. Maybe that's why the state department's reluctant to admit that a compact with Mexico has been closed officially minus Capitol Hill's endorsement.

What the thing really is, according to exceptionally well posted authority is an arrangement almost identical with the mutually defensive hook-up with Canada. That is to say, we and Canada are working on a bi-lateral basis. Now Mexico's coming into the alignment, making it tri-lateral.

Three-Way Combine

It isn't at all to the prejudice of the group's relationships with the Latin-American countries south of Mexico. They'll be more than welcome to join the Yankee-Canadian-Mexican partnership. However, the U.S., the Canadians and the Mexicans geographically are an especially natural nucleus, covering the whole of North America. It's a three-cornered combination which ought to have plenty of appeal to the Central, South and insular Americas. That seems to have been the Washington, Ottawa and Mexico city governments' idea.

Well, the U.S. and the Canadians already are under the same mutually defensive roof. The certainty that Mexico's coming under it also appears to be pretty well established by President Roosevelt's assignment of Vice-President-elect Wallace to be in Mexico City Dec. 1, the date of General Manuel Avila Camacho's inauguration as President Cardenas' successor. And that isn't all. It's learned now that incoming President Camacho will visit Washington in the near future.

Henry Wallace is mentioned as a particularly suitable individual to represent the U. S. at the Camacho inauguration, because he speaks pretty good Spanish which will flatter the Mexicans.

It's unfortunate that Henry didn't study Portuguese, too, while he was about it. Spanish is okay through all of Latin America except in Brazil. Portuguese is the Brazilians' lingo, and theirs is the biggest country south of the Rio Grande, the strongest and the most populous.

The truth is that there isn't much difference between the two tongues, but the Spanish-speakers pretend that they can't understand Portuguese and the Portuguese-speakers pretend that they can't understand Spanish. They're linguistically jealous of one another. To be sure a Mexican, for instance, can understand Portuguese or a Brazilian can understand Spanish if he sees a chance to make some money out of whatever proposition you put up to him. Illustratively, I know a little Spanish myself, and in Brazil I always was able to make known my simple wants as for tobacco and food because it was obvious that I had the cash to pay for 'em. But Henry Wallace, if he goes to Brazil, will find that his Spanish won't be of much use to him.

Henry, though, isn't scheduled to visit Brazil at present, so his unfamiliarity with Portuguese won't matter.

Vargas to Visit U.S.

On the contrary, President Vargas of Brazil is due to be in Washington before long. That's part of the Pan-American program. The notion's to get the Brazilians under the Yankee-Canadian-Mexican roof likewise. Most likely we'll get 'em. And Vargas, while here, won't expect us to speak much Portuguese.

Vargas, by the way, is a dictator. He denies that he's a totalitarian, but there's a general impression that he's fascistical. I know this from an inside diplomatic source. Among sojourners in the United States is James I. Miller, a prominent Yankee news correspondent in Buenos Aires. He married a Brazilian woman, a distinguished authoress. She's not only a distinguished authoress, but also an outstanding Vargasite politically. And when she wanted a passport, to come here with her husband, she had a heck of a time getting it from the U. S. Argentine embassy, due to her supposedly fascistical leanings.

We'll be delighted to greet Vargas himself, however; we need him for our Pan-American line-up.

Caretaker Arrives On Main Duck Island To Stay the Winter

Point Traverse, Nov. 26.—Mr. Jake Drieve, Cape Vincent, N.Y., has arrived at the isolated, wind-swept Main Duck Island, 12 miles off here in the middle of Lake Ontario, to spend the winter there. This will be Mr. Drieve's seventh winter on the large island. He told the Ontario-Intelligencer's correspondent that it was just like coming back home, when he stepped ashore there a few days ago. "I have never been sick during any of my stays on the Duck, except maybe a slight cold," he said. "Last winter was the greatest snowfall on the island I had seen since I have been there." Mr. Ray Lancaster, Black Creek, stayed with Mr. Drieve on the Main Duck last winter.

Each winter, a caretaker is required to stay on the Duck, a 1,000-acre island, 40 miles west of Kingston, to care for the stock and fill the large ice house at the fishery, for the summer's supply of ice used for packing fish brought in by the commercial fishermen plying during the summer from there.

No Communication

There is no communication during the winter to the island except by radio. No sending out of messages to the mainland can be done as the only transmitting apparatus on the island is a radio beacon located in the fog station near the 80-ft. lighthouse equipped with a 100,000 candle power light, which is shut down at the close of Great Lakes navigation until the opening of lake traffic in early spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Ackerman and two small children stayed on the Main Duck during the winter of 1932-33.

Mr. Alex Taylor, Picton, spent eighteen winters on the Ducks as caretaker.

Mr. Cecil Cole, Cape Vincent, is owkner of the Main Duck, termed by Great Lakes seamen as "the graveyard of Lake Ontario."

Remain in Operation

All fog alarms and lights on Lake Ontario will remain in operation until the close of navigation, but it is understood by lighthousemen here that the Main and False Island lights may close before the termination of general navigation.

Although canals will close shortly, lake boats will operate until a "freeze-up" according to shipping companies.

Main Duck Fishermen

The fishing craft Ormond K of the Main Duck, called here over the week-end and commercial fishermen are busily engaged at that fishing colony yet. Fishermen Clarence Ostrander, Roy Brisbin and Robert and James Cory remain at the island for the fall herring fishing. Although the catches are not exceedingly heavy as yet, the fishermen expect to remain at the Ducks until the last of the month.

Good Whitefish Catches

Fishermen report that many large catches of whitefish have been taken from the shoals this fall. The heaviest lift recorded was 1,700 pounds of whitefish. Lifts of from three to six hundred pounds of whites have been also taken. Point Petre fisherman also report fair lifts.

Not since 1932 have whitefish catches been as heavy as this fall. Some net was lost in the big blow of last week.

FRANCES PERKINS SPEAKS TO LABOR

Labor Secretary of U.S. Tells A.F.L. Defence Program Demands Union Peace

New Orleans, Nov. 26—(AP)—Labor Secretary Frances Perkins told United States labor today it had a responsibility under national defence to carry out its contracts, seek an adjustment of its own family differences, avoid production delays and "thwart influences from dishonest or subversive sources."

She expressed these views about labor's role in the defence program in a speech prepared for delivery at the annual American Federation of Labor convention. It was her first speaking appearance before the A.F.L. delegates since 1936. In recent years her name had not appeared on the invitation list.

"Labor has status today as never before," she said, "and that status carries with it responsibility, responsibility to wage earners and responsibility to all the people of the United States."

"That responsibility calls for carrying out all contracts agreed upon," she added.

"That responsibility calls for vigilance in the maintenance of high standards so as to thwart influences from dishonest or subversive sources attempting to establish themselves within the labor movement.

"That responsibility calls for cooperation by labor with employers and with all responsible groups to avoid delays and interruptions—to increase production and efficiency, and to preserve and promote human welfare and labor standards at the same time in the defence program which we as a nation have undertaken."

Bancroft

Bancroft, Nov. 26.—Mr. W. E. Wiggins a patient of the Belleville General Hospital for the past two and a half weeks, returned home last week his condition being somewhat improved.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Sutherland of Madawaska, were in town Saturday and spent the week-end with the former's parents in Monteagle.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Turner and daughter of Belleville, are in town spending a few days at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Robison.

The Woman's Auxiliary of St. John's Anglican church held a rummage sale in the Community hall, Bancroft, Saturday afternoon.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Barnes passed away early Sunday morning at the Red Cross hospital, Bancroft, from an attack of pneumonia which he contracted just last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Rupert and Mr. and Mrs. James Campbell of Trenton spent the week end in Bancroft calling on relatives and friends. Mr. Rupert and Mr. Campbell being members of the Trenton Airforce.

Mrs. Charles Dunne and son, Lambert of Madawaska motored to Bancroft Sunday morning to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Allan Barnes.

The annual meeting of L.O.L. No. 624 Bancroft was held in the Orange Hall Friday evening, but owing to a poor attendance the same officers were re-elected for the ensuing year with the exception of the vacancies caused by some of the officers enlisting which vacancies will have to be filled at a later meeting.

Miss Sadies Davis of Cobalt was in town Saturday renewing acquaintances of her many friends.

The weather in this northern section of the County took on a wintery appearance Sunday evening with high winds and falling snow, however, the snow soon melted with a continuance of high winds and clearing skies temperature falling to a point of eight degrees above Monday morning.

Spanish Decree Bans Dining Late to Save Electricity

Madrid, Nov. 26—(AP)—The old Spanish custom of eating late and staying up still later was forbidden by government decree Monday night to conserve electricity.

Beginning Dec. 1, Spaniards must be through with lunch by 2.30 and with dinner by 9.30. Theatres must close by midnight and bars and night spots by 1 a.m. Private home parties cannot continue past 1.

PRIVATE MEMBERS

"We were elected to run this country, not someone called in from Vancouver and someone else from Halifax, men who could not get elected to this House no matter how they tried," Tucker asserted.

Such experts were alright as advisers, Mr. Tucker said, but he thought the Banking and Commerce committee of the House should be given an opportunity to question them and judge their capabilities.

There would be a "true democratic government," he contended, "if the representatives of the common people, through the Banking and Commerce committee of the House, were convened to investigate and report on the financing of Canada's war effort and Canada's financial assistance to Britain.

Not Ruled by Financiers

"We still have self-government in Canada, thank God. We are not ruled by the financiers; we are not ruled by the manufacturers. In any particular sphere this House is entitled to full control through its committees," he said. But too little use was being made of the private members of Parliament.

Mr. Tucker's speech, which ran 20 minutes over the regulation 40 minutes without a protest, highlighted a day in which more regard war urged for the rights and patriotic sincerity of Canadians of non-Anglo-Saxon stock, in the interests of national unity.

The wheat situation was reviewed, but not with alarm, by western members who submitted that the prime business of the moment was to prepare storage space for next year's crop. The present surplus surplus might yet prove an invaluable wartime asset, especially if Canada was stricken with another year or two of drought.

Regarding Canada's financial aid to Britain, Mr. Tucker noted with satisfaction that Canada was about to grant short-term credits to the United Kingdom pending disposal here of British-held Canadian securities.

But this was merely loaning, "quite a bit different" from what Britain did for France before France's downfall. Britain had placed at France's disposal all the sterling France needed for purchares in Britain and France had done similarly, on the understanding there would be a settlement after the war.

Asks Same Consideration

"That meant that money did not stand in the way of Britain helping France or France helping Britain," he emphasized. "And I ask that consideration be given by our government to some similar policy. Are we to be told that the limit of our assistance to Great Britain is what Great Britain is able to buy with her goods and her securities?"

He asked how these British-held securities were being sold, to what extent the British investor or British government was being protected.

The Bank of Canada, he proposed, should grant the British government a credit representing a fair price for these securities. If the resulting output of Canadian dollars threatened to result in inflation, when Canadian securities were being revested in the people of Canada, reserve requirements of Canadian banks might be increased.

The law required the banks to have $1 in Bank of Canada notes or deposits for every $20 owed to their depositors, but in practice the Bank of Canada required $1 for every $10, or twice as much as the law required. Similarly, the Bank of Canada could require them to have $1.10 or $1.15 for every $10, since it absolutely controlled the situation.

"When a great refunding transaction like this is going on, if we are going to do our duty by the Canadian people, it is incumbent on us as members of parliament to have a right to ask the financiers what is going on and ask them why it cannot be done," he submitted.

National Unity Raised

Anthony Hlynke (Ind. Vegreville) raised the national unity issue by declaring there was "no room in Canada for these who would seek to create disunity in our midst." The Defence of Canada Regulations should be made to apply to those deliberately making statements which caused dissension among the people of Canada.

Mr. Tucker endorsed Mr. Hlynke's stand, pointing to the danger of making enemies by discrimination against those in Canada who waited to be loyal and friendly. The overwhelming majority of those of foreign origin in western Canada was completely loyal to Canada and the British Empire.

At the same time, he noted a tendency on the part of many English-speaking Canadians to admit "only grudgingly outside of Quebec" the rights of French-speaking Canadians.

By the pact of Confederation Canada was a bi-lingual country. There would be no real unity if attempts were made to whittle down an agreement or to back out of it.

Marvels at Toleration

"Sometimes I have marvelled at the toleration and the willingness of French-speaking Canadians to forgive and forget the continual attempt on the part of some English-speaking Canadians to whittle down the rights they obtained at Confederation," he said.

W. G. Weir (Lib-Prog. MacDonald), agreeing with Mr. Tucker's petition for more committee activity, said the function of parliament as a medium for the feelings of the people was "fundamentally unchanged," though possibly less important than before the development of modern communications. He proposed a conference of all agricultural leaders to help advise a wheat policy. An increase in feed production was necessary to care for expanding livestock needs, he said. He suggested the production of enough supplies to last two or three years in advance, as insurance against drought.

Mildly Critical

Hon. Grote Stirling (Con. Yale) mildly criticized the government for its tardiness in reaching maximum war production. He urged recognition of several women's auxiliary organizations, especially in view of their prospective place in industry as the war proceeds.

With Ralph Maybank (Lib. Winnipeg South Centre), he foresaw a shortage of skilled labor if the government failed to do something about training workers at once.

Gordon Fraser, Conservative-Peterborough West, joined with previous speakers in urging that free transportation privileges be given to soldiers on leave. The government should give this at least on government-owned railways.

The Ontario farmer was "the forgotten man," Mr. Fraser said. Markets had been lost and protection taken away.

"East and west get all the grease but Ontario provides it," he said, referring to assistance given to agriculture by the Federal Government.

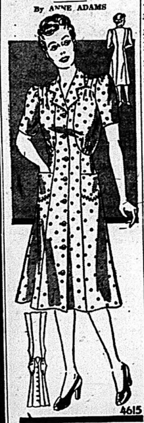
Button-Front Housedress

By ANNE ADAMS



Pattern 4615

A "must have" style for every busy housewife is the convenient button-front mode. This is an especially smart frock by Anne Adams — Pattern 4615. The curved side-front bodice sections are cleverly cut to give ease through the bust and a smooth, sleek effect at the waist. The skirt panels in front also help to slenderize, while the back is made without a waistline seam. That attractive notched collar may be in colorful contrast, or you might just outline it with ric-rac, perhaps using more ric-rac at the optional pockets and even down the button opening. Sleeves may be long or short. Do order this becoming style without delay!

Pattern 4615 is available in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50.. Size 36 takes 4 5-8 yards 35-inch fabric and 2 1-8 yards ric-rac.

Send twenty cents (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS and STYLE NUMBER.

Infant Found Lying On Floor and Money In the Crib Gone

Removing a baby from its crib and leaving the helpless infant lying upon the bare floor, sneak thieves entered the home of Mrs. J. Hammett, 156 Coleman Street, and stole a ten dollar note, which Mrs. Hammett had hidden beneath the mattress of her child's crib.

As the baby was enjoying an afternoon nap on Monday, Mrs. Hammett visited next door with a neighbor woman for a short time. Returning, Mrs. Hammett was surprised to find her baby lying on the floor in the living room, but apparently uninjured. Unable to understand how the child could fall from its crib without sustaining injury, Mrs. Hammett suddenly remembered a $10.00 note which she had hidden beneath the crib mattress. Investigations proved her suspicions, as the currency was missing.

Detective Fred Izard, of the city police department, investigated and it was quite apparent that the robbers had knowledge of the hiding place of the money, as the child had been picked up carefully and placed on the floor and the money then removed. Just why the baby was not returned to its crib puzzled the police, although it is possible that Mrs. Hammett's sudden return may have frightened the robbers off before they could return the child to its crib.

Detective Izard today questioned two teen-aged school lads regarding the robbery and entertained hopes of clearing up the matter. "These boys were seen in the vicinity of Mrs. Hammett's home shortly after the robbery," revealed the officer today.

CHARGE BOYS BROKE TRAIN WINDOWS

Toronto, Nov. 25.—(CP)—Police last night arrested three 'teen-aged boys whom they charged were responsible for smashing scores of windows in trains coming through the east end of Toronto. Inspector Charles Greenwood said the lads were found beside huge piles of stones. He added hundreds of dollars' damage had been done to train windows.

Wooler Continuation School Holds Annual Commencement Exercises

Wooler—The annual commencement of the Continuation School was held in the town hall on the evenings of Thursday and Friday, November 21st and 22nd.

A large attendance was on hand to listen to a well prepared program which was both interesting and amusing.

The first number was the opening chorus and the School Yell. This was followed by an anthem, "Dancing on the green."

Presents Diplomas

Graduation diplomas were presented by Mr. Edward Nelson to Intermediate scholars—Gloria Sheppard, Edward Regan, Mable Redcliffe, Moss McMaster and Paul Jones. While to those for Junior Matriculation were: Jean DeMill, Helen Redcliffe and Patricia Regan.

The first act of a play entitled "Aunt Tillie goes to town" was very amusing. The vocal quartette by the Misses Roma Austin, Kathleen Haggarty, Doreen Steenburg and Dorothy was well rendered.

Then followed the presentation of Science Proficiency Shield which was awarded to Miss Helen Redcliff by Mr. A. G. Austin.

The girls "Folk Dance" was thoroughly enjoyed

Act II of the play followed, after which Miss Lois May very sweetly sang a vocal solo, "God Bless America."

Athletic Awards

Athletic awards were presented to junior boy, Ross McMaster, Junior girl, Eileen Sheppard; Senior boy, Jack May; Senior girl, Kathleen Haggarty, presented by Rev. Wm. Delve. The last act of the play was then enacted. In closing the National Anthem was sung. A dance followed Friday evening's program.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Another Gift?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

A girl with whom I work is being married soon. It is a custom with the girls here to take up a collection and buy a gift to give to a girl when she is leaving to be married. We followed this custom with this bride-to-be. Also, a few days before she left, her maid of honor invited us to a shower she was giving in honor of this girl. Those of us who wanted to took her a shower gift.

Soon afterward, the bride-to-be gave us each an invitation to the church ceremony and a card to the reception. Now the question has come up as to whether or not the wedding invitation called for a wedding gift. I said that it does not, because we all contributed to a gift when she left, and that the invitation was to show her appreciation to us and that she wanted to have us all come to the wedding. Some of the girls said that I was wrong. Was I?

I also told them that a wedding invitation does not necessarily call for a gift, and that one gives a gift only if one wishes to. Is this right?

Thank you

You co-workers have been so generous in your gifts that I am sure she would not expect that you also give her a wedding present in response to the wedding invitation. As a matter of fact, I should think most definitely that the gift to which you all contributed is a wedding present, and I see no reason why any of your group should feel that you should give another present. Your budgets were called into service enough with the general gift and with the shower gifts.

I also agree that one should give a wedding present only if one wishes to. Just as one would give any other kind of gift.

Serve Coffee

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My niece is to be married soon, and there is to be a small reception at her home in the afternoon after the ceremony. Would it be proper to serve coffee and cakes, rather than fruit punch and cakes? Several of my friends tell me that fruit punch would be better to serve than coffee. I would be grateful if you would settle this question for me.

B. P.

If it is a choice of serving only coffee or only fruit punch, I should, if I were you, serve coffee. During the winter months, almost everyone prefers a cup of hot coffee in the late afternoon.

Bride's Parents Pay

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I would like to know who is supposed to pay for the wedding invitations and to buy the wedding cake — the bride's parents or the groom.

"Whosit"

The bride's parents.

Milk.

The fall or winter is a good time to begin cultivating a taste for milk. This time of year, it is easy to get the milk good and cold and when it is cold enough, many people will relish it who in warmer weather have no liking for it.

It's a good thing to drink more milk in autumn and winter because of its vitamins and winter is when we need a reserve of them.

Don't think just because you're grown up that you don't need milk any more. You do.

I know many persons who say they just can't drink milk. Usually that "can't" is just a "won't" in disguise. The fact is they don't like milk, and they go on developing that dislike instead of trying to overcome it. Well, they couldn't develop a more harmful dislike if they sat and pondered all night.

Easy going parents are to blame for this and other food prejudices. A child who doesn't like this or that is allowed to pass it up and a bad habit is created. Milk that is produced in clean surroundings and handled by sanitary methods is a mild flavored food, and so disliking it is more of a habit than anything.

On the other hand children sometimes develop a strong dislike because of parents' lack of common sense. I know one family in which none of the children would drink milk. When I found why, I didn't wonder very much. The mother was using milk as a vehicle for giving them disagreeable medicines such as castor oil. Fortunately such a practice isn't very common.

Other persons have turned against it because they got milk that was strong with the objectionable flavor of onions, turnips or something else the cow had been eating.

One man I know started his little girl to drinking more milk by offering her a cent every time she drank a glass of it. He found it was an easy way to coax her to drink it, and after a little while she was drinking her milk not for the reward, but because she liked it.

If, however, you find that you just can't overcome an aversion for milk, there are other ways you can get the value of this ideal food besides drinking it. Such as hot cocoa or hot chocolate, or in creamed soups, served with fruits or cereals, made into custards and puddings. An adult should get a pint of milk a day, a child a quart of milk a day, in some way.

There are persons who can't—or think they can't—drink milk with cream in it. In that case they should drink skimmed milk. Scientists tell us now that the real value of the milk lies BELOW the cream line. That is a departure from the old theory that the richer the milk in butter fat the better. But butter fat is mostly just fat, while in the rest of the milk are the vitamins and the minerals that our bodies need.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

No Modern Mania Is Woman's Quest of Beauty

The other day a charming and piquant movie star confessed in an interview that she used seven different kinds of cream on her face during the day and evening. These various unguents seemed to have been for many different purposes — cleansing, foundation work, pore shrinking, and other things before which memory balks.

Still, with all these things to be done to Miss Modern's pretty little face, the beauties of ancient times seem to have worked even harder to enhance and keep their beauty. According to Mr. Jacob Hammer of Hunter College, in an article on "Beauty Culture in Ancient Rome," in the current issue of the "Classical Outlook," girls of two thousand years ago worked longer hours at making themselves beautiful than girls of today. Miss America's weekly or bi-weekly trip to the beauty parlor seems rather casual when compared to the creaming, steaming, perfuming and dyeing that went on in ancient baths. Mr. Hammer supplied a lengthy and interesting inventory of the B. C. prettifiers: Dyes, oils, herbs, unguents, and dressings, some of them amazing in composition.

The ancient Roman's taste in women was clear cut. These gentlemen didn't want wives or sweethearts with the Roman nose that was supposed to confer dictatorial qualities; they preferred the small, well-cut Greek nose, which wasn't difficult to find in ancient Rome. They liked eyes like flaming torches and were rather choosey about hands, wanting them well-developed, with long, sensitive, tapering fingers. They were equally particular in demanding beautiful legs. Thick ankles, post-like extremeties and legs with a suggestion of a rainbow curve were taboo.

The Romans of ancient days liked gleaming white teeth; apparently tooth powder was no novelty. They wanted their women to have lovely voices in speaking, above all no harsh laughter. They were even particular about the way a woman wept.

Romans liked shapely eyebrows, and tweezers were advocated to produce the right effect. Charm, of course, was understood, as one of the accomplishments. Women sang, played on musical instruments and were attentive listeners.

The statues which have come down to us show them to have had pleasantly rounded figures, not fat. Whether they dieted to the extent of present-day American ladies is a question. To jump from B. C. to present-day taste in woman, it's interesting to note Mr. Charles Hanson Towne, author, poet, diner-out and connoisseur of life in general, confessed that he did not like that "dieted" look in women.

Centuries may come and go but a beautiful woman is a joy forever — to herself and the people who surround her.

Pearly Teeth Tops in Charm

Maureen O'Hara's sparkling teeth are one of her many beauty assets.

By HELEN FOLLETT

MORE IMPORTANT than the ruby lipstick, the intriguing eyeshadows and the factory blush is the humble toothbrush. Without perfect teeth the composition of beauty just isn't.

Teeth should be brushed after each meal because food deposits change in character, create chemicals that make horrid little cavities in your biters. Then what? trouble aplenty, hours in the dentist's chair, bills to pay. The brushing should be thorough and vigorous not only on the inner and outer surfaces of the white pearls, but on the sides of each one and those portions that gnaw the groceries. Dentists complain that patients aren't particular enough about sending the bristles between the teeth.

Guard Your Pearls

If the gums bleed, be gentle. No sense in disturbing impaired tissue. Your dentist may find that tartar has formed, is pressing against the tender flesh; when it has been removed all will be well again.

Don't overlook the necessity of rinsing the mouth after the brushing, so that foreign particles are laved away. A salt water solution is recommended. It hardens the gums, clears away a certain amount of bacteria that is ever present.

Perspiring hands bother some individuals. There is a simple remedy for that. Add a few drops of simple tincture of benzoin to a cup of water and lave the palms with the lotion. See that the druggist does not give you the compound tincture of benzoin, which is something else again.

Moist palms signify a nervous temperament. For that reason the laws of health should be obeyed. More sleep, more outdoor exercise, careful regard for the balanced diet. The nervous woman is usually one who lacks emotional control, who lets small irritations upset her and whose mind dwells upon her troubles. She lacks mental health, poor dear.

CARMEL Y. P. U.

Preparing Child for The Future

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

We sometimes forget that our boys and girls in the home and school today are to be the husbands and wives, fathers and mothers of tomorrow. As a mother once said in a university class of parents I was teaching, "I see that we are considering not just how to bring up our children well but also how to prepare them to become good husband and wives, fathers and mothers." She was right.

It is not so easy for the average school teacher to think in terms of marriage and parenthood for the children she teaches, since she is denied the privilege of normal family life: if she marries, she loses her job, in many places.

This practice is absurd. It undermines the family, the very pillar of democracy which we presume to build up through our public schools.

In spite of this handicap, many lovely, unmarried teachers are doing their bit at interesting the boys and girls they teach in being good members of their families now and in growing to become good husbands and wives, good fathers and mothers later.

Helping Child's Home Life

The teachers aim not only to help these children to be self-reliant at school, take responsibility there, and practice in self-sacrifice for the good of others at school; but they aim also to inspire these children to want to exercise these good traits at home. Accordingly, some of these wise teachers build their lessons in English, arithmetics, civics and other subjects about home experiences and home citizenship.

One group of teachers in the junior and senior high school—and most of them are unmarried—who have been doing most at school to further happier and better living in the family, are the home economics teachers. By the way, the home economics teacher is more likely to marry than any other teacher. So many of them marry, and the teacher demand in this field is so great that there actually is a shortage in most parts of the country of home economics teachers.

Home Management

Until recent years, however, most home economics teachers dwelt on food, clothes and shelter. Even these things turned their attention to the home. Later they added home management, budgeting and the like. In still more recent years, the home economics teacher has been centreing her attention away from pies, dresses and draperies toward human relationships in the family. Year by year the home economics courses in the public schools are more and more concerned with child development, parent-child relationships, wholesome family life and education for marriage and parenthood.

RETURN OF DE GAULLE TO LONDON DISCLOSED

London, Nov. 25 (CP)—Gen. Charles De Gaulle, leader of the Free French forces, was disclosed today to have returned to London after a journey to equatorial Africa to rally France's African possessions to his standard.

On his return he conferred with Prime Minister Churchill for 45 minutes. Presumably he reported on conditions in the French African colonies.

Boston Bruins Begin to Roll And Can Improve Position by Taking Canadiens into Camp

LEAFS PLAY RANGERS

Toronto in New York Hoping to Get Back Game Lost to Rangers in Opening Game

(By the Canadian Press)

There are indications that Boston Bruins, like all big things slow to start, are beginning to roll in the manner to which the National Hockey League has become accustomed. It just didn't seem right to see Boston wallowing around the bottom of the league so long.

When the firing from the heavy week-end program had subsided, the Bruins had rushed up to fourth place and only a point behind Chicago Black Hawks. Their defence, the question mark in the Bruins' early game showed lots of class in holding the opposition to three goals in two games.

The week-end performance was all the more impressive for the Bruins' victory was over New York Rangers and was the first defeat suffered by the Stanley Cup champions. They led into the third period against the high-flying Red Wings of Detroit and came off with a tie. Even Art Ross, the perfectionist, could find little fault in that kind of work.

Tonight the Bruins, who must have been a little nettled at the uncomplimentary things said about them in their 1-1 tie against Montreal Canadiens at the start of the season, have a chance to settle some of this score. They play hosts to the cellar-place Montrealers.

Canadiens Getting Stronger

Their defence bolstered by the acquisition of big Jack Portland, Canadiens have been getting stronger and making it tougher every game for the opposition forwards. The Bruins are the kind of a team they like — a solid bunch without the elusiveness of Toronto Maple Leafs or New York Rangers.

The Leafs and Rangers clash in the only other game tonight. It is their second meeting of the season, the return bout of the season's opener when the Rangers spoiled Toronto's opening night by winning 4-1.

The Leafs have gone a long way since then. They have lost only one other game and have showed the most devastating offensive of any club, an attack so evenly spread that the blanketing of Syl Apps and Gord Drillon no longer means a choking of Leaf power. Sweeney Schriner is moving now and so is Billy (the Kid) Taylor, Walter Stanowski and the others.

Rangers called up Defenceman Bill Allum from Philadelphia Ramblers of the American League to bolster their defence for the Leaf visit. Short-handed because of Art Coulter's injury, Rangers decide to take no chances with a weak rearguard.

MANAGER QUESTIONED

Hymie Caplin, manager of Lightweight Boxing Champ Lew Jenkins, was questioned in the Brooklyn, N.Y., district attorney's office after he was picked up by police in connection with the investigation of a nation-wide gambling syndicate that has fleeced "suckers" of more than $4,000,000. Caplin was taken into custody as he and his wife left their swank Forest Hills, Queens, N.Y., home en route to the boxing commission offices to attend the weigh-in of Jenkins for his title bout with Pete Lello.

Minnesota Gophers Head Football Poll

New York, Nov. 26 (AP)—Now that Minnesota has finished its season with eight straight victories and the Western Conference Football championship, it appears nothing can dislodge the Gophers from No. 1 position in The Associated Press United States College Football ranking poll.

One week away from the final rankings, Minnesota, heads the list with 1,562 points—96 more than Texas Aggies, 298 more than Stanford, and 448 more than Boston College. Of the 170 voters in this seventh weekly roundup of national opinion, 88 plunked for the Gophers as first choice.

The standings (points figured on 10-9-8-7-6 etc. basis):—1. Minnesota 1,562; 2. Texas A. and M. 1,476; 3. Stanford 1,264; 4. Boston College 1,114; 5. Michigan 1,042; 6. Tennessee 959; 7. Northwestern 396; 8. Nebraska 391; 9. Georgetown 229 3-7; 10. Penn 227 3-7.

Washington, Nov. 26.—(AP) — Gridiron oddity: Georgetown, which has lost only one game in three years (and that by but one point) doesn't even have a football field. The Hefty Hoyas practice on a hard clay lot that supports one rusty goal post against a high bank. . . The George Washington Colonials, Tuffy Leeman's Alma Mater, don't even have a lot. They do their between game huffing and puffing and dummy damaging on a polo field which has no goal posts . . . .

Gossip from the city of magnificent distances:

Clark (the old Fox) Griffith is going to abandon his plan that the American League play all its games at night during the two hot months of the summer . . . Griff says when he goes to the major league meeting he won't have any legislation to propose at all. . . .That sounds too quiet for the old Fox. What's he up to? . . . If Stanley Harris had gone to Cleveland Indians, old Judge, the old Senator who now coaches Georgetown's baseball team, would have gone with Bucky as head coach. . . .

CANUCKS BEATEN ON SOCCER FIELD BY R.A.F. TEAM

Artillerymen Could Not Find Range and Go Down to Defeat 9-0

Lineup of Canadian Soccer Team Shows a Few Boys From Kingston

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Nov. 26 (CP)—A Canadian Artillery Regiment from the 1st Division, with batteries from Winnipeg, Kingston and Brantford, has built up a high reputation in the United Kingdom for its gunnery—but when it comes to shooting for goals on a soccer field the men just can't figure out the range.

Playing a Royal Air Force team in aid of a Spitfire fund, the Canucks were beaten 9-0. Fifteen hundred fans turned out despite a rainstorm.

The Airmen outclassed the Gunners completely in the first half, chalking up six goals, but the Canadians came back in the second half and gave the English team a real battle.

Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, 1st Division Commander, attended the game along with Sir Edward Campbell, a member of the British Parliament, and a number of high-ranking officers of the Canadian Artillery and the R.A.F.

Airmen Out in Force

The Airmen were out in force with their band and it played medleys of Canadian tunes, including 'We're On Our Way,' composed by Capt. Mert Plunkett of Dumbell fame and introduced at a soldiers' rally in Ottawa a year ago. It has been published in England and is a popular tune with this particular R.A.F. squadron.

The Canadian lineup was: Gnr. H. Gilbert, Oshawa, goal; Sgt. John Law, Kingston, Ont., and Gnr. Henry Mansfield, Winnipeg, fullbacks; Sgt. John Walker, Kingston, L. Bdr. Art Lockwood, Kington and L. Sgt. Jim Smith, Kingston, halfbacks; Gnr. Fred Murray, Kingston, Bdr. Carey, Gnr. Fred Lappage, Kingston, Bdr. Ernie Miller, Kingston, and Sgt. Dyble, forwards.

Following the game, two batteries of the Canadian Regiment played an exhibition softball game.

EBBIE EDMISON WHOLE SHOW AS OSHAWA WINS

G. M. Men Defeat Highly Touted St. Catharines Squad 5-2 in Oshawa

HAMILTON WINS

Edmison Scores One Goal and Assists in All Others Scored by His Team

(By The Canadian Press)

Just when it looked as if St. Catharines Saints were starting to hit their stride, little Ebbie Edmison had to go and put on the greatest display of playmaking in the Senior "A" division of the Ontario Hockey Association this season.

The former Brantford flash led his Oshawa teammates to a 5-2 victory over the Saints in Oshawa last night by scoring one goal and assisting in all the others. The triumph atoned for a loss to the Saints in St. Catharines last Friday.

In the only other senior tilt last night, the classy Hamilton Dofascos lengthened their league lead with a 6-3 decision over Port Colborne Sailors. Three goals in the final frame did the trick.

In Edmison's show, which jumped him up among the league scoring leaders, the diminutive forward set up his Wingers, Johnny Carr-Harris and Johnny Thompson, with two goals each. Then, to top off the performance, he scored the final home tally on a pass from Carr-Harris, former Kingston performer, late in the second period.

Three Major Penalties

Paul Mundrick, the big fellow who performed with Toronto Goodyears last season, snared the first goal for the visitors, and Rosy Rossini scored the other. Three major penalties were issued in the scoreless and heavy-checking third period.

Over at the small Port Colborne rink, Doug Fritz of Hamilton scored twice to retain his circuit scoring lead. Other Dofasco scorers were Clarence Shillington, Conick and Polly Miocinovich, who also counted twice. Jimmy McKelvie, with two goals, and Lloyd Fitzgerald, were the scorers for the tars.

Four major penalties were issued by Referee Johnny Jones of Guelph during the struggle, all for fighting. Despite the defeat, Port Colborne showed improved play over their other games this season. Always a contender, the tars each season seem to take a little more time to round into shape than other teams.

Results of the tilts gave Hamilton a total of 12 points, three more than Niagara Falls and Toronto Marlboros. St. Catharines, Port Colborne and Oshawa are tied for the third spot, each with six points. The Luckless London Streamliners are the cellar occupants with but one victory in seven games played.

"IRISH" FORCE PLAYOFF BY DEFEATING O.S.D.

B.C.I. and St. Michael's Tie for Group Honors in Six-Man Football

SCORE IS 11-5

McQuaid, Wilson and Goyer Help Team to Win Contest

Rallying when the occasion of opposition threat loomed most formidable, Jack Doran's St. Michael's "Irish" rose to cast off the driving force of the O.S.D. kids and win 11 to 5 in the final game of the City Junior C.O.S.S.A. football schedule at the B.C.I. & V.S. campus yesterday. In downing the O.S.D. in the last game of the league schedule the St. Mikes sextette terminated the group in a tie with the Belleville Collegiate abbreviate squad, forcing a play-off for the group honors.

Early in the initial period the "Irish" rode through the "Deaf boys" and McQuaid crashed, over for a seven-yard plunge and a touchdown, which Goyer converted when he took Shepherd's forward pass to run the score to 6 to 0.

Much physical contact was seen in the next two periods, but no score resulted as the squads reverted to playing the game the hard way, thus making little headway. However, late in the last quarter Jim Rickaby's courageous O.S.D. sextette rallied and drove through to St. Mike's 15, where George fumbled, but Ray Cork recovered and skirted left end for a touchdown that was not converted, but brought the count to 6-5 for St. Mikes.

Wilson and Goyer made substantial gains for St. Michaels after the kickoff and Goyer later drove through centre for a touchdown that was not converted and the final whistle saw the "Irish" 11 to 5 winners. St. Michaels and Coach Cliff Yerex's Belleville Collegiate squad will now play-off for the league championship, the teams being tied at the completion of their regular schedule at four wins and two losses each.

The final standing of the local Junior Interscholastic football group is:

	W.	L.	Pts.
B.C.I.V.S.	4	2	8
O.S.D.	2	4	4

The line-ups for yesterday's game were: O.S.D.—Snap, Styles; wings, Hood and Wilson; quarter, George; halves, Cork and Conlon; subs, Thibault, Wedge, Calder and Clarke. St. Michael's Academy—Snap, M. Callaghan; wings, Shepherd, Pigeon; quarter, Goyer; halves, Wilson and McQuaid; subs, D. Callaghan, Powers and Bradshaw. Referee—Blake Kerr, of B.C.I.

Little Benny's Note Book

Sid Hunt and I are mad at each other for different reasons, and I was starting to take a walk with pop and I said, Darn that darn guy. to be walking along minding his own us on his way some place, and pop said, What's wrong with him? As far as I can make out he seems other way of saying they dont unbusiness in a world of busybodies, and that's very commendable, he said, and I said, He and I dont speak.

Well now I'm sorry to hear that, pop said. Intolerance seems to be spreading in this so called advanced age, but I never thought I'd find it lapping the shores of my own family. When 2 people dont speak to each other it's genrelly only another way o fsaying they dont understand each other, he said, and I said, 'I understand that guy, all right, and I understand he's a pane in the neck to me.

We're all panes somewhere to somebody, I fear, and it's not beyond the bounds of possibility that you're a pane in the ankle to him, pop said. So panes must get together, because a big useful piece of glass, or shall I say a glass of peace, is often composed of insignificant little panes. It's the same with nations as with individuals. Americans as a race dont see how Frenchmen can eat froglegs all dewy with garlick, while Frenchmen hold up their eyebrows and shoulders in horror at the spectacle of Americans spreading mayonnaise on nuts and pineapple and calling it a salad, yet both dishes have their merits and need only to be understood to be loved, pop said, and I said, Oh well, what the heck, I'll speak to him.

Meaning Sid, and we started to go passed him and I said, High there, funny face, and Sid said, Aw, go chase yourself around the block, and I said to pop, You see, pop, that's all the good it does, and pop said, Let's change the subject.

Wich we did.

With the odd exception, such as the barring of freak deliveries, the rules committee of baseball haven't tinkered with the playing regulations of the diamond pastime in over a half century. However, in hockey the legislators are continually toying around with the playing rules until both the players and spectators alike become confused at the opening of every season. Invariably the hockey rules are contradictory and result in conflicting differences of opinion when efforts to decipher them are made, and no two persons will define sport rules and regulations in the same trend of thought, especially when there are loop-holes such as are contained in this year's hockey regulations.

Here is an example as outlined in the new playing rules for this year, which has to do with the scoring of a goal. The new rule says: "A puck kicked by an attacking player and deflected into the net by any defending player except the goalkeeper of the said defending team, shall count as a goal." Heretofore an attacking player could not kick a puck into the opponents' net for a score. This new rule sounds rather cock-eyed to this corner. For instance, if an attacking player kicks the puck and the rubber deflects off a defending player first and then deflects into the cage off the goalkeeper, what then? Is it a goal or not? The rules say an attacking player may kick the puck and if the puck deflects off a defending player a goal shall be counted. Just another headache for the poor old referee, who soon will have to take another pencil and pad to make notes of every individual move and when arguments crop up, then refer back to his little red book.

District O.H.A. clubs can be prepared to meet additional expenses this year. At 51st annual meeting of the O.H.A. it was voted that the association should take five per cent of all group and between group play-off receipts and 15 per cent of the gate receipts of all final series in all categories. Seems as though the parent association is whittling rather fine when they commence chiselling in the group playdowns, and more especially in the junior groups. While speaking of junior hockey the qualifications of a junior now are that he must be under 20 years of age on Nov. 1st of the playing year. The new, junior "B" trophy will be known as "The Sutherland Trophy" in honour of Captain James Sutherland of Kingston. "Jim" Sutherland is well known in Belleville hockey circles and will be remembered when he headed the old Kingston Frontenacs for many years, bringing out such hockey players as Bill and Bun Cook, the Stewart boys, Scotty Davidson, the Milan boys and the immortal George Richardson. It was a very deserving gesture when the O.H.A. named their junior "B" cup "The Sutherland Trophy." After all the time to toss bouquets is when we are alive and can enjoy them.

The Reliance Aircraft pucksters journey to Kingston tomorrow night and meet the Perth-Smith's Falls "Combines." Neither of these squads have registered a win in the Van Horne series as yet, so the loser merely remains in the cellar slot. However, Speedy St. Louis' sextette have lost two, while the Combines have dropped only their initial start. The Reliance team outscored the 3-47th Battery last Friday night three to one in the last period but the artillery lads had warped it to our lads badly in the initial frame. Bill Hastie bagged two and Gow, St. Louis and Gill one each. Incidentally Jim Donihee, the Reliance's new player from Cornwall, assisted on three goals. Freddie McGuire a former Belleville puckster, scored one against the Reliance, as did Walt Gerow. Kingston Scribe Bill Walshe says the Reliance boys played improved hockey over their initial appearance, which would indicate all the locals need is a little practice now and again.

Do you remember when Queen's University, top team in the Intercollegiate group handed Toronto Argonauts their first defeat in two years to win the Eastern Canada rugby final at Toronto 18 years ago today? The Kingston crew, fighting hard on a muddy field, won 12-11 on a last-minute field goal by Pep Leadley.

One of the best known and best loved men in the annals of American college football was the late Knute Rockne, football player and coach at Notre Dame College for many years and who died in an airplane crash, as did another well known and loved character, Will Rogers. Knute Rockne was born in Norway in 1889 and came to America as an immigrant boy. He put himself through Notre Dame by working his way through college, as he learned rugby football and played it. During his term as coach at Notre Dame, 1918 to 1930, his teams won 105 games, lost 12 and tied five. The life of Knute Rockne was recently filmed and was given its world premier at Ann Harbor and stars Pat O'Brien in his greatest role. The picture is entitled "Knute Rockne, Maker of Men," and it opens for a two-day stand at the Belle Theatre today. Incidentally Pat O'Brien actually played for the Minnesota "Gophers" when they beat Notre Dame nearly twenty years ago and O'Brien takes great pride in his characterization of football's most loved personage, Knute Rockne, in this saga of American rugby.

How Time changes many the picture. In July of 1938 Charlie Grimm was ousted as manager of the Chicago Cubs and Gabby Hartnett installed in his place. Today, a short 18 months later, Charlie is back in the good graces of the Cubs and Hartnett is gone. Yes, Charlie Grimm signed to coach the Chicago Cubs in 1941 under Manager Jimmie Wilson. How time takes its toll.

After demanding a 50 percent cut in seven Sunday gate receipts throughout the International League, the Toronto Maple Leafs flashed the "go" signal for at least another year in organized baseball, Russell "Lena" Blackburne was engaged as manager and everybody seems optimistic. Incidentally a cut on seven Sunday gates, which are deprived Toronto owing to Ontario "blue laws," simply means one Sunday gate per club in the International League, which isn't too much to ask under the circumstances.

SPORT SLANTS—St. Michael's "Irish" tied the B.C.I. by beating O.S.D. yesterday in the city six-man rugby group, which means a play-off for the loop honors.... Coach Frank Boucher called up two defencemen for his Rangers when they meet the fast-stepping Maple Leafs tonight.... Too bad about Freddie Hamilton's brain-child—East-West—football classic ......Besides being a splendid medium of revenue for war charities, we believe the football fans of the east would welcome a period or two of Western Canada rules.... Maybe the proud C.R.U. heads are too set in their ways to even permit Easterners to see the Western style of football Or could it be downright cussed obstinacy?

"Knute Rockne"

Today the Belle Theatre heralds in a film that will make screen history. It is a film biography of the great Notre Dame football coach entitled "Knute Rockne —All American".

The picture stars Pat O'Brien in the role of "Rock" and it is said that his appearance and mannerisms are so like the gridiron wizard that Rockne's most intimate friends are surprised at the close similarity.

"Knute Rockne—All American" tells the almost legendary story of his life, his power, his wise philosophy, the men and teams he built, and the influence he hac, and still has, on the people of America, are all brought out in this swiftly-paced, exciting motion picture.

Gale Page plays the role of Mrs. Rockne who was the inspiration for much of his success. Ronald Reagan, in what has been hailed as the finest role of his career, plays the part of the never-to-be-forgotten George Gipp. Donald Crisp is wisely cast as the understanding President of Notre Dame, Father Callahan. The famous "Four Horsemen" are played by Kane Richmond as Elmer Layden; William Marshall as Don Miller; Nick Lukats as Harry Stuhldreher and Billy Byrne as Jim Crowley.

Rockne's story really starts when he comes to America from Norway, as a young boy accompanied by his father, and settles in Chicago. The film begins at that point but the main emphasis is on his glorious years at Notre Dame as coach.

Robert Buckner wrote the original screen play and used as the basis of his story the private papers of Mrs. Rockne and the reports of his intimate friends and associates.

Director Lloyd Bacon put plenty of action into the picture and successfully conveyed the power of "Rock's" life to the screen. "Knute Rockne—All American" will prove both a great piece of entertainment and an inspiring life story for both young and old Canadians.

"A New Laugh Hit"

With Frank Morgan exhibiting the talents which have made him one of the screen's most versatile actors "Hullabaloo", new comedy of backstage radio life, is announced as the co-feature attraction. During the space of but a few months, Morgan his ranged the gamut in screen characterizations from the starkest of tragedy to comedy. In "Hullabaloo" he outdoes himself in the latter field, appearing not only as himself, but doing imitations of some of the popular screen great as well. "Hullabaloo" tells the story of an ex-vaudevillian, portrayed by Morgan, who attempts to keep the wolf from the door by landing himself a radio job. This he accomplishes, but brings disaster upon a city when he omits the commercials from his program and throws the countryside into terror. The notoriety he gets because of this escapade brings his three ex-wives, played by Billie Burke, Sara Haden and Connie Gilchrist, down upon his head, all seeking back alimony. How he escapes his fate and lands himself a job with a comfortable incomes makes for one of the most hilarious films to come from Hollywood in recent months Romantic interest in the film centres about a triangle consisting of Dan Dailey, Jr., who last appeared in "Dulcy" with Ann Sothern, Virginia Grey, recently seen in "Golden Fleecing", and Ann Morriss, remembered for her work in "The Women".

The Belle News of the Day will be exhibited on the same program.

INQUEST IS ORDERED

Curran, Ont., Nov. 25.—(CP)—An inquest will be held here Wednesday into the death of Arnold Muldoon of Curran, who died after his automobile crashed near this village 35 miles east of Ottawa, Friday.

Death apparently was caused by suffocation. Vernon Bradley, also of Curran, found the victim's body tangled beneath the wreckage of the automobile, which straddled his shoulders.

It was not known what caused the accident.

CHILDREN FOUND IN DITCH..

Guelph, Ont., Nov. 26 (CP).—Two three-year-old children who wandered away from their homes shortly after noon yesterday were found sleeping in a ditch last night.

A large search party scoured the district for hours before finding the missing boys, Bobby Beeteson and Tony Contini. Apparently they had been exhausted by their wanderings and they were fast asleep side by side in the roadside ditch when discovered by members of the volunteer civil guard of Guelph.

The two were none the worse for their experience.

The Beeteson boy was warmly clad against the frosty night with a woollen ski suit but the Contini youngster had only a pair of short trousers and his bare knees were frost-nipped. Searchers said that only the fact the lads had huddled together saved them from worse effects from the cold and heavy frost.

City, county and provincial police engaged in the search and a large number of the Guelph civil guard turned out, while dozens of other citizens helped to scour the district before the boys were found.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. Wm. McMullen and family, Sidney, wish to thank their friends, neighbors and Rev. Mr. Scott for their many acts of kindness expressed in their recent sad bereavement. N26

AT THE CAPITOL

"Argentine Nights"

Offering the most tuneful array of popular songs heard in any recent motion picture, nine new melodies are introduced in "Argentine Nights," Universal musical farce now at the Capitol Theatre with Reeves, sings "Once Upon a Dream" Sisters.

Tunes are Original

Created especially for the picture by half a dozen of Hollywood's leading composers and lyric writers the new songs are presented along with colorful dances, streamlined comedy and zestful romance.

"Brooklynonga," and "The Spirit of 77 B" are presented by the Ritz Brothers as major production numbers in the hilarious musical picture.

"Hit the Road," "The New Lick," "Oh, He Loves Me" and "Rhumboogie" are sung by the Andrews Sisters, whose songs on phonograph records and on the radio and stage have made them the favorite swing trio of the nation.

Popular Singer

Constance Moore, who shares love interest in the film with George the Ritz Brothers and the Andrews and "Hall of the Mountain Queen." Reeves and the gaucho chorus harmonize "Amigo We Go Riding Tonight."

Four of the screen's most shapely beauties, Peggy Moran, Anne Nagel, Kathryn Adams and Julie Duncan, play supporting roles in "Argentine Nights," and Albert S. Rogell was the director. Ken Goldsmith served as associate producer on the picture.

"The Fatal Hour"

The added attraction "The Fatal Hour" starring the one and only Boris Karloff is a thriller chiller from start to finish. A short subject, "Dangerous Dollars," complete the entertaining bill.

Trenton and District

LATE MRS. R. J. CLARKE

Trenton, Nov. 26.—(Special) — The funeral of the late Mrs. Robert J. Clarke, accident victim, was one of the largest funerals ever held in the town of Trenton. Almost three hundreds persons crowded St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church for the service.

The late Mrs. Clarke was almost instantly killed in a motor accident near the Trenton Airport on Highway 2, on Friday night last.

A private service was held in the home and the public service was held in St. Andrew's Church. Rev. W. J. Walker conducted the service in the church and at the graveside. The Trenton Chapter 118 of the Order of the Eastern Star conducted their own ceremony. Mrs. P. W. Burrows, Worthy Matron, was in charge.

The pall bearers were all nephews of the deceased, Howard Wallace, Gerald Ward, Harold Cook, Harry Cook, Wallace Cook and Robert Cook. Interment took place in the Burnbrae Cemetery.

Headquarters Set Up

Headquarters for the Legion of Frontiersmen has been set up at Trenton and recruiting is now in progress under 2/Lt. Dave MacDonald. The district takes in Trenton, Belleville, Cobourg and all points north and south of these points.

The work of the Legion of Frontiersmen is purely voluntary but will give all recruits the opportunity of serving their country during the war. The Frontiersmen are dressed in natty uniforms similar to that of the Royal Canadian Mounted police, with breeches and high top boots, with a black tunic and large hat.

The military work of the Legion is a basic training but the main part of the work is police duty and the unit will work in conjunction with all bodies of police as an auxiliary unit.

Recruits are wanted. They must be in good physical health, have some militia training, such as at least one year militia training, in a non-permanent unit, or two years in high school cadets or other military drill. They must be between the ages of 25 and 45 and willing to give their time when called. All men wishing to join this unit should contact 2/Lt. MacDonald at the Trenton Armoury.

Picton and District

Picton, Nov. 26—Mrs. William Turpin has just received a letter from her sister, Mrs. William Lervin, 63 Hallowell Road, Leytonstone, England, stating that "their home and store there had been hit by bombs.

The family escaped injury though most of the buildings in that street were wrecked by the Nazi raiders. They had been sleeping in their air raid shelter in the garden.

Though the home was damaged beyond repair, Mr. and Mrs. Lervin were determined to carry on their business and after doing what repair work they could hang out their sign 'Open for business'.

Fire Starts in Chimney

Fire which destroyed the Joseph Adams' house, third concession of Ameliasburg, in the Adams neighborhood, on Sunday, is estimated to have caused a loss of $5,000.

The destroyed building was a large frame one and used as a double house. Mr. Jos. Adams resided in one half and his grandson, Laird Adams and wife on the other side.

The fire started in the L. Adams' section, in the chimney, during the noon hour. It had been thought this had been extinguished but apparently the high winds caused sparks to cause the fire to continue and the house was burned to the ground.

Neighbors turned out but could do little to help. Some of the furniture was saved.

Nominations

Councils of four municipalities were tendered acclamations but in others there are keen contests, especially for the reeveships. Where there are no contests, voters have to go to the polls to vote on the bylaw which will decide whether councils hold office or one or two years.

Following is a complete list of those who qualified in Prince Edward County:

Ameliasburg

Reeve: James S. Barber, Howard Weese.

Deputy Reeve: J. A. Dymond, R. Earl Onderdonk.

Councillors: Ross Burr, I. A. E. Nightingale, Arza Pulver, Harry E. Redner. (3 to be elected).

Hallowell Township

AT THE McCARTHY

"Holiday"

Now playing a return engagement at the McCarthy theatre is the gay romantic comedy "Holiday" co-starring Cary Grant and Katharine Hepburn.

In addition the cast of "Holiday" includes, Lew Ayres, Edward Everett Horton, Doris Nolan, Henry Kolker, Binnie Barnes and Henry Daniels.

"Holiday" is one of the finest productions that ever came from Hollywood and one of the most delightful laugh hits ever filmed.

"The Warning," a new British picture, now being presented in all theatres in England, is also now playing at the McCarthy theatre in addition to "Holiday". "The Warning" is of vital importance to all Canadians to see and you owe it to your understanding of current European psychologies to learn first hand from this film the military machine that through the governments of England and Canada in addition to their allies, is now in action against their foes. "The Warning" is a tremendously interesting picture. Latest Fox News events is also now on the McCarthy theatre screen.

"THE GORGON'S MASK"

by Van Wyck Mason

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

Abner Polk crossed the room with a brisk stride, and from the top drawer of a chiffonier produced a small automatic which he slid into the pocket of his coat.

"You see," he explained over his wide shoulder, "I have no illusions as to the gravity of my position. Now, Captain North, I'll tell you a few things which I should have told you aboard the Halolo."

Hurriedly, the master of Kalua began to talk with the air of a man who faces an unpleasant duty and who seeks to get it over with swiftly.

"How much of this you already know, I can't guess," said Polk, passing a hand over his thick gray hair. "But about a year ago I was approached by a German whose name is doubtless familiar to you."

"Von Rentner?" North suggested.

"Quite right. He broached to me a plan whereby he, Armand Dunant, the French steel master, and I could clean up by engineering a war scare that would send steel shares rocketing sky high." Thoughts behind the pattern of his words seemed to be harassing Polk, who frowned. "I know it's an old game, but it's a good one. Buy low and sell high, just before the war scare dies."

"Well," continued the millionaire, "Baron von Rentner persuaded me and went into it lock, stock, and barrel. At present I'm loaded up with thousands of shares of steel, bought all over the world. Potentially I am nearly a hundred million dollars richer than I was a year ago. But," into the deep voice crept a shaken note, "I would cheerfully give up every penny of that sum and the rest of my fortune as well to stop this business. In fact, that's what I'm going to do."

"What happened, Mr. Polk, to make you change your mind?"

Angry lights played at the back of the steel king's eyes. "I found that my partners had lied to me; in fact, Captain, they double-crossed me. I agreed only to building up a war scare, but they have planned to bring on a war between Japan and the United States with the Rome-Berlin axis neutralizing Britain and France."

The speaker's voice trailed off, and the faintly perfumed air seemed charged with a sudden tension.

"Yes," Polk pursued, "I discovered that these men have schemed to provoke an action between the visiting Japanese squadron and our own. Besides that, they have, without my consent, brought another element into the spot. Just what that element is, I have only an idea."

"Tell me," North inquired gently, "was it the Transpacific Company that financed Wang Tso Kin's drive in China at the end of April?"

Amazement shone in Polk's eyes. "What made you think that?"

"Never mind—did the Transpacific finance that drive?"

"No—that drive was the greatest surprise I've ever had. I suppose it must have been that unknown element . . ."

North resisted an impulse to mention the name of Nadia Stefan and so learn what, if any, the millionaire's reaction would be.

"Yes, Captain," the magnate was saying, "I suddenly discovered I'd been made a colossal goat. I guess von Rentner thought I wouldn't dare tick at an actual declaration of war but he doesn't know me!" Abner Polk got suddenly to his feet. "I've my faults, but I'm a loyal American—family's been that side of the water since 1730—and I'll never knowingly involve the United States in a war!"

North was aware, suddenly and vividly, that he was living through one of the great moments of his career. Starting from nowhere, he was now listening to an account of the greatest international plot since the forging of the Ems Dispatch that helped precipitate the Franco-Prussian War.

"This same afternoon," the steel master went on, while downstairs the crackle of tires on the driveway could be heard with increasing frequency. "I had a show-down with my partners; Dunant reached Honolulu last night. We had it pretty hot and heavy all afternoon; some pretty ugly names flew back and forth. I accused them of double-crossing me, and they accused me of not going through with my promises. I reminded them that I had only agreed to the purchase of the Transpacific property and to the subsidizing of old Wang Tso Kin and his gang of cutthroats. And," he momentarily interrupted the main theme of his discourse, "a pretty penny we had paid Kirin to buy those bandit armies!

"When I asked them about that second offensive," Abner Polk continued heavily, "they lied — and I knew they lied and told them so. They got ugly, but I demanded to know who that fourth partner or unknown element is."

"They told you?" The breath halted in North's lungs as he awaiting the answer.

"No—they persisted in denying a fourth partner, and later they threatened me, indirectly of course, with terrible things if I didn't go through with their plot."

"You didn't tell them you were going to tell me the whole story?"

Polk's brows contracted angrily. "Captain, do I look like a complete fool?"

"Sorry." North's apology was prompt and convincing. "Please go on."

"Well, I played the indecision role—said the affair was too risky. Dunnant, as I'd hoped, blurted out the details of this plot to bring on a battle in Honolulu harbor."

"Did you commit yourself?" the captain inquired breathlessly.

"No, I temporized—I told them I'd think the matter over and let them know after dinner tonight." He uttered a laugh, harsh as the rasp of steel on stone. "And to think that this dinner was planned as a sort of victory feast!"

"I gathered the Transpacific covered its tracks pretty well in its dealings with Wang Tso Kin?" North suggested.

"Of course. But in a safe, behind that picture"—Polk pointed to a delicate Japanese water-color on a wall to the left—"I have documents which will give you authority to act, and the government ample proof of this plot. Those documents will, in fact, remove any chance of war! They explain everything to the Japanese Imperial Government and—"

"The guests are all here, sir," interrupted the valet, "and Madame Renoire asks you please to come down."

"Thank you, Charlton. Tell Madame Renoire we will be down in a minute." Polk moodily readjusted the gold strap of an expensive wrist watch. "Now, mind you, North," he added in a lowered voice, "you're still Nevins. You'll keep your eyes open. We must watch von Rentner especially—he's a Prussian junker to the core and hasn't a grain of scruple."

Polk drew a long breath. "After dinner I'll give you those papers, proofs, records of stock purchases, and receipts of our dealings with Wang Tso Kin, and," he added, "they'll amaze you."

The master of Kalua started for the door. "In the meantime you've got to be on guard against anything and everything. These men have more than their fortunes at stake in arranging this overt act that means war!"

Gripped by that torturing presentiment of misfortune, North sprang up and caught at the steel magnate's sleeve. "Can't you tell me in a few words exactly what 'this overt act' is to be?"

The other shook his head with that domineering impatience which comes to men long accustomed to power.

"No," he snapped, "I want to give you the whole story in order. It's very complicated."

With that, Polk opened the door of his bedroom and murmured, "Come downstairs in about five minutes, and come in as unobtrusively as possible."

North, with a heavy sigh, cast a lingering glance at that print concealing the wall safe which held the precious secrets he had come seven thousand miles to get.

The dinner to which Captain North presently sat down was the most fateful and nerve-trying he had ever attended. At one end of the long narrow table sat Abner Polk, his powerful face utterly wooden, save for those mechanical smiles and other expressions conventional to a dinner-party conversation.

The intelligence captain was seated halfway down the table to the host's right. Alert to every nuance and undertone of the gay, nervous conversation, he could sense that the steel magnate was ruling his nerves with rigid determination, and succeeding far better than Armand Dunant. The Frenchman's manner was too quick, too painfully at ease to be genuine, as he chatted with Catherine Lloyd. She, alone among the guests, seemed utterly unaware of the significance of the occasion.

Ruling graciously, wittily, and observantly over the hostess' end of the table sat Phedre Renoire, lovely in a particularly fascinating evening gown.

Hideyo Kanamura, evidently an old friend of Polk, sat like an impassive old ivory carving. He had concealed his emotions on finding North a guest.

As for Mademoiselle Nadia Stefan who, to North's complete consternation, had appeared in company with Baron von Rentner, she sat beside North, so utterly mistress of herself and her emotions that he was more than ever filled with admiration.

As for North, he found it next to impossible to believe that it was this woman who had so nearly brought him to a premature end. He had met clever women in the game before, but never one quite like Nadia. He wondered, for a moment, if she did not have hypnotic powers.

"And was your fishing trip a success, Monsieur le Capitaine?" she inquired.

Betraying no trace of surprise that she knew of his trip to Maui, North shrugged with perfect good humor. "Very poor luck. We didn't catch a thing worth while."

"Fibber!" Nadia murmured sotto voce and fixed her devastating eyes upon him. Louder she said, "Be consoled, monsieur; game fishes are not easily caught. But you and Monsieur Kilgour yonder certainly did get most becoming coats of tan."

Then she added, "I have always wanted to be a sculptress. If I ever do become one, I shall want you to pose for me."

"I should be delighted." North smiled. "For what subject would I do—Mercury?"

Nadia Stefan's musical laugh rippled out in sheer delight. "Mercury? Mon Dieu, no! If my mythology is not quite wrong, Mercury was the god of thieves," she complained. "No, I do not think I would model you as Mercury."

"As Janus then?"

"De pire en pire! — Worse and worse! Though you try hard, mon ami, there's really nothing two-faced about you. You are almost naive."

"Merci bien," said he as Nadia began to arrange some almonds in a daisy-like pattern. "No," she went on, "I think I would model you as Aeneas, 'strong in battle and wise in council'."

Girl Badly Burned Pulling Flaming Roast Of Meat From Oven

Sudbury, Ont., Nov. 25 (CP) — Rose Falcioni, 20, was badly burned here early today when she pulled a flaming, over-done meat roast from an oven and threw it out of her home to avert a serious fire.

She was taken to hospital where she was treated for burns on the face, chest, legs and one hand.

The girl discovered the blazing meat, left in the oven overnight, when she was preparing breakfast. As she opened the door to throw it outside, a gust of wind carried the flames back into her face and forced her to drop the pan and spill boiling grease on her body.

FRENCH AMBASSADOR NAMED

Vichy, France, Nov. 25 —(AP)— Louis De Robien was appointed French Ambassador to Argentina today.

The 58-year-old envoy has been in the Foreign Service since 1914 and has occupied diplomatic posts at Rio de Janeiro and Montevideo. He was sub-director of American affairs at the Foreign Office in 1933.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 26. — (CP)—Stocks held about even, on Toronto Exchange today, in the average, with Monday's closing prices. Industrials and Base Metals were slightly higher at noon but the gains were matched by small declines in the Gold and Western Oil groups. Turnover totalled only 120,000 shares in the first three hours.

Broulan was the active Gold issue in the early trade and the price firmed to 86. San Antonio and Powell Rouyn were higher.

Falconbridge and Sherritt were narrowly lower in the Base Metal list.

Paper stocks weakened narrowly and Loblaw A and Canadian Canners were down slightly. Massey-Harris Pfd weakened a point to 33.

Home Oil lost 5 cents to 2.50 and Calgary-Edmonton held steady at $1.55.

WALL STREET

New York, Nov. 26—(AP) — The Stock Market suffered from buying anemia today although selected issues managed to exhibit mild animation.

Steels as in the preceding session were among early favorites and for a while gains of fractions to a point predominated. These were lopped off in many cases near the fourth hour. Dealings were sluggish throughout.

Stocks in front now and then—some eventually wavered—were U. S. Steel Bethlehem, Montgomery Ward, U.S. Rubber, Norfolk and Western, Republican Steel, Sears Roebuck, United Aircraft, American Can, Kennecott, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, Great Northern and International Mercantile Marine.

Behind occasionally were Chrysler, Westinghouse, Pennsylvania, American Smelting and Texas Corp.

Canadian Distillers Seagram advanced 1-8 of a point. Lake Shore Mines and Canadian Pacific held unchanged. Other Canadian issues were inactive.

Butter Prices Rise, Eggs Show Losses

Toronto, Nov. 26—Fair demand for light offerings pushed butter prices higher on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. New losses occurred in fresh eggs.

Offerings of the first-grade Ontario product at 30 1-2c a pound moved easily on the butter market, encouraging sellers to lift the price to 30 3-4 cents, at which level buying resistance was met. The market closed in the range of 30 1-2c to 30 3-4c with the bulk of the business transacted at the lower figure.

Outside of the good demand for pullets, action was slow on the egg market. Current receipts arrived in sufficient volume to satisfy local buying. Prices continued to decline on top grades, while the lower grades maintained previous levels.

Montreal Produce

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 31 1-2c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 30 1-2c to 31c.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Nov. 26 (CP)—Dressedweight were up 15 cents at Peterborough, down 10 cents at Hull and prices were unchanged at Barrie, Brantford and Stratford in bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Dressedweight — Barrie $10.65, Brantford $10.15 plus transportation, Hull $10, Peterborough $10.25 plus transportation, Stratford $10.25 plus transportation.

Chatham and London later reported unchanged prices.

Liveweights—Chatham $7.

Dressedweight — Chatham $9.70, London $10.25 plus transportation.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, Nov. 26 (CP)—Prices on all classes of livestock held steady today on the Montreal livestock markets, according to a report by the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Receipts: Cattle 271; calves 247; hogs 1,132; sheep and lambs 275.

There were no top steers today; common ones brought $5-$6. Good heifers were $6-$6.50 and common as low as $3.50. A good fed calf sold for $10.50. Good cows made $5.25-$5.50 with mediums at $4.50-$5 and common butchers down to $3.75. Canners and cutters were $2.50-$3.50, common bulls $3.50-$4.50 and good ones $5-$5.50 with one at $6.

Veal calves ranged from $8.50-$11, drinkers $5.25-$8 and grassers $4.25-$5 but mostly $4.50-$4.75.

Hogs remained unchanged at $10.85 for B-1 dressed, $8.25 for B-1 alive, fed and watered and up to $8.35 off trucks. Grade A drew $1 premium with discounts on off grades. Sows were $4.75-$5.50.

Good ewes and wethers sold for $10, culls and bucks $8 and sheep $3.50-$6.

Toronto, Nov. 26 (CP)—Cattle trade was very slow with prices steady on all grades up to midsession on the Livestock Market here today. Lambs were firm. Calves, hogs and sheep were steady. The holdover from Monday was 2,700 head of cattle. The cattle supply included 1,500 stockers.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 820, calves 350, hogs 960, sheep and lambs 1,170.

Prices in the cattle section were: Butcher steers and heifers 5.25-7.50; boners 4.25-5.00; butcher cows 4.00-5.50; canners and cutters 3.00-3.75; butcher bulls 5.00-5.75; bolognas 4.25-4.75; fed calves 8.00-10.25; common to medium stockers 4.00-6.50.

Calves sold at 10.00-11.00 for choice with common heavy vealers selling downward to 6.00. Grassers sold at 4.50-5.50.

Lambs brought 9.50-9.85 for good ewes and wethers with a few at 9.90, heavies and bucks 8.50-8.85 and culls 7.50-8.00

Sheep sold at 2.00-5.50.

Hogs sold at 10.75 dressedweight and 8.00 liveweight. Sows traded at 4.50-5.25 dressedweight.

ITALIAN RETREAT

Couldn't Hold the Line.

The special dispatch from the central front added that "the furious resistance of the Italian rear guard lasted all night," continuing:

"They brought in the 42nd regiment, which is a choice regiment of Romans, and dispatched it immediately to the front lines to hold up the retreat. They were fresh men, their officers full of enthusiasm. The enemy had been decimated in this sector in the past few days and had been reinforced to prevent disbanding.

"After a four-hour pitched battle, they had to retreat in spite of the fact that their officers fought with self-sacrifice and made great efforts to hold the men."

In the northern sector of the front, Greeks reported passing the key town of Pogradetz, without specifically claiming its capture, and said cavalry and mountain troops were pursuing rapidly retiring Italians northward.

(Authoritative military circles in London reported Pogradetz actually had been captured.)

At the opposite end of the battlefront, Greeks reported passing the key town of Pogradetz, without specifically claiming its capture, and said cavalry and mountain troops were pursuing rapidly retreating Italians northward.

Greek advance units were said to have driven to the outskirts of Argirocastro against determined resistance.

A dispatch from an Associated Press Correspondent on that front said fighting still was going on last night between scattered forces in the maze of mountains and valleys around the town with some Italians who surrendered "a sorry sight, ragged and hungry," and others holding out grimly from positions in the rocks.

They were under artillery fire—some of them cut off from support.

Greeks said other large forces of Italians in Southwestern Albania were in danger of being isolated by the Greek drive to Argirocastro, commanding the road north.

The dispatch from the front said the amount of supplies left behind in the Italian retreat — trucks, tanks, motorcycles and weapons—"is so great it literally clogs the roads."

A Greek spokesman declared Greek advance units "overshot Pogradetz," 25 miles north of fallen Koritza and 30 miles inside Albania but dispatches from the Yugoslav-Albanian frontier only a few miles away said Italians, recently heavily reinforced, still held the town.

The reports from the frontier said 350 truckloads of fresh Fascist troops arrived at the supply route town recently to bolster the tired regiments which fell back there after two weeks fighting in Koritza.

The Greek High Command communique mentioned no specific gains but said "our troops, continuing their advance, occupied some new positions."

Italian Planes Strike

Italian planes struck behind Greek lines yesterday in raids which a communique said caused civilian casualties at Arta, a town on the Island of Corfu, Lixuri and Argostoli, on the Island of Cephalonia and several towns in Epirus.

Reports from Salonika indicated Albanians disarmed months ago by the Italians, had adopted "passive resistance" to hamper military operations in their country.

A wounded Albanian was quoted as saying "open revolt is impossible" because of lack of arms, but many Albanians were doing whatever they could "to sabotage the Italian war machine."

R. A. MEMBERS SHOUT TAUNTS WHEN SENTENCED

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Nov. 26 (CP).—Five members of the outlawed Republican Army shouted taunts at the judge from the prisoner's dock as they were sentenced today to twelve years' imprisonment and ten strokes of the cat-o'-nine-tails. The I.R.A. members, captured in a roadside gun battle after attempting to raid a bank at Armagh, were rushed to their cells by police who muzzled them with their hands.

BAD WEATHER

murky skies, came over in force after 12 hours of weather-curtailed activity in which London enjoyed its first night without an alarm since Oct. 6.

London had one short afternoon alert, apparently caused by a raider which flew up the Thames Estuary.

British fighters engaged in a dogfight with one German formation off Dover and shot down a Messerschmitt.

A squadron of nine Messerschmitt fighters made a three-minute bomb attack this afternoon on a convoy in the Channel before being driven off by the ships' anti-aircraft guns. Observers on the coast said none of the ships was hit.

As the planes turned back across the Channel, two appeared to be in trouble.

Early last night raiders dropped bombs in the west of England. An official announcement said casualties were few, damage light.

But with the coming of dawn the Germans, flying at 20,000 feet, began crossing the coast and for two hours German long-range guns on the French coast shelled the Dover area intermittently. British batteries replied shell for shell directing their barrage at the Cap Griz Nez area.

The first formations proceeded toward the Thames estuary through heavy anti-aircraft fire, and spread out over central England and south Wales. London's first alert of the day sounded in the early afternoon, but ended within a few minutes.

One break in a night of quiet, apparently forced by bad weather, came shortly after dark last night and caused little damage and few casualties, a government communique said. A few persons were killed.

Previous independent reports had indicated the entire country escaped the raiders for the first time since nightly bombings began Sept. 7, but the government communique said the Nazis kept their chain unbroken by the one "token" attack despite bad weather.

"Little damage was caused and casualties were few", the communique said, "but they included a small number of persons killed".

Reports reaching London this morning indicated the Nazis had planned a heavy raid on one town last night, but called it off because of the weather.

Blanket of Fog Drops Down

The first planes over a western town which was badly hit Sunday night (identified as Bristol by the Germans) dropped incendiary bombs to light the way for bombers-to-come.

But then a heavy blanket of fog apparently dropped down suddenly on the continent, and the German planes were grounded.

Londoners, skeptical of the break in the air war, since it was only the second night in 80 that they had had no alarm in the capital, did not change their usual shelter habits. There was little extra street traffic.

In the west end more taxis were abroad than usual and a few more tables were occupied in all-night restaurants.

Most folk, however, stayed indoors to relish their second consecutive night of sound sleep—having taken advantage Sunday night also of the early end of two short alarms.

'Spotters' Had Night's Rest

Regular patrons of the popular shelters still used them, and many of those asleep below ground did not know there was no raid.

Rooftop "spotters" had a night's rest, too, but stayed on duty, just in case.

London's only previous alarm-free night was on Oct. 6, but other parts of Britain were attacked.

London had one brief alert around midday yesterday, but the raiders got no nearer than the city's outskirts.

As the air war re-opened near mid-morning today, German fliers crossed the coast at an altitude of nearly 20,000 feet and headed toward the Thames Estuary. Anti-aircraft batteries threw a heavy barrage into the sky.

No Proposal Made Of Britain's Return To Gold Standard

London, Nov. 26. — (CP)—Sir Kingsley Wood, chancellor of the Exchequer, told the House of Commons today no proposal that Britain should return to the gold standard had been made in a discussion between a British treasury official and Henry Morgenthau, Jr., secretary of the Treasury of the United States.

The British official was not identified.

Nazi Secret Agents Masquerade as Jews Says Great Britain

New York, Nov. 26—(CP)—The New York News says today the United States has been informed by Great Britain that Nazi secret agents and saboteurs, "specially trained and even physically 're-modelled' to masquerade as authentic Jewish refugees," are "fleeing" to vital world areas to operate under the direct orders of Germany.

"These bogus emigrees, the British government has learned, receive their instruction in a special 'Jewish institute' at Prague, capital of the Nazi-dominated protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia.

"They are supplied with documents and visas of bona fide Jews who either are safely imprisoned or who have died in concentration camps."

AN ARMED GUARD

The crash occurred when airplanes flown by the two men collided at an altitude of about 500 feet as they circled in to land at No. 3 elementary flying training school at Crumlin Airport after solo training flights. R.C.A.F. officials at the training school said the airplanes had not been flying in formation.

Both were well-known athletes. Duff, ranked sixth in 1940 Canadian tennis rankings, a few months ago teamed with Don McDiarmid of Ottawa to win the Quebec doubles championship. He reached singles and doubles finals later in the Canadian championship tournament.

Graduate of Princeton

Higginbotham graduated from Princeton University in 1939 after playing varsity football and soccer. He captained the lacrosse team and was a Phi Betta Kappa fraternity member. A few weeks after France capitulated he gave up his position as Assistant Sales Manager of the Packard Motor Company's eastern branch office at Philadelphia and joined the R.C.A.F. in Montreal.

A court of Inquiry has been ordered into the accident, which occurred at sundown. One of the pilots was believed to have lost sight of the other in the setting sun and descended in a rapid glide to land. The machines locked together after the collision and as they fell to the ground wreckage was strewn over a wide area.

John Howe, a farmer near here, was an eye-witness. "The planes were both going south and turning east, some distance apart," he said. "They had turned into the flightway when one of them appeared to have overflown the flightway and turned right back into the other plane."

Bodies Released

The two men had come to the training school near here from Toronto Nov. 5.

It was the first fatal accident at the training school since it was opened in June.

Dr. A. R. Routledge, Chief Coroner, released the bodies to the R.C.A.F. after an examination, and said no civil investigation will be held unless requested by air force officials.

Lac. Duff, born in Renfrew, Ont., was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Duff of Montreal West, Montreal suburb. Three brothers, Alex, Cameron and James, and a sister, Marjorie, also survive.

Lac. Higginbotham was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Edward Higginbotham of South Orange, and nephew of Edward D. Duffield, late President of the Prudential Insurance Company of America. He also leaves two sisters, Christina and Janet.

MAY SOON ASK

ward the pending proposal of Senator William King (Dem.-Utah) for repeal of restrictions which now prevent Great Britain from obtaining credit here for war purchases.

Possibility of action on King's resolution before convening of the new Congress in January appeared slender. Democratic leader Alben Barkley said yesterday after a visit to the White House that the present Congress would not act on any measure to aid Britain financially.

Meanwhile, objections were raised in both American and British quarters to suggestions that Britain's war financing problem be met by the sale or exchange of Caribbean possessions to the United States.

The plan, advanced unofficially both here and in London was said to present difficulties on both sides and was unlikely to become a subject of negotiation any time soon.

Lothian Heard

The Marquess of Lothian, British ambassador just returned from consultations in London, said that the question of obtaining United States credits would become pressing for Britain "in the first half" of next year. He said he saw no necessity for Congressional consideration before January.

Senator Walter Nye (Rep.-North Dakota) pressed for a hearing tomorrow on his resolution to investigate the extent of British financial holdings in the United States. He said he was unconvinced by a recent statement of Lord Lothian that Great Britain was "nearing the end" of her resources here.

Independent Views

(Independently, some of the highest administration officials estimated today that Britain had enough money and securities available here to finance at least another year's purchases of United States munitions, and possible as much as two or more years.)

Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Rep-Michigan), another member of the Foreign Relations Committee said he was worried by a different aspect of the situation.

"I think it would be pertinent," he said, "if someone in authority would explore our own resources to determine how we are going to pay our own bills before we start to consider paying someone else's."

Senator Robert Taft (Rep-Ohio) said he had heard suggestions that financial aid to Great Britain might take the form of loans to Canada.

"I think I would be willing to make a loan to Canada," he said, "but I don't believe I am ready to vote for English credits at this time."

vails in the army, but there is more comprehension of how slender have been our resources in the past and an understanding of the consequences of going off on half-cock.

"I say with all deference that there are a number of persons in this House who bear some measure of responsibility for any shortage of equipment which may handicap our strategy."

Soldiers Know War Aims

Declaring that there is little talk in the army of war aims, because the soldiers know they are fighting for "their homes, their lives, their freedom, their right to determine their own future," Randolph Churchill said the few who are concerned about war aims "I suspect are more anxious to prepare some quack remedy of their own to follow victory than they were concerned with victory itself."

"Today We Are Resisting Evil"

"In one way I think it is already a better world in a spiritual sense than it was two years ago; then we were giving in to evil; today we are resisting it," said the young Churchill.

Ever since the Czar of Russia was "butchered because of the policy by which he and his ancestors governed," he said, "that has been the only policy which has triumphed in Europe, the Czar's policy, the policy of tyranny based on anti-semitism and a powerful secret police."

"Can you wonder that these nations are disillusioned, that they do not instantly . . . jump up and come to your help?

"Whatever our war aims may be, unless we key ourselves to absolutely iron determination to exert ourselves after the war as fully in years of peace and reconstruction as we have done in war all we have gained will be thrown away."

cial transactions, to the British Empire totalled $1,740,000,000.

3.—At the beginning of the war, British Empire gold, American securities and other dollar resources exceeded $4,500,000,000 and were being augmented at the rate of about $800,000,000 a year with new gold production from Empire mines.

4.—From Sept. 1, 1939, to Oct. 31, 1940 $4,038,000,000 worth of gold was shipped to the United States from the Empire.

5.—Although the British Government has sequestered practically all the American securities of its Nationals so that they could be sold for cash net British sales of American securities amounted to only $48,545,000 in the first half of 1940. The total security holdings were estimated at $735,000,000 at the war's outbreak.

6.—Part of the Empire's cash needs are being met from the sale of British products in this country, particularly Scotch whisky and Australian wool. Whisky now leads all United Kingdom exports to the United States, and amounted to $35,000,000 in the last year.

WINDSOR FLIER REPORTED MISSING

Mother of FO Stanley Waugh of the R.A.F. Notified Her Son Did Not Return From Action

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 26 (CP)—Flying Officer Stanley Waugh is missing following air operations overseas on Nov. 25, his mother, Mrs. Frances Pomeroy, was notified last night.

A cabegram from the British Air Ministry at London notified Mrs. Pomeroy that her son had not returned from action with the Royal Air Force.

Flying Officer Waugh was born in Windsor and lived here all his life with the exception of five years spent in Detroit. He is 22 years of age.

Waugh went to England on Oct. 6, 1939.

Tweed Youth Given 3 Years in Prison

Owen Sound, Ont., Nov. 26. — (CP)—Robert Anderson of Tweed, and Henry Gassner of New Brunswick were sentenced today to three years in Kingston penitentiary after pleading guilty to robbery with violence and theft of a motorcar. Charges arose from the hold-up of George Lake, taxi-driver, who was robbed of a small sum of money and beaten and then abandoned when the taxi was stolen. The car was stopped near Guelph after a police chase.

VICHY RECRUITS 'ARMISTICE ARMY'

Vichy, Nov. 26.—(AP)—A recruiting campaign was started today for a small, professional "armistice army" for France.

Gen. Charles Huntziger, Minister of War, asserted the "new army" would serve as "a living model of a regenerated nation".

Recruiting was limited to men between 18 and 25.

CHURCHILL REJECTS SUGGESTION TODAY

London, Nov. 26.—(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill rejected in the House of Commons today a suggestion that an attempt be made to arrange a Christmas Armistice.

Bank of Montreal Report Reveals War-Time Strength

Assets of $961,334,955 Show Only Moderate Decline from All-Time High Mark—Commercial Loans at $233,560,368 Again Increased in Meeting Needs of Industrial and Business Expansion—High Ratio of Liquidity—Profits Somewhat Lower—Government Tax Payments Much Larger

After a year of war-time conditions, the annual statement of the Bank of Montreal reflects again the strength and solidarity of an institution which for 123 years has been in the forefront of Canadian finance. Assets of $961,334,955 show some contraction as compared with the previous report, when an all-time record of $1,025,508,367 was established—due in part to transactions of a special nature, as was explained at the annual meeting of shareholders—but showing a substantial increase over the total of $874,255,828 reported in 1938.

The profits for the year, after making appropriations to Contingent Reserve Fund and provision for bad and doubtful debts and Federal and Provincial taxes, were $3,435,941, as compared with $3,462,446 in 1939. The increase in the bank's contributions to public revenues is indicated by an increase in Federal and Provincial taxes from $1,198,413 to $1,927,824, or $729,411. The profits are the equivalent of 4.5% on the capital, rest and undivided profits, showing no appreciable change.

Strong Liquid Position

The Bank's liquid position is strongly maintained. Quickly available resources, totalling $663,185,436, show some contraction, largely as the result of the reduction of holdings of government and other bonds and debentures from $517,171,255 to $461,827,040, but are still at the high ratio of 75% of all liabilities to the public. Cash in the bank's vaults and money on deposit with the Bank of Canada at $83,034,576 compare with $94,641,456 in the previous report and are 9.39% of the total liabilities to the public. Notes of and cheques on other banks, $32,254,269, money on deposit in other banks, $61,382,283, stocks $196,182, call loans outside Canada $19,552,470, call loans in Canada, $4,606,348, and acceptances, $332,264, show no significant changes.

The bank's part in financing the expansion of industrial, agricultural and other productive and general business activities throughout the country is reflected in an increase of over $13,000,000 in loans "to manufacturers, farmers, merchants and others," at $233,560,368, compared with $220,548,911. Loans to provincial and municipal governments, including school districts of $35,313,063, compare with $36,712,818, while other items among the bank's resources—Bank Premises, $12,900,000, Acceptances and Letters of Credit, $11,677,303, and "other assets", $2,724,581—show no important changes.

Deposits, at $848,865,349, compare with $914,909,050; notes of the bank in circulation, at $19,816,530, were less by $1,960,772, in keeping with the contraction of issuing power under the Bank Act; acceptances and letters of credit outstanding at $11,677,303, and other liabilities to the amount of $3,802,125, show some increase, the total of liabilities to the public at $884,251,299 being lower by $64,251,622. The reduction in deposits can be taken as a result of the withdrawal of the special transaction already referred to and public participation in government war financing.

Profit And Loss Account

After payment of the usual dividends and appropriation of $500,000 for bank premises, $55,941 was added to the balance of profit and loss compared with $82,446 in 1939; the total balance in this account is now $1,321,642.

Following are salient features of the statement, which is for the year to October 31 and is published in the bank's usual "easily understandable" form:

Total Resources	961,334,955	1,025,508,367
Liquid Resources	663,185,436	742,803,867
Deposits	848,865,349	914,909,050
Bonds and Debentures	461,827,040	517,171,255
Commercial Loans	233,560,368	220,548,911
Provincial and Municipal Loans	35,313,063	36,712,818
Call Loans in Canada	4,606,348	4,573,822
Calls Loans outside Canada	19,552,470	19,142,173
Capital, Surplus, Undivided Profits and Reserves for Dividends	77,083,856	77,005,445
Profits	3,435,941	3,462,446

hope to be able to start back to the Arctic by next July."

Eats Meat 3 Times Daily

He explained he came to Montreal for a rest and for treatment for stomach trouble — "perhaps caused by eating meat three times a day for so long."

"I must see a dentist too and an occulist—then I'm going back."

His mission at Igloolik, 1,000 miles north of Churchill, serves about 350 Eskimos spread over an area of almost 400 miles.

Father Bazin smiled as he described the Eskimos as a people who are "naturally democratic."

"They don't know anything about politics but their very simple form of government can be called democratic. Its essence is the liberty of the Eskimos, their love of freedom.

"Their leaders are chosen for the ability as huntsmen or fishermen. At Igloolik, the leader is an old Eskimo who had great prowess as a huntsman. His son probably will succeed him because he is a very able huntsman too.

"There is no question of the leader imposing his will however. "In council the men decide whether they should hunt or fish, where they should go and what game they should seek.

"Everything is marked by happiness. They spend hours laughing and talking. They really have no worries. There is no such thing as a sad Eskimo."

Maharajah of Kolapur Dies at Bombay, India

Bombay, India, Nov. 26 (CP) — The Maharajah of Kol Apur, Sir Shri Rajaram Chatrpati, 43, died here today.

The Maharajah, who weighed 280 pounds, was among India's foremost rasehorse owners.

PRES. AMERICAN CAN CO. DIES

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—Herbert Abram Baker, 59, president of the American Can Company, died Monday night at New York hospital after a month's illness.

Chemist, industrialist and author of many scientific papers, Baker came to the United States from his native Canada in 1906.

He was born in Harmony Corners, Ont., near Whitby.

AGILE DEER

Piermont, N.Y., Nov. 26 (AP).—Philip Bosco, roused at dawn by what he thought was a thief, fired his shot gun into his yard and struck a 10-point buck deer. The deer leaped through three windows of Bosco's ice and coal company building, landed atop a car parked outside and escaped.

DUTCH STUDENTS STAGE STRIKE

University of Delft Closed by Nazis Because of Trouble Over Dismissal of Jewish Professor

Amsterdam (Via Berlin), Nov. 26—(AP)—The technical University of Delft was closed for an indefinite period by German authorities today as a sequel to a student strike yesterday when a Jewish professor was dismissed.

Student demonstrations have occurred also at the Universities of of Leyden and Utrecht, but thus far only investigative action has been taken at those institutions.

The removal of the Jewish professor was done under the German law for occupied Holland stipulating that Jews must be excluded from official and semi-official undertakings, including schools, courts and the postal and telegraph services.

C.C.F. Whip Demands Reason for "Beaching" Of Cmdr. Chas. Beard

Victoria, Nov. 26 (CP)—H. E. Winch, C.C.F. whip, said in the Legislature yesterday that many British Columbia parents whose sons have been lost in recent naval mishaps "are wondering why so many senior naval officers are ashore while mere youths are second in command of our warships."

Speaking in the Budget debate, Mr. Winch referred to the address in the House last week of Colin Cameron (C.C.F.-Comox) who said young officers were being given charge of hundreds of lives in the navy.

"The people of this province have pledged wholehearted cooperation in Canada's war effort and are entitled to an explanation in matters affecting the lives of hundreds of British Columbians in the Royal Canadian Navy," said Mr. Winch.

The C.C.F. whip also demanded the reason for the "beaching" of Cmdr. Charles Beard after his command, the Canadian Auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert, captured a German freighter off the coast of Mexico and escorted the prize to Esquimalt.

(Retirement of Cmdr. Beard from command of the Prince Robert was announced here Oct. 11. Cmdr. F. G. Hart replaced him.

Premier T. D. Pattullo asked why this matter should not be brought up by the 14 British Columbia representatives in the House of Commons at Ottawa "instead of it being aired on the floor of the House."

Saying that he had been told Cmdr. Beard gave an interview aboard the Robert to newspapermen and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, Mr. Winch added that the people of British Columbia were entitled to know if the CBC "is become a sort of Gestapo."

"I am told that a CBC employee sat next to Commander Beard with a microphone and when an 'off-the-record' chat took place following the official interview, that the CBC man did not turn off the microphone. I am given to understand that a record of the entire conversation was mailed to the East and might have resulted in Cmdr. Beard being retired."

Mother is Burned Severely Trying To Rescue Children

Fort William, Nov. 26 (CP)—Mrs. John R. Jackson, Jr., is in serious condition in hospital here with burns and other injuries suffered yesterday in an heroic but futile attempt to rescue two of her four children from the fire which destroyed their home near here. Mrs. Jackson saved the other children.

Arlene, six, and Janet, aged two, died in the Kakabeka Falls home. Mrs. Jackson, working in the yard, saw the fire and rushed into the house by the front door. She hurried John, aged four, and Florence, three, to safety but the flames spread so rapidly she was unable to return.

In a desperate effort to save the other children the mother smashed the glass in a side window with her bare hands, which suffered deep gashes and attempted to crawl through. She was burned severely and driven back by the flames and smoke.

Neighbors who saw the fire rushed to help but arrived too late. Cause of the fire has not been determined. The father was absent at the time.

Cheese and Whipped Cream No Longer On Danes' Diet List

Copenhagen, Denmark, (via Berlin), Nov. 26—(AP) — Whipped cream and rich, oily cheese, of which the Danes are fond, were stricken from the Danish diet today by an order designed to meet a milk shortage caused by cattle slaughtering.

Much of German-occupied Denmark's cattle has been slaughtered for lack of feed, which formerly was imported largely from Great Britain.

Tobacco stocks also are thinning and tobacco dealers say their entire turnover has dropped to approximately 25 per cent of 1939 figures.

DOGFIGHTER AND HIS DOG

The man is Flight-Sergeant Cecil Unwin, one of the heroes of the British Royal Air Force, who was recently decorated with the Distinguished Flying Medal. The dog is "Flash," mascot of Sergt. Unwin's squadron. The sergeant is credited with downing 10 German planes. Once he intercepted an enemy bombing formation escorted by 30 fighter planes. He attacked, downed two enemy planes and returned safely to his home field.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Hints were seen today that the axis front in the "new world order" is not as solid as its members would like it believed.

Two developments have occurred to indicate it may be softening a bit. First was yesterday's announcement that Bulgaria would not be invited to enter it, for the moment at least, and second Tokyo's disclosure that Admiral Kichisabura Nomura, former Japanese foreign minister, would become ambassador to the United States. Nomura will try to ease the strain between the countries.

The first development was particularly surprising because it was generally supposed Hitler would send troops to attack Greece through Bulgaria, seeking to help his harried Italian friends who are taking a thorough beating in Albania.

Bulgaria was the logical German approach to Greece, as it would provide the shortest land bridge between Rumania, an axis adherent, and northern Greece. Along that road, it was widely believed, Hitler's troops might try to divert the Greeks from their pursuit of the Italians. This, apparently, is postponed, if it is to take place at all.

It was thought that the seeming hesitancy of German aid to Italy, which certainly needs it in a hurry, may lie in the attitude of Russia. The Kremlin maintains silence, unlike the other totalitarian governments, and its moves bear greater evidence of diplomatic patience than those of Hitler, Mussolini or the Tokyo government.

Verbal Attacks on Italy

The fact that the Turkish Press and radio pulled no punches in their verbal attacks on Italy and that they called encouragement to the Yugoslavs to resist Axis incursion lent ground for belief Russia may have tipped Germany to leave Bulgaria alone.

Turkey and Russia have been friendly for years and if Russia had tipped Germany it is almost certain that the Turkish government would know, about it and probable that the other independent Balkan countries would be led to feel encouraged, too.

On the other hand the reason for Bulgaria's breathing spell might lie in an entirely different direction. There was a suggestion in some London quarters yesterday that Hitler was preparing again to attempt an invasion of the British Isles.

There were reports that naval vessels were accumulating anew at Channel "invasion" ports and that other forces were being moved overland. The Royal Air Force busily bombed these places and, judging from the spectacular nature of their raids as seen from the English shore, must have inflicted heavy damage on them.

Hitler may have decided against fighting on two fronts, one on the Grecian border and one on the Channel, or he may feel he has to risk a show against the home of the R.A.F. which has been pounding establishments deeper and deeper within Germany and undoubtedly causing the populace keen anxiety, because the Germans were told they need never fear the R.A.F.

f a Channel adventure is to be attempted soon conditions for it are probably no better than when it was broken up last September. If the intention were to support it with an air attack, they are worse, because the visibility is worse. If it were to be supported only by artillery or atmospheric obscurity, they are better, in a sense, because the fogs are thicker, and worse in another because the Channel tends to be much rougher.

NEWSBOYS USE WAR TERMS

Dallas, Nov. 26 (AP).—Newsboys hoarse from long shouting of war news made the most of the Texas storm. "Amarilla taken," they yelled. "Amarillo taken by the enemy —Nature!" "Panhandle frozen like Finland. Texas flooded . . . but refuses to surrender . . . read all about it."

BODY OF CHILD TAKEN TO SHORE

Five-Year-Old Girl Burned to Death When Home Destroyed

Lindsay, Ont., Nov. 26 — (CP)—The body of five-year-old Mary Warren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Warren, Thorah Island, Lake Simcoe, was brought to the main land at Beaverton by rowboat yesterday. The child's father reported that she had burned to death when their home was destroyed late Sunday.

The father told Provincial Constable George Yule the child was alone in the house when the fire broke out. He was repairing boats on the shore of the lake when he saw the fire in his house, he said.

He ran to the house, broke a window, pulled the child from its bed and ran to the lake in an attempt to revive her, he told police.

Nazi and Red Students Battle In Sofia University

Sofia, Bulgaria, Nov. 26 (AP).—Nazi and Communist students battled in a Sofia University auditorium today.

The fighting, in which several students were injured severely, broke out after a lecture at which Nazis attempted to distribute leaflets claiming for Bulgaria frontiers from the Black Sea to Albania and from the Danube River to the Aegean Sea.

Police made several arrests.

Communist students were joined in the fighting by Democrat, Agrarian and Liberal group sympathizers. They said they wanted "peace and neutrality" for Bulgaria.

University officials began precautions intended to prevent further outbreaks tomorrow—21st anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Neuilly which confirmed the loss of territory by Bulgaria after the first great war.

Chauffeur Pleads Guilty to Charge

Hamilton, Nov. 26 (CP)—Taken into custody as the result of investigations into the brutal assault upon James McKay, 79-year-old West Flamboro farmer on a county sideroad Saturday night, George Wreaks, 23, chauffeur from Waterdown, pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and robbery in court today. He was remanded a week for sentence. The sum involved was said to be $100.

High County Constable David Green told the court that Wreaks met McKay, who once employed him on his farm, while in the city. The accused told his former employer he would drive him home. They took a taxi, the constable continued, and drove into the country where Wreaks ran out of money and the taxi driver refused to go farther.

"The accused and Mr. McKay set out on foot and after they had walked a short distance, Mr. McKay was struck in the side of the face and stunned. It was at this time that accused took more than $100 from the pocket of Mr. McKay," the constable testified.

The constable said Wreaks continued to walk with the old man until he recovered his senses.

"Then he told him he would go back and see if he could find the money which had been 'lost'. He didn't tell the old man what had happened to him or how he had been struck. Mr. McKay did not see Wreaks after he went back to try to locate the money."

Defence Advisers Summoned to Parley By the President

Washington, Nov. 26.—(AP)—President Roosevelt summoned Defence advisers today for a conference on strikes in National Defence industries. The meeting will be held this afternoon.

Invited were War Secretary Henry Stimson, Naval Secretary Frank Knox, Attorney General Robert Jackson, and Sidney Hillman, Labor members of the Defence Commission.

At the Capitol, meanwhile members of the House Judiciary Committee gathered at the call of Chairman Hatton Sumners (Dem.-Texas) to consider possible legislation that might be enacted to curb strikes in Defence plants.

Sumners declined to discuss in advance what curbs might be proposed but he held an informal, preliminary meeting late yesterday with some committee members and other congressmen who hold that current strikes may "sabotage" the Defence program.

It was learned that these men discussed these proposals:—

1.—A simple ban against strikes in Defence plants.

2.—Compulsory arbitration of differences between employer and employee, with an attendant "cooling off" period for both sides.

3.—Increased penalties for all forms of sabotage.

4.—Prohibitions against the closed shop if it became an issue in a plant producing Defence material.

MEMBER C.A.S.F. TO BE TRIED ON MURDER CHARGE

DISPUTE WITH COOK

A Home Counties Town, England Nov. 26 (CP Cable)—When Private Charles Augustin Monahan, 26, of Saint John, N.B., appeared today for trial on a murder charge, the prosecution asserted the prisoner shot his best pal, Lance-Corporal Creighton Charles Baker, of Juniper, N.B., after a dispute with the regimental cook, Private Evans.

All were members of a New Brunswick Infantry Regiment.

G. J. Ball, prosecuting, said the dispute arose between Monahan and Evans in November. On Nov. 13, the men were lined up for supper when Monahan arrived. He had had some drinks but was not drunk. The pair exchanged words. Monahan allegedly said: "I'm going to get you before the war's over if I have to get you the dirty way."

Monahan vanished, re-appeared with a rifle and told Evans to get in a corner. Baker told the accused to put down his rifle. Monahan told Baker to stay still but the Lance Corporal stepped forward.

Ball said Monahan fired and Baker fell to the floor. Monahan then fired at himself, suffering a flesh wound in the chest. He went out and was subsequently arrested by police, allegedly saying: "I would have got him, but I got my best pal. I shot him in cold blood. All I want to do is die. I deserve all I get."

Baker died in hospital the same night.

Monahan, who renewed his defence, was remanded for committal to the January sessions at the Old Bailey in London.

WHOLE FAMILY KILLED IN RAID

Windsor Woman Learns of Fate From Letter Received

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 26 (CP) Mrs. Harry Stewart has learned that her sister and her entire family were killed in their beds during a raid over Gourock, Scotland.

The family were Mrs. John Barbour, her husband, and two boys, Jack 13, and Nicol 10. Gourock is in Renfrewshire near the busy River Clyde industrial area of Glasgow and Greenock. A military objective, half a mile from the tenement house is believed to have been the target of the bombers.

Mrs. Stewart first learned the news through a letter from her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Hughes, residing not far distant from the raid. The letter was written Nov. 6. It said that the body of Mrs. Barbour was not found for 9 days.

The youngest boy, Nicol Barbour, was discovered still in bed but trapped in the wreckage. He called to his rescuers, firemen and members of the demolition squad to hurry up and also shouted that his big brother was beside him.

Nicol was taken out apparently unhurt but suffering from shock. It was not until half an hour later that the elder brother, Jack, was extricated. He was in a serious condition when lowered to the street on a stretcher and died before reaching a first aid post. The younger lad succumbed later in hospital from the effect of a shattered spine.

BOY RELEASED ON BAIL

Brantford, Ont., Nov. 26 (CP)—Charged after the death of three Toronto men in a highway accident here Nov. 4, 15-year-old Ronald Sayle today was released on bail of $5,000. He had been committed for trial on a charge that he did "kill and slay" the men.

The boy faces a charge of falsely stating his age to be over 16 when he applied for a driver's licence after purchasing a car with money that he earned by working during the summer. He will be tried at the Supreme Court sitting in January.

All Londoners Deserve Medals, Soldier Says They 'Put on Best Show'

London, Nov. 26—(CP) — Staff Sgt. Wilbur P. Brown, former Windsor, Ont., newspaperman now serving overseas with the Essex Scottish regiment, believes "civilians are taking it on the chin" in this war and that every person in London should be "awarded some kind of medal for valor."

Staff Sgt. Brown spoke last night on a broadcast heard in Canada over the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation facilities. He served in France with the 99th Battalion of Essex Fusiliers of Windsor in the First Great War and said he was glad to be back soldiering again but found that this time it was the soldiers who were comparatively safe while civilians bore the brunt of the war.

"But the spirit is wonderful," he said. "Shopgirls bombed out of their homes phone up and apologize for being late. Then, most marvelous of all, they show up behind their counters with smiles on their faces, doing their best to satisfy the customers."

"Typical of the spirit of English women was the case of two girls who spent an entire night entertaining a group of soldiers and civilians in a London hotel.

"They were dead beat when it was finished. One of the girls actually fell asleep at the piano," he said. "Later we learned they had been entertaining troops the previous evening. And that is the spirit of England. London and its citizens are putting on the best show ever staged in any war."

AP Correspondent Says Britain Is Turning Increasingly to U. S.

Drew Middleton Expresses Belief Mastery of Air is Probably Only Answer to Night Bombings

DISCUSSES INDUSTRY

Speaks of 'Capacity for Understatement Being Overworked'

(The following dispatch is from Drew Middleton, Associated Press correspondent who was with the British Expeditionary Force in France, and who has spent much time with all arms of the British war machine.)

(By Drew Middleton, Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 26—(AP)—Britain, struggling with bomb wreckage and confronted with a continued German stranglehold on the initiative, is turning increasingly to the United States as a potential savior in these darkest hours of the war since the German panzer divisions reached the channel coast last May and looked longingly at the White Cliffs of Dover.

British capacity for understatement is working overtime, partly through patriotism — "it is not cricket to tell the truth, old boy"—and partly through propaganda—"casualties were few having regard to the weight of the attack."

Complacency distortion and reluctance to admit the truth, even privately to correspondents who have no hope of getting some news through the rigorous censorship, which sometimes even delays official communiques, perhaps are as dangerous to the British cause as nightly bombings. The way the censors work is reminiscent of the conduct of French censorship before the fall of France.

Why these darkest hours?

This is one man's opinion—therefore uncensorable—but the opinion of a man who has spent a great deal of time with the army, navy and air force and—more important—with the people themselves, not civil servants and cabinet underlings.

Says Mastery of Air is Answer

First, there probably is no answer to night bombings, outside of mastery of the air, and for this Britain frankly is looking to America although in earlier and better days the newspaper of Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production, belittled United States planes.

German night raiders have dropped tens of thousands of tons of bombs from thousands of planes, yet one is asked to believe there is no military damage; that only churches, hospitals, schools and tenements are hit, plus of course "slight damage" to utilities.

(They dropped a bomb next to the Associated Press building before Sept. 24. The crater still is yawning.)

Bombers that hit Buckingham Palace unable to hit the sprawling factories of the midlands? Believe it if you can.

The Germans have killed thousands of civilian men, women and children without really damaging morale. They've also done damage to shipping and railroads without demoralizing the war effort.

Says Escort Vessels Needed

Second, Britannia still rules the waves, but needs more American help to do it. Much of the recent staggering shipping losses can be traced to deficiencies in escort vessels.

Unless Britain can get more United States destroyers, shipping losses likely will continue at a high level because of U-boats, bombers and surface raiders.

The need for merchant vessels goes hand in hand with the need for destroyers. Britain's need will increase as spring brings an increase in U-boat virulence.

Taranto (the British raid on Italy's naval base) was a great British victory, but not for the navy, although the fleet at arm accomplished this task (reporting the crippling of three Italian battleships), because every battleship similarly is vulnerable to torpedo-carrying planes while in harbor, where they all must go sooner or later.

'Army as Good as the Best'

Third, the army is as good as the best—if properly equipped. In fighting spirit and leadership, I can testify, it is able to stand up to the Germans.

At first it was said a British offensive could be expected in 1941. Now government leaders talk of 1943 and 1944.

Fourth, Britain, the greatest financial power in history, is reaching the end of her financial tether. If she is to buy in the United States—and German bombing of industries will force her to buy in increasing quantities—the United States will have to put it on the cuff.

British Industry

Fifth, British industry which started the war on an eight-hour day, still has not expanded to the totalitarian level; there still are tens of thousands of unemployed and unemployment even is increasing.

Railroads still charge service men for transport, which is like having a toll bridge in a communications trench.

Finally, the people of London are cheerful, stubborn and tired. Shelter conditions still are abominable; the menace to health is more dangerous potentially than Nazi bombs. Sanitation in sleeping quarters is terribly inadequate, despite assurances that "steps are being taken for improvement."

In the country, returning Londoners say, the people "don't know there's a war on."

In other cities people are less cheerful than Londoners, they grumble that London is given greater protection and say that propaganda that London is unhurt is causing the Nazis to change strategy and hammer by turns at such targets as Coventry, Liverpool, Birmingham, Bristol, Southampton.

The people, far more ready to face the brutal truth than the newspapers and the BBC, crow sarcastic about headlines and communiques that tell of "slight damage" when they can see the wreckage with their own eyes; grow bitter when they read that "casualties were few" when their families are destroyed.

STILL MISSING

Flight-Lieutenant G. F. Clay, of New Westminster, B.C., is one of three fliers reported still missing after six R.C.A.F. men were forced to bail out of patrol bomber. Three of the men have been rescued, but cold weather diminishes the hope of finding the remaining three alive.

Maiden Speech Most Brilliant Says British M. P.

London, Nov. 26.—(CP) —Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, in the Commons today congratulated Lt. Churchill on his maiden speech in that Chamber today saying "It must be an extremely difficult thing to make a maiden speech in this House when you are the son of a very distinguished father and, indeed, the grandson of a very distinguished grandfather".

Sir Alfred Knox, Conservative, said that in all the years he had been in the House he had never heard a Member carry off a maiden speech with more brilliant colors.

He said Randolph Churchill "came into the House as the inheritor of a terrifyingly great tradition and the example he has given of his powers shows he is going to act up to the greatest of his forebears".

Hon. M. J. O'Brien Dead at Renfrew

Renfrew, Ont., Nov. 26.—(CP)—Hon. M. J. O'Brien, prominent Canadian industrialist, president of O'Brien Gold Mines Ltd., and former member of the Senate died here today. He was born in 1851 in Lochaber, N.S.

WAR SECRETARY ASKS BOARD TO HALT EXPANSION

Building Up of Commercial Services Delaying Production for U.S. and British Armed Forces

BEHIND SCHEDULE

Stimson Says One Commercial Firm Getting Twelve Planes a Month

Washington, Nov. 26—(AP)—War Secretary Henry Stimson announced today the United States War Department had appealed to the Priorities Board to halt expansion of commercial air services on the ground that it would interfere with war plane production for American and British armed forces.

At a Press conference Stimson said the Douglas Aircraft Company is delivering planes to commercial lines at the rate of 12 a month, although it had been 60 days behind schedule in delivering the test plane for an army order for 186 dive bombers.

The order for 186 dive bombers, he said, was placed with Douglas in the spring of 1939 but the planes are needed today for training purposes, but, he said only one bomber had been delivered and that was for test purposes.

At the same time, Stimson declared, Douglas has proposed to make planes for an expansion of commercial services.

He said that the War Department had no intention of disrupting or curtailing commercial air service or of preventing commercial airlines from obtaining replacement planes.

"What it has proposed," he said, "is that the commercial airlines be not permitted to expand their business during the present national emergency.

NEW AMBASSADOR GIVES STATEMENT

Admiral Nomura Says There is No Issue Between U.S. and Japan That Cannot be Solved Without Recourse to War

Tokyo, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, who expects to leave, for Washington next month as Japan's new ambassador to the United States, declared today there is no issue between Japan and the United States that cannot be solved without recourse to war.

Official announcement of his appointment as ambassador succeeding Kensuke Horinouchi, who was called home from Washington last September, was withheld. Because of this, Admiral Nomura said he has not conferred yet with the Cabinet on a concrete program for improving relations between the United States and Japan.

"In many ways", the retired Admiral said in an interview, "the fate of the world hangs on American actions just now.

"If the United States becomes involved in conflict either in Europe or in the Pacific, civilization will go up in flames . . . there are few—if any — Japanese who want war with the United States. What is important is how to prevent the situation from reaching its worst stage".

He said he viewed any possible United States embargo upon Japan as dangerous and asserted that "cutting such a large trade channel might result in abnormal actions here".

"If the United States refuses to sell us oil and other supplies", he said, "we must get them elsewhere".

A conflict between the United States and Japan probably would touch off a "chain of wars" stretching indefinitely into the future, he declared.

"Nations must live side by side", he said. "You can't exterminate a nation".

London, Nov. 26.—(CP)— The Press Association announced that Lord Rothermere, 72, British publisher, died today in Bermuda.

TURN TOWARD ADRIATIC SEA

Salonika, Greece, Nov. 26—(AP) —Reports from various parts of the Albanian battlefront indicated today that all Italian units were seeking to turn toward the Adriatic Sea in their retreat from the Greeks.

Winter took a biting grip on Albania and Macedonia amid reports that the Italians were withdrawing in all sectors. Cold rain drenched the valleys and lowlands, snow fell on the mountains, slowing up military operations on most fronts.

FRENCH MILITARY COLLEGE URGED FOR QUEBEC

Sherbrooke, Que., Nov. 26.—(CP) —The executive council of the Catholic Syndicate of Sherbrooke adopted at a meeting last night a resolution to petition Prime Minister Mackenzie King for establishment in Quebec province of a French military college.

The resolution said that National Registration revealed that Quebec province had a greater number of single men per county than any other province.

Strong Italian Fleet 'Retires at High Speed'

Abandon Wealth Of Material, Planes Says Greek Report

Broken Morale of Retreating Foe Has Been Imparted to Fresh Troops Trying To Stem Withdrawal

Athens, Nov. 27 (AP)—Reinforcements of troops and planes were reported to have stiffened the resistance of Italian forces in the southern Albanian sector, but Greek dispatches said the Fascist retreat in northern and central zones was continuing.

Besides the newly arrived troops, said information from the front, Italy sent additional planes at the urgent request of Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, the new Italian commander in Albania, in an attempt to halt the Greeks.

In the north and centre the Italians were said to be retiring in disorder and abandoning a wealth of material.

Valona Raided

Striking at one of the chief points of entry for Italian supplies and reinforcements, British bombers aiding the Greeks made "highly successful raids" on Valona, sheltered Albanian port near the mouth of the Adriatic Sea opposite the Italian port of Otranto.

A Royal Air Force communique asserted that heavy bombs made direct hits in the harbor on "a ship which seemed to be in a sinking condition before our aircraft set off." Damage also was registered on quays, the dock area and airport buildings, and a hangar and one defending plane were destroyed.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

The Roaring Forties! Large steamers do not care to sail head on into the "roaring forties", the prevailing westerly winds of the south temperate zone, which are complex owing to the continents, the roaring forties form an almost unbroken belt of generally strong westerly winds. Around the globe in winter gale follows gale, giving rise to immense seas; the storms are accompanied by rain or snow; and the air is damp and cold due to the cold water and icebergs from the Antarctic area. In summer there is scarcely any abatement, except it is somewhat warmer.

SHIP REPORTED IN DISTRESS

Canadian Vessel Said to be in Difficulty in Storm 350 to 400 Miles N. E. of Newfoundland

Thomaston, Me., Nov. 27—(AP)—Mackay radio reported today that a Canadian vessel was in distress 350 to 400 miles northeast of St. John's, Nfd., only a few hundred miles from where the Greek steamer Eugena Cambanis was wallowing helplessly in a gale-swept sea.

Mackay said the Canadian craft gave the call letters "VCRP," which were not listed in the call book. Mackay's operator said he did not get the vessel's name. The Norwegian steamer Bernhard radioed she would reach the Canadian vessel's position "in about four hours."

The Cambanis, which sent out an SOS yesterday, reported today in a message picked up by Mackay at 7.52 a.m., that she was "125 miles southeast of St. John's, Nfd., drifting with the wind and sea. Stoke hole, engines and other parts ship full of water. Lost the foremast, one lifeboat and some lumber cargo."

The Cambanis said there was "still a gale storm."

OTONABEE WOMAN INSTANTLY KILLED

Mrs. Margaret McKinlay Was Walking on Highway During Snowstorm

Peterborough, Ont., Nov. 27—(C.P.) — Struck by an automobile as she was walking on Highway 7, two miles east of here, in a blinding snowstorm today, Mrs. Margaret McKinlay, middle-aged Otonabee woman, was killed instantly.

Fred Gall, Keene, driver of the car, told police that Mrs. McKinlay had apparently been walking near the centre of the highway and that he did not see her until she was only a few feet away.

He tried to swerve his car, but it was too late to avoid the impact.

Gall was later arrested and charged with dangerous driving. He was remanded for one week without plea and bail was fixed at $2,000.

NATIVE OF KINGSTON DIES IN MONTREAL

Montreal, Nov. 27 (CP)—William G. Davies, 61, member of the Sales Department of the Montreal Gazette for the past 10 years, died Tuesday.

Born in England, Mr. Davies was educated at Kingston, Ont., later joining the staff of the Kingston News. He was with the printing firm of Mortimer and Company in Ottawa for 25 years before coming here.

Funeral services will be held here today with burial at Kingston.

Dies in Hospital After Being Hit by Policeman's Bullet

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 27 (CP).—Roland Croson, 19, died early today in hospital here a few minutes after he was shot by a policeman whose gun went off when the policeman slipped on the ice while in pursuit of Croson.

Police received a complaint last night that a prowler was alarming residents. Constables T. Renaud and G. Fitzgerald were despatched in a scout car. Police reports said that as they alighted from the car, a man began to run away.

The report said that Constable Fitzgerald shouted a warning and then took up pursuit. As he did so, he slipped on the ice and his gun discharged.

Fears of Revolution Are Now Passed

Mexico City, Nov. 27 (AP).—Fears of possible revolution faded in Mexico today following Gen. Juan Almazan's renunciation of all claims to the presidency.

Almazan's earlier refusal to concede victory to Gen. Manuel Camacho in the July 7 election had kept the nation in constant fear of bloodshed. Anxiety had increased as the inauguration approached.

Camacho will take office Sunday, beginning a six-year term.

Almazan, independent candidate in the July election, handed out a statement renouncing his claims soon after arriving here by plane yesterday following a three-months stay in the United States.

The United States' decision to send Vice-President-elect Henry A. Wallace to Mexico City for the Camacho inauguration prompted his renunciation, Almazan declared.

Roosevelt Allots $50,000,000 For Chain of Air and Naval Bases

Washington, Nov. 27 —(AP)—Navy Secretary Frank Knox announced today that President Roosevelt had allotted $50,000,000 for immediate development of a chain of air and naval bases on sites recently acquired from Great Britain in exchange for 50 United States destroyers.

At the same time Knox notified an additional class of naval and marine reserves, numbering 31,908 officers and men, that they should arrange their affairs so as to be ready for a call to active duty at any moment.

Knox also announced that additional divisions of organized naval reserves were being called to active duty from New York and New Jersey for service with destroyers operating in the vicinity of the Panama Canal.

Britain's Need for Speeded-up Supply of U. S. War Materials Being Stressed in America

Prominence Given to Correspondents' Dispatches of Damage Done by Bombs In Britain and Need for Aid

CRITICAL OF BRITISH CENSORSHIP

(By Elmer Dulmage, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 27—(CP)—The extremity of Britain's need for an accelerated supply of war materials from the United States—whether paid for in cash or not—is being stressed this week as never before on this side of the Atlantic.

While American industry goes ahead with production of warplanes for Britain and prepares for a great shipbuilding project the call of American newspaper correspondents in England is for greater aid.

There is no information here whether Britain's need was apparent weeks ago to correspondents who were unable to get the news through the British censor, or whether the remarks of the Marquess of Lothian, Ambassador to Washington, in recent days, indicated an official change of attitude in London.

The ambassador, returning after an absence of five weeks in Britain said British funds for purchase of war materials abroad would be exhausted in 1941 and that she would soon need financial aid as well as aid in ships, planes and munitions.

After a visit with President Roosevelt in Washington yesterday, Lord Lothian said he had described the British situation as "optimistic if we get some help from you."

In a speech in New York yesterday, William H. Stoneman, London correspondent of the Chicago Daily News who is home on vacation, said his "personal opinion" was that Britain would not be able to win a decisive victory over Germany unless the United States dropped its neutral status and joined Britain as a belligerent.

Stoneman said the war could be won by "tens of thousands of aircraft, hundreds of destroyers and millions of tons of fresh shipping" and he doubted that the United States could bring itself to produce war materials on this scale unless

London, Nov. 27 (CP).—The post office announced today that letter and parcel mails from Canada posted in Ontario between Oct. 18 and Oct. 23 and correspondingly earlier in other provinces have been lost by enemy action.

Mail from the United States posted between Oct. 17 and Oct. 22 also was lost.

British Ships Engage Foe at Extreme Range, Chase Fleeing Italians

London, Nov. 27.— (CP)— The Mediterranean fleet reported that it had engaged a strong Italian sea force at "extreme range" today and that it pursued as the Italians "retired at high speed" toward their base.

The Admiralty, which has announced repeatedly that the Italian navy has refused to come to grips with the British fleet said no information was available immediately on the outcome of the latest brush.

A statement reported that the British units encountered two Italian battleships accompanied by a large force of cruisers and destroyers shortly before noon.

NAZI ATTACK LAGS

Birmingham, Bristol and Southampton Hardest Hit in Raids

London, Nov. 27 (CP).—A rapid-fire attack by British heavy bombers on the very centre of Italian war production was announced by the Air Ministry today to have lighted fires in the factory city of Turin and set it shaking with bursts of its own explosives.

As the Royal Air Force lunged at both Turin and Berlin last night, the axis assaults on Britain lagged for a second successive night, and recurring raid warnings today brought only scattered milk attacks to the British Isles.

London had its third, brief alarm in mid-afternoon, but no incidents were reported immediately.

The raiders over Turin attacked the royal arsenal and "greatly increased" damage done to the city Saturday night.

Railways In Berlin Attacked.

The main bombing attack on Germany last night was aimed at the armaments factories of Cologne, the ministry added, but railways in Berlin also were attacked.

A communique stated five Royal Air Force planes were missing after the night's operations, including the Increase Savings, Britons Urged By Chancellor

London, Nov. 27 —(CP—Cable)—Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, today warned Britons that "it is vital to our war effort to increase still further the amount of saving during the coming year."

He spoke at a lunch at which Sir Robert Kindersley, president of the National Savings Committee, announced the objective of £475,000,000 ($2,113,750,000) had been exceeded at the end of the first year of the war saving campaign, on Nov. 23.

'Our Increasing Production Will Crush Might of Dictators'-Greenwood

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 27 (CP Cable)—Arthur Greenwood, minister without portfolio in the War Cabinet, told the House of Commons today that Canada's help in the war will far outweigh anything she did in the last war "because we have taken the bold step of trying to convert her into an industrial country."

He declared the flow of supplies from Canada is "valuable in quality and quantity and will continue to increase as new units of production come into operation."

The minister said "it is folly to deny" that German air raids have damaged British production, but asserted that "Britain's resources and capacity and the growing help of North America will outmatch the industrial resources and capacity of the enemy."

U. S. Seen to be Second Arsenal

He expressed the opinion that before long North America would be a second arsenal from which Britain could obtain increasing supplies to supplement those produced in the United Kingdom and to make good the deficiencies here.

"Recent enemy air attacks have retarded our expanding program," the minister said. "Beyond that I do not go. With close knowledge of the industrial damage that we have suffered I say unhesitatingly that it has not eaten to any serious extent into our productive capacity."

He replied to vigorous labor charges of government over-optimism, timidity and failure to mobilize the unemployed for a part in war production.

"At the risk of being accused of wishful thinking and of again being charged with belittling Hitler's resources, I still assert that our increasing production, in both quality and weight, will finally crush the might of the dictators," Mr. Greenwood declared.

Increasing Flow of Materials From U. S.

He acknowledged that the increase in the output of war equipment "is not enough," but added that the flow of material from the United States "is increasing, even if it is tardy."

"We are now co-operating with the United States in order that our joint needs shall be met with the least possible delay and in order to ensure that we shall get that high priority that we undoubtedly need," he continued.

"I have made a clean breast of our difficulties to them in order

64 Political Prisoners Executed In Jilava Prison

Former Premier, George Argesanu, and Former Cabinet Minister Among The Victims

Budapest, Hungary, Nov. 27 (CP).—The Rumanian Iron Guard was reported to have taken a bloody revenge on the regime of former King Carol early today by executing 64 political prisoners near the grave of Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, founder of the guard.

They fell under the rifle fire of a troop of Iron Guardists at Bucharest's Jilava Prison, according to the Hungarian News Agency and other corroborative sources which penetrated the censorship imposed in Rumania by the Iron Guard government of Gen. Ion Antonescu.

This censorship virtually isolated the turbulent Balkan nation from neighboring countries from midnight on, but German and Hungarian sources managed to send the story out of Bucharest by using legation telephones.

All judges and gendarmes alleged to have had a part in the mass killing of Iron Guardists when Carol was on the throne were reported shot.

The firing squad purge was said to have been carried out in the same manner that many hundreds of Guardists were executed before the Nazi-inclined guard seized power in Rumania, forced Carol to abdicate in September and began a close alignment of Rumania with Germany.

Among those reported executed at 1:30 a.m. today, a few hours after Premier Antonescu returned from Berlin where he signed the axis pact for Rumania, were former premier George Argesanu; Gen. Gabriel Marinescu, a former cabinet minister and prefect of police in Bucharest, and Ion Morusow, former chief of the Rumanian secret order.

Issuer of Order Not Known

"Rumanian Justice," also was reported to have dealt with a former Gendarme Commander, General Bengliu, and 14 gendarmes who were directly accused of garroting Codreanu and 13 other guardists at Jilava prison in 1938.

The arrest of former Premiers Ion Gigurtu and Constantine Ar-

London, Nov. 27 —(CP)— Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor, announced to the House of Commons today that "between now and next June there will be another enormous call up" of Britain's manhood for the fighting services.

The last call-up, on Nov. 16, included the second half of the 35-year-old group. The next grouping will probably take in all men up to 40 years of age.

LAKE FREIGHTER HARD AGROUND

Cheyenne Strikes Rocky Reef During Fierce Snowstorm

The Cheyenne, under Capt. J. J. Corson of Toronto was hard aground on the rocks off the point. A fishing tug from nearby Port Maitland reached the scene of the grounding early today to assist the crew of the freighter, en route from Erie, Pa., to Montreal with coal.

Representatives of the St. Lawrence Line here said a lighter would be dispatched from Buffalo to aid the Cheyenne, but might not be able to clear Buffalo immediately because of heavy seas at that port.

The Cheyenne was said to be in no immediate danger. She was the first vessel reported caught in the northeast gales which swept Lake Ontario during the night, forcing shipping to run to cover or stay in harbor. It was the second big blow on the lakes within two weeks.

A half-dozen vessels foundered during a two-day gale Nov. 11-12, including two large freighters, the Canadian ship Anna C. Minch and the United States freighter William B. Davock. More than forty men were lost from these two ships.

$500 FINE AND SIX MONTHS IMPOSED

Marshall Hayes, Bancroft, was fined $500 and costs and sentenced to serve six months in the County Jail after being convicted of a second offence preferred under the Excise Act. Hayes was arrested by the R.C.M.P. and arraigned on a charged of being found in possession of a still suitable for the manufacture of illicit liquor. It was the second time he had been so convicted and before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at Bancroft. In default of the payment of the $500 fine, however, an additional six months will have to be served, Magistrate Lloyd decreed. Hayes was also convicted of keeping liquor for sale when arraigned yesterday at Bancroft.

TRAFFIC SLOWED DOWN IN DISTRICT

Traffic on the various highways throughout the immediate district of Belleville was slowed down considerably early today as the result of the season's first blizzard and snow storm that blew down on the heels of a northeast twister all night.

Heavy motor transports were far behind schedule early today as the snow blocked the highways east of Belleville to a depth of over one foot at points. Provincial patrols ordered out department snow ploughs this morning in an effort to keep the highways open from the earliest snow storm to visit these parts in many years.

Buses ran behind schedule while commercial trucking men refused to take to the open highways after spending the night in Belleville as they awaited the storms' abating and the clearing of adjacent highways.

Belleville District Blanketed by Snow

Winter flung a white mantle over the city and district Tuesday night as the first snow of the season came out of the north in the wake of near-zero weather.

Upwards of six inches of snow had fallen up to eleven o'clock today with grey sullen skies offering no sign of respite from the storm. Temperatures, however, rose slightly towards noon and indications pointed to a change to rain.

Help was rushed to the assistance of the city Department of Public Works by City Engineer Charles Mott, as workmen loaded trucks with snow removed from the downtown area in an effort to open up traffic in that area. Government snow ploughs were seen passing through the city in an effort to keep the provincial highways open.

The heavy fall of snow, which was more apparent in districts north of the city, delayed train services in those parts. Highways, while not plugged, were heavy with packed snow causing delay to traffic.

County and township officials rushed erection of snowfences in various parts of the district as the snow-threat loomed.

Jubilant schoolboys revelled in the first snow of the season schoolward bound and streets resounded to the joyous cries of an exuberant youth as the many snowball battles got under way.

Police Blotter

Employees at the Belleville Metal and Waste Company, Church St., reported to police that sneak thieves were stealing scrap metal under the cover of darkness. Early yesterday company employees found a large metallic wheel abandoned in the ditch south of the premises, the wheel apparently being too heavy to be handled by the would-be thieves.

While at Military training in the Armouries last evening Robert Knox, 48 Chatham Street, left his bicycle outside of the building. When he returned for his bike it was missing. The theft of the bicycle was immediately reported to the police.

Garbage Dumped

The city garbage collectors told police today that garbage had been dumped upon Chatham Street and two copper boilers, used for the purpose of containers for collection had been stolen.

Property Damage

Property damage resulted to two motor cars at the intersection of Front and Bridge Streets early last evening when the front fender of a motor car driven by Edward Rupart, 138 West Bridge St., caught in the front bumper of another motor car driven by Hubart Smith of the R.C.A.F. Mr. Rupart was about to pass Smith's car as the traffic light changed. Fender and headlight damage resulted and the matter was amicably settled when P.C. Thomson arrived to investigate. No charges were deemed necessary.

Matter of Management of Gas Utility Discussed at Meeting

Commissioners Baragar and Duff Give Facts Relative to Revenue Earning Capacity of the Gas Utility— A. F. Wesley States More Aggressive Sales Policy Needed

GAS NEEDED BY HEAVY INDUSTRIES

The question, "should the water and gas utilities be returned to the custody and management of the city council," was the topic of very thorough and lively discussion at an open forum dinner meeting of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, held at Dickens' Coffee Shoppee on Tuesday evening, at which various facts relative to the financial standing and revenue earning capacities of the two utilities were given by Utility Commissioners and during which an open discussion afforded ratepayers an opportunity to present arguments either favourable or in opposition to the question.

As this important problem will come up for decision by the ratepayers of Belleville at the forthcoming municipal elections, it was felt that voters should be in full possession of the facts before arriving at any conclusion regarding the matter and this was, therefore, chosen as to the topic of discussion. Mr. G. C. Baragar and Mr. M. P. Duff, Public Utility Commissioners, in reporting on the water and gas departments, recommended the Utilities continuing the operation of the two departments, while Mr. A. F. Wesley, speaking from the standpoint of the average Belleville citizen, pointed out that an aggressive sales policy, advertising the advantages of gas, was essential if the consumption of gas in Belleville was to be increased.

In submitting his report of the Utilities, Mr. Baragar denied the statement of Mayor Thompson when at nomination he said that "this meeting had been arranged by Commissioners Duff and Baragar, who are putting up a fight to retain the management of these utilities." The commission personally, or the manager of the Utilities have nothing to lose regardless of the outcome of the vote, said Mr. Baragar. Also, he made it plain that remarks to be made in the submission of his report were made with the thought of debating a question and not in directing criticism towards any one member of a council or at a council of any one year. He, likewise, expressed his opinion that a small group of men, or a commission, could operate more efficiently a utility such as the waterworks or gas department, and offered as proof of his contention the more favourable financial reports of these two utilities since they had come under the operation of the Public Utilities.

Compares Revenue

Comparing the revenue derived from the waterworks department in 1933 when operated by the city with that of 1937, when it was operated by the Public Utilities, Mr. Baragar stated that $59,599.48 was the revenue for 1933 as against $58,486.52 for 1937. Profits, however, in 1937 were $18,780.81 as compared to $13,612.83 in 1833, showing an increase of $5,167.98 in spite of a decrease in revenue of $1,112.96. "This speaks well for Commission management," stated Mr. Baragar, adding that in the three years which the commission had operated the waterworks department, $20,082.38 had been returned to the city.

In referring to the gas problem the speaker stated that the Belleville Gas Plant had its inception in 1854 and was taken over by the city in 1904. During the nineteen following years, or until 1923, according to the Wynne Roberts report, debentures totalling $125,000 had been issued, this in addition to an operating debt of $48,070.75. The actual results of the operation of the gas plant by the city of Belleville between 1924 and 1931, before capital payments were made, showed a deficit of $12,014.20, with 1928 and 1929 the only years in which a profit was shown. Results for the same period including debenture principal payments showed a deficit of $35,792.54.

In 1930 the city gas plant was turned over to the Ontario Shore Gas Company Ltd. and selling gas to customers at a decreased rate from which the city had been charging, this company operated the plant until 1935, with an operating deficit for that period of $25,545.91. Had the Ontario Shore Gas Company Ltd. sold gas at the rate of 2.046 dollars per thousand cubic feet as charged by the city during 1930, there would have been an operating surplus of approximately $40,000 for 1931-1935 period, said Mr. Baragar. According to the auditors' report as of December 31, 1929, the total debt of the city gas plant stood at $412,229.86 while in 1930 further debentures were issued for $610,000. although it was understood most of this money was used to retire former debentures.

Mr. Baragar said that the problem confronting the ratepayers was not a question of whether the city will close the plant or keep it going, but whether its management will be turned back to the city. At the time the city took the gas plant back from the Ontario Shore Gas Company, the feeling of every alderman was expressed, the speaker thought, by Alderman Jennings when he said, "I will vote for taking back this gas plant if its operation is to be handled by the commission—and not this council."

Revenues Balances Operating Expenses This Year

Referring to the present year's operation of the plant, Mr. Baragar said it had been estimated at first of year that operating expenses would exceed the revenue by $5,000 and that all retorts would have to be lined at a cost of $8,000. He added, however, that the revenue for this year had balanced operating expenses and that the commission hoped to complete the year without loss. In conclusion Mr. Baragar urged that for the sake of economy and business administration, ratepayers vote to leave the utilities with the commission.

Mr. A. F. Wesley, in commenting on the operation of the gas plant from the standpoint of the average citizen of Belleville, stated that in his opinion, disinterested speakers should have taken part in the discussion. As it was he said, he had been given very little time in which to prepare his address, but as it is, "the average citizen of Belleville knows that the gas plant has been a white elephant." Mr. Wesley referred to the debt to the plant as of 1929 and stated that it was well known that gas plants in many other centres were paying and paying well. "Great strides are being made in gas and in gas equipment and it is being increasingly used in industry. The gas industry is rapidly coming to the fore," said Mr. Wesley.

Need Aggressive Sales Policy

The speaker claimed that an aggressive sales policy was essential in every business or that business must fail, and this sales policy must be backed up by a good service. He quoted many strides that are being made in the improvement of industrial gas services, but said that Belleville residents were not being told of these advances. Also, in order to operate a business successfully it was necessary to surround that business with persons well acquainted with its operation. "Have we these people, and have we an aggressive sales policy in our gas works department?" asked Mr. Wesley.

Gas is not being advertized in this city, nothing is being said about it, said the speaker, urging that a more aggressive sales policy would increase the gas consumption in the city. Of the 1,200 customers when the gas plant returned to the city, only 801 now remained, he said.

Mr. Wesley stated that gas was essential to many heavy industries today, but the failure of the commissioners in not telling Belleville people of what gas can do, was responsible for the failure of the gas plant in Belleville.

Mr. Duff reiterated Mr. Baragar's belief that the utilities could be operated more efficiently by a small number of men, or by a commission, and expressed his opinion that the public should be fully informed as to the condition of the utilities. Mr. Duff said that the commission had felt it their duty to take over the gas and water and have done their best to make the gas plant a success. "We have even held back our campaign to further the Hydro, in order to help the gas," he said.

The main question, explained Mr. Duff is do the people want the gas plant to continue operation at a loss. "It was unfair to advocate gas to residents when it was undecided as to what the outcome of the gas plant might be."

In referring to the Waterworks Department, Mr. Duff stated that the co-ordination of office staffs, since the commission had taken over this department, had effected economies in public utilities with a corresponding increase in efficiency. At the time the commission took over the water, there were $1,700 in outstanding accounts, but since this time there had been a great reduction in these accounts. The commission had decreased the rates since taking over the department and Belleville residents are getting purer, cleaner water and rates were lower than many other points where there was filtration. Approximately $10,000 yearly had been turned back to the city since the commission took over the operation of the waterworks, concluded Mr. Duff.

Alderman E. J. Logan asked why the commission did not put the question of closing the gas plant to the voters. "If the commission has the feeling that the plant is going to close, why dilly dally?" he asked.

Gas Mains Need Replacing

Commissioner Baragar replied that the commission felt it their duty to keep the plant operating for the benefit of those now using gas and continuing, intimated that in order to keep the plant operating it would be necessary to replace the mains at a considerable cost to the city.

Alderman Logan: "The people of the city do not know the conditon of the gas mains and this is unfair to the public."

The question as to what additional burden would the taxpayer have to assume if the cost of gas in Belleville was reduced to compare with other plants in the province was asked. Mr. O. H. Scott, General Manager of the Utilities, replied by stating that if the rate was reduced to $1.00 per thousand cubic feet, it would result in a loss of $6.000 in revenue. In continuing Mr. Scott quoted several annual bills of customers using both electric and gas as compared with the bill resulting when the same operations were accomplished with electricity alone. One example showed the annual bill in one case to be $33.21 for gas and electricity while for electricity alone the bill was $21.69.

The question of what industries using gas in other towns or centres did when gas plants were closed was asked, to which Mr. Scott replied that it had been revealed by the Reliance Aircraft and Tool Company of Belleville that there were four other ways of supplying heat for hardening steel. It had been decided to use gas at this plant, however and a two-inch main had been laid to this property stated Mr. Scott.

Ex-Alderman Laurie Lewis said that the question confronting Belleville citizens today was "Does a modern city require a modern gas plant?" to which Alderman H. J. Allin of the Stewart-Warner Alemite Corp. stated in his own opinion formed as the result of long connection with the industry, was that gas was essential for certain operations in industry. As the discussion at this point had digressed considerably from the issue involved, it was moved for adjournment.

Mr. H. Lyle Hunter acted as chairman for the meeting which opened with invocation by Mr. I. F. Hefkey. After dinner was served the toast to "The King" was proposed, following which the discussion was opened by Mr. Baragar.

WELLINGTON BANDED DUCK SHOT IN N.C.

Dayton Murphy, wild-fowl fancier and sanctuary owner of Wellington, is in receipt of a letter from North Carolina written by J. E. Owens, Carolinian duck hunter, conveying the information that one of Mr. Murphy's banded wild ducks had been shot by him near Currituck County.

The duck had been missing thirteen days from the Murphy sanctuary.

CANNOT PRODUCE BACON AT PRESENT PRICE-STAUFFER

If Present Conditions Continue Farmers Will be Forced Out of Some Essential Product, U.F.O. President Asserts

TAXES HIGH

Toronto, Nov. 27 (CP).—If present conditions continues the United Farmers of Ontario will be forced out of production of some essential products such as bacon, D. E. Stauffer of Bright, Ont., president of the United Farmers of Ontario, said in an address prepared for delivery at the organization's annual convention here today.

"We cannot produce it (bacon) at present prices and meet our financial obligations," he said. "Some people are saying 'I hope the farmers will be loyal enough to keep on producing pork products in spite of the price'. This attitude is economically unsound and absurd."

There were townships in his own county with more outstanding taxes for 1939 than they had had for several years; more mortgage and farm debt sales were being held than for some time and still more were indicated next year, he said.

"Is it loyalty to our country for farmers to keep silent when such conditions exist, when it will mean disruption of supplies and morale?" he asked. "Is it loyalty to keep silent when they are asked to face such demoralizing situations when no other group will do it, or is doing it? When one group refuses to produce at cost plus five per cent.; when another group refuses to absorb a tax without raising the price of the product?"

The farmers could help themselves," he said. They had had a century to work on farm organization.

"We do not need to experiment in farm organization or the co-operative movement. We can take a look at several countries who have proven what can be done.

"We must pioneer more and more in the co-operative field by education and action, and keep alive the spirit of our forefathers, who pioneered and lived dangerously and gave us this great heritage," he said, and urged farmers to organize "neighbor night meetings" to discuss co-operation and general farm problems.

Discussion groups would bring about "an intelligent, economic, moral and spiritual regeneration which would reflect not only in the community but far and wide,"

He looked forward to the organization of 750,000 Canadian farmers, "creating a dignity and respect which cannot be had in any other way."

BRITISH BOMBERS

raid on Turin.

The admiralty announced the British and Italian fleets in the Mediterranean had been in contact at extreme range. Details were not immediately available, but it was stated the enemy had fled toward their bases.

Roaring over Turin "quick succession", the air ministry bulletin said, the British bombers found no clouds obstructing their view and "were able to pick out their objectives by various landmarks."

The first aircraft arrived just after 11 p.m., the ministry said, and dropped high explosive and incendiary bombs "which immediately started a number of fires."

Frequent Eruptions.

"Pilots of the next bombers," the ministry said, "described how they saw on their arrival one of the larger factory buildings, 200 yards long by 50 yards wide, already well alight. Not only was it burning fiercely, but as the flames reached explosive material, there were frequent eruptions in the middle of the blaze.

"New fires were started and about half an hour later, when our bombers had reached the Alps and none was over the city, observers looked back over the plain and saw that Turin was still being disturbed by a number of explosions."

Turin sprawls on the Piedmont plains, a city of more than 500,000, a centre of automobile and airplane manufacturing.

While the British bombers struck ta Turin, as well as Berlin, the air attack on Britain lagged for the second successive night.

Although Nazi bombers laid off completely after midnight, they were back early this morning and put London under a one-hour daylight alarm at about 7 a.m. The raiders came up the Thames Estuary and bombed two places on the capital's outskirts.

Targets in northern Italy, in Berlin and other parts of Germany were the Royal Air Force's objectives.

(Air raid alarms sounded during the night in Switzerland, usually a sign that British planes are on their way to or from targets in Italy's industrial north. The Swiss High Command said anti-aircraft guns opened fire on planes flying toward Italy and back over Switzerland's neutral borders.)

Authorities now permit the identification of three cities which have born the brunt of recent Nazi raids on provincial England as Birmingham, great industrial centre of the Midlands; Bristol, west coast port and Southampton, on the English Channel.

Still Has Active Future

"Although it was a severe raid on Bristol," the Press Association said, "it was nowhere as heavy as on Coventry, and the city and port which the Germans referred in the past tense still has a very active future."

Shops and old buildings were the chief places to suffer, it said, and "within a short time life was almost back to normal; transport was running to schedule, although some was diverted, and accommodation was being found for the homeless."

There were no details on the Sunday night assault on Bristol—merely permission to name the city and describe some of the damage.

When the midnight let-up came in last night's attacks, there had been only slight damage and few casualties, the Air and Home Security ministries reported in a communique.

In London, many East-Enders forsook the crowded, uncomfortable shelters to sleep in their own beds once again. There was a noticeable drop in the numbers sleeping in subways after the all-clear in the capital shortly before midnight.

RUSSIA, GERMANY

tegrity would be respected, if the country remained neutral in the European war.

War Minister Theodossy Daskaloff commented that Bulgaria seldom has been "in such a favorable position and with so many friends as now," and said the nightly precautionary blackouts would be terminated, beginning tonight.

Observers said Berlin apparently was avoiding for the present pressing the delicate questions of Bulgaria's position in the new Europe.

Diplomats, as a result, looked to renewal of the Danube control conference at Bucharest later this week for fresh indications of the extent to which either Germany or Russia might give ground where their interests clash.

Many Conferences

Soviet diplomats busily followed up their current ascendancy in the Bulgarian situation with conferences in Sofia.

Observers attached significance to the long conference yesterday of A. A. Soboleff, President of the Russian Danube Delegation, and Alexander Lavrischeff, Russian Minister to Bulgaria with Bulgarian Foreign Minister Ivan Popoff.

This meeting followed by a day discussions by Soboleff, who also is Secretary-General of the Soviet Foreign Office, with King Boris and Premier Bogdan Philoff.

Diplomats also took note of the return to Sofia yesterday of Parvan Draganoff, Minister to Berlin, who has been mentioned as the next Bulgarian Premier, if Bulgaria should join the Axis.

Turkey Involved

Questions of Turkey's future position and whether Yugoslavia also would resist possible pressure to join the Axis alliance are believed by Sofia observers to be involved in diplomatic manoeuvring by Russia.

The Russian position, during the weeks the Bucharest Danube conference has been dragging on, has been that she should have sole or at least controlling power over the Danube mouth.

Italian delegates have been the spokesmen for Axis refusal to agree in closed sessions to anything except Axis control from Braila, Rumania, to the Black Sea. (It is at Braila that the river, flowing north suddenly swings almost due east to the Black Sea.)

When the Danube conference resumes later this week, Russia is believed prepared to renew her argument that she has the greater right to control this section.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The proud Norsemen whose ancestors produced Lief Eriksen and Erik the Red appeared today to have decided they did not like being conquered and ruled by the Germans whom they regarded as mere tradesmen in the days of the Haneatic League.

Reports drifted through via the Stockholm, Sweden, newspaper, Dahens Nyheter, that there had been 10 avalanches, apparently started by saboteurs with dynamite, along the Bergen-Oslo Staatsbanner (Railway), one of the world's finest scenic routes in peacetime and which was about as difficult to build as any.

It would be surprising if the people along the Bergen-Oslo line, the Southern Trans-Norway line, did not revolt for they have lived for many hundreds of years in a land that produced homesteads such as an early North American would fight for, scholars such as any country would be proud of and explorers like Fridjoff Nansen and Raoul Amundsen who accomplished things no one else has done.

The railway, incidentally, would be an extremely easy work to sabotage. It runs through a vast number of tunnels, one of them 12 miles long, bored through granite. It scales a "ceiling" that scrapes the clouds of a little hamlet called Finse where it is liable to snow any day in the year and where there are no trees.

Across a narrow bridge over the Hallingdal the road apears to dangle on a wire and the drop is so deep one may often look into it and see nothing more than a cloud blocking the view.

At times it skirts such great ranges as the Hallingskarvet, perpetually snowcapped and with long, steep foothills.

People are Tough

The country along the road, once it leaves either Bergen or Oslo, is not dense in population but the people who live there are descendants of those who have lived off that soil for centuries.

The casual traveller can tell how they have nurtured the land. It is rocky, steep as blazes, and to a Canadian farmer would appear inhospitable. Yet it grows crops on mountain tops so high that the families tether their children and animals for fear they might fall overside and be killed. They haul their supplies of groceries up miniature cable railways, because it would take half a day to climb down and back again.

Those people are tough. One has only to walk into a graveyard at a village along that railway to see how tough they are. The dates of birth and deaths shows they die young or old. In almost any village near the Bergen end of the railway the traveller will find a little shaft to Norwegian sailors who died out on the wild North Sea trying to tote supplies to the Allies in small ships in the First Great War.

Most of the Norwegians disliked the Germans anyway from knowing them as tourists. They used to say the German was inclined to be ill-mannered and self-assertive, as if he had an inferiority complex.

Your correspondent sat in a restaurant in Oslo one night in happier days and watched a large German sink beers faster than he ever saw them sunk before. He knocked them off—at least once—in five seconds, and then roared for the waiter. The waiters were big and the service became slow. Nothing else happened.

I told that story to a Norwegian naval architect a few days later and he said: "I wish I had been there. It would have given me pleasure to smash his nose in!"

Italian Announcer Tries to Belittle Britain's Naval Raid

New York, Nov. 27 (AP)—While admitting he had not seen photographs the British authorities released as evidence of the recent raid on Italy's naval base at Taranto, an Italian announcer on the Rome radio in an English language broadcast heard by the Columbia Broadcasting System Tuesday night promptly called them "fakes", perpetrated under "that English proverb—all is fair in love and war."

Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons Nov. 13 that an Armistice night raid by naval planes on Taranto had reduced Italy's capital ship strength by half-crippling two battleships and probably severely damaging a third as well as hitting and damaging two cruisers and two fleet auxiliaries.

Premier Mussolini in his Nov. 18 speech threatening to "break Greece's back" acknowledged that three ships were hit, but said only one was so badly damaged that "its repair will require a long time."

"Be on your guard," the Italian announcer warned. "Official British photographs are not to be trusted.... Consequently, when you look at the photographs which appeared this morning purporting to prove that the British accounts of the Taranto episode are true, remember they prove nothing and can prove nothing."

OBITUARY

MRS. ELEANOR C. MARTIN
(Thurlow Township)

As the result of a stroke which she suffered six weeks ago, Mrs. Eleanor Christina Martin, widow of William Albert Martin, died at her residence in the 5th concession of Thurlow Township early this Wednesday morning, Nov. 27th.

The late Mrs. Martin was born 74 years ago in Quebec, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Whyte. For a few years she lived in Napanee and for the past fifty years she resided in Thurlow Township, and in the community she was highly esteemed. In religion she was a member of St. Andrew's United Church at Gilead.

Surviving her are two sons, Mr. Clarence Martin, at home, and Mr. Bruce H. Martin, Thurlow Township; one daughter, Mrs. Manson York, Tamworth, and one sister, Mrs. J. McFarlane, Odessa. Her husband died in the year 1935.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

MRS. ALICE LAMB
(Stirling)

After an illness of three weeks' duration, Mrs. Alice Lamb, widow of Robert Lamb, passed away at the residence of her son, Mr. David Lamb, in the village of Stirling on Tuesday, Nov. 26th.

The late Mrs. Lamb who was in her 69th year, was born at Loch Rigg, Scotland, being a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Outterson. In the year 1913 she came with her late husband to Canada and for a time the family lived in the Ottawa Valley and in the year 1916 they moved to Rawdon Township, Hastings County. After residing in Rawdon for three years the family took up residence in the village of Stirling. In the communities where she resided at various times, Mrs. Lamb was held in high regard by all who knew her. In religion she was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling.

Surviving her is one son, Mr. David Lamb, Stirling. Her husband died in the year 1936. She was the last of her family.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

LATE ROBERT W. ADAMS

The funeral of Robert W. Adams, late residence, 1 Forin Street, took place from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, on Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 26th. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in Belleville cemetery was conducted by the Rev. W. J. Walker, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

The bearers were Messrs. John W. Cook, D. Martin, P. Ranson, E. Rutherford, H. Lee and W. Brooks.

LATE HARRY SMITH,
(Deloro)

Marmora, (Special)—Attended by a large number of relatives and sympathizing friends, the funeral of the late Harry Smith of Deloro took place on Tuesday afternoon. The service at St. Paul's was taken by the rector, Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell. The hymns included "Abide With Me," a favorite of the deceased.

Interment was made in Marmora Protestant Cemetery. The pallbearers were R. A. Elliott, A. V. Yates, C. H. Buskard, H. A. McNally, N. A. Kilpatrick and H. O. Loveless.

The many beautiful floral emblems were tokens of the respect in which the late Mr. Smith was held.

YOUNG SON OF MR. CHURCHILL SPEAKS IN COMMONS

Lieutenant Randolph Churchill stood in the light of a world audience when he made his maiden speech in the British Commons on Tuesday. He was in the presence of his father, the Prime Minister who directs the government in one of the most momentous times in history and who is one of the outstanding statesmen of British history and one of the great figures of the world besides an orator of great power. Young Churchill spoke in a day when the Commons is accustomed to weighty matters and he lost no time in touching upon a phase of the war.

He won the applause of the members as he told the Commons: "Do not let us urge that the army should be launched upon the enemy before it is capable of doing something really effective." The young man also gave expression to a view that the world is a better world in a spiritual sense today than it was two years ago when "we were giving in to evil: today we are resisting it."

Then he said of the prosecution of the war and the days beyond: "Whatever our war aims may be unless we key ourselves to absolutely iron determination to exert ourselves after the war as fully in years of peace and reconstruction as we have done in war, all we have gained will be thrown away."

It was an anxious moment for son and father as the young man spoke. The father must have been on the alert but still calm and also very proud of the manner in which his son stood before the representatives of the nation in the historic parliament which Mr. Churchill himself so praised last week at the opening of Parliament. He had seen his son enter the Commons, that custodian of the freedom of the people and he could have had no prouder moment in his political life than to see the soldier son acquit himself so well. Mr. Winston Churchill, a member of a great family, heard his son begin his parliamentary career, with the deepest feelings, everyone must believe, who knows the strength of the emotions of this great leader. Lieutenant Churchill, too, must have been anxious as he was speaking for the first time. He was awed no doubt by the great name of Churchill and by the expectations the public has of the son of the Prime Minister. In the words of members his maiden speech was brilliant.

The record of devoted service of the Prime Minister, his father, must inspire the young man to become a statesman after the great Churchill tradition.

"THE TWO WAYS OF LIFE"

There has been issued by the Director of Public Information, Ottawa, under the authority of the Minister of National War Services an illustrated booklet entitled "Two Ways of Life" or "Eux et Nous" for French readers.

The purpose is explained in the introduction.

"Germany and Italy are attempting to destroy our way of life.

"We are defending our way of life against this attack.

"Our way of life is the civilized way of life. It is the civilized way because under it every citizen enjoys the right to worship as he pleases, to select his own rulers, to help make his own laws, to choose his own career and to live more freely than under any other form of government known to man.

"In Canada we live that way.

"Under the German and Italian way of life people must worship as they are told, be obedient to self-appointed rulers, have no voice in the making of the laws and must live how and where the State says.

"The issue of this war is clear. Germany and Italy want to reduce us to the position of a slave to a master; to make us worship the State above all things. We fight this to retain our right to freedom and to worship above all things the God of our Fathers."

Then follow illustrations to show the contrast of the two ways of life. There is a page from Hitler's own statement of his political aims in "Mein Kampf" in which he says: "There must be no decision by the majority. One man decides." Again Hitler says: "Select the adversary; and on a given signal bombard him with a regular drumfire of lies and calumnies. Keep it up until the nerves of the other side break down. Repeat the same performance over and over again."

Against this is set the utterance of His Majesty King George VI: "It is not in power or wealth alone, nor in dominion over other peoples, that the true greatness of an Empire exists. The end is freedom, justice and peace in equal measure for all." And there is this fine utterance of Prime Minister King: "The interests of the people themselves are the supreme concern of democratic government," and the Premier says this is "the object of all our thoughts, a great united effort to achieve victory, to assure peace and to maintain freedom, not only in Canada but for Britain and France and wherever tyranny and aggression have sought to extend their sway."

The illustrations are very apt. On opposite pages lessons are taught in pictures. One shows the attempt of the Nazis deliberately in burning the Reichstag. That is a symbol of Parliament Destroyed. The opposing picture is Parliament Preserved, a picture of Canada's Parliament Buildings—as the symbol of the people's liberties.

In Germany and Italy the public is gagged but in Britain there is free speech as pictures show.

In the third pair of pages religion is shown as despised, churches destroyed by the enemy while in our way of life religion is exalted, men may worship, according to their beliefs.

Political murder reigns in lands of dictators, men are shot down or sent to concentration camps for opposing the will of Nazi or Fascist dictators, while in Canada and the Empire political liberty rules.

Italians and Germans have trained little children for war thus debasing their personality while in democratic lands, youth's personality is developed and exalted.

In Germany labor has been enslaved in labor battalions while it has liberty in democratic Canada and workmen are free men.

Dictators meet only for war purposes and foster ill-will among nations. On the other hand the democratic way of life fosters international friendship.

The ballot in Germany is nothing but slavery, the voter is not permitted to vote freely. In democracies, the citizen is free to vote for his own choice so that there is a guarantee of a representative government.

On the back of the booklet there are published the anthems of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Lavatories and facilities for serving light meals are included in some new high speed, long distance motorbuses.

Most of the imported milk of magnesia sold in India is supplied by a few well-known firms in the United States.

Greeks Win World's Admiration

London (By Mail)—Not since Lee stood at Gettysburg, with the beleaguered fragments of Confederacy in all its weakness of material and man-power, against the economic and military might of Grant and the North, has the world seen the like of that day when Greece took up the gage of battle thrown down by the Axis powers. The Kingdom of Greece is writing a Homeric epic once again in the pages of history. Mythology is alive in actuality on Macedonian hills.

There are many scholarly memories of Greece, and there are Hellenic traditions that become the fabric of such democracies as are left, but when the future historian writes of Greece of old and Greece of yesterday (1940) he may truly add: "This was her greatest hour."

Conversations with many Greek nationals, from peddler to priest, reveal an astounding sense of reality about what they are doing. "We may be driven to the islands to be protected by the British fleet..... We will lose many dear to us....... But as sure as the sun rises England will never forget what we did."

Of all the Balkan neutrals and all the Balkan powers, Greece dared to resist uncompromisingly the Italian attack in the belief: "Who lives if England dies?" The magnificent action of the Greeks is one of the most astonishing things of the European scene.

The English are slower to bless than, as Kipling said, "to ban." But by their action the Greeks have won a century or two of friendship. Their display of courage has created in the minds of Englishmen everywhere a curiosity about the Aegean kingdom that never existed before, and a desire to learn more about "these fellows with the courage to take it."

The average British subject, having resigned himself to the belief that Europe was bereft of the breed, since the blitzkrieg began, now feels "bucked up." It may astonish the Greeks to learn that the largest proportion of the people of the United Kingdom and the Commonwealth of Nations scarcely hoped to see a fight. It may be that Greece has had a "bad press" and much that should be known about them is not known. Most people have poor notions of the races that comprise that nation of people known as the Greeks.

The Greeks rushed to their reserve depots in advance of any call and crowded troop trains began pulling towards the front as soon as trouble started. Their defiance and their loyalty to British commitment has thrilled the world.

There are well authenticated rumours from neutral sources, such as Switzerland, that all is not well in Italy. There is more than a hint that the Vatican itself is not a unit as to pro-Axis neutrality and that the royal family do not view with delight the situation of their royal relative in Belgium, who is in "protective custody." It has been heard more than once that the commercial and industrial men of northern Italy, who have been somewhat less than co-operative, are now openly critical, particularly since the arrival of British bombers. Last, and not least, the soldier does not display proper Fascist fervour when shipped abroad for Il Duce's military adventures. All this stems from Dunkirk. The Germans did not reach England in August—or September, or October, and their loss of 2,300 planes in 70 days shocked the Italian high command. Italy was scheduled to "occupy" Egypt because a beaten Britain would make peace, and the Fascist legions would not have to fight their way in. Now, to add misery to that blasted hope of pillage, the Greeks are fighting and the British Navy is blockading the straits from convenient Greek islands. Worse still, they will be able to force their way inside the straits, and into the Adriatic itself, with small fighting craft and put an end to the last remnant of Italian sea power.

The cities of Milan, Naples and Palermo are now conveniently situated for bombing—and the British air commandant states "Rome will be bombed." He has the peculiar English humour to refer to it as an "act of vandalism," but, since St. Paul's and Buckingham Palace have been bombed, that will not deter him from giving flying orders marked "Rome." The demands of the British press and British labor leaders for the bombing of Rome must send an apprehensive shiver down the spine of the war-like Duce, who has an eye on the none too war-like morale of his people. Mussolini must often wish he ruled Huns, and actually there has been little affection between the two peoples. And in considering the morale of the Italians at home, their loyalty to their Pope and king must be taken into account. The Italian is Catholic, while the other end of the Axis yoke is—Hitler. The little king no longer reviews Fascist troops or appears with the Duce, and his passive acquiescence, gained for a short war, must be running thin.

The Greek army is well led. It is not, of course, as heavily mechanized as its opposing force, the Italian. It has, however, an advantage in being able to fight the initial battles in terrain that offers no advantage to tanks or motorized columns. Unless German or Bulgarian support is given on the right Axis front, the regular and irregular forces of Greece, with ammunition guaranteed by British ordnance, will be able not only to stem the Italian forces, but should be able to inflict several defeats, minor in themselves, but fatal to the morale of the Fascists. Further, it has sea power by its alliance with Britain, which can influence the fire power factor on the left sector. Further, too, it has the moral factor of the R.A.F. in the skies, which has fought 3 to 1 and 5 to 1 and better against Germans and which cheerily asks for odds of 8 to 1 with Italians in a dog fight.

The Italians must face an all out ding-dong battle, with the ugly, sinister and scarcely disguised contempt of their German master as a spur. This Churchill knows and he also knows that while there may be criticism of the soldierly qualities of the city-bred Greek, there is none in the lean hill and valley shepherd on the frontier. These lean hill men are, man for man, better soldiers than any part of Il Duce's army. Any part, save one, and that part is not Italian, but Teutonic, and comes from that part of Northern Italy which despises everything south of it.

And it is in Northern Italy that the Fascist regime has its greatest critics, the industrial north that is getting the hard knocks of the British bombers, where the Duce recruits his shock troops, and where Italian casualty lists will hit more heavily. Thus, every Italian military success, not to speak of military failures, will have a debilitating effect far in excess of its military value.—Major H. M. Bell in Hamilton Spectator.

Hitler's Fiendish Hatred of Royalty

The Nineteenth Century (London)

The bombing of Buckingham Palace was certainly deliberate and can be no doubt at all the Hitler is resolved on the extermination of the Royal Family. He has always hated royalty, for it represents a principle more exalted than any he could understand and it calls forth an allegiance far deeper than his terroristic Fuhrertum could ever hope to command. That is why he pursued King Haakon with his bombers, that is why he tried to capture Queen Wilhelmina and to destroy her daughter and grandchildren, that is why he is trying to kill the King and Queen of England. Hitler's foreign policy has always been in keeping with his home policy. He has always been, and still is, first and last a terrorist. He pursues his foes with insatiable ferocity. Incapable of any chivalrous action or any generous feeling, he is resolved on the extermination of all who stand in his way or who have ever stood in his way. He will always prefer the crueller methods to the more merciful even if the one is no more efficacious than the other. To those who have given him the slightest offence he is merciless when they are at his mercy. The horrible torments he caused to be inflicted on Dr. Litten, who was counsel for the prosecution when Hitler was tried for high treason, are but one example amongst many—Dr. Litten died a long, lingering death as a result of his injuries. Hitler's malignance is altogether frightful. But it is always systematic. It is out of malignance that he has ordered the non-military bombing of London—and this bombing is no less systematic than the torture and murder of the prisoners in his concentration camps. It is the wickedness of this foul monster that gives the Second World War its peculiarly nightmarish character.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

James W. Barton, M.D.

ECZEMA IN INFANTS CAN BE CURED

Before the days of baby specialists, eczema in infants and children was not considered a serious matter as it usually cleared up by the time the child was two years old. The mother was given ointments to apply which gave some relief and often prevented the spread of the eruption.

To-day when eczema occurs, the baby specialist and family physician immediately investigate the baby's food as they know that about three cases in four are due to some food to which the baby is allergic or sensitive. The eruption has really nothing to do with the skin itself but is the reaction of the body to some food it cannot handle properly. By skin and other tests they "modify" the milk or other food taken and the eczema disappears. In the dry form of eczema, reducing the fat or the sugar or both is often found effective.

When allergy of sensitiveness to food is not the cause of eczema, Dr. Marion B. Sulzberger, New York City, in the Journal of the American Medical Association states that change of environment or surroundings may bring about a cure but unfortunately this is not often possible. In the "cure" of eczema in children under 2 years of age, his experience has shown that the various factors can be ranged in the following order of importance.

1. Time. Most patients get well by the age of 2 or before, and many then remain free from skin ailments.

2. Complete change of environment.

3. Extreme care in applying remedies to the skin.

4. In many cases in which removal from the general environment is impossible, the leaving out of the commonest foods to which children are allergic or sensitive.

The two points we obtain from the above are (a) that children will be free of their eczema at or before the age of two years and may have no other skin trouble; (b) that foods eaten and the surroundings of the child should be investigated as cures can be obtained in most cases, and there is no real reason for waiting for the two years to pass before giving the child relief.

Graziani Known As a Fiend

(By MICHAEL FOOT)

They have a name, "The Scourge of Libya," for Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, commander of Italian troops in North Africa. Graziani has been active in Africa for twenty years. When, in 1922, Mussolini made his famous 'march on Rome,' Graziani was engaged in the reconquest of Libya, as he said, "acre by acre." As the news came through to him in Libya of the "march on Rome", Graziani was surveying the scene of the latest battle with rebellious tribesmen. He saw a glittering object buried amid the rocky debris. He stooped down and picked it up. It was a golden coin which on one side bore the sign of a great Roman emperor. On the other was the goddess Rome.

Graziani, with a fine sense of history and flunkeyism, dispatched the trophy to his new master in Rome. It was a shrewd manoeuvre which has served him well ever since. From that day forward he was given authority to continue his work in Libya with a merciless hand.

The task suited Graziani's genius, and in eight years of war against native rebellion he left a memory which still burns in the minds of Arabs along the whole of the coastline.

x x

In the French Revolution, it is said, an average of three people were executed daily during the Terror, making a total of twelve hundred a year. Over many months, Graziani maintained a record of thirty executions a day, or eleven thousand a year. "For Italy," he said, "unbroken order in her imperial domains is a moral necessity."

It was not simply killing. He had devices of his own adapted to the needs of the country. Arabs who attempted to escape over the borders into more friendly hands were taken up in aeroplanes and hurled to the rocks below.

In the bleak, parching desert wells were sealed up with cement by his order. In the province of Cyrenaica alone the native population was said to have been reduced by a half.

The governor surveyed his handiwork and saw that it was good. "They all know you," said one journalist to him as he was taken by the governor on a visit to the villages. "Yes," replied Graziani, "and they won't forget me in a hurry."

Thus Libya was subdued. He returned to Rome with the laurel of a conqueror on his brow, and the name of "the scourge" squarely implanted in the brain of the Arab. Boastfully, he told the Italians that his rule had been based on one motto: "An enemy forgiven is more dangerous than a thousand foes."

x x

Rome was buzzing with intrigues. Graziani was clever enough not to engage in them. With great publicity he gave up soldiering for the farm. He had served in Eritrea and Libya before the Great War, and in the war itself had been decorated for his prowess. That, and his repute as a killer in Libya after the war, would stand him in good stead. So he watched and waited; not in vain.

In 1934 the flashy, picturesque Balbo, potential rival to Mussolini himself, the second man in all Italy, was packed off as governor to Libya to keep him out of the limelight. Meanwhile the crafty Graziani marched at the head of Italian troops to the Brenner to warn Hitler that he must be more careful how he handled such puppets of the Duce as "the wretched Dr. Dollfuss."

A higher honour still awaited him. Italy was conquering a new empire in Abyssinia. Graziani, together with Marshal de Bono, had devised the plan of campaign. He led one of the invading forces himself and did his work well. He was a clever soldier.

When De Bono failed, he succeeded. When the country was half conquered he stood at the right hand of the new viceroy, Marshal Badoglio. He watched the killings that went on in Addis Ababa. He scorned the comparatively mild methods employed; this was a job after his own heart.

Badoglio went back to Rome and the great question arose, "Who would succeed him?" Some pointed to Graziani; he, after all, had played a notable part in the victory. Others suggested Balbo. He was the prince of Italian governors, the best known Italian after Mussolini. And had he not spent three years grappling with the solemn memories of wrong which Graziani had left him in Libya? Moreover, Graziani was a soldier. Balbo was a Fascist.

Strangely, the choice fell on Graziani. It was a revelation of Mussolini's mind. It was also a sad day for Abyssinia.

x x

In February, 1937, the new viceroy announced that "he was proud to place in the Duce's hands the clear-cut totalitarian victory that will allow us to devote ourselves without anxiety to the civil developments of the empire."

The claim was exaggerated, for outside the main centres of Addis Ababa and Harar, Abyssinia was still fighting. Graziani determined that his "civil development" should proceed without hindrance.

A few guns were hidden at Debra Libanos, Ethiopia's most sacred monstery some miles north of Addis. They were discovered. Three hundred and fifty monks were hauled out and lined up against the wall.

Some Eritreans, themselves Christians, were ordered to fire. They refused. Graziani was impatient. He sent in Somali troops with bayonets fixed to finish off the work and burn the monastery to the ground.

Abyssinia took its revenge when a dozen hand grenades were hurled at Marshal Graziani and his staff as they drove to a ceremony in Addis Ababa. Nobody was killed, but Graziani's wounds were paid back in full measure.

In Addis alone 6,000 Abyssinians were murdered in three days. Women and children were budgeoned to death. Men were roped to lorries by their feet and dragged through the streets. Hundreds were burned alive in their houses.

The records of this massacre resides at the British Foreign Office. They were reported by consuls on the spot. Hints of them even raised a few questions in the House of Commons.

However, in Abyssinia, as in Libya, the name of Graziani is branded indelibly as that of a cruel butcher.—Hamilton Spectator.

Stewart Says—

Apparently F.D.R. Plans to Serve Out His Full Third Term

By CHARLES P. STEWART

(Central Press Canadian Columnist)

Chas. P. Stewart

Washington. — Apparently President Roosevelt doesn't intend to resign in Henry A. Wallace's favor, even if the present national emergency passes before his next four years are up. During the campaign it frequently was suggested that was his plan. He behaves now, however, as if he never had had any such idea. He does act, though, exactly as if he had Henry picked to succeed him at the end of 1944. That is to say, he's at pains to give his understudy plenty of limelight—a lot more of it than a mere vice-president-elect usually has turned on him.

It's rather odd, to be sure, if he doesn't want a fourth term, that he wouldn't answer a direct question on the subject, put to him at one of his press conferences. Still, it's true that he previously had said the country will have another president after his 12-year White House tenancy's expiration. This wasn't quite the same as an unqualified statement that he'll refuse to be drafted again. Nevertheless, it's very characteristic of him to take umbrage at any intimation that he hasn't expressed himself altogether clearly.

Anyway, all indications are that he proposes to serve through his third four years in the executive mansion and then to have things fixed for Henry Wallace's nomination at the head of the New Deal ticket and to guarantee his election, if possible. In short, he's looking ahead to 1944 already. So, doubtless, is Henry Wallace.

Willkie, Too?

And so, on the opposition side, is Wendell L. Willkie. Wendell modestly disclaimed a desire for a continuation of the campaign's Willkie clubs, but he gave every indication of a determination to build up a stronger and stronger Republican organization, and it generally is agreed that, if he's human, he aims at the party's 1944 nomination.

Wendell's in much the same sort of a Republican boat as the Democratic boat that Al Smith was in following his defeat in 1928. Al and his crew navigated their craft so competently that the Democrats sailed right into port when 1932 rolled around. They didn't sail in under Al's captaincy, however. Franklin D. Roosevelt got it away from him.

That the Republicans, with Willkie at their vessel's helm, will finish their 1940-44 voyage as gratifying to themselves as the Democrats did in 1932 doesn't necessarily follow.

The good ship G.O.P. was in hard luck throughout the entire period of Herbert Hoover's watch on the bridge. From the beginning it had a steadily rising tide of popular hostility to prohibition to buck against. And then, towar dthe end, it ran into the slump and depression storm. It was no wonder the trim Democratic ship sailed right by the poor, battered G.O.P. hulk as easily as it did.

This May Be Different.

The coming four years may be different from the 1928-32 interval.

Business is improving at a lively clip now. Unemployment's dwindling. If this keeps up the New Deal is bound to get the credit for it. True, Wendell Willkie warns that bulging stock markets aren't real prosperity. On the contrary, he asserts that they're sympoms of fever. Perhaps it's so, but the voters aren't likely to pay much attention to such a diagnosis four years hence.

On the other hand, if we're simply over-stimulated temporarily by our national defence tonic and its effects wear off ahead of 1944, Wendell will be in a position to proclaim, "I told you so."

In that event Willkie is liable to find himself just where Al Smith hoped to be in 1932—only that year he didn't win the nomination. It behooves Wendell, then, to make sure somebody else does not squeeze by, in advance of him, in 1944, after all the spade work he'll have been doing in the meantime.

And he'll have plenty of competition from other aspirants, if they think the G.O.P. stands a reasonable chance of staging a comeback at that election, as the Democrats did the first time F. D. R. ran, elbowing Al Smith out of the picture and licking Hoover, subsequently.

O. V. C. CORPS TO BE FORMED IN THIS CITY

Major Ted Willing Has Been Appointed District Inspector by Toronto Authorities

VISIT KIWANIS

Immediate organization of Units of the Ontario Volunteer Constabulary in the Belleville District and the appointment of E. R. Willing of Belleville, as District Inspector was announced from Toronto Monday by Lieut.-Colonel A. Q. C. O'Brien, Superintendent of the Ontario Volunteer Constabulary.

The Ontario Volunteer Constabulary which is an auxiliary of the Ontario Provincial Police is growing rapidly and it is expected that the Corps will reach its twelve hundred allowed strength early in 1941.

Districts in which the Ontario Volunteer Constabulary are organized coincide with the twelve Provincial Police Districts and training of Ontario Volunteer Constabulary Units is supervised by the Districts Inspector of the Ontario Provincial Police. District No. 8 with headquarters in Belleville is commanded by Inspector Gardner and this District consists of the counties of Northumberland, Durham, Hastings, Lennox, Addington, Frontenac, Peterborough, Haliburton and Victoria.

The Ontario Volunteer Constabulary is a self-supporting auxiliary of the Ontario Provincial Police prepared to serve in time of emergency. Training is divided so that the Ontario Volunteer Constabulary can act as a well-trained law enforcement body or as an efficient military unit when the occasion demands. Training includes Air Air Precautions, Foot Drill, Mechanical Transport, Subversive Investigation, First Aid, Musketry and Sabotage Prevention.

Major Ted Willing, Captains Stillman and Handley of Toronto and Inspector Frank Gardner of the Ontario Provincial Police were guests at the Kiwanis luncheon on Tuesday and explained in detail the Ontario Voluntary Constabulary. It is proposed by Major Willing to organize a "K" Company in this city and it will be composed of 25 men and it is fully expected that the required amount will be obtained.

Mrs. L. Bellinger Accidentally Shot When Gun Jams

When a bullet jammed in the breech of a .22 calibre rifle, in the hands of John McLaughlin, 26 Bridge Street, and exploded outside of the breech of the gun, the bullet accidentally struck Mrs. Leo Bellinger, of this city, in the left leg and above the knee, late Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. McLaughlin was endeavoring to kill a rat which infested an apartment dwelling occupied by an employee at 19 East Bridge Street, where Mrs. Bellinger was employed in assisting with the housework. Mrs. Bellinger was taken to the Belleville General Hospital where Dr. J. J. Robertson stated today the bullet had penetrated the fleshy part of her leg but the wound was not serious. She was standing on a chair at the time of the accident.

Efforts to catch a rat in the apartment at 19 East Bridge Street had previously proven futile, so at the request of the owner, Mr. McLaughlin sawed the lead from a .22 calibre bullet at the base so as not to damage property. However it was the sawed-off bullet that jammed in the breech of the gun and when Mr. McLaughlin tried to release the bullet it discharged outside of the breech, the small pellet striking Mrs. Bellinger.

Today Detective Fred Isard investigated and officially stated that undoubtedly the sawing off of the nose of the bullet caused it to jam in the breech. "It was a repeating rifle and when the nose of the bullet was sawed off the shell flew past the breech and jammed, as the shell was too short to slip into the breech." explained Detective Isard. Although Mr. McLaughlin did fire one shot at the rat, the rodent escaped as the result of the gun jamming. "It was purely an accident, but quite fortunate that the wound was not more serious," commented Chief Kidd today.

"Go home to your mother if you want to, but it would do more good if you went to the COOKING SCHOOL."

Trenton and District

Airmen Appreciate Dinner Invitations To Belleville Homes

Trenton, (Special)—Airmen of the R.C.A.F. Station at Trenton express their appreciation to the citizens of Belleville and district for their kindness in having them to dinner on Sunday last.

The Sunday dinner invitations have been greatly appreciated by the airmen and have enabled them to get away from the airport and to establish contacts with the citizens in Belleville.

The scheme was established last week under the supervision of the Y.M.C.A. in Belleville and members of the Y.M.C.A. at the Trenton Airport. Every week, a number of citizens send invitations to entertain two airmen for dinner to the Belleville "Y" or to Andy Reekie and Ken McAdam, Y.M.C.A. Directors at the Trenton Airport.

Last Sunday airmen were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Ackerman, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Bassingthwaighte, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Bernstein, Mr. and Mrs. Jamieson Bone, Judge and Mrs. C. A. Cameron, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Deacon, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Pinkston, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Truman, Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Hagerman, Mr. and Mrs. George Lee, Mr. and Mrs. R. Stiver, Mr. and Mrs. P. C. MacLaurin and Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Baragar.

Anyone wishing to entertain airmen on any occasion can do so by leaving their name at the Y.M.C.A. or writing to the above directors at the air station.

The following is a letter from the Y.M.C.A. directors at Air Station to The Ontario Intelligencer expressing the thanks of the airmen.

R.C.A.F. Station,
Trenton, Ontario
November 25th., 1940

Dear Friends of the Airmen:

The airmen who were invited to spend Sunday dinner in the homes of a number of Belleville families have asked us to express their thanks.

This 'outside' contact is greatly appreciated by the men on the station and the enthusiastic reports of those 'chosen' last Sunday have already resulted in a long waiting list.

So tangible a contribution as this from the people of Belleville greatly assists in the maintaining of a high station morale and we thank you for entertaining the men so generously.

Sincerely,
ANDY REEKIE,
KEN McADAM,
Y.M.C.A. Directors
R.C.A.F. Station-Trenton.

POLICE COURT

Seven young boys ranging in age from seven to sixteen years appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, Tuesday afternoon on charges of causing damage to property.

The damage was the result of Hallowe'en pranks when the boys are alleged to have smashed windows, pushed over fences and outhouses and broken street lamps. Six of the boys most of them around the aged of 15 and 16 pleaded guilty to the charge but one young boy only 7 pleaded not guilty.

A 15 year old boy pleaded guilty to a charge of causing damage by shooting at the windows of the new College Street school with an air-gun.

Magistrate Butler enlarged the cases until Friday in order to give the parents time to make restitution. "This Hallowe'en nonsense has got to stop", said the Magistrate. "I expect you parents will make good the damage.

Charged with violation of the Defence of Canada Act, John Douglas Munroe, age 20, of Dundas Street, pleaded not guilty to the charge of unlawfully making statements likely to cause disaffection to His Majesty's Forces.

"I will plead 'not guilty' to the charge as read", stated the accused man, when asked to plead on the charge.

Magistrate Butler enlarged the case for one week in order that the Crown Attorney should be present to conduct the Crown's case. Bail was set at $100.00.

Munroe informed the Court that he was a Canadian and was employed at the Bata Shoe Company at Frankford.

Lions Club Collects Salvage

Members of the Trenton Lions Club have been busy during the past two nights collecting salvage. In cars and small trucks the club members are making a systematic drive to collect glass jars, bottles, rags, coat hanger, paper, magazines, tin foil, rubber, aluminium and other waste materials. The town has been divided into six zones and two zones are covered every Monday and Tuesday nights.

CUSS-EDITOR-WEEK

Polo, Ill., Nov. 27 (AP)—G. C. Terry, a weekly newspaper editor, is getting ready to absorb a verbal barrage. Announcing a "Cuss-the-Editor-Week", Terry invited subscribers to write him their grievances for publication.

"Pull no punches for there will be no retaliations," he promised. "You can go the limit and say what you really want to."

CONVEYS SYMPATHY

Coventry, England, Nov. 27 (CP Cable)—High Commissioner Vincent Massey conveyed the sympathy of Canada to the Lord Mayor of Coventry during a visit to the bomb-ravaged industrial city today.

He said he found municipal officials and the people "tackling the task of reorganization in characteristic British fashion."

CHEESESHIPMENTS TO U.K. TOTAL 92,000,000 LBS.

Additional 8,000,000 Pounds Expected to be Shipped From Dec. 1 to March 31, 1941

NEW AGREEMENT

Ottawa, Nov. 27 (CP)—The Agriculture Department said Tuesday the Dairy Products Board had estimated that shipments to the United Kingdom of Canadian Chedder cheese, from the cheese make to Nov. 30, would total 92,000,000 pounds.

From Dec. 1 this year to March 31, 1941, an additional 8,000,000 pounds is expected to be shipped.

Under terms of the agreement which took effect last May 23 between the British Ministry of Food and the Canadian government, the British Ministry agreed to take 78,400,000 pounds of white, unwaxed Canadian Cheddar cheese made prior to Dec 1. On June 13 the British Ministry advised that it would take as large a quantity of cheese from Canada as it was possible to get and recently the agreement was extended to March 31, 1941.

A new 12-month agreement becomes effective April 1 next year. Under it the British Ministry asks for shipments in the 12 months totalling 50,000 long tons or 112,000,000 pounds at 14.4 cents a pound, F.O.B. Montreal, for first grade cheese, one-half cent a pound less for second grade, and one cent a pound less for third grade.

The British Ministry will be prepared to purchase any extra quantity above the 112,000,000 pounds which may be available, the department said.

While no agreement between the British Ministry of Food and the Canadian government has yet been reached in respect to evaporated or condensed milk for shipment after next March 31, the Ministry has expressed its willingness to buy 1,000,000 cases.

During the latter part of June this year an agreement was reached between the British Ministry of Food and the government of Canada whereby Canada was to sell to the Ministry 300,000 cases of evaporated milk (48 one-pound tins per case) at $3.75 a case on board ship at Canadian seaboard. In the latter part of September arrangements were completed for supplying the Ministry with a additional 150,000 cases.

PLAUNT READY TO SUPPORT STAND

Issues Statement in Reply to Resolutions Adopted by Board of Governors of CBC

Ottawa, Nov. 27—(CP)—Alan B. Plaunt of Ottawa who recently resigned from the Board of Governors of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation Tuesday issued a statement saying "I remain prepared fully to substantiate the grounds for my resignation before a Parliamentary Committee.

Mr. Plaunt's statement was in reply to resolutions adopted yesterday by the Board of Governors regretfully noting Mr. Plaunt's retirement and declaring "full and complete confidence in the General Manager, Mr. Gladstone Murray and the Assistant General Manager, Dr. Augustin Frigon."

Mr. Plaunt's statement said that by declaring full and complete confidence in Mr. Murray "the Board of Governors of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is apparently still unwilling to face the demonstrable facts which led me to resign on Aug. 30 last.

"By failing to do so they are, in effect, condoning very serious internal conditions and irregularities as well as certain policies which are indefensibly partisan and harmful.

"The board's statement is, of course, an attempt to whitewash the whole matter. The board has, however, thus gone on record as accepting full responsibility for present deficiencies and for future results and I am, accordingly, obliged to leave the matter in their hands. I can only repeat that I remain prepared fully to substantiate the grounds for my resignation before a Parliamentary Committee

"I also wish to emphasize that my critical references to the corporation's 'executive direction' were in no sense intended to include the Assistant General Manager Dr. Augustin Frigon as the Board of Governors well knows."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25¢

British Position Improved Lately In Near East

By EDWARD KENNEDY

Cairo, Nov. 27 (AP)—British Army sources say Britain's position in the Near East appears stronger today than at any time since Italy entered the war June 10.

They describe the Italian situation thus: One army in retreat in Albania, a second stalemated in the Western Egyptian desert, a third cut off from supplies in Ethiopia.

But situations change quickly and British officers say they are alert to meet any new development which might threaten their hold on the vital Mediterranean.

Two possible developments stand out:

1. Italy may throw heavy re-inforcements into Albania in a desperate attempt to regain lost prestige and overwhelm the Greeks or;

2. Hitler, moving to the aid of his southern partner, may crash through the Balkans, bringing the Reich's army and air force to Mediterranean shores.

British officers say now that if Mussolini had attacked Egypt with his Italian legions when he entered the war just as France collapsed, the result probably would have been disastrous for Britain.

The Government was too occupied preparing for the expected invasion of Britain to give much attention to the Near East and the mainstay of the Allied defense here, General Maxime Weygand's French army, was out of the running.

In the British view, here's how the situation has changed since then:

1. Pressure on Britain has been relieved and convoy after convoy has poured reinforcements in men and materials into the Near East, creating a powerful military machine here.

2. Strong fortifications have been thrown up on the Western desert, forming a line which Italian Marshal Graziani is showing no disposition to attack.

3. The Mediterranean Fleet has had the better of the Italian Navy in several encounters, destroying or damaging a considerable part of it. The Royal Air Force has made inroads on Italian bases while Italian bombing of Egypt and the Suez Canal region has been comparatively ineffective.

4. Italy's attack on Greece has given Britain a new ally, a valuable base in Crete, and the opportunity to use Greece for air attacks on Southern Italy and Albania.

Plans for defending Egypt from a Libyan invasion have for years been to halt the Italians at a strategic line, drawing them from their bases with the disadvantages such a separation entails.

For the present the British Command is adhering to this plan, but as time goes on without the Italians risking an offensive it is not improbable that the British desert forces will carry the battle to them.

Studies Plan To Reduce Costs Of Adminstration

Whitby, Ont., Nov. 27 (CP). — Attorney-General Gordon Conant said in an address to the Ontario County Council here last night that changes in the distribution of judicial administration costs resulting in "a substantial decrease in such costs throughout the province" are in contemplation.

He said he considered the present system "archaic".

"Our whole system of administration of justice costs is tangled and complicated by rebates to municipalities and rebates to someone else. It is very complicated and it is almost impossible for one who has not made a life study of it to understand the system."

He said he was confident the special legislative committee on the administration of justice would have recommendations which would bring "material improvement that will make justice available to every man with a minimum of expense and legal complications".

MARX BROTHERS TO MAKE PICTURE

New York, Nov. 27 (AP) Chico Marx, he's the piano-playing, Italian-character Marx, said Tuesday the three Marx brothers would make one more movie together to fulfill contract obligations and then "each of us will go his own way."

"We just decided not to make any more pictures for a while," he said. "Later on, perhaps, we may get together again."

Chico said he is here to complete organization of a dance band which he will take on a tour.

OMIT HONG KONG AS PORT

Shanghai, Nov. 27 (AP)— The Shanghai office of Nippon Yusen Kaisha, Japanese Steamship Line, said today the line's San Francisco-Manila liners would omit Hong Kong as a port of call on southern voyages, starting Dec. 12. Although no reason was given, shipping circles here speculated that the action was taken to give Rome-Berlin Axis Nationals in the Orient a southward exit without stopping at Hong Kong, where they would be subject to seizure by Great Britain

BULLET REMOVED

Hazelton, Pa., Nov. 27 (AP)—Andrew Kupinewicz felt something strike his head while working in the yard three months ago, and told friends his young daughter playfully had tossed a rock. Recurrent severe headaches and insomnia finally forced him to the doctor. A small calibre rifle bullet was removed from his scalp.

'AIRACOBRA' GUNS VERY ACCURATE AT LONG RANGES

New-Type Pursuit Ship Heavily Armed Undergoes Tests at Buffalo

HUNDREDS ON ORDER

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—The United States Army reported today that cannon carried by its "airacobra" pursuit plane had achieved "great accuracy of fire from long ranges" in tests just concluded "with satisfactory results."

Officials said that the 37-millimetre cannon and the machine guns of a standard "Airacobra" which had just come off the production line of the Bell Aircraft Corporation at Buffalo, N.Y., had been treid out in an unusually short time by accelerating normal test procedure.

For more than a week three pilots alternately flew the single-engine, single seater plane from the Buffalo Municipal Airport to a point in Lake Ontario, off Fort Niagara, and fired at targets in the water.

The number of "Airacobras" ordered for the army has not been announced officially, but it is known to run into the hundreds.

In addition to orders for the United States army, the manufacturer also is turning out adaptations of the "Airacobra" for Great Britain.

J. & J. Cash Plant At Coventry, England, Undamaged by Raids

Toronto, Nov. 27 (CP)—Good news from recently-bombed Coventry, England, reached here today. One of the largest manufacturing plants there, J. and J. Cash, Limited, whose Canadian branch is in Belleville, came through the bombing without a single casualty to its staff and with no more damage than shattered windows. All in the plant escaped injury.

The Company's president and General manager has just received a cable saying that all is well, but that it would be several days before the plant would resume operations because of the broken windows and the damage to fine looms by glass splinters.

The above good news was received with appreciation and joy on the part of Mr. Arthur Wesley, Belleville manager of the company, when queried by the Ontario Intelligencer. Mr. Wesley stated that he had had word that the parent plant in bombed Coventry had been damaged to some extent but was not informed of the extent of the harm done.

The Belleville plant had wired offers of assistance but to date no word had been received.

WAR BRIEFS

Brussels, Belgium, (Via Berlin), Nov. 27 (AP)—The German high command has forbidden Jews in Belgium to participate actively in any function or profession connected with politics, administration, information, teaching or justice, it was disclosed today.

London, Nov. 27 (CP)—An authoritative source said today a protest from the Vichy government over an alleged British air bombardment of Marseille last Saturday night was received here yesterday through Sir Samuel Hoare, British Ambassador to Spain. He declined to give any details of the protest "until it has been considered."

Oslo, Norway (Via Berlin) Nov. 27 (AP)—Beginning Dec. 2, Norwegians will be limited to a bottle of hard liquor and a bottle of wine a month under a new rationing order. Liquor shops have been closed most of this month to prevent the public from stocking up in anticipation of the partial prohibition.

Berne, Nov. 27 (AP)—The Swiss Federal Council today ordered the dissolution of the Swiss Communist party and all its branches and all organizations which might be substituted for the dissolved party.

Hanoi, French Indo-China, Nov. 27 (AP)—French sources reported today a small party of Thailand (Siamese) troops sought to cross the Indo-China border Sunday, but abandoned the effort after an exchange of shots with a border patrol from Indo-China.

Dionne Quintuplets Will Be Taught Figure Skating

North Bay, Ont., Nov. 27 (CP)—The six-year-old Dionne quintuplets will be taught figure skating this winter and an outdoor rink will be constructed soon in the nursery grounds at the Quints' nearby Callander home, it was learned today.

The girls' instructors will be Norah and Therese McCarthy, North Bay sisters who have received approval of the Canadian Figure Skating Association to teach the Quints without impairing the McCarthys' amateur status.

The McCarthys will visit the Quintuplets periodically during the winter, coming here from Toronto where they are studying and practising for the winter skating tournaments.

PLANS TO ADJOURN PARLIAMENT SOON

Mr. King Gives Notice of Motion to Adjourn at End of Throne Speech Debate Until February 17

Ottawa, Nov. 27 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King gave notice in today's votes and proceedings of a motion he will propose in the House of Commons whereby Parliament will adjourn at conclusion of the current Throne Speech debate until Feb. 17, 1941.

The feeling among observers on Parliament Hill is that the debate might end this week.

R. H. McGregor (Con. York East) gave notice of a question, asking whether there were any regulations to prevent professional men such as lawyers, physicians and architects who are officers in Canadian Forces from carrying on private practice.

G. H. Ross (Lib. Calgary East) will ask what the Government proposes to do with regard to rehabilitation of personnel being discharged from time to time from the armed forces and if a general policy has not yet been formulated what is being done in the meantime for these persons.

SNOW-FILLED ROADS PREVENT MAGISTRATE REACHING PICTON COURT

Picton, Ont., Nov. 27 (CP)—Snow-filled roads prevented Magistrate J. B. Garvin of Kingston reaching Picton where he was scheduled to preside today. As a result of the blizzard during the night many rural roads in Prince Edward County are blocked and going is heavy on others. Huge drifts were reported in many sections with a blanket of two feet in town.

Nomura Formally Named Ambassador

Tokyo, Nov. 27 —(AP)— Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura was formally designated ambassador to the United States today in ceremonies at the palace. At the same time, Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa, member of the Supreme War Council, was installed as governor of Formosa.

SEVERSKY FAVORS STRONG AIR FORCE

Plane, Designer Says With Present Perfection of Aircraft U. S. Can 'Build Air Power Able to Strike Anywhere in World'

New York, Nov. 27—(AP)—Maj. Alexander P. De Seversky, airplane designer and Russian ace during the First Great War, said Tuesday that the United States could not be invaded for five years but that "when it is invaded, the attempt will be made directly by air from the other side."

"We must be prepared to smash that invasion attempt with the strongest air force in the world," he said.

Speaking before several hundred New York business men at a luncheon of the Sales Executive Club, De Seversky advocated "an independent air arm in this country, although leaving to the army and navy jurisdiction over their own air forces.

"With the present perfection of our aircraft we can build an air power which can strike anywhere in the world, even in parts of the globe which our army and navy cannot reach."

12 Men Indicted, Mail Frauds Charged

Detroit, Nov. 27 —(AP)— A special Federal Grand Jury investigating affairs of Michigan's State Government indicted Frank D. McKay of Grand Rapids, Republican National Committeeman and former State Treasurer, and 11 others today on mail fraud charges.

One indictment charged that McKay and 11 others used the mails to defraud the State of "the honest services of its public officials" in a $500,000 shakedown of distilleries selling their wares to the State Liquor Control Commission.

Another charged a scheme to defraud Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Company, of $9,916.

WEDDINGS

FOBERT—RICE

Marmora, (Special)—A picturesque wedding took place at St. Paul's church, Marmora, at three o'clock on Monday, when Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell united in marriage, Kathleen Lily, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Rice of Marmora, to Cletus Harold John (Jack) Fobert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fobert of Toronto. Wedding music was played by the organist, Mrs. L. R. Rundle and George Rice, brother of the bride, played "I Love You Truly", as a violin solo, with organ accompaniment during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was prettily attired in a full length Queen's blue crepe dress with matching shoulder length veil and accessories. She carried a nosegay of Johanna Hill roses and bronze chrysanthemums.

Miss Eleanor Clyde of Toronto, as bridesmaid, was daintily dressed in pink georgette with matching accessories and wore a corsage of pink roses.

Mr. Peter Tisler of Toronto, discharged the duties of best man.

Following the ceremony the wedding banquet was served at the home of the bride with the immediate relatives and friends attending. The bride's mother wore a navy blue dress with a corsage of yellow roses. The happy young couple who were the recipients of many choice and useful gifts later left on a short honeymoon which is being spent in Hamilton, the bride's travelling dress being wine crepe and her coat all grey cloth, fur trimmed with black accessories.

They will take up residence in Toronto.

Also in attendance at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Dandy (nee Evelyn Rice) and Mrs. Harvey Clyde of Toronto.

BROWNE—LOUGH

Marmora, (Special) — A pretty Autumn wedding took place at St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, on Saturday afternoon when Aileen Elizabeth Lough, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lough of Marmora Township, was united in marriage to Sergeant William Murray Browne of the Royal Canadian Air Force. Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher performed the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a tailored dress of grey and rosewood and carried a bouquet of roses and lily of the valley. Mrs. Wilbur McCoy, matron of honor, wore a grey wool costume with navy accessories.

The duties of groomsman were carried out by Sergeant Charles Gambles of the R.C.A.F., Trenton.

A reception was later held at the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. Lough wearing a navy sheer dress with corsage of white carnations, received the guests assisted by Mrs. Browne. The bridal couple left on a tour of Western Ontario and upon their return will take up residence in Dunnville.

POUND—HOWES

On Saturday, November 23rd., the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Howes of Corbyville, was the scene of a quiet, but pretty wedding, when their elder daughter, Ruby Evelyn, became the bride of Harold Clarence Pound, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pound. The Rev. Mr. Davis of Cannifton, officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father was dressed in white triple sheer with lace trimmings, a single gardenia finishing the neck line. She wore her mother's bridal veil caught in place with a wreath of orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of carnations, baby's breath and ferns.

Miss Marion Pound, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid. She wore rose crepe and carried a large bouquet of carnations and ferns.

Mr. Harold Howes, brother of the bride, was groomsman and Miss Vera Pound was pianist.

After the ceremony dinner was served in the dining-room which was tastefully decorated with pink and white streamers, the table was centred with a large wedding cake.

The groom's gifts to the bridesmaid and pianist, were gold bracelets and to the groomsman a gold tie slide and belt buckle suitably engraved.

Later the happy couple left by motor for Toronto and other points west, the bride travelling in wine colored dress with matching coat and hat and black accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Pound intend taking up residence in the near future on the 4th Concession of Thurlow.

Princess Slip And Panties Set

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Wise Host Never Insists

Some hostesses and hosts, even though their intentions may be of the very best, have the habit of doing certain things that make a guest uneasy or uncomfortable.

In their over-zealous effort to be cordial and hospitable they urge their guests to have "just one more piece" of this or that, and they just refuse to accept "No thank you" as an answer. The insisting goes on and on all during a meal. Eventually, the guest, in an effort to be "cooperative", feels too stuffed for words. There isn't any room for words!

Then there is the well-intentioned host or hostess who can't resist commenting on what a guest doesn't eat. Maybe the guest isn't hungry; he may be a "light" eater—he even may be politely trying to eat something that isn't much of a favorite with him. Whatever the reason, the hostess or host should, after the guest has been served, let him eat or not eat whatever he wishes and as he wishes. No comments!

Even more misguided is the too-genial host who insists that a guest must take a drink, even though the guest is a "non-drinker" or even though he just doesn't want a drink or "another drink" at that time. Fortunately most hosts are in step with today's kind and considerate habit of making a hospitable offer of a drink to a guest and then, with no more ado, abiding by his "No, thank you" if his preference is not to drink.

Along this line, I may add that the thoughtful hostess or host never forgets to provide a non-alcoholic drink for those who wish it. This means that there need be a minimum of insistence on something the guest doesn't want.

Courtesy Tip

A gentlewoman or a gentleman invariably treats with courtesy those who serve. It's a distinguishing characteristic of a well-bred person.

TASTY GARNISH

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Opposing Temperaments Destine Marriage for Failure

The morning's mail brings a letter from a young man, who signs himself "Peter" and who writes to tell me some of his troubles. Engaged to a girl of 21, he is 23 and very much in love. He wonders if love can thrive when tastes are opposite, which is true in their case.

The boy, who is sensitive, works in a noisy office where typewriters clatter and telephones ring all day long. He likes to have peace and quiet when he comes home evenings. The girl, who works in a department store, is ready for movies, a dance, or a party—"any place at all where the din rages" as her fiance writes.

He tells me he greatly desires this girl's companionship, but she wants to be going at top speed all the time. You'd think her job in a department store would supply her with all the stimulants that crowds, noise and confusion can give. But when she comes home after working all day, she's ready for more, and gets bored if the evening is spent at home.

Her mother tells him she has a hard time getting the girl up in the morning, and that her daughter fairly dances into her clothes, then hums and sings while waiting for breakfast. This liveliness, it seems, makes her very popular with both boys and girls in her set.

The young lady thinks she's in love with the boy to whom she's engaged, but she has a questionable way of showing it, when she asks for all sorts of expensive gifts which she knows her fiance cannot afford. Right now he's paying for her diamond ring, and very often has to go without lunch to meet the payments.

The girl seems to have no desire to talk about plans for the future. To her friends she admits that some day, when she can afford the bridal outfit she has set her heart upon, she'll have the knot tied—and hopes they'll live happily ever after.

I think, in this case, the prospects of a happy marriage are distinctly risky. Peter is beginning to think the same way about it. There's nothing slow about him. He greatly likes dancing, and dances well enough to please his inamorata; but he also likes hiking in the country and all outdoor games. He likes books and quiet talks.

Must he forego these pleasures forever in marrying a girl who can find no "kick" in quiet companionship, or should he, before it is too late, pull himself out of this particular engagement?

I'm afraid he won't do that because, in spite of their temperamental differences, he is fascinated with this noisy, lively girl. From the facts as given I feel that these two young people will not succeed in understanding each other, and that, if marriage doesn't change them, after a few years the tension will have become so acute that neither of them will be able to endure it any longer.

Dr. Dafoe's Column on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Gastro-enteritis

A few weeks ago the newspapers carried a small item about an outbreak of gastro-enteritis among children in a small city near mine. Since then a number of mothers have addressed inquiries to me about this disease with the serious sounding name. And I have told them that gastro-enteritis means sick stomach.

The symptoms of this condition are nausea, vomiting, coated tongue, thirst, foul breath, aversion to food, sometimes a pain in the stomach. The most common cause is some one irritating or indigestible food; sometimes it is a combination of foods that won't digest together. Food that is too cold or too hot may cause it, and very often it may be a symptom of the onset of some infectious disease, because many of these show an upset stomach as the first symptom. A baby may suffer from gastro-enteritis because the milk is too rich, or because it has eaten too much, or it is suffering from the heat, or has a sudden change in diet.

The first thing to do, usually, is empty the stomach—get rid of whatever is upsetting that organ. Drinking quantities of warm water and then pressing the finger down the throat is an unpleasant, but thorough, way of accomplishing this. Bicarbonate of soda is good; so is an enema.

Swallowing bits of ice often serves to settle the stomach and at the same time it relieves the thirst that is always present.

This I always try to impress on people about sick stomach, or gastro-enteritis: nine cases out of ten will be trivial, and simple to relieve. But the tenth time, the sick stomach is a symptom of serious trouble. If you treat the matter too lightly and don't call your doctor, then a serious condition may develop until other symptoms and the increasing illness of the patient force you to call a doctor. By that time, however, whatever the disease is will have gained dangerous headway. It is always better to be safe than sorry and I strongly advise your calling a doctor when a child or an adult has a badly upset stomach.

One of the most serious possibilities in the case of sick stomach is appendicitis. If you don't call your doctor, this may continue to act like a sick stomach until the appendix gets so bad it ruptures. When this happens, there is a very great danger that the patient will die.

Then too, the gastro-enteritis may merely be the first signal that some acute infectious disease is beginning. The doctor, if he is called, will recognize what is happening and will treat the patient so as to minimize the attack. But if he is not called until the disease is running full tilt through the patient's system, it is too late for him to keep the disease in a mild form.

Letters From the Troops

21-10-40

Dear Jamie,—

I suppose you figure I forgot all about you, but I think always of everyone who, I know is with me and I always wonder how you all are and I do hope this letter will find you enjoying the best of health.

I am fine and never felt better in my life I don't think.

So far Jimmy, I've had very good success in the army in this country. I got up to Arm't Staff-Serg't. and have had good success in my work and I always do my best for those at home and I sure like to hear from you all, as it seems to give me something that's missing over here in a strange country.

I've been up to Scotland three different times, once at Glasgow, once at Greenoch and once at Aberdeen and on my leave I hope to go to Ireland and see all the colleens as I have seen the Bonny Lassies of Beautiful Scotland and there is some classy lassies there aboot, eh, mon?

You can send me the addresses of some people you know if you care for me to go and see them, as I would feel it a great pleasure in meeting some of your people and friends.

No one will ever be able to tell me how beautiful Scotland is again as I have seen it for myself and I sure do think it is a wonderful country and awfully nice and kind people to us up there.

Well, Jimmy, we are getting a few of Hitler's hard boiled eggs these days but they will never scare us with them. I've had them throw dirt in my face, they've been so close to me, but all one does is get up and curse him and mark another one against him and as sure as hell is hot he'll get much more in return for what he gives.

We stand outside at night-time and watch the anti-aircraft guns go into action and boy! do they ever give him a hot reception with them, they throw everything, even the old kitchen sink at him. He finds the R. A. F. too tough for him in daylight so now he comes after dark but one of these nights I think he is in for a great surprise.

Cigs are awful dear over here. They just cost 1 shilling, 6 pence for 20 and that's 36 cents in Canada, and I've got none since May from home. They said they sent them but I have yet to receive any since May. I guess these guys are all out of cigs who handle them.

I am starting to get used to the climate here now, and I just don't care how often it rains. The weather is just like a woman, you cannot depend on either.

Well Jimmy, old pal, I guess I will have to close now and I will write you again soon and please answer this letter as soon as possible.

All the best and Au Revoir,
Ken.

From Pte. Frank M. Sedore

The following is a letter from Pte. F. M. Sedore, former manager of the Point Anne softball club, now stationed somewhere in England:

Hello My Dear Wife:

Just a few lines to say that I am still O.K. and to thank you for another letter, which I received today. It was dated Sept. 27th and I also got one from Mother dated the 26th.

I drove the Legion Officer to London yesterday and is it ever a big place! Moreover it is a long way from being levelled to the ground. The enemy has dropped a lot of bombs throughout the city, but as far as making any noticeable impression, they have failed miserably.

While I was there yesterday they had raid alarms, but there were no bombs dropped for which I was very glad. I don't mean to say that "Jerry" hasn't dropped a lot of bombs, for he certainly has and some very large buildings have suffered as the result. But for the size of London and the number of people that live there, the extent of the damage has been slight to date. Of course they cannot help killing civilians and hitting private dwellings by the way in which they bomb. The enemy just fly as high as they can, drop their bombs and scoot for home, hoping they've struck something important but to date they have failed to break, the Londoners' spirit.

The populace of London has just refused to evacuate the city and surely have what it takes to remain as "Jerry" is over the city as sure as nightfall comes along and I think every one in London should receive a V.C. for his or her bravety. When I see people like this I just cannot see anyway for Germany to even come close to winning this war and on that you can bet your last dollar. When they say "There'll Always be an England," they are perfectly right, especially with people like the Londoners on our side.

I purchased a number of postcards and am sending them home to you and the family as I know you will all enjoy seeing these views. It is a foggy day today and I've been out with my truck. You asked if Charlie and Harry got your letters, they did and were glad to hear from home. I write you several times a week and no doubt you've received plenty of mail by now, but I will cable you over the week-end.

With love to you and all and a Merry Christmas.

Your loving husband,
FRANK

Toronto Leafs Score Brilliant 4-2 Win Over Rangers in N. Y.; Canadiens Down Bruins by 3-2

Leafs Have Now Defeated Every Team in the Loop and Are Leading Parade

APPS THE HERO

Centreman Scores Goal and Assist While Drillon Raps Home Two Markers

By ROBERT CLARKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

It isn't worth any money in the bank in itself, nor does it mean that the Stanley Cup is stowed away safely, but Toronto Maple Leafs' feat of defeating every other team in the National Hockey League in such rapid order must rate today as the outstanding bit of work in the still-young season.

Here it is just 25 days after the start of the schedule and the Leafs have toppled all six other clubs in a drive that has brought seven victories in nine games. Only two teams, Chicago Black Hawks and New York Rangers, have been able to set down the Leafs and they have been the last two victims of the Torontonians.

The Leafs filled out their victory-over-everybody hand last night by defeating Rangers 4-2 at New York in the second meeting of the season between the two teams. The victory was sweet because Rangers had opened the league schedule on Nov. 2 with a 4-1 victory in Toronto over the Leafs.

Have Four-Point Lead

As Leafs shot out into a four-point lead over the second-place Detroit Red Wings, who were idle last night, Montreal Canadiens bounced out of the league cellar and into a fifth place tie with Rangers by defeating Boston Bruins 3-2. Rangers, however, have played three games less than Canadiens.

Syl Apps and Gordie Drillon, probably as good a two-man combination as can be found in the N.H.L., set the pace for the Leafs. Drillon fired two goals while Apps counted one and helped in one of Drillon's. The other Toronto goal went to the veteran Gus Marker, oldest man on the team at 33.

The Leafs had to wait until the second period before they broke into the scoring column, but then they went to town with Apps, Marker and Drillon counting in order before Bryan Hextall fired the first Ranger goal late in the session. Drillon got his second goal shortly after the start of the third period and Alf Pike scored for Rangers near the end of the game.

Canadiens Down Bruins

Canadiens, who always seem to be able to fare well against the Bruins, won on goals by Hector (Toe) Blake, Johnny Quilty and Jack Portland, big defenceman obtained recently from Chicago Black Hawks and once a Bruin. Roy Conacher and Eddie Wiseman scored for the Bruins.

Portland's goal was only the ninth of his N.H.L. career, now going into its seventh year, but it proved an important one as it won the game for the Flying Frenchmen. Portland had his best goal-getting season in 1938-39 with the Bruins when he scored four times.

Apps, with his goal and assist, drew into a first-place tie with Syd Howe of Detroit among N.H.L. point-makers. Both have 10 points, Apps from five goals and an equal number of assists, and Howe from four goals and six assists.

Apps also is tied with four other players, including Drillon, for the lead among goal-getters. Others with five tallies for the season are Tony Demers of Canadiens, George Allen of Chicago and Roy Conacher of Boston.

The Big Seven

By The Canadian Press)

A seven-way tie for seventh place brought 13 men into the National Hockey League's Big Seven today as Syl Apps of Toronto pushed his way into a tie with the idle Syd Howe of Detroit last night for top place by picking up a goal and an assist as Leafs topped rangers 4-2. Another Leaf, Gordie Drillon, fired two goals to take over sole possession of the spot behind Howe and Apps.

The leaders:

	G.	A.	Pts.
Apps, Toronto	5	5	10
Howe, Detroit	4	6	10
Drillon, Toronto	5	4	9
Hextall, Rangers	4	4	8
Allen, Chicago	5	2	7
March, Chicago	3	4	7
R. Conacher, Boston ..	5	1	6
Motter, Detroit	4	2	6
Goldup, Toronto	3	3	6
N. Metz, Toronto	2	4	6
Langelle, Toronto	2	4	6
Watson, Rangers	1	5	6
Cowley, Boston	1	5	6

N. H. L. STARS

(By the Canadian Press)

Jack Portland, Canadiens, whose unassisted goal gave Montreal a 3-2 victory over Boston Bruins.

Roy Conacher, Boston, who scored his fifth goal of the season in the game against Canadiens, earning a tie with four other players for goal-getting honors in the N.H.L.

Gordie Drillon and Syl Apps, Toronto, who continued their great two-man combination as Maple Leafs triumphed 4-2 over New York Rangers. Drillon marked up two goals, his fourth and fifth of the season, while Apps got one goal, his fifth, and an assist.

Bryan Hextall, Rangers, who tallied once and helped in another goal against Maple Leafs.

TROOP CARRYING COMPANY WINS SOFTBALL TITLE

1st Canadian Division Has Fine Season of Their Favorite Sport

WIN MASSEY CUP

Eastern Ontario Regiment Finishes Third in Tie With Ambulance Company

(By Ross Munro, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Nov. 27—(CP)—The team of a Canadian Troop Carrying Company, made up of players from Toronto and one from Hamilton, Ont., recently won the 1st Canadian Division softball title, edging out a Royal Canadian Artillery Field Regiment by one point in a five-game schedule. There were six teams in the league, the first to be organized since the Canadians came overseas.

The Hon. Vincent Massey Trophy donated by the Canadian High Commissioner to London, was presented to the winners by Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, Commander of the 1st Division. Plaques also were presented to the players on the winning team and to the runners up. The plaques were donated jointly by the auxiliary service organizations— the Canadian Legion, the Salvation Army, Y.M.C.A. and Knights of Columbus.

After the presentation ceremony, a five-inning exhibition game was played and the Troop Carrying Company trimmed the R. C. A. team 18-1.

Following is the team of the league victors: J. D. Mansell, T. Golding, T. C. Irvine, G. Parfitt, J. Nolan, L. A. Bentley, G. K. Dawson, W. Pickering, all Toronto; and S. G. Malcolmson, Hamilton.

The runners-up team was F. Billingston, St. Catharines, Ont.; G. W. LeBlanc, Moncton; C. H. Turner, St. Catharines; H. Dennis, Montreal; E. R. Thibodeau, Moncton; E. Bruce, Welland, Ont.; J. Dempster, St. Catharines; J. Gill, St. Catharines; J. R. Nochenski, Grimsby, Ont. and W. McCallum, Niagara Falls, Ont.

COACH PONTON WOULD LIKE DRY FIELD FOR GAME

Balmy Beach Mentor Thinks Chances Are Dimmed With Two-Game Series

SERIES HAS MERIT

Balmies Have Strong Line With a Smart Dependable Backfield

By SCOTT YOUNG

Toronto, Nov. 27 (CP)—Coach Alex Ponton thinks the chances of his Toronto Balmy Beach Club, Ontario Rugby Football Union champion, against Ottawa, Interprovincial Union champion in the Eastern Rugby Football final are lessened by a recent Canadian Rugby Union edict extending the play-off to two games instead of the usual one. But last night he said "If we get a dry field we'll show 'em some football."

Sitting in the Beach dressing room brushing snow from his shoulders and knocking slush from his boots after a workout cut short by a blizzard, Ponton said he thought his club would have a better chance if the final was one game because the weather is likely to be better Nov. 30 than Dec. 7.

The first game of the two-game, total-points series will be played here next Saturday, the second in Ottawa, Dec. 7.

"No telling what kind of weather we'll get in Ottawa for the second game," he said. "And I'm not sure how my club would go under bad playing conditions."

Many Reasons to Win

He has an interest in this Ottawa series stronger than the natural will to win. Firstly, of course, he'd like to see his team proven the best. That's expected, in a coach.

Secondly, if Beaches beat Ottawa Ponton will be one of the select few coaches whose teams have won a Canadian rugby union championship twice. For with the west barred because it didn't play C.R.U. rules this season, the C.R.U. crown and the Grey Cup goes to the winner of the Eastern title.

Thirdly, Ross Trimble, Ottawa coach, is an Old Balmy Beacher. He played on Ponton's Dominion champion Beaches in 1930. In 1927 Ponton was quarterback for Beaches, Trimble a middle wing.

"The trouble with me right now is that I don't know exactly what this club of mine can do. We were unbeaten and untied in the O.R.F.U. this year and we didn't often have to open up.

"But I'll tell you this. After beating Sarnia, this outfit of mine won't be stampeded by the Ottawa line. That Sarnia line was tougher than we'll see in Ottawa. And as for backfields, well"....he hesitated...... "I wouldn't trade Frank Seymour for Tony Golab!"

HOLDS THE STITCH RECORD

ART WIEBE

One of the cleanest-playing defencemen in the National Hockey League is Art Wiebe, right defence of the Chicago Blackhawk team. Yet he's had more stitches placed in various parts of his anatomy than the average player in the strenuous winter sport, where stitches are a regular part of the proceedings.

Curiously, practically all of the wounds which necessitated stitching of the Wiebe face or body have been quite accidental. In the Hawk-Toronto playoff game of 1938, Wiebe was sitting on the bench, as the second period ended. A Leaf player carelessly tossed the puck into the air, it sailed over the boards by the Hawk bench, caught Wiebe over the left eye as he turned toward the dressing rooms. It was good for six stitches.

He had twelve stitches taken at training-camp this season, for cuts resulting from accidental clashes with team-mates.

Wiebe started playing hockey when he was only nine years old. In ten years he suffered only one cut, necessitating three stitches. Then he joined the Hawks, training in 1935 at Duluth. His first day in camp, he got four stitches over an eye. Another day a skate picked him in the throat for four. In practice, he ran into Earl Seibert's stick for eleven stitches. Last season, he had 30 stitches in all.

The biggest single job of stitching, in hockey circles, is believed to have been done on Hegle Bostrom when he was a Blackhawk. A skate caught him over the instep and it required 148 stitches to pull torn muscles back together. Although this record is held by a former Blackhawk, Wiebe isn't at all anxious to excel it.

Springfield's Ace Forward Has Garnered 21 Scoring Points This Season

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 27 (AP)—A couple of Freds, Thurier and Hunt, Springfield Indians' ace forwards, went on scoring sprees to go in the van of the field in the American Hockey League tallying race it was shown in the weekly statistics released today from the circuit's headquarters.

Thurier maintained the top spot by scoring three goals and figuring in seven assists last week to give him 21 points, two more than his teammate, Hunt, who recorded four goals and five assists.

Glen Brydson, another Springfielder, picked up three goals and one assist to go up to third place with 12 points, a spot he shares with Walter Kilrea of the Hershey Bears who came up from 11th.

Ed Bush of Indianapolis and Allen Shields of New Haven went into a deadlock as the recipients of the league's heaviest penalties, having been benished from the ice for 24 minutes each.

EAST-WEST GAME IS CALLED OFF SAYS HAMILTON

Efforts to Have Two Best Teams in Canada Meet Balked by C.R.U.

TO PLAY FOR TROOPS

Manager Ryan of Winnipeg Bombers Says Team Can Retire With Clear Conscience

Toronto, Nov. 27 —(CP)— The general public had accepted today the fact that there will be no East-West football game this year, as announced by Fred Hamilton, president of the Sports Service League, here last night. Earlier yesterday he said he would try to organize an all-star team to meet Winnipeg Blue Bombers, western champions, here Dec. 14 but finally that idea was dropped also.

He said "it is with bitter disappointment that I make this announcement. We found enough patriotic players in eastern Canada ready and willing to co-operate by meeting the bombers. However, we felt in justice to ourselves and the public that nothing short of a game between the Bombers and the eastern champions would do."

His announcement ended weeks of speculation regarding the possibilities of the game. Originally, teams had been asked to agree to a meeting of eastern and western champions, with the proceeds to go to war charities in the east and west. The S.S.L. president believed the game would contribute $10,000 to the war effort at home.

But eastern clubs and the Canadian Rugby Union refused to play the game. Balmy Beach said a few weeks ago it would play, but withdrew the offer Tuesday. Ottawa held out for C.R.U. jurisdiction over the game, and the C.R.U. voted in refusal.

Statement From Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Nov. 27—(CP)—Manager Joe Ryan of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, commenting today on abandonment of negotiations for an east-west football game, said the Winnipeg club "can retire from the scene with a clear conscience."

Fred Hamilton, president of the Sports Service League, announced in Toronto last night that "the Canadian Rugby Union has most thoroughly and most successfully tossed every obstacle in the path" of his efforts to arrange a game in Toronto Dec. 7 between eastern and western champions, net proceeds to go toward purchase of sports equipment for Canadian troops.

Ryan, speaking on behalf of the Winnipeg club, said:

"The officers, executive and players of the club can retire from the scene with a clear conscience.

"One thing we would have made clear is that at no time has the Winnipeg club endeavored to put anyone on the spot. It was our original intention, if we won in the west, to challenge the eastern winner to settle the issue as to which was the best football club in Canada.

"The course of events has taken that out of our hands. We were approached to play an eastern team preferably the eastern champions, the proceeds to go to auxiliary war services. We agreed, have assumed a lot of unnecessary expense in keeping the team in training, and we were willing to play any club on a bare expense basis."

Ryan referred to the C.R.U. ruling which prevented western champions from participating in an official Dominion final because western rules differ from the C.R.U. code. The C.R.U. also refused to sanction the unofficial game.

SYD. REYNOLDS OF BALMY BEACH MAKES FIRST TEAM

Brilliant Outside Chosen by Experts Over Some Grand Players

RIDERS HAVE SIX

Bobby Coulter of Argos, Only Player from Toronto to Make Team

By SYDNEY GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 27 (CP)—The Interprovincial Union, long the dominant force in Eastern football, retains that position easily in the balloting for The Canadian Press all-Eastern teams which were announced today.

With a lone exception, Syd Reynolds of Toronto Balmy Beach, the Big Four players who previously had been selected for that union's mythical squad make up the all-Eastern first team. The second team is made up of 10 from the O.R.F.U. All-Stars with two outsides from the Interprovincial.

There was opportunity for the writers and coaches to move outside the previous selections in marking their ballots for the all-Eastern clubs. They gave scattered votes to many, but only Ottawa's Tony McCarthy got enough to oust one of the men picked before. Jim Butler of Sarnia was dropped.

With this exception, the voters were almost as one in agreement that the men good enough for the union teams were good enough for the all-Eastern. They were just as firm in their decision that only Reynolds, the "old professor" who came out of retirement this season, should break into the Big Four lineup.

Six Riders on First Team

There is an immediate test of the experts' wisdom at hand. In Toronto Saturday, Balmy Beach, which has six men on the second team and Reynolds on the first, plays Ottawa Rough Riders in the opener of a two-game series for the Eastern championship. Six Riders are on the first team.

Little Andy Tommy, leader of the Riders in their drive to the Big Four championship, got another overwhelming tribute to his great work in the all-Eastern voting. All the 15 selectors of the first team marked his name, and 14 of them put him in at flying wing.

His teammate, Sam Sward, got the other vote and 10 more, seven of them for the secondary-half position, with Tony Golab receiving 14, Bobby Coulter of Toronto 12 and Gord Noseworthy of Montreal five for the other backfield positions. Balmy's Frank Seymour, ranking plunger in the O.R.F.U. got five votes for secondary half but Sward had this position tied up.

Reynolds, who was lost to Beaches for the remainder of the season because of a sudden appendectomy last week, was given 10 votes for one of the outside jobs, a total exceeded on the line only by Dave Sprague of Ottawa and tied by Hamilton's great centre, Doug Turner. But on the line, too there was no question of who the selectors wanted and where they wanted them to play.

Bob McCully of Philadelphia Ramblers is the best penalty shot converter in hockey.. ....He made good on six tries last season...... Rumors around that big Jim Norris, owner of Detroit Red Wings, has a controlling interest in Buffalo Bisons..... Chicago Black Hawks have drawn in 61,745 fans in four home games which is just 10,000 less than New York's Rangers and Americans have drawn so far this season at the Garden.

A Boston paper had this to say about the coming Louis-McCoy fight at the Boston Garden: "It would be more sporting and even sholer if Louis and McCoy would stage a three-round exhibition with the large pillows. That way Bostonians would have a chance to see Louis in action."

Like "old 77" of Illinois, Tommy Harmon's sweater bearing No. 98 will never be worn again at Michigan State College. When Red "The Galloping Ghost" Grange retired at Illinois State College, the football mentors perpetuated his name by announcing no player would ever wear No. 77 again for Illinois. After last Saturday's game with Ohio, when Tommy Harmon of Michigan shattered Grange's record of touchdowns, the Michigan 'Wolverines' announced that Harmon's No. 98 would be perpetuated in the same manner as "Old 77."

True enough Harmon eclipsed Grange's record when he ran his total up to 33 touchdowns in his three seasons with the Wolverines. However, we believe Grange's record of yards gained will always remain an unsurpassed record, as "Old 77" ghosted for 4,280 yards gained during his term at Illinois and strangely enough his greatest gridiron feat was against the Wolverines. It was in 1924 that Grange had his greatest day, as he scored four touchdowns on exceedingly long runs and within the short space of 12 minutes. Later in the same game he scored again for a fifth try and added more yardage when he fired a pass for a touchdown, for one of the greatest days ever enjoyed by an American gridiron star.

In three seasons Harmon has made 33 touchdowns, gained 2,134 yards in 398 rushes with the ball tucked safely under his arm. Harmon completed 101 passes for another 1,399 yards, making a total of 3,533 yards, which is far behind Grange's total of 4,280. They are not raving about unbeaten teams in the U.S.A. today, but more about Harmon's great record of 33 touchdowns in three years, thus eclipsing Grange's 31, but some forget "Old 77's" aggregate yardage of 4,280, which will take some beating. When it came to streaking down the striped grid iron field, and ghosting past the secondary, there was only one Red Grange, who well deserved the nickname of "The Galloping Ghost."

The smaller centres throughout Ontario are not taking any too well to the legislation passed by the O.H.A. on Saturday, whereby the parent Association is to take a percentage of all play-off games, including group saw-offs. The governing body of hockey in the province has a substantial surplus, while many of the smaller centred clubs are operating in the red for the express purpose of giving the boys of the community a chance to play hockey. If some of the Association's reserve fund was given to the development of minor hockey all would be well and then the little fellows could share in whatever moneys were collected from them, but the only gifts ever enjoyed in Belleville were a few dozen cheap hockey sticks, which are presented to the Ki-Y groups here each season. Remember the hockey clubs must pay all expenses of the game, which includes the rink, advertising, the referee comes in for a cut and what is left the poor clubs can keep. So, unless the O.H.A. can show just and proper reasons why this new raid on the small fry finances is justified the move should not be taken sitting down by the little fellows.

Do you remember when Dick Irvin, veteran hockey player and former coach of Chicago Black Hawks, signed nine years ago today to coach Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League. Irvin remained with Toronto until this season, when he went to Montreal Canadiens as coach.

Glebe Collegiate of Ottawa won the E.O.S.S.A. football championship defeating Kingston Collegiate 43 to 10 in a sudden death game. Even in defeat the Limestone City students produced a star in George Kinnear. With the Belleville Collegiate "scarlet scourge" having been pushed out of the picture by Bowmanville, it has been suggested that a series might be arranged between Belleville and Kingston in an effort to determine the relative strength between C.O.S.S.A. and E.O.S.S.A. football. Think it over boys, but don't take too long, as the summer's back is not only bent—it's broken.

It seems A. R. "Toots" Holway just can't make up his mind these days whether to return as an active hockey player with the Reliance Aircraft, or remain as coach of the R.C.A.F. "Flyers". "Toots" practiced with the Reliance squad Monday night and surprised many by his sturdiness. There is no doubt he would be a steadying influence on the ice with any intermediate club, as his many years of N.H.L. experience would alone prove valuable. Whether "Toots" plays with the Reliance or coaches the Air Force is still in the offing, but no doubt something concrete will be heard regarding his decision within a week.

"Sports Service League Calls Off Charity Game," was the eight-column banner carried in the Toronto a.m. sheet today. Just how the S.S.L. could call off something that never was actually a fact is hard to understand. However, the general consensus of opinion is that without the sanction of the Canadian Rugby Union no East-West game will be played, and that's that. Actually the whole thing smells of small potatoes and the headstrong ideas of union executives. As a matter of fact too many old foggies are at the head of all lines of sport in Canada, which accounts for the behind the times atmosphere in which our sports find themselves in these modern times.

SPORTS SLANTS—Minnesota's "Golden Gophers" will have no part of the Rose Bowl or any other bowl game this year. . . Convener Pete Beach awoke this morning, took a gander at the snow-covered ground, and spent the rest of the morning pondering over how he was going to get his B.C.I.-St. Mikes' junior football playoffs over without the use of snow-shoes. . . Queens dominate the junior and senior Van Horne series, although Wally Elmer's Kingston Lions are only the percentage points behind the Queens kids. . . Upwards of 45 basketball teams will compete in a house league at the Sarnia Collegiate this semester. . . Understand some of the pucksters who starred in the city juvenile puck loop last year are thinking of tossing their ice hockey lot in with senior interscholastic circles come New Years. . . There should be plenty of snow for Santa Claus judging from this morning's white blanket.

Left $1,000 to Girl He Would Have Married But for Fate

Los Angeles, Nov. 27 (AP)—To the girl he would have married but for "unkind fate": $1,000.

To his wife: $10,000.

Thus did Arthur Edward Thwaites, 53, motion picture cartoonist, dispose of part of his $20,000 estate in a will filed Tuesday for probate. He died Nov. 15.

"To Miss Jeannette McCutcheon of New York City," the will reads, "who should have been my wife but for an unkind fate preventing it—to that dear one, though since married, I leave $1,000."

As for his wife, Elizabeth, Thwaites wrote:—

"My life's intention has always been to leave all to my wife, but she has proved extremely cruel.... causing me great pain and unhappiness.... I believe $10,000 will make her happy and comfortable, and that is my last wish."

The remainder of the estate goes to friends.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, November 27
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

LUNAR as well as mutual aspects of major planets bearing rule on the affairs of this day signify much excitement, confusion, turmoil and tension. In all relations there may be commotion and conflict, with scattering of forces as well as resources, excesses, hostility, and contradictions. Difficulties and distresses may best be vanquished by extreme caution, restraint, sagacity and high principle. Reckless, belligerent, tumultuous and impetuous conduct of threatening and frustrating circumstances would prove disastrous.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year in which progress and satisfaction may be menaced by divers disturbances, distresses, opposition and conflict. Such turbulence and commotion are likely to be aggravated by rash hasty, impetuous and violent activities when difficult and challenging situations call for calm, controlled and clever management and shrewd insight into obstructing and malefic causes.

A child born on this day may have many contradictory traits which call for sympathetic direction and understanding. It may be impetuous, aggressive, wayward but ambitious and shrewd, with probable programs of rule or ruin.

AIRPLANES GROUNDED

Winnipeg, Nov. 27 (CP)—Rough weather over the Rocky Mountains delayed both eastbound and westbound Trans-Canada Air Lines planes last night, T.C.A. officials said here today. A low ceiling over the Rockies, created by snow and ice conditions, held a westbound plane at Lethbridge, Alta. An eastbound passenger transport was grounded at Vancouver.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Holiday"

Now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, Gary Grant and Katharine Hepburn in "Holiday," the romantic comedy that is rocking the world anew with laughter. Others in the outstanding cast include Lew Ayres, Edward Everett Horton, Binnie Barnes, Henry Kolker and Jean Dixon. Latest Fox News events and "The Warning," the stirring made-in-England film, showing England's powerful answer to her foes is also now on the McCarthy Theatre screen.

George O'Brien

the Higgins Family in "Earl of O'Brien's biggest western, of adventure and action on the Texas-Mexican border, opens next at the McCarthy Theatre.

This picture, of fast-moving action reveals O'Brien at his two-fisted, hard-riding best. It is a slight departure from the usual type of O'Brien outdoor stories of exciting adventure and the unusual ending will surprise and delight all who see it. A new high in hilarity, "The Fighting Gringo," George Puddlestone," one of the season's funniest comedy-feature presentations and starring James Gleason, Lucile Gleason, Russell Gleason, Harry Davenport and all the rest of the popular stars who combine to make up the Higgins Family, is the companion feature on the same program with George O'Brien in "The Fighting Gringo."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Gene Autry"

It was the much beloved Will Rogers who first set Gene Autry, popular cowboy star, on the road to success. For when Rogers dropped into a telegraph office on the Texas and Oklahoma borderline, he found the telegraph operator strangely out of place in his surroundings. With his long legs propped up on a chair, the pleasant-faced operator was strumming a guitar and yodeling a song that belonged any place but in a telegraph office.

"You're wasting your time here," Rogers told the young man, after listening to him. And the young man, who was Gene Autry, suddenly realized the same thing and decided to find a place for his talents.

Gene Autry's rise to his present fame as Number One cowboy was not an overnight sensation. He climbed up the hard way, and no one has worked more zealously than this simple, straightforward singing cowboy.

No tutor ever taught Autry to sing. Born in Tioga, Texas, he came from just "plain folks" who lived on a Texas ranch, and who later bought their own ranch in Oklahoma. But blonde-haired Gene started humming tunes before he could even speak plainly. When he grew old enough to take care of his father's cattle, he sang to them as he drove them across the range.

A small company producing westerns and serials decided to take a long shot on a musical western, featuring a singing cowboy and Autry was spotted for the role for one picture. His first film, "Tumbling Tumbleweeds" was a new and refreshing dish for western fans. They asked for more, and Autry was placed under contract with the company, which later became Republic Pictures.

Gene's latest picture is "Ride, Tenderfoot, Ride," which opens next at the Capitol Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"Tom Brown's School Days"

"Tom Brown's School Days", the classic story which has thrilled millions of readers for almost a century, comes to the screen as a gripping, vivid and exciting entertainment for all, young and old.

The picture, which is announced as the next feature attraction at the Belle theatre, spotlights the remarkable career of the historic Dr. Thomas Arnold, headmaster of England's famous Rugby School from 1824 to 1841, the inventor of the honor system, the man who revolutionized the world's scholastic ideas by his insistence that a school's first duty is to build character and manhood, not sterile scholarship. "Tom Brown's School Days" tells in striking fashion the dramatic story of his beliefs, his struggles and his final triumph through the eyes of Tom Brown, a young Rugby scholar, and his fellows. The adventures and exploits and troubles of the youngsters, their battles with schoolyard bullies and their awakening to the meaning of Dr. Arnold's rigid but benevolent rule over them, all make for an amazingly stirring film.

As the resolute Doctor, Sir Cedric Hardwicke gives what is unquestionably his finest performance to date. The sensational boy star, Jimmy Lydon, who plays Tom Brown, and Freddie Bartholomew in the role of Tom's friend, Harry East, are superb, and the rest of the featured cast, Josephine Hutchinson, Billy Halop, Ernest Cossart, Gale Storm and Hughie Green offer splendid portrayals.

"I'm Still Alive" Unusual

Should a man with a hazardous occupation give it up when he marries and take a less dangerous job instead?

This is the unusual theme of the romantic screen drama, "I'm Still Alive," featuring Kent Taylor and Linda Hayes, announced as the co-feature attraction. Taylor portrays a daring aviator who specializes in doing risky stunts for motion pictures and Miss Hayes is cast as an imperious film star who falls in love with him and marries him after a whirlwind romance.

Taylor wants to continue risking his neck, and his wife objects, as wives will. Her insistence produces disastrous results and many tense dramatic moments. The picture reveals how the spectacular stunts of the screen are made.

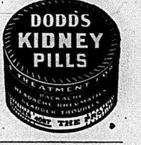
"Knute Rockne," Story

A spectacular film biography embodying powerful drama, keen philosophy and tender romance, Warner Bros.' new picture "Knute Rockne" now at the Belle. The film tells the dynamic story of Knute Rockne from his early childhood in Norway to his tragic and untimely death.

A sure cure for your blues is offered in the hilarious new comedy "Hullabaloo" packed with every form of laugh-getting trick, gloom chaser that really means business. The Belle news of the day will also be exhibited.

Signalman Booton Of Toronto, Dies, Brother is Informed

Toronto Nov. 26 (CP)—Signalman John Hooton of the 2nd Canadian Division Corps of Signallers who was "injured by enemy action" died on Nov. 19, his brother here, Charles Booton, was informed today by a cable from England. Signalman Booton for some years was a Hydro-electric engineer at Lachute, Que., where he is survived by his widow.



Gene Autry and Smiley Burnett lead the cowboy parade in Republic's Supreme Production, "Ride, Tenderfoot, Ride," coming next to the Capitol with the added feature, "Under Suspicion," starring Jack Holt.

THE GORGON'S MASK

by Van Wyck Mason

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

Confound it! North was actually flushing at Nadia's flattery. In a vain effort to collect, to study himself, he gazed across the snowy expanse of tablecloth at von Rentner—huge, faultlessly dressed, and thunder-browed. The Prussian must be seriously smitten with Nadia; he was positively glaring over a bowl of flaming hibiscus set before him.

To the German's right was Bruce Kilgour, talking pleasant nonsense with Phedre Renoire, and apparently amusing her.

Though his brain urged the fact upon him, North found it nearly impossible to believe that a majority of this gay and brilliant company were contemplating treachery, violence; even murder hovered in the flower-scented air and then—WAR!

"You arrived early, no?" Nadia's expression reflected only polite curiosity.

"No." North hardly knew why he chose to lie—of course she knew better.

She ignored the falsehood and, idly picking at her filet of fish, smiled a little sadly.

"Congratulations, mon Capitaine. You have found the right line of attack."

"I wonder."

"Yes," she murmured, "your seeking out our host was a masterpiece of reasoning, of intelligence. But do you imagine you have made any real progress?"

"Progress?"

"That was the word I used." Almost impulsively her shapely hand sought his below the table. "Ah, you think you are brave, my gallant Captain. But your cleverness will avail you not at all. Why must you fly in the faces of the Fates?"

He was too rapt in the candle-lit perfection of her features to reply.

"You talked of our host — you think the affair is settled your way, no?"

"Affair?" North sought a feeble refuge in a monosyllable, so great was the turmoil in his brain.

"You think you understand everything, no?" Her hand tightened over his and pressed a tiny square of paper into his palm while her voice sank to a faint, desperately earnest whisper. "My phone. Please leave immediately after dinner."

"And when is the Japanese squadron due, Mr. Kanamura?" Vaguely, North heard the Lloyd girl putting the question in a transparent effort to be polite. The frozen-faced Japanese was trying to pretend it was a matter of routine importance!

Wearied by nearly forty-eight hours of sleeplessness, North was stirred faintly by smelling smoke as of wood burning. But reluctantly, his fatigued perceptions relapsed into their quiescent state.

The conversation veered to a discussion of the forthcoming Kamehameha Day. Suddenly a shrill, throbbing scream came echoing down those broad stone stairs which North had ascended on his arrival.

As though jerked by invisible wires, every head turned towards the hallway, and North suffered a second shock. A gorgeous red and yellow batik across the hall was barred by shifting strata of smoke.

The sting of the wood smoke assailed his nostrils again. . . . That meant danger for the absolutely essential documents in the wall safe. His stomach felt like a vacuum. What if he were to lose his hard-won victory?

Fiercely questioning, North turned to face Nadia and found her face a lovely, inscrutable piece of marble. She returned his glance—calmly, almost sympathetically.

Not so Abner Polk. Glaring furiously, he stood undecided at the head of the table. "What the devil is this?" he growled, then his large frame seemed to contract. He looked dangerous as he called, "Come upstairs, Nevins!"

A puff of wind blowing through the high-ceilinged dining room brought with it the unmistakable acrid reek of burning wood.

"What's that?" cried Polk abruptly.

"It is wood smoke, I think —" Kanamura had time to suggest no more before the great white house awoke to uproar. The dinner party broke up in wild confusion.

"Quick, quick, save the paintings!" cried someone. "Save the antiques" yelled another. "No, no, the feather cloaks—they're irreplaceable!"

Wide-eyed servants, screaming that the whole second floor was in flames, appeared in a body and rushed for safety outside.

Kilgour got up quickly, waiting for a signal from North. The latter, brushing by, muttered hurriedly: "Get to the terrace—back of house—arrest anybody acting suspiciously—watch for strangers or Karen."

Polk was out of sight, and North darted across the smoke-filled hall, joining other guests now bounding up the wide stone steps after their host. Loud sounded the dry crackling of flames and smoke made it hard to see. All the men, save Kilgour, were struggling on up. Von Rentner gasping somewhere in the ahead. . . . By the time he reached the head of the stairs, sheets of flame were visible at both ends of the corridor!

While North hesitated, a loud report sounded nearby and something seemed to rap him sharply on the shoulder. His first instinct was to fire at that ghostly figure in a half-open doorway, but reason warned that his first consideration must be the contents of Polk's safe.

Doggedly he lurched on towards the steel king's bedroom. Suddenly his foot struck a heavy yielding object and he fell to his knees and strained his eyes to recognize Charlton—Polk's valet. He was lying in a pool of blood; from between his shoulder blades projected the brass handle of a dagger!

"Schnell! Schnell!" he heard von Retnner gasping somewhere in the murk ahead. Just then the electric bulbs went out with appalling suddenness.

Towards the door of Polk's room North was feeling his way when he heard two shots and someone gave an ear-shattering scream that ceased as abruptly as it had begun.

His head spinning furiously, he pressed further into the bedroom and so became aware of a figure which swayed in furious combat with another. He ignored them; his only concern was that wall safe. Was it open?

Clawing his way along the wall, North finally reached the picture. But the safe had been opened, for the picture was swung forward, evidently on a hinge.

Shaken with a terrible fear, he thrust his hand into the safe's circular opening; he found it empty.

Who had got those precious documents? He spun heavily about, aware of scorching heat caused by hungry flames now licking through the wooden partitions of a door to the right.

What had become of the combatants? He would have given much to know who that was who lay sprawled in the centre of the bedroom floor. But there was not an instant to lose if he hoped to escape with his life.

Only by a miracle of will power did North retain his senses long enough to find a way through the inferno to reach the stairs. With his clothes half-smoldering, he reeled across the terrace and was horror-stricken to see a man behind a rosebush level a pistol at him.

Desperately North tried to shout out, "Kilgour! Don't!"

At the last instant Kilgour recognized him; instead of shooting, he came bounding forward.

"Heaven, but you're a sight!" he pointed to North's blood-sodden left shoulder. "Who shot you?"

"Dunno—only a graze—who—that—terrace?" were the first words North uttered, and his swollen blood shot eyes turned to a crumpled figure, on the centre of the terrace, red-tinted by the flames.

"Some Johnny I saw legging it out of the window with a coal-oil tin in his hand. Winged the blighter when he wouldn't stop," explained Kilgour.

With increasing fury burned the mansion which the millions of Abner Polk had reared.

"Here, where are you going?"

"Look, must look — that man." With tears from his tortured eyes streaming down singed features, North shielded his head against the withering heat and struggled to the broken figure which lay sprawled on the flags. He had just time to realize that the dead man was a Japanese Eurasian of unusual size, when a section of the roof fell in with a deafening crash.

"Come on, come on!" yelled Kilgour. "That bloody wall's totterin'—goin' to fall!"

But North, despite the furious heat, knelt to test the dead man's various pockets, and even to thrust a finger into the instep of each shoe.

Kilgour's hand, closing on North's collar, dragged him bodily back across the terrace and down a flight of steps not a quarter of a minute before the seaward wall of Kalua crashed into smoking stone and furiously blazing wood.

"Got to be very careful now," North rasped while his painfully swollen eyes swept the lawn. "Don't want some other hombre taking pot shots at me."

"Glad it's no worse—the blighter barely grazed you," Kilgour remarked while folding handkerchief over the skin wound on North's left shoulder, as the American told his colleague about his interview with Polk.

Bruce Kilgour pressed closer. "Then you got the proof?"

"No, somebody—I hope it was Polk—beat me to it," said he, profound discouragement in his voice. "But anyway, let's look alive, Bruce, and see what's going on; then we'll go to town and take stock."

By the glare of the conflagration, the two circled far back into the shelter of a grove of banyans. From this vantage point they recognized in the fast-gathering crowd the burly figure of von Rentner, the plump contours of Armand Dunant, and the feline slenderness of the Japanese ship chandler.

Of Nadia Stefan, the Lloyd girl, and Abner Polk, nothing could be seen, but presently Phedre Renoire came to North to cry out in French that she had seen the Lloyd girl screaming at a window where the flames had trapped her.

"But where's Polk?" North wanted to know. "I must find him. When did you see him last?"

"Ah, Seigneur Dieu! It was at the head of the stairs," she cried. "Oh, mon pauvre ami, but he cannot be dead—he must not be dead!"

Sensing the Frenchwoman to be badly shaken, North gasped, "Be a good lad, Bruce—see if you can find Polk . . . I'm all in; so is Miss Renoire—got to sit down a bit."

Wallbridge

Wallbridge, Nov. 27.—On Monday evening last the Wallbridge community tendered a party to Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Evans (nee Miss Peggy Ketcheson) who were recently married. A good crowd was present and in the course of the evening's entertainment Mr. and Mrs. Evans were presented with an address and a beautiful mantle clock and coffee table. Mr. and Mrs. Evans most graciously thanked their friends for their gifts. Lunch was served and the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing. Their many friends in Wallbridge join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Evans every happiness and a long and prosperous wedded life.

Mrs. James Hinchliffe spent Tuesday last with Mr. and Mrs. A. Wilson of Halloway.

Several from this place attended the annual S.S. convention for Sidney which was held at Eggleton's Church last Thursday afternoon and evening.

A large number attended the social evening sponsored by Wallbridge L.O.L. at their hall on Friday evening. All who were present report a good time.

On Wednesday afternoon of last week the Red Cross Society packed boxes for Wallbridge boys overseas.

Mr. Jack Hendricks left Friday afternoon to take a load of cattle to Vermont, U.S.A., for Mr. C. Scott, drover.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Blackburn and family of Eldorado were visitors of Mrs. Blackburn's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hinchliffe on Friday last.

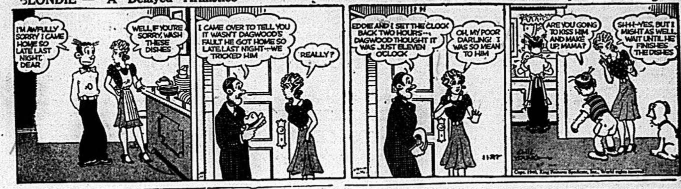
BLONDIE — A Delayed Armistice

By Chic Young



I'M AWFULLY SORRY I CAME HOME SO LATE LAST NIGHT, DEAR
WELL, IF YOU'RE SORRY, WASH THESE DISHES

WALL STREET

New York, Nov. 27 —(AP)— The stock market tilted downward today to break out of a week-long rut as traders tested the narrow limits of recent sessions.

After a cautious opening without progress on the upside, most opinion shifted to the Bear party and turnover picked up on the decline. Activity then subsided but quotations were about at the lows in early afternoon.

Steels, Aircrafts, Air Transports and Miscellaneous Industrials were among the share groups subject to pressure.

Losers of fractions to a point and in a few cases, more, included: U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, U.S. Rubber, Douglas Boeing, American Airlines, Allied Chemical, American Can, Westinghouse and General Electric.

Canadian issues showed fractional setbacks, Hiram Walker, Canadian Pacific and Distillers Seagram declined, Canada 4s, in the Bond group, lost ⅛ of a point.

Egg Prices Ease, Butter Price Firm

Toronto, Nov. 27.—Butter prices maintained a firm trend on the Toronto open produce market yesterday as fresh eggs continued easy.

Buying was just enough to keep light offerings clearing on the butter market. Ontario No. 1 grade creamery solids traded at 30 3-4c a pound, although an odd sale was reported at 30 1-2c. Fair demand for undergrades narrowed the price-spread, 37 score butter selling 3-4c below 38 score.

Slightly increased receipts and only fair demand kept the tone easy on top-grades on the egg market. Pullets, however, met with good receipts as did lower grade eggs. Grades B and C improved 1-2 cent a dozen in the graded section, while graded A-large weakened 1c.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Nov. 27.—Produce market prices here as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 32c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 31 1-2c.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, sold at A-large, 40c; A-medium, 37c to 38c; A-pullets, 35c; A-large original, 31c; B-original, 29c; C-original, 24c. Receipts: 322 cases.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, Nov. 27.—(CP)—Grass calves were easier while other classes of livestock held steady today on the Montreal livestock markets, according to a report by the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Receipts: Cattle 29; calves 13; hogs 66; sheep and lambs 62. There were not enough cattle offered to make a market.

Veal calves ranged from $8.50 to $11. Grassers were easier, selling from $4 to $4.75, but mostly $4.25 to $4.50.

Hogs held firm at $10.85 for B-1 dressed, $8.25 for B-1 alive, fed and watered and $8.35 off trucks. Grade A drew $1 premium with discounts on off grades. Sows were $4.75 to $5.50.

Good ewes and wethers sold for $10, culls and bucks $8 and sheep $3.50 to $5.50.

Toronto, Nov. 27 (CP). — Cattle trade was very dull at generally steady prices up to mid-session on the livestock market here today. Calves, hogs, lambs and sheep were steady. Unsold from Tuesday were 1,800 head of cattle.

Today's cattle supply included 1,000 stockers.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were:

Cattle 350, calves 150, hogs 600, sheep and lambs 760.

Prices in the cattle section were: Common to medium butcher steers and heifers $5.25-$6.85, a few good butcher steers reached $8, butcher cows $4-$5.50, canners and cutters $3-$3.75, butcher bulls $5-$5.50, bolognas $4-$4.75.

Calves sold at $10-$11 for choice with common heavy vealers selling downward to $6. Grassers brought $5-$5.50.

Lambs sold at $9.75-$9.85 for good ewes and wethers delivered by rail, $9.50 delivered by turck, $8.50-$8.75 fro heavies and bucks and $6-$8 for culls.

Sheep sold at $2-$5.50.

Hogs sold at $10.75 dressedweight and $8 liveweight. Sows traded at $4.50-$5.25 dressedweight.

Highways Clogged by Deep Drifts in First Real Snow Storm of Season

(By The Canadian Press)

Snow-clogged highways, stalled cars delayed transportation schedules and frosty air gave evidence today that real winter finally had settled over the southern areas of Ontario after it had been experienced in northern sections for more than two weeks.

The snow arrived yesterday to the accompaniment of terrific gales which lashed waters of the Great Lakes into churning waves similar to those of the disastrous Nov. 11 storm when several vessels foundered.

At least two deaths were attributed to the storm—both in western Ontario where the force of the blizzard first was felt. Near Norwich Mrs. Robert Fletcher of Newark, Ont., was killed when her car was forced out of control by the gale. Near Windsor another fatality occurred when William O'Shea's truck crashed into the rear of a highway department sanding truck and O'Shea was killed.

Storm signals were hoisted after midday in all Lake Erie and Lake Ontario ports and vessels clung to their safe havens. A number of vessels started from Toronto for Rochester but after three hours of buffeting they scurried back to harbor.

Three-Foot Drifts

After sweeping through Western Ontario the storm proceeded eastward until at midnight the whole of the southern section was enveloped in the blizzard. More than three inches of snow fell in Western Ontario and it was badly drifted in most sections. In Toronto where the first snow fell around 6 p.m., three foot drifts were piled up within six hours.

By late night the storm had reached Ottawa and farther south, at Belleville, traffic was practically at a standstill. A number of military transports on a service movement had to be tied up there for the night.

Storm warnings were heeded in Western Ontario early in the day and practically all aircraft was grounded. A Royal Canadian Air Force Avro-Anson bomber, on a flight from Toronto to Stratford, ran into the blizzard in the vicinity of Hamilton and was driven off its course. The pilots, flying within 50 feet of the ground, found the Hamilton Airport and made a safe landing, admitting they had been lost.

At Kincardine four new R.C.A.F. training planes, being flown to the training centre at Sky Harbor Airport, Goderich, were forced down when they ran into the storm. Each one was brought down in a perfect landing on open fields.

Trans-Canada Airlines services into Western Ontario were cancelled during the day and planes leaving on Trancontinental flights from Toronto were grounded.

Bus schedules were retarded as drifted and slippery pavement prevented speed. Railway trains for the most part ran on time.

The Ontario Highways Department made early plans to keep the highways open and departmental ploughs and sanding trucks were out soon after the storm broke.

The wind velocity reached 55 to 60 miles an hour in many places—nearly the velocity during the Remembrance Day storms.

The Ontario storm was the tail end of snowstorms across the United States.

ABANDONING

Greek reinforcements said to be moving into that area.)

The Government spokesman confirmed reports that Greek forces had landed on the Albanian coast opposite the Island of Corfu. He denied, however, yesterday's Italian High Command claim that they had been cut to pieces or captured.

"The truth is this," he said. "A detachment of Greek troops landed somewhere on the coastal sector and has been able to carry out its mission without being in the least bothered."

Italians were said to have loosed heavy air blows on villages and communications along the southern battlefront sector, where Argirocastro, the Italians' last major "invasion" base, and their path to the Adriatic Sea are threatened.

Air raids on Lixuri, on the Island of Cephalonia, on a number of villages in Epirus and on Corfu were reported by the Ministry of Home Security. It gave no details of damage or casualties.

A terse army communique merely reported that Greek operations "continue with success in Albanian territory", and listed six abandoned Italian aircraft as part of the Greeks' booty in the Koritza area.

A government spokesman, however, said Italian reinforcements had failed to brace the Fascists' receding battleline, and that even the fresh troops were yielding ground to the bayonet-thrusting Greeks.

Signs of Broken Morale

That they are leaving behind almost all their vehicles, he said, is a sign of their "broken morale" and the disorganization of their retreat.

Fresh troops are covering the Italian withdrawal, "making desperate efforts to delay our advance", he said, but "the broken morale of the other Italians had been imparted to these troops".

He said they "have been overthrown", and Greek troops are pressing "steadily" forward.

(In the sector north of Koritza, the inland war zone, border observers in the Yugoslav frontier town of Ochrida said a battle line had been established along the Veroxia River.)

Raider Sinks Cargo Ship In Indian Ocean

27 Survivors of the Port Brisbane Brought to Australian Port

Canberra, Australia, Nov. 27 (CP)—An enemy raider sank the 8,739-ton British cargo ship Port Brisbane in the middle of the Indian Ocean five days ago, W. M. Hughes, Australian navy Minister, disclosed today.

Mr. Hughes said an Australian warship had arrived at an Australian port with 27 survivors.

DOMINION GETS

A representative of the Canadian Ministry of Supply "sees all incoming cables and decides whether Canada can have a hack at them", he said.

Britain's biggest buyer added that he was "very satisfied" with Canada's participation.

Mr. Purvis spoke after a press conference where he was given a severe grilling, mostly by American reporters, on questions of United States supplies.

The man who left a big Canadian enterprise last November to head the Purchasing Commission impressed British reporters with the directness of his replies and his able parrying to prevent disclosure of vital information.

Indicating heavy increase in United States aid to Britain in 1914 Mr. Purvis told the press conference:—

"Next year, if I were sitting in Germany, I would be very worried at what is going to flow out of the United States".

Declined to Disclose Statistics

He said American plants for construction of war materials, in many cases, have been built "from the ground up," and that they will be getting into full operation next year.

He declined to disclose any statistics on production of airplanes or other war materials in the United States on the grounds that it would be giving information to Britain's enemies.

Commenting on release of United States bomb sights to Britain, Mr. Purvis described the supply situation for them as "fully satisfactory."

Airplanes and ships, first of all, are needed from America, he said, and after that other war equipment and machine tools.

Commenting on the shipping situation, he emphasized that next to airplanes, ships are Britain's most urgent need.

As to American aid in shipping, he said he hoped "every means" would be considered.

He would not comment on the possibility of repeal of the United States' cash-and-carry law.

"Deliveries of airplanes are very satisfactory, bearing in mind that the United States has been building up a new industry," Mr. Purvis said.

He remarked that he had "come home to learn the position" and planned to return to the United States about the middle of December.

GOV'T. MEMBERS

They wanted committees of parliament appointed to look into and advise upon various phases of war activity, so the ordinary member would know in more detail what was going on.

There was, for instance, the matter of several hundred million dollars worth of war contracts which the Public Accounts Committee of the House of Commons might study, G. H. Castleden (CCF Yorkton) suggested.

The Government's voluminous reports contained little more than totals, aside from revealing numerous new corporations of doubtful parentage, he complained. He wanted to know something of prices paid and for what qualities.

"Many of the mistakes that have been made could be eliminated if more attention was paid to the elected members of parliament, rather than to the so-called dollar-a-year men who are cluttering up the streets of Ottawa," asserted George Cruickshank (Lib., Fraser Valley).

"We have been elected, rightly or wrongly, by the popular vote. We should be taken more into the confidence of the Government."

Critical of Dollar-a-Year Men

Advice of the members should be sought more often, instead of that of some of the dollar-a-year men who couldn't be elected poundkeeper in British Columbia, he contended.

"They are responsible to no one, and in many cases they are not responsible at all," Cruickshank added.

As the Throne Speech debate moved along, speeches ranged from enforced saving, as a way of avoiding inflation, to the financing of Canadian-American joint defence works with American credits.

Gray Turgeon (Lib. Cariboo), on the latter point, set forth the idea of persuading the United States to advance enough gold from its huge reserves to cover the cost of Canada's part of these defence works, on a non-interest basis. The debt, he suggested, would be liquidated after the war from a sinking fund established by taking a percentage of Canada's annual gold production.

Inflation, dealt with by D. C. Abbott (Lib. Montreal-St. Antoine-Westmount), was depicted as the most confused way of meeting the cost of war, since neither its results nor its incidence could be calculated. The cost of war, after all, was determined by the extent and intensity of the war, not by the method of its financing.

In a speech which had the House alternately rocking with laughter and deeply serious, Mr. Cruickshank criticized the opposition and government alike. He declared members of Parliament should be ashamed of themselves for allowing the government to hire boys and girls for the Civil Service at $55 a month.

Object to 30-Day Training Period

Because he lived in a room—"because every apartment is taken by these dollar-a-year men"—he ate in restaurants and saw girls who worked for the government breakfasting on a cigarette and coffee and having a "coke" and cigarette for supper. Some of the $30,000 Treasury officials should be told people could not live on $55 a month.

Opposition speakers objected to the 30-day military training period, he said, but no one had ever claimed he could make a soldier in 30 days. From his experience overseas he knew there were some men who couldn't be made into soldiers in four years.

There had been complaints, too, of lack of personal equipment for the army. After being in the army for years and out of the army for years, he said he still had only two shirts.

More seriously, he advocated Parliament being held in almost continuous session for the duration of the war, to perform its democratic duty of giving guidance to the nation, as had been suggested by Prime Minister Winston Churchill, probably the greatest living statesman, present company excepted."

Mr. Cruickshank advised the government to consider the military value of a good trans-Canada highway, which the country lacked at present. If "a certain country" went to war with Canada, the two railroads through the Rocky Mountains would be put out of action in short order—and there was no alternative highway by which supplies could be taken to the Pacific coast. A few million dollars might well be spent on that.

Oil Pipeline Needed

Returning to military training he said he was "tired of hearing about these poor boys in the factory," many of whom were making more money than they had ever made before while the boys who enlisted got $1.30 a day.

Another item which might be given active attention was an oil pipeline from Turner Valley to the Pacific coast, he said.

In his speech, Mr. Castleden deplored the "gearing of big business into government officialdom" in the various controllers enlisted from finance and industry.

"The same tactics were followed in Great Britain and they failed," he warned. He wondered whether big business had repented since last year when "it refused to touch our contracts."

"Has it suddenly decided that profits are to be only secondary from now on?" he asked.

"We do not believe in these sudden conversions; they never last. But we will have to remember that that (profit) motive must go, if we are going to be successful."

Canada ultimately would have to do as Britain has done—take over the essential industries and place them under efficient control.

Calls Conversations Blatant Publicity

An echo of Conservative Leader Hanson's criticism of the Ogdensburg meeting last August between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King was heard from Paul Martin (Lib. Essex East).

Mr. Hanson was quoted as having said the Ogdensburg conversations were "blatant publicity" for conversations on joint defence which had been opened by the Conservative administration prior to 1935 but had keen kept secret.

If Mr. Hanson's remarks represented his real views, it was evident that he failed to grasp the true significance of the efforts being made to erect a "bulwark" against dictatorship aggression on the American continent, Mr. Martin said.

Turning to the forthcoming Dominion-Provincial conference on the Rowell-Sirois report, Mr. Martin said Ontario seemed to be singled out for special reference, for reasons not clear to him. There was the suggestion that Ontario was unwilling to cooperate.

He said he believed he spoke for the vast majority of the people of Ontario, certainly of southwestern Ontario, when he asserted they were anxious that the conference would result in a common understanding, as a result of which Canada could go on with greater unity.

He trusted the men attending the Dominion - Provincial conference would place themselves in the position of those who framed Confederation.

Ontario, the largest province in Canada, was as interested as any province in seeing that Confederation was not to be destroyed or disunited.

Three Factors Essential

He trusted that the conference at least would carry out the essentials of some of the Rowell-Sirois Commission's recommendations.

Three factors were essential to effective war activity:

1. National unity.
2. Reduction of the money cost of ordinary government function to a minimum.
3. Opportunity to create conditions for industrial production to serve war needs.

The recommendations of the Rowell-Sirois Commission largely met these essentials, he submitted. Above the interests of the provinces came the interests of Canada. He was confident the country at large wanted to see the collection of income, corporation and inheritance taxes and unemployment relief handled by a single authority.

"As much as we love our province, we love Canada much more," he said.

Mr. Martin said those who questioned Canada's war and peace aims should realize that the first task of the democracies was to destroy the power of Hitler and Mussolini. After that would come the task of building a world system that would ensure the rights of the common people and make it impossible for any one person to plunge an innocent nation into misery and death.

BRITAIN'S NEED

she was prepared to go to war.

Too Little Information

Meanwhile, two noted American correspondents in London cabled dispatches that were highly critical of the British censorship, blaming it for keeping Britons and the world in the dark about the true situation—and the need for United States assistance.

In the New York Times, correspondent Raymond Daniell was critical Monday of the British censorship. He said London newspapers printed a German communique claiming damage to specified towns in the Midlands while British communiques did not name the towns.

Daniell commented:—

"This is defeating its own purpose, because in trying to fool their enemies the British are succeeding only in fooling their best friends. They want greater supplies of war materials and financial help from the United States, and their best hope of getting it is letting the people of the United States know extremity of their need . . ."

In a story yesterday, Drew Middleton of the Associated Press wrote bluntly:—

"Complacency, distortion and reluctance to admit the truth, even privately to correspondents who have no hope of getting some news through the rigorous censorship, which sometimes even delays official communiques, perhaps are as dangerous to the British cause as nightly bombings. The way the censors work is reminiscent of the conduct of French censorship before the fall of France."

In a note to editors preceding the Middleton story the Associated Press described it as "significant because it passed through a censorship which heretofore has frowned on such statements."

The note added:—"It may mean that the British have changed their attitude and believe that a dark picture of their danger would arouse more sympathy in the United States than the confident optimism displayed so far by the government."

OUR INCREASING

that they could profit by our experience and that, I believe, they are doing.

"I think that before very long, if the cordial relations between this country and the United States continue—and I imagine they will become increasingly cordial—North America will be a second arsenal from which we can obtain increasing supplies to supplement and make good any of our deficiencies.

"I do not wish to minimize our difficulties, but I do not think the picture is altogether gloomy, although the situation is not one which we relish.

Security for Shipping

"It is true as the Prime Minister said recently that we are far from being fully armed and so long as that remains the case there will be increasing calls for further effort."

The minister went on to say that while shipping losses are "much like April, 1917,.... the position is not so bad as it might have been but for the actual increase in merchant tonnage built here....

"It is a heavy responsibility that rests on the admiralty to see that we get some reasonable measure of security for our shipping, for if we do not our plight is going to become very serious."

"The loss of war material in transit is not sufficient to cause alarm.

"I do not believe we are at the end of our difficulties; I think these difficulties will increase; there may be some of a new kind to grapple with."

Overoptimism Charged.

Emanuel Shinwell, Labor, had accused the government of overoptimism and "failure to face the fact that the dice of war are heavily loaded against us.

". . . Production over the whole field of industry is not increasing and there is far too much unemployment," Mr. Shinwell declared. "The government are too much afraid of using their powers."

He urged that parliament "spur the government onward in the colossal task that faces the nation."

Leslie Hore-Belisha, former war secretary and a Conservative, declared that Mr. Greenwood had "offered us no remedy" and declared that "unemployment at the most critical moment of our whole history appears to be increasing."

Says Shipbuilding Behind.

Shipbuilding is behind schedule, Mr. Hore-Belisha charged, and the shipping minister has "offered us no hope except for accession of tonnage from the United States which "is not a mercantile shipbuilding nation and has many pre-occupation with its own naval difficulties both in the Atlantic and the Pacific."

Mr. Hore-Belisha declared that "the real remedy" would be "to knock Italy out of the war. The Greeks have opened the way . . . this is our great opportunity."

Asking why a part of the Italian fleet was permitted to flee Taranto for "safer refuge" after Britain's Nov. 11 air attack, the former war secretary asked:

"Are we to fight war offensively or not?"

Transport Minister Moore-Brabazon, touching on another of the war's sore spots, said he was "very dissatisfied" with scanty food arrangements on trains.

geftoinau also was reported by the Hungarian News Agency.

Information was lacking as to whether Antonescu approved the mass executions. Until now he has been understood to oppose violent methods, preferring to use his personal influence to reconcile and unite dissident elements in the nation.

The brief dispatches said it was not learned who issued the death order, nor was it known publicly whether any of the condemned had been given secret trials.

For weeks the Iron Guard Commission questioned former officials regarding responsibility for anti-guard measures, but the communiques indicated this was merely a preliminary inquiry.

The firing squads went to work, it was reported, after the bones of Codreanu and his lieutenants were exhumed preparatory to a ceremonial re-internment in the Green House, Bucharest Iron Guard headquarters.

The Green House was the scene of gun fighting a few days ago when right wing Guardists attempted a revolt under Codreanu's father against the leadership of Horia Sima.

It was officially announced that two men were wounded subsequent unconfirmed reports said several of the right wing Guards were executed as traitors.

Although those reported killed today had been under arrest for some time, they had undergone no public trial. Many had been under so-called house arrest.

Terrorism Instrument of Policy

The Iron Guard now in the saddle in Rumania with German support, made terrorism an instrument of policy in its struggle for power.

Rumania's recent history has been marked by a connected series of assassinations and executions, outgrowth of the fierce struggle between the Iron Guard and the now deposed regime of King Carol.

Late in November, 1938, Flory Goanga, rector of Cluj University, was wounded in an attack authoritatively attributed to the Iron Guard. A 22-year-old extremist was said to have confessed that he "won the commission to shoot Goanga in a Guard lot-drawing."

Goanga was not fatally injured, but suppressive measures took the stern turn of mass killing, for the attack was said to have been intended as the spark for a rebellion.

The founder of the Iron Guard, Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, and 13 colleagues were in prison at the time, serving sentences on charges of treason growing out of assassinations of Premier Ion Duca, in 1933 and Mihail Stelescu, an Iron Guardist accused of betraying the movement in 1936.

Codreanu promptly was accused of directing the "rebellion" from his prison cell.

Probably Strangled To Death.

On Nov. 30 Codreanu and the others were killed. The official story at the time was that, while they were being taken to Bucharest from Rumnik-Sarat prison for questioning in the Goanga shooting, they attempted to escape and all were fatally shot by the guard detail.

As indicated in today's dispatch the common story in the Rumanian capital is that Codreanu and his fellows were strangled to death in prison.

The next major stroke attributed to the Iron Guard was the assassination Sept. 21, 1939, of Premier Armand Calinescu, relentless foe of the Guardists. This, too, was classed as part of a rebellion attempt.

In retaliation, Iron Guardists were marched into streets and alleys or stood against prison walls and shot. The number so executed was officially given as 320, but other figures ran to nearly 2,000.

Carol appointed Gen. Argesanu to succeed the slain Calinescu in the premiership and the purge was directed by Argesanu. The guard had its vengeance today on Argesanu and others.

ABSOLVED FROM BLAME

Smith's Falls, Ont., Nov. 27 (CP)—A coroner's jury Tuesday absolved William Dundas of Brockville, Ont., and James Ovington of nearby South Elmsley from blame in connection with the death of Alfred Ranger, 65-year-old Brockville man who died here Nov. 5 after an automobile accident.

Dundas was driving the car in which Ranger was riding when it collided with Ovington's horse-drawn wagon.

'HEAVY AND SUCCESSFUL' RAID ON COLOGNE

Greek and British Shipping Boards Co-operate

London is Quiet As Raiders Focus Attack on South

Invasion Ports of Le Havre and Antwerp Also Under Bombing by R.A.F.

London, Nov. 28 —(CP)— The day shift of the German air force—several formations of fighters and bombers—was scattered by Britain's Spitfire defenders and anti-aircraft guns today after another night of give-and-take bombardment.

Machine-gun fire was heard over southeast coastal villages, said Exchange Telegraph News Agency, as fighter patrols broke up the formations of daylight attackers.

The night had brought renewed bombing of London, a southwest English town (which German sources claimed was the port of Plymouth,) and scattered points reaching as far as southeast Scotland.

On the British side of the ledger "a heavy and successful" night bombing of Cologne was carried out while Le Havre and Boulogne, France, and Antwerp, Belgium, on the invasion coast of the continent also were bombed.

German Artillery Active

As if to support Nazi daylight attackers, German long-range guns rocked the Dover coast area, their fire directed by a "spotter" plane which British anti-aircraft gunners tried to strike down. Shells fell at regular intervals for more than an hour and a half and the fire was returned by British artillery.

One raider plane turned back toward the French coast with smoke pouring from it. A crippled plane was believed to have jettisoned two heavy bombs which fell in the sea off a southeast coast town.

A few of the invaders got through the British defences, to London and one was brought down by fighting planes near Croydon, on the London outskirts.

A joint communique of the Air

British Communique

London, Nov. 28 (CP)—Thursday's joint communique of the Air Ministry of Home Security:—

"Enemy activity last night was almost entirely confined to attacks on a town in Southwest England and on London and its suburbs.

"In the town in Southwest England the attacks started soon after dusk and continued until about 2.30 a.m. They were intermittent throughout the night and at no time were on a heavy scale.

"In both these areas damage was done to dwelling houses and storage buildings by fire and high explosive bombs but reports up to 6 a.m. show that damage was not extensive and that casualties were few.

"Elsewhere a few bombs fell in the home counties, East Anglia and Southeast Scotland but little damage was done and the number of casualties was small.

"One enemy bomber was destroyed during the night."

REDUCTION IN PROVINCIAL SPENDING URGED

W. K. Elsing of Kootenay West Makes Impassioned Plea for Less Expenditures

DEBATE MOVES SLOWLY

(By Carl Reinke)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 28.—(CP)—In the face of steadily rising revenue requirements of the Federal Government to finance the war, the provinces must curtail expenditures, W. K. Esling (Con. Kootenay West) says.

While he believes in conscription of wealth, the combination of present Federal and Provincial income taxes in some provinces on the high incomes leaves comparatively little— without including defence and municipal taxes, he contends.

"There is only one thing to be done", he told the House of Com-

Dies in Hospital After Being Hit by Policeman's Bullet

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 27 (CP).—Roland Croson, 19, died early today in hospital here a few minutes after he was shot by a policeman whose gun went off when the policeman slipped on the ice while in pursuit of Croson.

Police received a complaint last night that a prowler was alarming residents. Constables T. Renaud and G. Fitzgerald were despatched in a scout car. Police reports said that as they alighted from the car, a man began to run away.

The report said that Constable Fitzgerald shouted a warning and then took up pursuit. As he did so, he slipped on the ice and his gun discharged.

ALBANIAN PRINCE KILLED

Rome, Nov. 28 (AP)—The newspaper Il Popolo Di Roma asserted today that an Albanian wearing a Greek uniform killed Albanian Prince Rrok Doda, a volunteer in the Fascist militia, in a bayonet clash near Irdizia.

Although mortally wounded, the report added, the Prince killed his assailant.

Alaskan Sourdough Deliberately Entombs His Own Body in Ice

Fairbanks, Alaska, Nov. 28 (AP)—Out of the frozen Yukon today came the uncanny story of an aged Alaskan Sourdough who, dying in the wilderness, was believed to have deliberately entombed his body in ice to save it from the wolves.

Encased in solid ice, the body of 84-year-old Edwin A. Robertson was found by a searching party in a glacial stream where a little trickle of water still flowed over the ice.

His rifle, the tracks of wolves and a tiny heap of sticks with which he had tried vainly to build a fire were found beside the stream.

Robertson, a Maine man who had spent most of his life in the wilds of interior Alaska, lived in a lonely cabin on Seventy Mile River. On Nov. 14, he set out for Eagle, near the Alaska-Yukon territory border and less than 100 miles below the Arctic Circle.

The weather was bitterly cold, the route untravelled and without shelter and the country infested with packs of wolves.

As United States Commissioner R. E. Steel reconstructed Robertson's end, darkness overtook the old timer on the trail and he tried to camp for the night beside the stream. But when he was unable to light a fire, death from freezing swiftly approached.

The commissioner believes the howling wolves and the certainty of death then impelled the Alaskan pioneer to take a step which cheated the wolves.

From the position in which body was found yesterday with parka pulled over his head and his arms folded, steel was convinced that Robertson has purposely lain in the stream, with the freezing water trickling over him, to make sure the wolves would not get his body.

ALBANIAN DRIVE BY GREEK TROOPS IS CONTINUING

Italian Efforts to Check Advance Thwarted Partly by British Aircraft

Near Pogradetz Greeks Crush 'Fortifications' of Italian Corps

Athens, Nov. 28 (AP)—The Greek counter-invasion of Italian-held Albania still is progressing in all sectors, according to unofficial reports today from the battlelines, but official circles maintained reserve.

Dispatches picture the Greeks as constantly hammering the Italians, forcing wholesale surrender by Fascist troops in some cases and retreat in others and the shattering—with British help in the air—of all Italian attempts to reorganise.

By sectors, the Greek dispatches reported:-

Southern — "As a result of yesterday's success our troops have succeeded in compelling the enemy to a general, quick withdrawal after fighting four days and nights without rest, sometimes launching stormy attacks at bayonet point, sometimes manoeuvring through high mountains and encircling the enemy detachments and sometimes launching surprise night attacks...

"After an attack yesterday about dawn our troops forced an entire battalion of Italians in Albania to surrender and by afternoon the enemy's resistance had collapsed.

400 Italians Captured

Central — Four hundred Italians captured in one village by 15 Greek soldiers after the Greek line had carried beyond the place. In darkness the Greek detachment surrounded a house where most of the Italians were barricaded with machine guns. The Greek leader fired through a window and killed an Italian Second Lieutenant. "The other Italians surrendered," said the despatch.

Northern — "Our troops continued to advance and occupy important enemy positions—strong enemy units opened fire in fierce resistance, but before the dash of Greek troops they dispersed in all directions.

More prisoners were taken and their statements disclosed the magnitude of the Italian disaster . . .

"At any moment the final clash between our advancing forces and the retreating enemy will take place. The Italians . . . Are seriously threatened with being cut off from their bases."

Centre of this action was Pogradetz, Albanian town about 20 miles north of fallen Koritza, where a government spokesman said the Greeks encountered and crushed "systematically fortified" positions. Greek advance guards previously had been reported at the edge of

Employ Greek Ships In Accordance With Allied Requirements

London, Nov. 28.— (CP)— The Greek Government has authorized the Greek Shipping Committee in London to requisition all Greek shipping outside the Eastern Mediterranean, the British Ministry of Shipping announced today.

A statement said that "full powers of control" had been conferred by Athens on the Greek shipping committee "to ensure that Greek ships are employed in accordance with the requirements of the Allied war effort".

The control powers also apply to Greek ships of more than 4,000 tons in the Eastern Mediterranean. The statement added that the Greek shipping committee "acts in close consultation with the (British) Ministry of Shipping".

(The Greek merchant marine totalled 607 ships of 1,780,586 tons at the start of the war, ranking as the world's ninth.

(Greek losses to date are estimated at 56 ships of approximately 250,000 tons. Part of this loss has been replaced by purchases since the war began and by flag changes.)

ANTONESCU TRIES TO STOP ANARCHY IN RUMANIA

Threatens to Resign Unless Extremist Guardists Can be Restrained

MEN SHOT IN PRISON

Budapest, Nov. 28 (AP)—Rumanian Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu struggled to check possible anarchy in his new Iron Guard state as self-appointed execution squads of green-shirted Guardists were reported threatening the lives of every political enemy in Rumania.

The outburst of vengeance in which at least 64 Rumanians met violent death yesterday, including generals and cabinet ministers under former King Carol, was said to have touched off a virtual reign of terror. Both Antonescu and Vice-Premier Horia Sima, leader of the pro-Nazi Guard, pleaded for "legality, justice and order."

Canadian Chases Messerschmitt Right to Airdrome

London, Nov. 28 (CP Cable)—Not only the Mounties go the limit to get their man alive. Take the case of a Canadian flight lieutenant who was up again today after having shot down a German fighter Tuesday.

He sighted a Messerschmitt fighter over the Thames estuary chased it across Kent and damaged the German's cooling system.

The German pilot realized he would not be able to reach home so he searched for a place to land and chose a Royal Air Force airdrome. The Canadian landed alongside, waited until the German was arrested, and then flew to his own base.

The Canadian pilot in his successful attack damaged a German fighter and chased it down until it crashed into the English Channel.

Bulgaria Given Assurance Of Support by Russia

Statement Confirms Soviet Opposition to Bulgar Adherence to Triple Alliance

SITUATION BRIGHTENS

Sofia, Bulgaria, Nov. 28 (AP) — A high Soviet official has assured Bulgaria that "Russia has always supported and continues to support Bulgaria," government sources reported today.

Informed quarters said the statement confirmed Russia's reported opposition to immediate adherence by Bulgaria to the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo alliance.

Government sources said the Soviet official, Arkady Soboleff, Secretary General of the Russian Commissariat of Foreign Affairs, who headed the Soviet delegation to the Danube River conference, declared before leaving Bulgaria:-

"The Balkan horizon has brightened. Neither Turkey nor Bulgaria wants to fight, and Bulgaria is upholding her neutrality."

(Informed quarters in Berlin admitted last week that Bulgaria would not sign the Axis pact at present, although previously it was reported that strong Axis pressure was being exerted to enrol Bulgaria.)

SAYS PREMATURE DISCLOSURE MAY HANDICAP PLANS

President Roosevelt Sends Telegram to Dies on Plans to Combat Subversive Influences

Washington, Nov. 28.—(AP)—President Roosevelt has telegraphed Chairman Martin Dies (Deb.-Texas) of the House Committee on un-American activities that careful executive plans to combat subversive activities "may be severely handicapped or completely destroyed" by premature disclosure of facts or of suppositions to the public.

The President told Dies that departmental investigations also might be hindered by "hasty seizure of evidence" or by "giving of immunities" to witnesses before congressional committees.

The White House telegram went to Dies last night at Orange, Texas, after a presidential secretary had received an acceptance from the Texan for a conference with Mr. Roosevelt Friday on dividing spheres of jurisdiction of congressional and departmental work against subversive influences.

Dies previously had telegraphed Mr. Roosevelt urging closer co-ordination of Justice Department and other Federal activities against spies.

Maisky Confers With Butler

London, Nov. 28 (CP)—Soviet Ambassador Ivan Maisky conferred with Richard Butler, Foreign Office Under-Secretary, yesterday, making "a general survey of the political situation on topics of mutual interest," an authoritative source said today.

This source said the visit—first since Russia Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff returned to Moscow from Berlin—was merely a periodic call and should not be "coupled" with a meeting in Washington between Constantine Oumansky, Russian Ambassador to the United States, and State Under-Secretary Sumner Welles.

British Sources State None of the British Ships Involved Were Damaged in Any Way

Rome, Nov. 28 —(CP)— The Italian High Command admitted today that the Italian destroyer Lanciere, 1,620 tons, was seriously damaged in a clash with British naval forces south of the island of Sardinia yesterday.

The communique said the 10,000-ton Italian cruiser Fiume also was struck, but asserted the shell failed to explode.

The High Command claimed that two British cruisers were hit by Italian shells and that bombs from Italian airplanes later hit an air-

RAIDER OPERATES IN INDIAN OCEAN, TWO SHIPS SUNK

Australian Navy Minister Says Warship Picked Up Some Survivors

SOME TAKEN PRISONERS

Canberra, Australia, Nov. 28 — (AP)—Navy Minister W. M. Hughes announced tonight that the merchantmen Port of Brisbane and Maimoa had been sunk by an enemy raider operating in the Indian Ocean.

An Australian warship brought 27 survivors of the Port of Brisbane to an Australian port and other survivors were taken prisoner aboard the raider.

Nothing is known of the Maimoa except that an empty lifeboat belonging to her was found and it is assumed she was lost

Offer Ideas How to Combat Night Raids and Sea Warfare

London, Nov. 28 (CP)—Ideas for solving two of Britain's most pressing problems—how to meet German night air raids and sea warfare—were offered in the press today.

The Evening Standard, saying that "the biggest battle of this war is being fought on the Atlantic," suggested "co-operation of airplane and ship" to reduce British shipping losses.

The magazine "Aeroplane" said the answer to the problem of night bombers could be expected, "but not at once and probably not before next winter.

"There is no single technical 'device' to solve the problem," it said. "Improved detector apparatus on the ground, 'box barrages' and so forth can hinder but never stop the night raider.

"What is required is a fighter which affords good visibility for the crew above all other things and yet does not sacrifice too much in speed and in range or in gun powder for that first essential.

"Such a design should be pressed on at once with the probable trials of next winter in mind."

Disadvantages of Today

Emphasizing Britain's disadvantages compared with the last war, including lack of bases in Ireland and Germany's possession of the Channel coast, the Evening Standard noted also that "we have not the American assistance which aided so considerably in 1918" when "a quarter of all escorts across the Atlantic were provided by American destroyers."

Since British diplomacy "failed in Ireland" the newspaper suggested that inquiries be made of "the possibility of extension by the United States of her neutrality zone, thus relieving our responsibilities in the Western Atlantic."

It also urged "stricter rationing and harder work in factories to repair losses at sea."

Other Purchases Of Steel Limited To Current Needs

Step Taken to Assure Abundance Of Supplies to War Industries

Ottawa, Nov. 28 — (CP) — For other than war industries, purchases of steel beyond actual current requirements have been forbidden, H. D. Scully, Steel Controller and Chairman of the Wartime Industries Control Board, announced today.

"This step has been taken to assure 'abundant supplies of steel to the armament and munitions industries," Mr. Scully's statement said.

In addition, as a means of conserving steel supplies for the armament industry, the steel controller has advised many manufacturers working on government and other orders to find substitutes for steel in products which are not of a vital war character.

Excess Over-Stocking Not Permitted

"The steel controller has advised the trade throughout the Dominion that any excess over-stocking will not be permitted in future," said Mr. Scully's statement, given to the Press by the Director of Public Information, G. H. Lash.

"Producers and manufacturers are in turn advising their customers that they will supply only normal month-by-month requirements."

Mr. Scully added that the restrictions are of a purely voluntary nature but the controller has received assurance throughout the industry and from a variety of trade and other associations that they will do their utmost to prevent any sales or purchases of steel in greater-than-normal quantities.

These associations will prevent any large purchases which could be spread over a period of months.

"We are determined to prevent any purchasing practices which might be detrimental to the efficient prosecution of the war," said the steel controller.

Circular to Steel Purchasers

In a letter to the trade which is also being circulated among steel purchasers, Mr. Scully said that in addition to his other powers, the steel controller "may buy, take possession of, or otherwise acquire steel, wherever it may be found, at a price prescribed by him, subject to the approval of the Minister of Munitions and Supply, which price would be buyer's cost or current market value, whichever is the lower."

Explaining the steel controller's advice to those working on government and other orders to find sub-

Graduates Will Have "Great Effect" on War In the Next Year

London, Nov. 28 (CP)—Graduates of the British Commonwealth Air Training scheme will have a "very great" effect on the air war next year, Air Marshal Sir Philip Joubert, noted soldier and airman, said Wednesday on the British Broadcasting Corporation's "Britain Speaks" feature.

"By next spring, the flow of men from the scheme will have increased to a river, whose volume and strength will have a very great effect on air operations in 1941," Sir Philip said.

The Air Training scheme, he said, was the most important Canadian contribution to the war effort. "More and more pilots, gunners, and air crews will be pouring over in a never-ending stream," he said.

In Canada itself, the Royal Canadian Air Force had been greatly expanded and already was making an important contribution overseas. It also was a powerful factor in Canada's Home Defence.

Sir Philip paid tribute to young Canadians who came to Britain before war began and joined the Royal Air Force.

"They are the finest material the Dominion breeds," he said. "Their record of success has been outstanding and they have accounted for many of the Germans who have been shot down."

He spoke also of the Canadian Fighter Squadron in the R.A.F., led by their legless leader, Douglas Bader, "whose determination and courage is a model for young fighting men today."

The support offered by the empire had given Britain a feeling of greater confidence in eventual victory.

ROME PAPER DEPLORES SLAYING

Rome, Nov. 28 (AP)—The newspaper Il Popolo Di Roma termed today the slaying of at least 64 political prisoners by Rumanian Iron Guardists in Bucharest "unjustifiable lynching."

Referring to yesterday's purge the newspaper said: "The action carried out by Legionnaires certainly was not legal. It was contrary in every way to the political tendencies of General Ion Antonescu, who can only deplore it . . . One can only hope that Rumania will find peace again in the spirit and doctrine of the Axis."

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

MONGREL DOG NOW IN POUND

A mongrel dog, part collie and police dog, was impounded by Thos. Thorne, city dog catcher, yesterday. There was no dog tag attached to the dog, when it was found wandering at large. Mr. Thorne stated today, however, he was of the opinion the dog was owned outside of the city limits and had wandered aimlessly into Belleville.

PINE TREES STOLEN FROM PRIVATE HOME

No doubt they will make delightful Christmas trees as adornments for some person's home, but S. R. Burrows of this city did not appreciate it when he found the tops of two pine trees had been cut off and stolen, he told city police officials today. Planted for the express purpose of beautifying the grounds of his East Bridge Street residence grounds, several stately pine trees adorn the premises. Sometimes recently marauders entered the grounds by night and cut the tops off two of the pine trees, thus spoiling their beauty. Mr. Burrows reported the destruction of the trees to police officials today. They were doubtless stolen for Christmas decorations and will be hard to identify, police added.

TRAINEES GIVEN USE OF THE "Y"

As a further contribution to an already active war service, the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. is presenting "Y" membership tickets to all trainees at that point. Holders of these tickets will be afforded all "Y" privileges during their thirty days training period at Peterborough.

The Belleville "Y," like all others in Canada, afford this privilege to members of the C.A.S.F., including the navy and the air force, although due to the fact that there is no unit stationed here, activity in this respect is not as great as in certain other points. During the month of October, however, approximately 200 soldiers, air force or navy lads, were serviced by the local "Y." The privileges include the use of the swimming pool, free towels, the use of the gymnasium, and other privileges.

"Y" SECRETARY ATTENDS MEETING

Mr. J. E. Shortt, Secretary of the Belleville Y.M.C.A., is in Toronto today attending the annual meeting of the general secretaries of the Y.M.C.A. of Canada. This meeting will conclude on Thursday evening, while on Friday and Saturday, Mr. Shortt will attend the two-day session of the National Council. This is the executive body of Canadian Young Men's Christian Associations.

The discussion this year will centre around war work and its financing. Mr. Morley P. Duff is the local lay member for the "Y" National Council.

FIRST ANCHOR ICE FORMS IN RIVER

With the advent of winter-like weather when the temperature hovered around the zero point, the year's first anchor ice was seen forming in the Moira River. By noon today the mouth of the river had been closed to a point a few feet below the lower bridge, by anchor ice.

DRIVING CONDITIONS EXCEEDINGLY POOR

Driving conditions on highways leading out of Belleville were reported to be exceedingly poor by the Provincial Motorcycle Patrols today. "Unless it is absolutely necessary it is not advisable to drive the highways out of Belleville until the present rutty conditions have been remedied," warned Motorcycle Patrolmen after patrolling east and west trunk roads early today. Following Wednesday's heavy blizzard and the season's first snow storm, the highways became impassable and deep ruts resulted, slowing motorized traffic down to the proverbial snail's pace. "The road east of Belleville is as rough as a wash-board, while southern roads are blocked with heavy snow drifts," warned Motorcycle Patrolmen at noon.

WANT CARS REMOVED OFF STREETS UNTIL SNOW IS CLEARED OFF

An urgent request for residents of the city who leave their cars parked along the streets, to remove them to garages or other places where they will not interfere with snow-plowing or removal, was issued today by the City Public Works Department.

"We are experiencing a lot of difficulty with our plows and trucks through the fact that automobiles are being left along streets. It forces the plows to turn out, and leave a spot that it is impossible to clear up", City Engineer Charles Mott stated

"The public can co-operate with us to a great extent by placing their cars in driveways or garages, and thus give us the chance to clean the streets thoroughly", he added.

K. of C. Thanked For Cigarette Gifts

At the regular meeting of the Knights of Columbus, held Tuesday last with Grand Knight George Lee in the chair, and which was well attended, lodge business was transacted and a letter from overseas was read, stating that the cigarettes sent by the Knights of Columbus for the Belleville soldiers had been received. The letter was sent by Bmdr. F. J. Law, 14th Battery, 4th Field Battalion, Base Post Office, Canada. He stated that Bmdr. A. E. Benford of Belleville, wished to thank the Knights of Columbus for the cigarettes received.

Another shipment of cigarettes is expected to be sent to Belleville boys overseas soon.

Lecturer F. Domenico referred to the various service clubs in the city which were entertaining members of the R.C.A.F. of Trenton, and recommended that the Knights of Columbus do the same. This motion was passed, also that members of the Airforce be invited to use the lodge rooms whenever possible. Chaplain, Rev. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson heartily approved of the move.

A communication from Rev. Charles B. Lamphier, Director of St. Michael's Radio League, stating that they are promoting both Ontario and Trans-Canada, as well as the Catholic Hour, was read.

It was stated by Grand Knight George Lee that there will be a First Degree held sometime during the holiday season, for which several candidates have already been accepted.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Bags Three Nazi Raiders Before Bailing Out From Own Bullet-Riddled Plane

Flying Officer Jack Kerwin Tells of Experiences in Britain as Pursuit Pilot—Praises English People for Their Bravery

RECUPERATING HERE AT HOME OF HIS WIFE

"The sky was so full of planes that everywhere you turned you ran into trouble. A big Dornier 215 bomber loomed up in front of me, but he didn't linger long after a little lead treatment. Then the real fun started. As I turned to look for the boys of the squadron I met a reception committee of eight Messerschmitts."

That is but part of the many thrilling experiences high in the flaming skies of Britain had by Flying-Officer Jack W. Kerwin, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. De Shane, Ridley Street, who is recuperating from serious burns received in an air battle, at the home of his wife here.

Fifteen thousand feet over the rolling Kent country in the south of England, hundreds of people watched the gallant young Canadian send three Hun planes crashing to earth, and himself "bail out" when his Hurricane became enveloped in flames. He suffered severe burns to his face and head and part of his body and legs. "The only spot left on my face with any skin on it was a round circle about my mouth and nose, which was protected by my oxygen mask," he smiled.

Grinning broadly, the good-looking young flying-officer, (he is but 22 years of age, but a veteran of the Battle of Britain), rustled a pair of silk pyjamas in the warmth of his father-in-law's home this morning as he modestly related a saga of the skies during the terrific air raids and battles that flamed in the skies over England during September.

One of "MacNab's Angels"

He is a member of Number One Fighter Squadron, R.C.A.F., known to airmen as "MacNab's Angels." The squadron is commanded by one of Canada's air aces, Wing Commander Ernest A. MacNab, "the Number One," as Kerwin puts it, "who is the idol of his men as well as the Air Force."

Riding the clouds in his speeding Hurricane fighter with his squadron on September 1st, Kerwin became separated from his mates.

F. O. KERWIN
He got three Nazis

Flying Officer Jack Kerwin, No. 1 Fighter Squadron, who has three Nazi planes to his credit and who was severely burned before he parachuted from his flaming Hurricane fighter fifteen thousand feet above England in September. Flying Officer Kerwin, who married Thelma DeShane, Ridley St., Belleville, is spending a few days in the city before reporting back for duty.

"What did you do, go looking for trouble?" he was asked. Again that infectious smile spread over his face. "You didn't have to look for trouble on that day," he laughed. "You ran into it everywhere you looked."

"The big bomber loomed in my sights, and that was that. Then I turned and bumped bang into the eight playfull Messerschmitt babies. The fight was on. They tell me that I got two of them before they filled my gas-tanks full of lead. I was fifteen thousand feet in the air and as the flames broke out around me, I went out the top."

Spectators on the ground who had followed the many fights watched the burned flyer descend slowly to the ground. "There must have been two hundred of them there when I finally landed," Kerwin said.

His face does not bear the scars of the burns. "This was due" he said, "to the wonderful treatment I received in a small English hospital. It was magnificent and I cannot say too much for the doctors and nurses.

The hero of twenty air battles over England also paid a glowing tribute to the English people. "They are simply grand, and the way they are standing up under the terrific conditions is nothing more than amazing. The stuff you read about them in the newspapers is no 'guff.'"

Nazis' Losses Great

Asked about the abilities and whatnot of the Nazi flyers, Kerwin smiled. "The answer to that is, the number we have brought down compared to our losses. That should give you some idea," he said. "The score of our squadron is 76 Germans to three losses."

Flying Officer Kerwin landed at an Eastern Canada port a few days ago with other R.C.A.F. and C.A.S.F. casualties. He was met by his wife, the former Thelma DeShane of this city and proceeded to Ottawa to report to headquarters. On Monday he goes to the Trenton base where he will join a six-weeks instructional course. His future plans will be decided by R.C.A.F. authorities later.

"Boy, it's grand to be in Canada again, and listen to aircraft going overhead without having to bother much about them," he smiled.

A son of Mrs. M. P. Kerwin, Otter Crescent, Toronto, the young North Toronto Collegiate student joined the R.C.A.F. in January, 1939. He received his training at Trenton, Camp Borden and St. Thomas before leaving for England in June last year. In less than two weeks active service, he had, as had been mentioned before participated in twenty air fights.

Under the lapel of his tunic, he wears the famous caterpillar badge, Air Force insignia of pilots who have "bailed out" during action.

DRUNK DRIVING BRINGS TEN DAYS

Magistrate Butler States There Will be No More Seven Day Sentences for This Offence

"There will be no more seven day jail sentences for drunk drivers who are convicted in this court," emphatically warned His Worship, Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's session of police court held at the court house.

The warning came when David Brant, Tyendinaga, appeared on charges of drunken driving and also of failing to remain at the scene of an accident. Both charges were preferred by Provincial Constable Patterson following an accident on Highway No. 2 Nov. 19th last when a motor driven by Brant collided with a truck and sped away.

Brant pleaded guilty to both counts and was sentenced to serve ten days on the drunk driving charge and assessed $15.75 costs in addition. On the failing to remain at the accident scene, Brant was fined $25.00 and costs, amounting to $37.75 in all. Brant's automobile was ordered impounded for three months and his driving privilege cancelled for the same time.

Wilmet R. Maybee and Mrs. Mary Munroe appeared on separate charges of adding to the moral delinquency of the home affecting the morals of children. The pair pleaded guilty and His Worship laid the matter over for further investigation.

"I think this is a case where Inspector Ruston of the Children's Aid Society should investigate the conditions in which the children of both homes are living," suggested Magistrate Butler.

Charges of failing to procure Township dog licences in Thurlow were enlarged for a week.

Australians en route to embattled Europe and Africa are treated at Bombay as if every soldier is "personally responsible for the salvation of the empire," one of them said.

Motorist Collapses And Dies at Wheel

Bancroft, Nov. 28.—(Special) — Stricken suddenly while driving from his home at the Vankleek Settlement, seven miles southwest of Bancroft Wednesday afternoon, James Leach, 67, died from a heart seizure before medical help could be summoned.

Leach was at the wheel of his car, in which D. Hawley, was a passenger, when he was stricken. He collapsed at the wheel and the car ran out of control, into a nearby ditch. Hawley tramped six miles through the woods to secure help at a settlement but found none available. He was forced to walk another long distance before he could reach a telephone. It was some four hours later before Coroner Dr. O. W. Anderson reached the scene.

No inquest will be held, Dr. Anderson stated. Provincial Police Constable S. J. Palmateer investigated.

OBITUARY

MRS. MARY FENWICK

After an illness of about two weeks' duration Mrs. Mary Fenwick widow of Dr. T. M. Fenwick, passed away at the family residence, 148 Victoria Avenue, late on Wednesday afternoon, November 27.

The late Mrs. Fenwick was born in Montreal, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs Henry Jack; her mother's maiden name was Mary Blair. The family on leaving Montreal, resided in Brockville for a time and eventually moved to Belleville. Upon her marriage to Dr. T. M. Fenwick she went to reside in Kingston, where her husband died in the year 1901. Shortly after his death Mrs. Fenwick went to reside in Ottawa and remained there until the year 1906 when she returned to Belleville and made her home here since that time. In this city Mrs. Fenwick was well known to many friends to all of whom her passing will bring sincere regret In religion she was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and when health permitted she took an active part in church work.

Surviving her are a brother, Mr. Henry Jack, and a sister, Miss Ida Jack of this city.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

LATE ALBERT REID
(Napanee)

Empey Hill (Special)—Mr. Albert Reid passed away in Napanee on Sunday at the Paisley House where they have made their home since leaving this neighborhood several years ago.

The late Mr. Reid was born in Reidville 78 years ago and was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Reid. He resided in this district for twenty-five years and then moved to Napanee where he retired. He was highly respected and a splendid neighbor. He was a member of St. Mary's Anglican Church, Napanee, a Conservative and a member of the Orange Order.

He is survived by his wife, formerly Addie Lochhead, and one daughter, Miss Mae Reid Reg. N., of Montreal; two sisters, Mrs. Alma Alcombrack, Napanee and Miss May Reid, Reg. N., of New York City and one brother, Fred C. Reid, of Enterprise.

The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon from the Tierney Funeral Home to St. Mary Magdalene's Anglican Church. The service was in charge of Rev. R. J. Dumbrille assisted by Canon R. W. Spencer of Camden East. Interment at Camden East.

Service at the graveside was conducted by the Orange Order. The pall bearers were Brother Orangemen, Messrs. Wm. Ballance, Joe Tate, Arthur McKnight, Walter Higgs, John Gibson, Wm. Goodman.

LABOR MOTHER TO 4,500,000

Woman Industrial Commissioner of New York State Has Big-Sized Job

Albany, N.Y., Nov. 28 (CP). — Frieda S. Miller, successor to Frances Perkins as Industrial Commissioner in New York State, considers herself anything but "an over-anxious police woman".

"Mother" to 4,500,000 workers employed by 138,250 concerns, Miss Miller has been listening and studying and talking and learning about employer-employee relations since she was a girl in La Crosse, Wis. She confesses to learning her first lesson there, at her grandfather's lumber mill and recalls:

"When the workers' wives complained they couldn't get their men to appear for work Monday because of week-end binges, my grandfather changed paydays from Saturday to Monday and everyone was satisfied."

This is the working philosophy of the woman appointed in 1938 to fill the job vacated a few years earlier by Miss Perkins, who became United States Secretary of Labor.

Whether it's a stenographer asking what to do about "my boss who insists upon dating me after work" or a factory worker pleading for a job he lost "through no fault of my own", Miss Miller checks each type of complaint. Once she finds the existence of what she considers an "unjust condition" she wades into the situation and keeps hammering until something loosens. "A satisfied employee," she explains, "is democracy's strongest bulwark."

At fifty, Miss Miller possesses vim and vitality. She can work 48 hours at a stretch and dislikes exercise of any form.

SMUTS SAYS WAR UNITES EMPIRE

Premier Declares Dominions Will be More Closely Knit Than Ever

Johannesburg, S.A., Nov. 28 (CP). —The dominions will emerge from this war knit more closely together than ever before, Prime Minister Smuts forecast in a message to the Calcutta Statesman on the opening at New Delhi of the Eastern Group Conference on war supplies.

"The economic co-ordination of our war effort at this critical stage will pave the way for mutual assistance and trade development in days when our thoughts are able to turn to things other than the munitions of war," the message said.

"It is my confident belief that when those days come, the dominions will emerge more self-reliant and knit more closely together than ever before and ready to serve not only their own interests and the of their fellows in arms but economic welfare of the world whole."

LONE SERGEANT BEATS SQUADRON

British Hussar in Armored Car Drove Off Italian Airplane Attack

Somewhere in the Western Desert, Nov. 28 (CP).—Attacked by fourteen Italian fighters while on patrol in an armored car, a sergeant in a famous hussar regiment shot one down and drove off the remainder after a lone battle.

Patrolling the borders of the Libyan desert, he suddeny saw two Italian fighters appear, dive low and machine gun him. The sergeant grabbed the car's Bren gun and sent a deadly hail of bullets at the attackers.

Twelve more Italian planes appeared, firing machine guns and dropping bombs, one of which fell 30 yards from the car. It tore off the base oil overflow tank and brought the vehicle to a standstill.

The sergeant continued to blaze away and saw one attacker crash. The others had had enough and disappeared. Investigation showed the pilot of the downed plane had two bullets through his head.

Rear Admiral Sir Henry Harwood, who commanded H.M.S. Exeter at the Battle of the River Platte, was given the honorary freedom of Exeter when he told a guildhall audience of the famous exploit.

THANKSGIVING IN THE U.S.

The United States has two Thanksgiving Days, one section of the country having celebrated last Thursday and the rest celebrating on Thursday of this week.

This two-dated observance shows something of the spirit of liberty to which the people in America are accustomed. Some of the states follow the date approved by Mr. Roosevelt, for the second last Thursday in November while the others are keeping the older date, the last Thursday in the month. Everyone is goodnatured about it.

North and South America may well be thankful that war has not directly touched the New World. Canada on a wartime footing is determined to do its utmost to assist in the victory over the enemy. The United States too has felt the effect of war for war today disrupts international life and totalitarian war is a warning to nations to prepare themselves so as to resist aggression.

The United States and Canada are true friends and are thankful that there is so clear an understanding and friendship between the two peoples.

While Canada is at war she has no fears of her good neighbor to the south who is one of the potent voices of world democracy on behalf of the security of nations. The American people have shown themselves as staunch backers of the American policy of sending the utmost material aid to Britain.

Both nations have every reason for thanksgiving in that such friendship can be made an agency for the spread of democratic ideals through the fine example of these two good neighbors.

SNOWFALL IN NOVEMBER

Snow has come. Winter is here. The autumn has been mild, though there was snow nearly two weeks ago of more than the usual fall. Wednesday's storm likewise deposited upon the earth a very heavy mantle of the white. Though officially the opening of winter does not begin for over three weeks yet, there is general acceptance of the fact that winter has come.

Snow has appealed to the poets of northern races as the symbol of purity and of winter.

Ralph Waldo Emerson in the "Snow-Storm" tells of the coming of the flakes of snow:

"Announced by all the trumpets of the sky,
Arrives the snow, and driving o'er the fields,
Seems nowhere to alight: the whited air
Hides hills and woods, the river, and the heaven,
And veils the farmhouse at the garden's end.
The sled and traveller stopped, the courier's feet
Delayed, all friends shut out, the housemates sit Around the radiant fireplace, enclosed
In a tumultuous privacy of storm.

"Come, see the north-wind's masonry,
Out of an unseen quarry evermore
Furnished with tile, the fierce artificer
Curves his white bastions with projected roof
Round every windward stake, or tree, or door,
Speeding, the myriad-handed, his wild work
So fanciful, so savage, naught cares he
For number or proportion."

Longfellow writes in "Snowflakes:"

"Out of the bosom of the air
Out of the cloud-folds of her garments shaken,
Over the wood lands brown and bare,
Over the harvest-fields forsaken,
Silent and soft and slow
Descends the snow."

BRING MESSAGE FOR CANADIANS

A number of Canadians who saw service in the Battle of Britain are in Canada again. They include airmen and soldiers, men who have been wounded and need rest to recuperate.

These men bring back from the Old Country a story of dauntless courage and firm determination never to yield. They have the highest praise for the Britisher, whether soldier or civilian, who has written a record that will live throughout history.

These Canadians have seen modern war and their experience will be invaluable. It will help Canadians at home to appreciate what the British people are passing through for the sake of the Homeland and Empire and the world.

They will stimulate their fellow-Canadians to intensified activity in the war effort which must not let up but must continue to grow until fullest possible effort is being put into the part which the Dominion has to play not only as a nation but as a nationwide group of individual citizens and until victory is achieved.

What these men show is the loyalty that does not falter. They are all anxious to go back to defend the Motherland from the German and Italian would-be invaders. They seek another blow at the foes, who represent tyranny and violence. The spirit of these fighters is just what one would expect of the men who have lived under the conditions under which the British people, armed and civilian, have lived while their island home was being attacked, and have lived with these people and know them. Canadians are proud that they were able to serve in Britain.

What they did and what they say will be an inspiration to the people of Canada. The Canadians now returning home are living examples of the people who have been the defenders of Britain.

Italian Treatment of Dodecanesians to Blame

(From a letter in the New York Times)

Benito Mussolini said in his address to Fascist party leaders that "the Greeks hate Italy as no other people"; that "it is a hatred which at first glance appears inexplicable but in general is deep-seated and incurable in all branches, in cities and in villages, high and low everywhere," and that "the reason for this is a mystery."

Modern Greece really felt a special love and regard for the Italian nation and has given a practical manifestation of these sentiments.

Speaking of the Italians, the Greeks always called them "Fratelli"—brethren. And they received them as brothers and emancipators at the time they took possession of the Dodecanesian Islands under the leadership of General Ameglio, who told the people at that time: "I assure you most emphatically that after the termination of the Italo-Turkish hostilities the islands that are temporarily occupied by Italy will receive an autonomous system of government similar to that of Samos, and the Turk will never return. I say this as a general and a Christian, and I want you to accept my words as words of the Gospel."

Unfortunately, despite the treaties of 1919, 1920 and 1923, which were signed by Italy, the Italians acted like anything else but emancipators of the Dodecanesian Islands. They subjected the inhabitants of the Twelve Islands to acts of unspeakable tyranny.

When, a year following the seizure of the islands, the populace asked union with Greece, many islanders were thrown into jail. Ever since, the Italians started meddling in affairs pertaining to the local Greek churches and schools, their aim being the gradual Italianization of the islanders.

Their record along these lines shows that they sent into exile and to prison and that they tormented and killed not only women, old people and children but clergymen as well. On the day of the Greek Easter in 1919 a group of priests were killed with Italian bayonets just because they dared proclaim that they were Greeks.

The Dodecanesians have always been Greeks, ethnologically and historically. Homer mentions them as having taken part in the Trojan War. In the present war one finds them fighting in volunteer units of their own by the side of Greeks in Epirus and of the British in Egypt.

The acts of Italian tyranny against the Greeks—nothing else—are the causes for the change of the sentiments of the Hellenic nation toward Fascist Italy. Of course Mussolini knows this.

Letter to the Editor

CANADA'S WHEAT

Editor,
The Ontario-Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir:

Your editorial ("Canada Has Plenty of Food") the other day much apealed to this reader, as being alike timely and constructive.

Dealing with wheat, "the most important foodstuff held in large volume,", the editorial comments significantly that "in addition to the supplies in store, there is a large part of the 1940 wheat crop remaining on farms."

I would like an expression of your views, as to whether you consider it just, that this unusual war-emergency "load" of farm-stored grain should be put onto the shoulders of the growers?

In this connection I confess that I do not know (nor do I much care) whether this decision has been reached by the government through the co-operation or non-co-operation of the financial interests. All I know is that the compulsory binning of say 100 million bushels of wheat, as a direct result of war conditions, should be considered part of this country's war effort, and the resulting "load" should be spread across the national rather than the weak individual shoulders of primary producers whose resources are at an all-time "low", after the depression years.

If I had the same wheat properly "binned" in the United States, the machinery is there by which I can get a loan of some 60 cents a bushel, from the AAA authorities, and at 3 per cent, too!

In Canada, even, I could deliver the grain to the Wheat Board, (at 70 cents, basis No. 1 Northern—which is likely all I'll get) I only get 51 cents at the farm, though I sell the grain. Then, if I need an "advance" I pay between 6 and 7 per cent for the cash, in Southern Saskatchewan—just the place where the 3 per cent interest level would do the most good, and is needed in the worst way.

If the situation wasn't so all-fired serious, it would be really funny.

"WESTERNER".

DESTINY MARCHES FROM CRETE

Liberty thrives best in island countries or in nations cut off from their enemies by oceans. Liberty defends itself from island bases. It gathers strength from island and imparts this strength to others. The island of Crete offers impressive proof of this. From the beginning Crete has been the key to Britain's control of the Mediterranean. Without it, supremacy was maintained with difficulty. Germany or Italy, if they could, would have seized it without compunction or apology. They were kept away by sea power. Britain, however, could have taken the island at any time. But she withheld her occupation until it was invited. Now her bases interfere in no way with Greek control.

Yet the whole face of the war in the Mediterranean seems to have changed since the British landed in Crete two weeks ago. Perhaps the British have air and naval bases on other Greek islands. It does not matter. They are near enough to Italy to have made possible a heavy blow against the Italian fleet at Taranto. Since the landing in Crete the British have crippled Italian bases in Albania and threatened Italian communications in the Adriatic. The Greeks reinforced and heartened, have thrown back the Italian invaders. But the repercussions of the British and Greek victories are felt around the whole Mediterranean basin. Sea power is again at work, loosening chains of fear, stirring hopes of freedom.—N. Y. Times.

London Carries on Normal Life

(By Glanville Carew in Hamilton Spectator)

London—(By Mail)—What's happening to London?

Well, here are the main headlines from an evening newspaper before me: Fashionable West-End Church Burned Out By Fire Bombs—1,000 March Out of a Shelter—Nurses Buried in Wrecked School—New Clothes For Bombed Babies—Houses, Flats and Stores Bombed in West End. I could find fifty more, but they would tell only the same story. In short, the only happenings in London just now are bombs; just bombs and more bombs. Guns and more guns, explosions and more explosions. In our ordinary lives we make little bets among ourselves as to what time the sirens will sound next. Or how many raids there will be between, say, midnight and midnight; how long the shortest and longest raids in a given time will last, and so forth.

In this matter of the times of raids, we find generally that the curtain rises, so to speak, of an evening round about 8.30 o'clock, and that the show goes on, with intervals for changes of scene, most of the night, with the curtain falling somewhere about 5 or 6 a.m. There is usually an encore about 8 a.m. Then quiet. A second encore about 10 o'clock, perhaps even a third. It is commonly believed that the morning call is for the purpose of seeing what damage has been done the previous night. About lunch time there is usually a full-cast matinee which runs for three or four hours, say until 6 or 7 p.m., after which the performers on both sides, bombers and gunners, rest until the usual evening performance begins again. Now and again we get a sort of continuous show. Yesterday, for instance, there were eight raids.

While the raids are going on, rumour runs wild until authentic news comes through We hear, by rumour, that this or that important place has been blown to blazes. Heaven knows, enough important places have, in fact, been bombed, but rumour is nearly always wrong. Of course, we soon know the facts, because not only have we eyes to see, but even the most rigid censorship cannot prevent the Londoner from knowing that his house has been bombed, his train service is disrupted or his bus service diverted. Nor can it prevent him from saying so. Probably, it was due to this impossibility of hiding the obvious that the newspapers are now permitted to state where this or that bombing has taken place and what well-known public building or great store was hit or burnt down or blown up, or what underground or other railway station or section is temporarily closed.

In spite of the admittedly great damage done, there has been no really serious dislocation of metropolitan traffic so far. Inconvenience certainly, but no more. For instance, I normally reach my work at 7 a.m., after a three-quarters of an hour journey partly by surface and partly by tube train. Sometimes, latterly, I have had to complete the last two miles on foot, as I did this morning, though, in this instance, diversions of thoroughfares caused by bombs added something like another mile to the walk. But on almost every occasion the trouble has been put right in a remarkably short time; houses have been shored up and bomb craters have been filled in a few hours; some streets, of course, have to be closed more or less permanently. To the Londoners, no doubt, a two or three-mile walk in the course of work is a trial; yet uncounted thousands of country people do much more daily walking to and from work throughout their working lives, as a matter of course. So what? In fact, the traffic authorities, mainly the London Passenger Transport, have been marvellously quick and efficient in organizing emergency traffic services.

As for the damage done, great in itself though it undoubtedly is, the fact remains that the huge bulk of London is not touched, but to say that is not to minimize the enormous injury to property. On my way here this morning I walked through scores—I mean scores—of streets where not a single window remains intact, to say nothing of demolished buildings which have collapsed like houses of cards. The miracle is that so comparatively few people are injured, even in circumstances where it would appear impossible for any one to remain alive. Of course, many people have narrow escapes from major or minor injury. For myself, in the middle of the night, a couple of nights ago, my window crashed bodily in upon me while I was in bed, when a bomb exploded near by, but though several pieces of heavy glass landed on my bed, one within a foot of my head, and the room was littered with fragments, I suffered not even a scratch.

With respect to that and thousands of other windows throughout London, it is useless to replace glass with glass which may well be blown out again in an hour; nevertheless people are doing so. In any case the demand for glass is tremendous, so it is for ply-wood. Being unable to obtain either, without considerable delay, my own glass has been temporarily replaced with linoleum. However, London carries on. We get our milk and bread and our newspapers every day as usual, though sometimes a little late. On no single day have we been without them. The attitude of the Londoner, especially the Cockney, seems to be very well summed up in the remark of an old lady of the little streets: "That there 'Itler do seem a bother, don't 'e?"

Irish Naval Bases For Britain

(Letter to the Editor of The New York Herald Tribune)

The subject of Anglo-Irish relations comes to the fore again, at a time when it is of paramount importance that friendly relations maintain between Great Britain and Eire.

Without seeking justification in the historical record of England's deceit and treachery practised on the Irish people, long since attested to in the writings of famous English scholars and historians, and which the true Irishman must nevertheless relegate to the past in planning for a more prosperous and united Irish nation, it is well to note at this time that two major obstacles lie in the path of an amicable adjustment of the problem with which the British Government is now faced, viz.: the leasing of strategic Irish bases for the use of the British Navy for the duration of the present European war.

These obstacles are the partitioning of Ireland, instituted in the Government of Ireland Act of 1920, sponsored and effected by the British Government under the leadership of Mr. David Lloyd George, then Prime Minister, and Mr. Winston Churchill, the present Prime Minister; and the leadership of the present British Government in the person of the present Prime Minister, who was so closely identified with the source of the sorrows endured by the Irish poeple in our own time.

Ireland is in the arena of war most conspicuously of late. Great Britain's expressed anxiety for the procuring of Irish naval bases merely corroborates opinions generally held as to the strategic importance of Ireland in any war to which England is a party.

It would seem to me to be a question for the Irish people through their government to decide if their future is to be aligned with that of Great Britain or of the Axis powers.

There is every indication that Great Britain will win the war without the aid of Eire's manpower. Eire, therefore, is not asked to make the supreme sacrific. However, the absence of friendly co-operation on the part of Eire, requested in a much lesser degree than that already afforded by the governments of Egypt and Irak, can only serve to extend the aerial and naval warfare directed against British shipping and thus prolong the war.

In the ranks of the Irish independence movement the writer has been reared in the belief that England's difficulties were Ireland's opportunities. I would still hold to this belief during the present crisis were I not sufficiently impressed by the fine example set by the British people from the highest to the lowest in their own hour of tribulation to believe that out of the present war will emerge a more generous and understanding England, and England which, together with the world's great democracies, will do much to make the world a better place for all peoples to live in and correct the injustices which she herself, in the smugness of a security now seriously challenged, helped so much to inflict on those countries not so well favored with easy access to the raw materials with which our universe is so richly endowed.

During the World War Irish Republicans were labelled pro-German by the opposition and answered back with the cry. "We serve neither King nor Kaiser." I have no doubt that the Eire Government can answer with equal firmness ard sincerity today, "We serve neither King nor the Axis."

At the same time, Ireland today faces an entirely different situation. While then we had an imperialist Germany seeking domains for conquest, even the hard-boiled Kaiser did not confront us with political, economic, racial and moral ideologies which seek to rock and undermine the foundations of civilization and reduce mankind to the slave state.

Today's battle regardless of the merits or demerits of the specific warring parties and their respective historical records in regard to the alienable rights of those peoples coming within their jurisdiction, is a fight on the part of the Axis powers to supplant for everything that we know to be fine and decent ideologies that in every sense are both unsound and fundamentally rotten. The Irish people, both Protestant and Catholic, have an inherent distaste for the philosophies preached from the Nazi, Communist and Fascist political pulpits.

It is mainly on this account, and not merely that it will place Eire in a better bargaining position with Great Britain for a satisfactory solution of the partition question, that I implore those of my race to exert every possible influence to dispel the wrongful notion so prevalent and apparently responsible for De Valera's emphatic negative reply to the British Government, that Eire's security would be threatened by the leasing of naval bases to Great Britain.

The Irish race is well and strongly represented in the high circles of our legislative and public council chambers and we should rightly assume that its members formed no small part of an electorate which showed an overwhelming vote at the recent elections that it was and is in sympathy with the rendering by this government of all possible aid to England, short of war. The government of Eire, more immediately concerned with the outcome of the war and with due regard to the permanent security and well-being of its subjects, can do no less.

Poles Favorites Among Scots

"This week I visited Little Poland," said Mr. Larry LeSueur in a broadcast from London over WABC, "up among the barren hills and green lochs of Scotland. There a proud and arrogant remnant of a Polish army stares across the wind-whipped North Sea at conquered Europe, a Europe they have been driven from, and in almost their first words these Polish soldiers revealed why the British have chosen them to defend one of the most vital sectors of Britain, the waistline of Scotland. In their broken English or fluent French, officers and men alike spat bitter words about the Germans who have made them homeless, and virtually every man of them had a story of an escape from Poland that told like an odyssey. The corps commander himself fought the Germans at the Polish frontier, took part in the gallant defense of Warsaw, and was captured when the city fell, but after two months in a German prison camp escaped to live on the run in Russian-occupied Poland. Then he walked—yes, walked—across Slovakia and Hungary into Rumania, thence to Italy and into France. And now he has been driven from France and he yearns for another chance against his enemies.

Invited to Scots' Homes

"For Scotland and the Scots the Poles have the deepest affection. The Scots have besieged them with invitations to their homes. Apparently these two northern races admire each other's hardiness. I was told that when the Polish corps shifted from another section to Scotland their army lorries were delayed a half hour. It took the Scotch lassies that long to say goodbye to their Polish boy friends. And the story goes now that the English troops who replaced the Poles have had to buy Polish phrase books to make themselves understood to the Scotch girls! Well, I don't know how true that is but I can say that some of the Scots are paying the Poles the highest compliment by attempting to learn their very difficult language.

"When I rode on a bus in Edinburgh, the conductress called out to the passengers, 'move forward please'. And a number of Polish soldiers didn't understand her and remained where they were. Then the Scotch girl called out, 'Prosze naprzod', and the Polish soldiers quickly moved up, with a smile at being addressed in their own language. And the Poles are paying the compliment back. At an army entertainment we heard Burns' poem, "Scots Wha hae wi' Wallace Bled", recited with absolute ferocity, and the Polish army choir sang with ferver the "Bonny, Bonny Banks of Loch Lomond."

"I learned the war in Poland had really continued until the middle of last month, for it was only then that the organized Polish guerrilla army laid down its arms. In the hope that their allies might finally get aid to them, the Poles had been carying on guerrilla warfare up to the 15th of October this year (1940).

Deep Love of Freedom

"In a recent number of a Scottish magazine, Lewis Spence explains why the Polish soldiers have had such a particularly warm reception in Scotland." It appears that the association between Scots and Poles goes back for many hundreds of years. There was a time when there were no less than 150,000 Scots in Poland, the result of long-continued trading ventures between the two countries, as well as social and intellectual associations. Under names that were once Scottish, many a man whose forefathers lived in Edinburgh or Leith or Dundee found a place in the history of Poland. It is quite probable that some of the men now helping to defend Scotland have in their veins both Polish and Scottish blood.

"But after all as Mr. Spence says the 'noblest link between Pole and Scotsman is that deep-seated love of freedom which has ever animated both. The histories of the two countries are eloquent of the struggle for liberty without which no good man careth to live'."

POLICEMEN GO ON STRIKE

Shanghai, Nov. 28—(AP)—Fifty Chinese policemen of the International Settlement Force went on strike today and several thousand others were threatening to walk out, demanding pay increases to meet a 600 per cent rise in the cost of rice since the outbreak of the Chinese-Japanese war. Officials said an increase probably would be granted in time to prevent a complete walkout.

DULUTH TO CLOSE HARBOR

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 28—(AP)—Ships leaving Duluth-Superior harbor today and Friday will bring to a close the ore shipping season, which is expected to be the third largest in history. Shipments from Lake Superior are expected to reach about 62,500,000 tons this year with the possibility the total may even surpass the 1937 mark of 62,598,836 tons, the second highest in history. Ore shipments, totalling 65,204,600 tons, established 1929 as the record year.

Colorful Display Christmas Gifts Ready for Review

Hundreds of Gifts Will Be Given Free To Those Whose Names Appear On Cards

Transformed into a glittering spectacle of Christmas gifts through the magic of seasonal merchandise, Belleville merchants will open a colorful preview of holiday shopping attractions when their stores and shops will be thrown open to the general public tomorrow night between 8 and 10.30 p.m.

Hundreds of fortunate visitors will go home with attractive gift packages under their arms. Cards will be placed on gift packages in the many stores, which will bear the names of residents of the city and rural districts. All that is needed is identification, and the handsome gifts become the property of the person whose name the card bears.

Stores will be a riot of colored lights and brilliant seasonal decorations. For the first time in the history of Belleville, the shopping public will have the opportunity to stroll at their leisure through the brilliantly lighted stores, and gaze their fill at the attractive Christmas merchandise on display.

It is Belleville's first Christmas Inspection Night, and large crowds will, it is expected, avail themselves of the opportunity to see first hand what foresighted merchants are offering for their holiday approval.

Colored city street-lights will enhance the Christmas glitter and color of the shops. The Salvation Army Band will add a further holiday touch with Christmas Carols. Many stores will, in addition, ring with the season's melodies, supplied by the management.

Belleville and district shoppers go on parade tomorrow night. Everyone is invited to join, and pay salutory tribute to the most joyous season of the year.

Small Fire in Gunnery School At Picton Quickly Extinguished

Fire of Unknown Origin Breaks Out Underneath the Floor

OTHER ITEMS

Picton, Nov. 28—Damage estimated at $100 was done Tuesday afternoon when fire broke out beneath the floor of one of the new buildings at local Bombing and Gunnery School. The building, not yet completed inside, was threatened until the local fire department arrived and used chemicals. The fire was beneath the floor boards which had been laid and which will later be covered by hardwood. There was no stove in the building and cause of the fire is unknown.

The Phi-Del-a-Tee Club met Monday evening at the home of Miss Florence Barber, with Hilton McCartney as speaker.

Lieutenant Returns

Lieut. John Reycraft, of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, was among those returning to Canada from England to take up new jobs who will help reshape Canada's army at home in modern warfare, their teachings based on close to a year's experience in the theatre of war.

The boat docked at Halifax on Monday and Lieut. Reycraft was expected in Kingston yesterday, where his wife and parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Reycraft, were waiting to welcome him.

On the same ship were hundreds of British tars who will man overage destroyers obtained from the United States by Britain.

Prof. Wilmot Lane addressed the Tennyson Club which met Friday night at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Walmsley.

Accepts Call

Rev. George H. Trantor, pastor of the local Baptist Church, has accepted a call to the pulpit of Woodbine Heights Baptist Church, Toronto, and will begin his duties early next year. He will succeed Rev. James Grant who has served the church under the Baptist Home Mission for seventeen years. Rev. Trantor is a graduate of McMaster University and Toronto Bible College. He has enjoyed a very successful ministry here.

Magistrate Garvin of Kingston, who presides at court here, has tendered his resignation.

Heavy Fall of Snow

A heavy fall of snow and a blizzard filled many roads during Tuesday night and some were impassable most of yesterday and are still heavy. The snow drifted rapidly and cars had difficulty getting through them.

The Picton mail, brought here from Trenton by bus, which usually arrives before nine o'clock, did not reach here until noon. It was then too late to catch the morning train from Trenton for outgoing mail and the bus remained in Picton until six-thirty, then leaving. This resulted in the town having no afternoon mail.

Men and trucks were busy in town removing snow, and cars which were left on the streets all night were nearly covered. More than two feet of snow fell.

No court was held Wednesday as Magistrate Garvin of Kingston did not come owing to the heavy condition of the roads.

The Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce held their monthly meeting Wednesday night when farmers' night was observed. Due to weather conditions the attendance of visitors was smaller than expected. Guest speaker on this occasion was L. H. Newman, of the Crops and Markets Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture, who gave a helpful address.

WEDDINGS

BOOMHOUR—ROBBINS

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the parsonage of Rev Mr. Wicks of Coe Hill, November fifth, when Gracie Agnes Robbins, youngest daughter of Mrs. Saul Robbins of Greenbush, was united in marriage to George Paul Boomhour, of Ormsby.

The bride was becomingly dressed in a Monterey rose crepe dress and carried a bouquet of roses.

The attendants were Mr. John Boomhour and Miss Thora King.

The bridal party returned to the bride's home for a wedding supper which was attended by close relatives.

A reception was held that evening at the home of Mrs. Clarence Gunter, sister of the bride. Many beautiful presents were received by the bride and groom. The happy couple will reside at Ormsby.

Mrs. A: They say her husband brags about her cooking.
Mrs. B: No wonder, she goes to the COOKING SCHOOL, I'm going, too.

Campbellford Couple Wed 60 Years

On Friday, at their home in Campbellford, Mr. and Mrs. James Farrell celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding day and received the good wishes and congratulations of numerous friends and acquaintances.

Residents of Campbellford for nearly forty years, the couple came here from Lonsdale, where they had spent about thirty years in farming operations, Mr. Farrell devoting some time to the lumbering business.

Mrs. Farrell's maiden name was Ellen Callaghan, and they were married in the church at Marysville just sixty years previous to the day on which they celebrated the event. The officiating clergyman was Rev Father Mackey.

Mr. Farrell has attained the age of eighty-six years, while Mrs Farrell has passed her eightieth milestone of life.

The couple have seven children —four sons and three daughters—John Farrell, of Penocha; Harold of Aylmer; Lambert of Toronto; and Vincent of Campbellford; Mrs. Frank Mullaney of Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. James Reeves of Toronto, and Mrs. Joseph Kelleher of Seymour. They have twenty-five grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

PLAINFIELD W.I.

The November meeting of the Plainfield W.I., was held at the home of Mrs. Horace Palmer. The meeting was opened in the usual manner. A letter of appreciation was read for box from W.I. from Jack Telford in England. Roll Call "A law I would like changed", was well responded to. The report of the Area Convention was very ably given by Mrs. H. Palmer. Mrs. Ralph Wilder favored with a solo.

A discussion on Labour Law was led by Mrs. E. Denyes.

A paper on Parliamentary Procedure was given by Mrs. Palmer. It was decided to bring Christmas gifts for the needy instead of exchange of Christmas gifts at the December meeting. A number of parcels were brought to pack boxes for the boys overseas again.

The meeting closed with "God Save the King".

THE LUNAR transits for this day indicate a rather erratic and peculiar trend in which much insight, strategy and shrewdness must be relied upon to avert difficult and disintegrating situations. These may suddenly arise from surprising and unforeseen sources, with disastrous and up-rooting velocity. They may affect business associations and surroundings, with intimate relations put to high strain.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year which may be a radical and revolutionary one, with sudden and peculiar adventures or experiences. These may uproot both environs and associates, plans and objectives, and seem to be quite devastating. However as the intuitions, ideals and mystical qualities are under benefic stimuli, some happy inspiration or curious inner guidance, may sidetrack all dangers and disasters.

A child born on this day, while being erratic, impulsive, variable, restless and unaccountable, yet should be original, have good creative ability and have much subtlety, idealism and inspirational urges of high order.

ALLIGATOR PEARS

Alligator pears contains no starch only a small quantity of sugar, and depend on their fruit oil content for energizing qualities. You can make sandwiches of the fruit, sliced alone, or in combination with hard-cooked eggs, cheese, cold meat, sea food, etc. They blend well, too, with any of the condiments with which meat harmonizes.

COOKING ODORS

Broccoli, onions and cabbage give off an unpleasant odor while cooking. To prevent this, cook the vegetables uncovered and lay two pieces of bread on the water.

Rough Weather Skin Pack

Margaret Sullavan approves of thorough complexion care re cold weather

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

BETTER weatherproof your complexion if you want it to get through the on-coming season when the north winds shall blow. Faces don't like rough weather. Look at the old salts who sail the seas. Facial hides that are leathery!

We offer for the good of the beauty seeking sisters a suggestion: the use once or twice a week of the lemon and oil pack. Oil keeps the surface of the skin velvety and smooth, lemon scats away discolorations and blots out the dingy look that comes to even the best behaved complexion now and then.

Lemon and Oil Pack

Take the strained juice of one lemon, combine with three tablespoonfuls of olive oil. Dip a small pad of absorbent cotton in hot water, squeeze fairly dry, dip into your beauty dressing and slap lightly on a clean skin surface. Begin at the lower part of the neck, work upward. Don't overlook the sides of the neck; they get discolored because coat collars rub against the flesh.

Go about your household business for twenty minutes or half an hour or, if you aren't the boss of a home, stick your nose in the best seller and rest. Wipe away the application with pieces of moistened cotton. Do not use soap and water or you'll lose the effect which will be that of freshness and stimulation.

When portions of the eyebrows are destroyed through burns or other accidents it is possible to have repair work done. A tiny bit of the scalp with its hairy growth is removed by the plastic surgeon and transplanted to the bare area. Great skill is required for this operation. It is extremely necessary that the afflicted one should seek a surgeon of high standing in the medical profession.

Sometimes, through infection of the eyelids, the lashes fall. Removable ones can be had, serve better than one might imagine. Each little shaft is dipped into an adhesive substance, glued to the flesh and trimmed the proper length.

Diet of Expectant Mothers

A young woman whose family I have attended through two generations, is expecting a baby soon. Consequently, all her friends have been calling to see her and, of course, each one has had specific advice to offer. "Do this," "do that," "eat this," "eat that." is what she has been hearing from all corners. She couldn't possibly follow all the advice, but as this is her first child and she has never been through the mill before, she has been trying to Naturally she had been influenced most by the advice of women who have had children. They told her all the things they ate and how good those things were for them.

Well, the result of all this advice is that the poor girl became ill. She tried to eat too many things. I have seen it happen many times. The woman about to have her first baby is so anxious to do whatever will help her and the child that she overdoes things and endangers her own and the child's health.

One dangerous piece of old wives' advice that is taken literally too often by expectant mothers is, "Of course, you must eat more, you know. You must eat every morsel you can swallow so you will have lots of milk for the baby."

If the expectant mother does just that, what happens? This: Her system is particularly subject to upset at this time, and she gets a case of indigestion so bad that she has to stop eating entirely for a few days. The indigestion, of course, places a serious strain on her heart. If she overeats after the baby has been born, this upset stomach is even more serious. While she is ill and not eating, her supply of milk suddenly drops off, and the baby must be fed artificially.

The food requirements of the expectant mother and nursing mother depends a great deal upon the individual. What was good for one woman might be bad for another. As you know, certain foods disagree with some persons at any time. The chances that certain foods will upset an expectant mother are great. On the other hand, it may be she will have an abnormal craving for certain foods during pregnancy Both these factors, as well as many others, will be taken into account by her doctor in prescribing her diet. Once she has accepted her doctor's advice on diet, she should not depart from it in any particular without his consent. She can listen politely to the advice of her friends about her diet, and then forget it.

Suppose, for example, she heeds some advice often given by well-meaning but incorrectly informed friends—that a baby gets colic if the mother eats green vegetables She stops eating green vegetables. Then, in a few days, the chances are she will be upset because her milk supply is dropping off and there isn't enough for her baby. It is possible in some cases that green vegetables in the mother's diet may affect the baby adversely, but no such drastic change in diet as eschewing green vegetables should ever be made by a mother unless it is with her physician's advice.

It's a curious thing, how many women there are who always regard their sickness or deliveries or other medical experiences as exceptional until they start handing out advice! Then they regard their own experiences as a guide for everybody.

FOXBORO Y.P.U.

On Monday evening, November 25, the Foxboro Young People's Union met in the Sunday School room. The instrumental prelude "Open My Eyes That I May See", was followed by call to worship. The opening hymn was sung. Edythe Cooke spoke on "Builders of a New World". Responsive reading followed. A hymn was sung. The offering was received and dedicated. Ruby Kelly gave the story "The Parable of The Builders". Worship Service was closed with prayer given by Gordon Priest.

The topic of the evening was given by Mrs. Sine. She chose as her subject "A Study of Government — its function and purpose, with an outline of our own local Government". She closed with a challenge to the Young People as the future citizens of this country to dedicate their lives to consecrated living and thinking and that they measure up to the immensity of their task by placing a hand in God's and saying "Guide me, that I may not fail civilization".

Mrs. Cooke in her usually capable manner gave an instrumental, "Falling Waters".

The theme hymn was sung. A novel recreational period was conducted by Jean Helliwell. The number present was 44 and the offering was $1.34.

BREAD BOX CARE

Unless thoroughly ventilated and hygienically cared for, the bread (or cake) box offers ideal conditions for the growth of molds. Scald with soapy water, and air, at least weekly. And remember that the waxed paper wrapper on baker's bread is intended not merely to keep it moist but to protect it from flies, dust, and other sources of contamination.

WASHABLE PAPER

Soapsuds and a clean sponge are effective tools for successful cleansing of washable paper. The correct way to clean washable paper is to work from the ceiling to the floor, cleaning one section at a time.

A Case of Too Much Mothering

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Dear Dr. Myers: — My young daughter, aged 4, has me very upset.

For some reason or other she objects violently to having adult company in the house. She behaves like a very bad mannered youngster when company arrives and I am nervous while folks are here. No doubt they think she is poorly brought up, but without company we get along nicely. She stands at my elbow the minute anyone arrives, refuses to speak to them and proceeds to talk a blue streak while they are talking, with the result that I am a wreck when the afternoon is over. I send her from the room and she screeches so much that it ruins my afternoon. I try to explain after they go where she was wrong and she promises faithfully not to do it again, but the next time is usually worse, with the result that I simply dread having company.

My answer, in part: You have tried so hard to be considerate of that child when alone with you, and have so nearly been her sole companion, that she feels the guests who drop in are stealing away her rights when they have your attention. The problem can be solved only gradually.

Attract Playmates to Home

Try to make her less dependent on you, attract playmates to your home. When Dad is home, let him look after her, read to her, answer her questions, do things with her.

When alone with her keep yourself too busy to amuse her for stretches of twenty or thirty minutes and get her to look after herself. After the interval pause to give her a few minutes of your individual attention. If she cries, begs and strikes you during the busy period, assign her to sit doing nothing where you can see her for a definite period, say 20 minutes. If she leaves this place before the sentence ends, give her a more serious punishment.

When one adult informally drops in make clear to the child as she interrupts that you will listen to her later and don't make her wait too long. But if she persists use decisive punishment — no matter how much she cries. At the easy times you can best prepare for the harder times.

Praise When Merited

Call to the attention of the guest things your child has created or done (however crude) alone. Celebrate her successes at self-amusement.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Is it wise for parents to have the son or daughter working away from home or at college send their clothes home to be laundered?

A. Practically never. Let the child look after his own soiled clothes. If however, the college student barely has enough to eat and spends the money he has wisely, there might be a legitimate exception.

PATTERN 4617

At last—THE perfect apron! In detail and fitting, Anne Adams has treated Pattern 4617 more as a dress than an apron, making it an especially good mode for larger women. The panelled skirt front, the pointed waist-seam and bodice softness are all as flattering as your favorite dress. The bodice softness is nicely held in by shoulder darts or by darting below the optional pointed yokes. Even the back is well-designed, with the top joined together to keep the shoulder straps UP. A stunning patriotic emblem may be embroidered onto the pocket. Easy directions for its transfer pattern come with the Sewing Instructor.

Pattern 4617 is available in sizes small (32-34), medium (36-38), large (40-42) and extra large (44-46). Small size, view A, takes 2 3-8 yards 35 inch fabric and 3-4 yard ric-rac; view B, 2 1-4 yards 35 inch fabric.

Send TWENTY CENTS (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS and STYLE NUMBER.

Tyendinaga S. S. Convention Reviews Activities of Past Year

The Tyendinaga Sunday School convention was held at Melrose Nov. 19. Afternoon session opened with hymn 117 followed with responsive reading No. 752. Prayer was offered by Rev. Wm. Sterling. The president's address was followed by the treasurer's report. Various departments were called upon and reports given.

Mr. A. MacGregor, Napanee, gave an interesting talk on Sunday school class routine work. The greatest thrill derived from this work is success. Mr. MacGregor gave the congregation a printed list of superintendents' maxims which were very helpful. He suggested that disloyalty of teachers destroys the interest of the class in Sunday school routine. Plan to have a few extra special programs on Sundays for extra interest. Always recognize attendance of Sunday school pupils.

Officers Named.

The nominating committee met and elected the following committee:

President—Mr. Chas. Treverton, Plainfield, Ont.

First vice-president—Mr. Everett Hanna, Corbyville, Ont.

Third vice-president — Mr. Jack Blatherwick, Shannonville No. 1.

Secretary-treasurer — Mrs. Bruce Sherman, Belleville No. 6.

Children's Department—Miss Lily Weese, Shannonville No. 2.

Girls' Department — Mrs. McKenzie, Plainfield.

Boys' Department — Mr. Morris, Deseronto.

Adult Department—Mrs. Douglas, Deseronto.

Missionary Department—Mrs. E. Badgley, Shannonville No. 2.

Home Department—Mrs. P. Bennett, Shannonville No. 2.

Teacher Training—Rev. McAvoy, Deseronto.

Temperance—Mrs. J. C. Milligan, Shannonville No. 2.

Supper was then served by Melrose Ladies.

The evening session opened with a song service conducted by Mr. A. MacGregor. Rev. Mr. McAvoy of Deseronto read devotional exercises and followed with prayer. The members of the executive were then installed.

Music was given by Salem talent. Rev. C. D. McLellan.

The guest speaker of the evening was Rev. C. D. McLellan, B.A. In his address he spoke of the 12 per cent. decrease of Sunday school attendance, but quickly added that public school attendance had decreased 6 per cent. so the Sunday school attendance wasn't as appalling as statistics have put it.

He stated that religious instruction is a duty in the home as well as Sunday School and advised that the worship period in Sunday school be not lengthy but full of worship. It was also pointed out that children are the background for the church and that they should be trained to worship with the congregation. Attitude from within is necessary for profound worship.

Teacher training is essential for best results. For teachers to talk to children things they can understand not necessarily specific lessons, but in understandable stories in the teachers' own words. God works out His purpose in people in the shadow of the cross. The future depends on boys and girls of today, and the future cannot be trusted unless their training has been in responsible hands.

Tinting Those Silver Locks

Lola Lane advocates using floral perfumes

By HELEN FOLLETT

If silver threads are appearing in your glorious crown don't let anyone talk you into using a homemade dye; you'll be pouring troubles on your head.

Time was when trustful ladies were boiling walnut shells to produce a coloring agent or brewing sage tea which gave the tresses a queer greenish cast. We know better now. Of all the products of the cosmetic laboratory hair dyes are the most difficult to make, so the chemists say. Stands to reason that the home girl can't expect to be successful along these lines.

Pepper and Salt

Pepper and salt hair is difficult to treat, since dark and white won't come out the same shade. When the hair is of that character and a woman can't live in the same house with it, yearns for the pristine tone, let her go to a reliable specialist and have the work done. Great strides have been made in dyeing and bleaching, but only the expert understands the effects of chemicals, knows how long the timing should be, how the applications should be made.

Let no woman forget that the first job does not end the matter. The grey shafts pop out from the scalp, must be touched up every six weeks; otherwise artifice is apparent. Not that one cares much these days, but the effect isn't tidy.

x x x

Everybody loves to get a breath of floretted fragrance as a pretty woman passes by and that is one reason why perfume is the queen of cosmetics. Boosts the morale, that's what it does. That it lowers the balance in the check book is no matter. It takes a brave woman to walk past the perfume counter. Why should she?

One of the real luxuries is to own a complete beautifying equipment that carries the same scent—soap, powder, bath tonic, bath powder and sachets. The wardrobe picks up the sweet fragrance, hangs onto it. Better than using several scents because, believe or doubt it, perfumes can fight, like all get out and completely destroy each other. Sad but true.

BETHANY W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Bethany W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Percy Osland on Wednesday, Nov. 20 with an attendance of sixteen. The meeting opened with quiet music and a hymn followed by prayer. The Scripture lesson, No. 744, in the hymnary, was read responsively. The offering of $3.35 was received and dedicated by Mrs. Osland after which the Secretary and Treasurer gave their reports and the business discussed. Mrs. (Rev.) Davis took charge of the election of officers which resulted as follows: President Mrs. Ed. Treverton; Vice-President, Mrs. J. Ritz; Secretary, Mrs. P. Osland; Treasurer, Mrs. C. Eggleton; Press Secretary, Miss Stella Bradshaw; Cor. Secretary, Mrs. V. Hamilton; Peace and Temperance Sec., Mrs. A. Miller; Christian Stewardship, Mrs. Wm. Yateman; Missionary Monthly, Mrs. Wm. Casey; Strangers Committee, Mrs. Wm. Clarke and Mrs. Chas. Cole; Supply Sec., Mrs. Geo. Sills; Study Book, Mrs. B. Hollinger; Flower Com., Mrs. V. Hamilton and Mrs. O. Beer; Pianist, Miss Stella Bradshaw; Assistant Pianist, Mrs. Geo. Sills; Group Leaders, Mrs. P. Easton, Mrs. H. Walker, Mrs. Wm. Doxtator, Mrs. Geo. Denike.

Mrs. C. Eggleton took charge of a short program. A hymn was sung and Mrs. B. Hollinger gave a very interesting chapter of the new study book, "Birch Bark Talking," dealing with the life and work of James Evans who became Supt. of Missions to the Indians in Western Canada and faithfully giving his life for the cause. The meeting closed with a hymn and prayer by Mrs. Wm. Casey.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

No Reception

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My sister will be married in December, and since there have been two weddings in her fiance's family lately, they can't afford a wedding. Our family has quite a number of relatives and friends who keep reminding my sister and her fiance that they expect to be invited to the wedding. But to accommodate all of them would be too expensive for my family alone.

My sister has now decided that she will have a dinner after the ceremony, to which will be invited only the members of the two immediate families and the attendants.

We had thought of having a shower on a Saturday soon, so that the men could also attend. Do you think that it would be proper for me to have the invitations to the shower printed so that they would not only be invitations but would also inform the guests that there would be no wedding reception?

Reader

I must admit, that I am pretty confused by your questions. In the first place, since the family of the bride is responsible for the expenses of a wedding, I don't understand what you mean by the fact that "to accommodate all of them would be too expensive for my family alone", since the relatives and friends of whom you speak are those of your family. Undoubtedly you had something in your mind that you did not imply in your letter.

Also, as you may or may not know, it isn't considered good taste for a members of the family of the prospective bride or groom to give a shower. This does give the impression that the shower is a "promotion"—a bid for gifts for the convenient equipment of the new home. However, some people do defy this impression!

However, I do feel that announcing, on the invitation to the shower, that there will be no wedding reception certainly would suggest a concentration on bringing gifts to the shower!

There are several alternatives. Give the shower—if you don't mind the interpretation. Or, in better taste I think, give a party with no shower-implications—a tea or informal reception for your sister and her fiance, or perhaps a buffet supper some Sunday evening.

Or, instead of the post-ceremony dinner, have a simple and informal gathering of relatives and friends at your home. Your menu can be so simple that it won't cost any more than the dinner for the family and attendants. And it will mean that you will be able to invite these relatives and friends who are so devoted to your sister and her fiance that they want to be included in some festivity on their wedding day.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Husband Has No Sentiment

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 30 years old, married and have four children. I wouldn't have married when I did, but home conditions were intolerable. We had a mean stepfather, weren't allowed to have friends come in, and it was impossible to make any friends outside. We always had to be home by nine-thirty.

I married a man who is fifteen years older than myself. His idea of married life is that a kind word or a little sentiment is a waste of time. When he's home he never has anything to say; he just reads the evening paper and listens to the radio. I am so lonesome that I don't know what to do. The children are really too young to be much company.

Lonesome.

When conditions are such as you describe, you must try to take an interest in some casual occupation or diverison, even if it's only a passing fancy or a hobby.

Have you ever thought of taking a course in Adult Education or Vocational Training? You can fit yourself for a job, and perhaps later on, when the children are able to take care of themselves you can secure employment.

PRESERVING WOODWORK

The natural beauty of the woodwork may be preserved, whenever practicable, by varnishing. If the quality of the wood is such that the use of varnish is not advisable, paint or enamel may be applied.

FOR PICKLES

It is best to use soft water for making brine for pickles, say experts.

Want to really enjoy cooking? Want to get the thrill of an artist out of every meal you send to the table? Want to get a never-ending stream of compliments from dad, sis, junior and the whole family? Then make a date with yourself and a friend or two to take in the coming Cooking School. Thousands of homemakers who have attended former sessions of the Cooking School say they wouldn't have missed them for worlds.

Mon., Tues., Wed., Dec. 2-3-4, McCarthy Theatre
2 P.M.

● There's a long winter ahead, ladies—and about five hundred meals to be shopped for, cooked, served and "washed up after" between now and next spring-time.

● At a single session of the Cooking School, which opens Monday at McCarthy Theatre, you'll see what a simple thing it is to keep house "the easy way." The results of months and years of patient, never-ending research and experiment in ways to make life easier for women and happier for the family, will be disclosed to you; all in a spirit of such helpfulness and good will you'll enjoy every minute of your visit.

● At the Cooking School you are entertained as well as advised and instructed. You are not talked at but with. Mrs. Day's lectures are really not lectures at all, but a series of chatty confidences that will be appreciated by every woman who ever boiled an egg or washed a dish. The Cooking School amounts to lots more than the mere demonstration of fresh, new, thrilling recipes and formulas for cooking and baking. It reveals a wealth of information about new wrinkles, short-cuts, new ways to do the old things—food values—it's a treasure-house of helpfulness to every home-maker.

MRS. MADELINE DAY
Lecturer

While Mrs. Day specializes in Canadian cookery, the dishes she demonstrates come from many sources. Europe, India, Asia, Canadian farm kitchens, chefs of palatial hotels—all's grist that comes to Mrs. Day's mill, if it's in the form of a better recipe for anything to eat, from dish of beans to the most fanciful concoction of eggs, flour and sugar. Mrs. Day is a real wizard of the kitchen. Come to the Cooking School, you'll see! Admission 10 cents.

mons yesterday. "The (Finance) Minister must use his persuasive powers on the provinces to cut down their expenditures during the war".

The people of Canada accepted the last budget, heaviest in Canada's history, with good grace and they were prepared for even heavier taxes in the next budget. They would accept these taxes also with good grace and always would, as long as there was no evidence of profiteering, patronage or lack of business ability in the administration.

The present government was in such relationship with the provincial governments, regardless of the reports of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations, that it should be in a position to persuade the provinces to cut down, he said.

One of Three Speakers

Mr. Ealing was one of three speakers yesterday in the midweek half-day sitting as the Throne Speech debate moved along slowly. Because of that sluggishness, party whips now hesitate to predict that the debate will conclude before early next week. The House is expected to adjourn until Feb. 17 when the debate ends. Labor Minister McLarty continues the debate today.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House the main estimates for 1941-42 would be tabled as soon as the House reconvenes in February.

Two Ontario farmers held the floor the rest of the day discussing agricultural problems. L. E. Cardiff (Con. Huron North) said in his maiden speech that the farmers never have had a fair deal from any government, least of all from the present one.

The reason, he said, was campaign funds. Such funds were "much more conveniently collected in thousands of dollars than in smaller amounts," with the result that the big interests expected special assistance—"and get it."

Rural people realized that the present crisis called for more sacrifice and effort.

"It is still too obvious that the allied governments undertook to fight this war as an economic war and with money, while the enemy used guns and ammunition" he said. "Tanks not sterling; machine guns, not foreign exchange; sabotage, not dollars, is his method.

Must Have Expenses

"Surely we are living in a land of make-believe and sleight-of-hand speeches from some government members when they pretend to assume in this dark hour that trade will move through normal channels."

Farmers, he said, had divorced themselves from the profit motive and were actuated by a determined desire to serve in the front ranks of production. However, they had to have enough to defray expenses and cover their overhead.

Bruce McNevin (Lib. Victoria, Ont.) said that while the bacon price under the new agreement with the United Kingdom gave the producer small chance of profit, the matter was settled as far as he was concerned if the agreed price was the top price Britain could pay.

The price probably would work out to an average of about eight cents a pound, liveweight, whereas it was 8.75 most of this year and at the moment was 8.10.

While anxious to protect and preserve Canada's democratic institutions, he favored curtailment or freedom of speech of the press if those steps were necessary to prevent undermining of the morale of the people and interference with successful prosecution of the war.

ITALIANS ADMIT

craft carrier, a battleship and a cruiser, starting a fire on the battleship.

(A British Admiralty communique yesterday said the Mediterranean fleet had encountered an Italian naval force and engaged it at extreme range as the Italian vessels "retired at high speed." It added that no information was available immediately on the outcome of the brush.)

In fighting between fleet aircraft after the naval clash, the Italians claimed seven British planes were shot down, with the Italians losing two planes.

Official Italian Version

In giving its version of the naval brush, the Italian high command said:

"Yesterday afternoon naval formations of ours cruising south of Sardinia came in contact with an English squadron coming from the west, composed of several battleships, an aircraft carrier and numerous cruisers.

"Engaged in combat, our ships hit and damaged for certain a cruiser of the Kent type and a cruiser of the Birmingham type.

(The Kent class has five vessels of 10,000 tons each, the Berwick, Cornwall, Cumberland, Kent and Suffolk.

(The cruiser Birmingham is one of eight ships of the Southampton class. Five of them the Southampton, Newcastle, Sheffield, Birmingham and Glasgow, displace 9,100 tons; three of them, the Gloucester, Liverpool and Manchester, displace 9,400 tons.)

"An enemy projectile hit our cruiser Fiume, but failed to explode. Our destroyer Lanciere, on the other hand, was seriously hit and has been towed to base."

the town.

(Advices reaching Ochrid, Yugoslav town on the Albanian border, however, said Greek troops attempting a flanking movement on Pogradetz had been pushed back and that the Italians were holding their lines along the Cerava River about five miles to the south.)

British Fliers Praised

Paying tribute to British fliers, through whose efforts he said "Italian reinforcements intended to bolster Italian troops have been unable to reach their destination," the government spokesman said the Greeks are holding the initiative generally and now are forging ahead "with the same speed which has marked the attack of recent days."

An army communique also reported that Greek troops "continued successfully their action on Albanian territory" and said Greek warplanes bombed Italian concentrations and artillery.

Widespread Italian air raids, inflicting civilian damage and casualties, were reported to have been carried out on the port of Patras, on villages and rural districts in Epirus and Macedonia and on the islands of Corfu and Cephalonia.

RAIDER OPERATES

The raider, which was not identified in the Navy Minister's statement, came upon the Port of Brisbane in the darkness and when about a mile away suddenly flashed searchlights on the merchantman and opened fire.

Bridge is Struck

The first shells struck the bridge, damaging the navigating equipment and soon afterwards the wireless equipment was dismantled, but not before a distress call had been broadcast. The message was heard in Australia.

The crew abandoned the vessel in lifeboats. Occupants of two boats were captured while the 27 in three other boats escaped in the darkness.

A boarding party from the raider placed time bombs on the crippled Port of Brisbane and when the bombs failed to destroy the vessel a torpedo was fired into her side. The raider made off before the merchantman finally sank.

The rescued members of the Port of Brisbane's crew include five officers and 22 seamen. The prisoners on the raider include a woman passenger whose name was not given.

U.S.-SOVIET TALKS WILL BE RESUMED

Molotoff's Visit to Berlin Has Apparently Not Impaired Negotiations of Two Nations

Washington, Nov. 28—(AP)—Diplomatic talks between the United States and Russia, interrupted by the recent Berlin visit of Soviet Premier Molotoff, will be resumed soon informed sources said today.

Constantine Oumansky, Soviet Ambassador, was expected to see State Undersecretary [illegible] ably some time this week, to take up the conversations wh[illegible] left off shortly before Molotoff went to Berlin for talks with Hitler.

This was interpreted in informed quarters as a sign that Molotoff's Berlin visit had not impaired the negotiations which had been in progress here for several months looking to a general improvement of Russo-American relations.

Trade and Related Problems

The Welles-Oumansky talks have dealt mainly with trade and related problems with a view to adjusting these before going on to broader questions.

Gains on each side have been relatively small so far, but both the United States and Russia were understood to desire to continue the conversations for the present in the hope of more tangible results.

Molotoff's trip to Berlin caused concern at the time in official quarters lest it presage closer Russian alignment with the Axis, possibly as a partner in the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo front. But as yet there has been no surface indication either that Russia would join, or accede to apparent Japanese desires for a Soviet-Japanese Non-aggression Pact.

Fifty officers and men of the London Fire Brigade lost their lives fighting bomb fires during September. More than 500 were injured. Some were members of the auxiliary fire service.

ARE YOU THERE? YES INDEED, BUT BOMBS CRASH IN British Telephone Staffs Heroes Too, of Modern Warfare and Getting Through Much as Usual.

By HAROLD FAIR

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 28 (CP).—Spare a word of praise for the British telephone and telegraph operators—in England it's the Post Office—carrying on manfully amid dropping bombs as German night raiders turn the nights into flaming hell.

Listen to this: Skylights came crashing down as a bomb fell near a telephone exchange. Doors and windows were blown in. But the night operators found some tarpaulins to cover the switchboard and continued to work, using engineers' headlamps for light so that the blackout would not be affected.

Or this: Fire licked the walls of another telephone building. For hours, firemen, working while bombs continued to fall, sent tons of water pouring upward. Firemen advised the staff to quit the flame-lighted building, which presented an easy target, but they remained on duty dealing with essential calls.

Answering Criticism.

The two samples of heroism were disclosed by Postmaster-General W. S. Morrison following considerable criticism of the post office, which also administers Britain's telephone and telegraph system.

Although the vast network of the telephone system is vulnerable to enemy air attack, the main switching and operating centres of the system have not suffered widespread damage, he said. The underground cable plant which connects these centres has been damaged in common with other utility undertakings.

Repairing these underground breaks is often difficult due to tons of debris, burst water mains and other obstacles but the post office staff tries. They have been handicapped by losing so many experts to the armed forces but a number have been released temporarily.

Despite all this disruption about 20,000,000 local calls a week are being connected in London alone in addition to about 300,000 long distance calls and toll calls originated weekly by London subscribers.

Top Floor Danger.

A difficulty in handling telephone calls is that the operating room generally is located on the top floor of a building to get the best light. Nevertheless a nucleus staff always remains to complete essential calls. That staff since has been enlarged to handle ordinary calls.

Telegraph service has suffered from raids too. Morrison said telegrams to and from London or passing through the metropolis have been subjected to heavy delay "owing to a vital transmitting centre being put completely out of action by a bomb but measures which have been taken very largely restored the situation."

One of the steps taken to overcome telegraph delays has been to provide messengers to run telegrams between nearby offices whose connecting cables were cut. Also, emergency equipment has been provided in protected positions.

HEROES OF MINE

Manchester, Nov. 28 (CP).—The Edward Medal has been awarded to Thomas Jameson and Carl Mallinson Schofield for gallantry in rescue work when a roof of a Lancashire coal mine fell in. Five men were rescued from the debris.

FIGHTERS UNDER THREE FLAGS

These men are members of a Polish air squadron that first fought the Germans over their native land. When Poland was gobbled up, they joined up with the French Armee de L'Air. France went down, but these Poles fought on, transferring to the British Royal Air Force. In September the squadron was credited with shooting down 109 enemy aircraft. The squadron is led by British flight commanders and a major of the Polish air force.

FAST INTERCEPTOR TO BE SUPPLIED R.A.F.

The Lockheed P-38 Interceptor, claimed to be the world's fastest plane, is photographed from the air for the first time. It is claimed this plane can travel faster than 400 m.p.h. It will soon be delivered to the U.S. army. Lockheed will be in mass production of this type of plane by next spring for the U.S. army and the R.A.F.

QUEBEC FARMERS CAN GET TITLES TO THEIR FARMS

Last Barrier to Ending Ancient Feudal Land System in French-Canadian Province is Effaced by New Plan

By ARTHUR MERKEL

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Nov. 28 (CP). — Some 60,000 French Canadian farmers whose forefathers paid feudal dues to "seigneurs" for centuries, turned in their "rentes constituees" this month for the last time.

The historic payment marked the death knell of seigniorial tenure, a system of landholding that had its beginning in the mediaeval ages and was brought to the New World in the seventeenth century by the early settlers of "New France".

The end of the deeply-rooted land holding system in Quebec came almost a century after the beginning of a government drive to abolish it. It outlasted the French feudal system, killed by revolution, by more than 150 years.

Seigneurs received their great tracts of land in Quebec from the French king during the century and a half following the discovery of America. In return, they were obliged to perform military service and pay a relief or "quint" to the crown when the seigniory changed hands.

In Money and Labor.

The seigneurs aided French colonization by handing out portions of their estates to "habitants" or settlers. In return for their land, the habitants were obliged to pay the seigneurs "cens et rentes" a rent payable either in money or in kind, or both; to work for the seigneur on certain specified days, usually three days a year; and to pay a sum when the holding changed hands, except by direct descent.

Although misuses of the system in Europe were in part responsible for the French Revolution, the Quebec habitants, on the whole, enjoyed the benevolence and protection of the seigneurs which the system afforded.

Agitation against seigniorial tenure arose, however, after Quebec passed into British hands and it conflicted with English landholding laws. Finally the joint legislature of Upper and Lower Canada passed the Seigniorial Tenures Abolition Act in 1854.

The Act freed the habitants from all their obligations to the seigneurs except a fixed rent, known as the "rent constituee". The habitants were given a chance by the Act to rid themselves of the fixed rent by paying a lump sum, representing the capital of the rent, to the seigneurs.

To Pay Municipality.

Comparatively few took advantage of the option, however, and this year about a third of Quebec's rural population made the yearly payments, totalling $180,000, to 245 seigniories.

At its last session, the Quebec legislature decided to buy out the fixed rents en masse. A commission was set up under Roads Minister T. D. Bouchard and funds were borrowed to buy out the seigneurs at an estimated $3,200,000.

Instead of paying their rents to the seigneurs, the farmers will make annual payments to their respective municipalities. The payments, six per cent of the capital represented by the rents, will be used to amortize the commission's loan. When the loan is paid off, the habitants will hold full title to the property for the first time since their forefathers settled in the New World.

SOME ODD SIGHTS OF BRAVE LONDON

Doormen Flanked by Debris Still Polish Brass, Radios Blare in Blackouts.

By D. E. BURRITT,

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 28 (CP).—Seen or heard in London:

Hawkers doing a roaring business in the subway shelters . . . "chocolates, sweets, ices" . . . automatic vending machines emptied within a few minutes of arrival of first shelter refugees . . . the city in pitch blackness but radios still blare into the night and provide a ghost-like background for lone travellers. . . .

A tiny motorcar with its nose buried in a bomb crater still flaunted its important red-lettered notice across the rear window, "priority". . . . Chinese laundryman, an odd sight in West London, shuffling along with huge bag over his shoulder and a tin hat hiding most of his facial features . . . doorman in brilliant livery polishing hotel name plates with usual vigor though bomb debris piled waist-high on either side of door. . . .

But Going Strong.

"Ladies Only" said the sign hanging drunkenly over a broken gas main over which fourteen men were laboring. . . . "No Depression In This House" said the sign hanging in a doorway . . . the doorway was all that was left of the house. . . . "Established 1628 and STILL Open" said the sign over a damaged warehouse." . . .

A new boy brings the groceries now . . . "oh, the other bloke, 'e collected a packet on 'is bike . . . (he meant his predecessor had been killed by a bomb). . . .

Climb over the debris to read a "warning" tacked on the wreckage of a building . . . in letters so small you can't read them five feet away it says "Keep away as there is danger of injury from falling masonry."

LONDON LEAVES GAVE OFFICERS THRILLING JOB

Volunteer Group Finds Scientific Rescue Work Relief From Boredom of Inactivity

London, Nov. 28 (CP). — Bored with inactivity, a group of army and navy officers formed their own air raid rescue squad, went out during the nightly raids and brought to safety many men and women trapped in the basements or shelters. In one case, they led a party which saved three women from a pub basement.

Two of the squad were in the Royal Engineers and another was a submarine lieutenant home on leave. One was from South Africa, another in the Royal Naval Reserve and the company included a couple of Americans who came here with the Canadian Active Service Force. They "wangled" a truck and rescue tackle and got to work.

"We started this business partly because life is so dull for us people on leave here and partly for a more serious reason," an engineer officer said. "Our serious reason was that we felt the existing rescue service could usually be supplemented by other technical knowledge and equipment.

Improve Technique.

"We have been helped by Dominion soldiers. There are hundreds of Canadian, Australian and New Zealand men just aching for a chance to do something."

Their work one night enabled a street to be opened. Bombs had hit a church, burying the verger and his wife in the ruins. They worked four hours removing debris. The party saved the wife but found the verger dead.

One of the volunteer squad was shell-shocked in France and when given leave was told to avoid London because the excitement might be bad. He's wondering what the doctors would say if they knew how he had spent several nights.

REPLACE FIGURES WITH REAL CLOCK

Wartime School Board Wanted Something More Practical Than Symbolism.

Kidderminster, England, Nov. 28 (CP).—The little girl, with a top-heavy load of hair and the little boy with legs as muscular as a he-man, who stood stark naked at the new school's main wall, must go.

The architect thought the pious little figures would be symbolic of the little pupils attending the school. But the education committee decided the little girl with the wrinkled tummy looked deformed and that the boy looked like an imbecile. The committee decided to stick up a clock—and only the hands and face of a clock are bare.

CHRISTMAS TREES BOOST WAR CHEST

Proper Management of Industry Ends Threat on Forests, Bulletin Says.

Ottawa, Nov. 28 (CP).—War or no war Canada's Christmas tree trade is growing and, according to the bulletin of the Department of Mines and Resources, this increased trade offers no serious threat to Canada's forests.

"Under proper management the present cut could be produced in perpetuity on an area of less than 200 square miles," says the bulletin.

Indiscriminate and wasteful methods used by some tree dealers are condemned, but the orderly cutting and marketing of the annual crop provides the basis for a legitimate and profitable industry. Within the past few years, a scarcity of suitable trees has been experienced in some localities with the result that many farmers are now growing Christmas trees on managed plantations.

So Canada's Christmas trees will be harvested this year in thousands and a big percentage of the crop will go to the United States.

"In addition to supplying a supplementary source of revenue to Canadian farmers, this year the export of Christmas trees to the United States will help establish foreign exchange for the purchase of war supplies," the bulletin points out.

LOOKING AHEAD

Canberra, Nov. 28 (CP).—Activities of the Australian Red Cross include eleven convalescent homes for 900 service men either opened or being prepared for occupation in Australia.

Efforts to Separate U-235 From Uranium Directs Attention Anew to Labine Point

By WILLIAM A. BAKER JR.

(Central Press Canadian Writer)

Waterways, Alta, Nov. 28.—With Germany and Japan rushing research efforts to separate U-235 from uranium ore as a force to wipe out armies and populations, and laboratories in Canada and the United States also attempting to utilise this power said to be several million times that of coal, attention is being directed anew to LaBine point, a tongue of land jutting into Great Bear Lake at the Arctic Circle in the District of Mackenzie, Northwest Territories.

There are rich deposits of uranium, associated with radium in the ore pitchblende, on this arctic peninsula named for Gilbert A. LaBine, whose discovery of the ore in 1931 reduced the price of radium from $70,000 to $25,000 a gram, ended a world monopoly theretofore enjoyed by Belgium because of deposits in the Belgian Congo, and initiated the development of vast mineral resources throughout Canada's western northland.

LaBine is president of Eldorado Gold Mines, Inc., Toronto, which operates the world's greatest radium mine where its founder chopped out his first grab samples that looked like anthracite but were as heavy as copper.

Mine Now Closed.

The mine, with four working levels going down 800 feet, recently was allowed to fill up, the pipes filled with oil to permit thawing out with steam.

"We can reopen the mine at Great Bear Lake within a year at any time, preferably in summer," LaBine said, and added, "We have ample stocks at the refinery to last five years as we see world markets now."

The pitchblende deposits at Great Bear Lake are believed to constitute the largest source of radium in the world, also the highest percentage ore. Although economic deposits similar to Eldorado have not been found, radium ore extends southward from Great Bear Lake possibly 100 miles, but the character of the ore changees, there being no occurrence of silver, bismuth, cobalt or copper. At Hottah Lake, for example, where deposits were investigated recently by American interests radium is found in association with hematite or iron ore. There is radium sixteen miles east of Eldorado at Contact Lake, and there are several occurrences five or six miles north of Eldorado.

There is greater variation in radium ore, mining men believe, than probably any other ore found in Canada or the United States, 52 derivatives being directly associated with radium. Many of these are as yet unproved because the cost of isolation and recovery is too great. Seven or eight tons of chemicals for every ton of concentrates are required to isolate and break down the uranium and radium group in pitchblende. It is a complex process which requires great care, medically as well as commercially, because of the dangerous character of the product being handled. The health hazard of radium in treatment of cancer was illustrated in research by the late Madame Curie and others.

Contains Many Minerals.

Minerals which have been found with radium at Great Bear Lake include pure silver, wire silver in association with calcite, nicolite (a nickel arsenide), native bismuth, copper and lead. A thin sheet of radio-active lead put under electrical equipment will discharge power automatically.

Polonium, a derivative of radium, is now being used on ignition points of gasoline engines to create an atomic condition within the points, reduce friction and allow greater heat and rapidity in spark speed.

Worked in co-ordination with radium, several minerals have been isolated and sold, but, with the deposits almost 2,000 miles from the railhead, it is doubtful that many of them could be shipped commercially.

The price of radium, however, justified such a water haul, in addition to more than 2,000 miles by rail to the refinery that Eldorado Gold Mines, Ltd., established at Port Hope, near Toronto.

To get the ore to the railhead at Waterways, LaBine built his own fleet of boats and organized the Northern Transportation Company, designated the "Radium Line" by A. M. Berry, famous arctic flyer, who was made manager.

"With the mining development," LaBine observed quietly, "transport had to come to it. The old wood-burning type of steamboat wasn't in any particular hurry; and, besides, big steamers couldn't freight on the lakes—they often had to wait for a change in the weather."

The problem of transporting ore from Eldorado to Waterways included bucking one of the world's mightiest rivers for more than a thousand miles through almost uninhabited wilderness, crossing two lakes each larger than Lake Erie and subject to sudden storms, and portaging thousands of tons of ore eight and one-half miles around rapids in the Bear River and sixteen miles in the Athabaska River between Port Smith and Fort Fitzgerald.

Use Steel-Welded Boats.

"We put the first modern steel-welded boats on the Mackenzie," LaBine said, "the first modern diesels. And we are the pioneers in steel barges with the only one on the river—a barge that will take 100 tons of ore or other cargo on deck or 160 tons of oil in four compartments in the hull." Oil for the radium fleet and for the mine is obtained from a field at Fort Norman, 600 miles from the Arctic Ocean.

In 1937, after LaBine decided to get into the shipping business, the natives of Waterways saw an unusual trainload of freight shunted into a siding near the Athabaska River. It was the vessels Radium King and Radium Queen, built at Sorel, Que., and shipped in sections to the end of steel. The Queen was welded together and launched on the Athabaska for service as far north as the portage at Fort Fitzgerald. The King, still in sections, was loadad onto a barge at Waterways and towed by the Queen to Fort Fitzgerald, portaged by tractor-truck to Fort Smith, and there put together and christened for the first run to Aklavik, in the Mackenzie delta at the Arctic Ocean. The Queen operates regularly between Waterways and Fort Fitzgerald, and the King between Fort Smith and Aklavik. Connection is made at Fort Norman with other Radium line boats for Great Bear Lake ports via the Bear River.

"Tourists are just beginning to discover the country 'down north'," LaBine said. "We receive inquiries from as far away as Southern California. The Arctic is hot in summer and at Eldorado in winter it has rarely been colder than 32 below.

The Radium King and the Radium Queen have first class accommodations for fifteen passengers each, with a crew of twelve. These vessels are electrically welded steel tugs, the Radium King having two 240-horsepower Diesel engines and the Radium Queen, two 160's. The Radium King has a length of 96 feet and a beam of 20 feet and draws four feet, three inches of water. This vessel cost $100,000, and the Radium Line's total investment, officials say is more than a million.

The Radium fleet of thirteen boats is now "freezing in" for the winter after carrying miscellaneous freight to gold mines, trading posts, isolated prospectors and trappers along the Mackenzie-Slave-Athabaska waterway. Established primarily to haul radium ore from Eldorado to Waterways, the Radium Line has become generally identified with the progress of the territories "north of 60".

It is conceivable that experiments this winter to separate large quantities of U-235 will require the Radium fleet, heavy with pitchblende, to breast the northward-rushing Mackenzie as soon as the ice goes out next spring.

BRITISH WOMEN WORK WITH MEN IN RAID AREAS

Canadian Director Impressed With High Morale and the Dauntless Courage of Voluntary Workers in Bombed London.

By GLADYS ARNOLD

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Nov. 28 (CP)—The volunteer services, the adaptability of women to new work and extraordinary conditions in the Battle of Britain drew high tribute from Canada's Director of Material Resources, R. J. Waterous, who has returned to Ottawa with War Services Minister J. G. Gardiner, after four weeks in England. Mr. Waterous is mayor of Brantford, Ontario

"The morale is something that cannot be described—it leaves one speechless and humble," he said in an interview with The Canadian Press.

If Canadian citizens want to make a real contribution to the defence of London—mobile canteens for the A.R.P. (Air Raids Precaution) workers are urgently needed, Mr. Waterous said.

"This body of men, fighting fires and searching debris for entombed persons; these women helping them calmly with never a glance upward though planes drone overhead have shown matchless courage and heroism," Mr. Waterous continued. "But they need more mobile canteens so they may have a cup of tea and a sandwich served to them while fighting."

During his weeks in London, Mr. Waterous spent many hours each day among the civilians. He discussed the voluntary work done by women with Mrs. Vincent Massey, wife of Canada's High Commissioner.

Mrs. Massey gave him a message to carry back to Canada. "It should be borne in mind that people bombed out here have lost all their possessions and there is an urgent need of clothing. Some has already been sent from Canada prepaid to the port of embarkation—but to be really helpful it should be prepaid to London," she said. A corps of volunteer Canadian and British women is prepared to distribute these shipments.

Hostels Carry On.

Mr. Waterous visited many of the hostels carried on by Canadian women for soldiers in London. In one he saw a woman sitting under a glass roof making sandwiches. The siren sounded. In a few minutes the air raid warden on his rounds told her to take shelter. She remained where she was, saying, "I have to get these sandwiches done because the lads will be in for them soon."

Mr. Waterous told of being asked to a luncheon and finding a neat card on the house door saying a time bomb had dropped in the back garden and the luncheon would be held in a club. While reading, the door opened and an old servant apologized for his being inconvenienced. Mr. Waterous asked what he was doing there and the butler replied "somebody must stay and look after things—it's only my duty sir."

Mr. Waterous visited docks, shipyards, factories and munition works all over England, Wales and Scotland. He saw many women turning out shells. Talking to one young girl who until three months before had never worked in a factory and knew nothing of the delicate instruments she now used expertly, Mr. Waterous asked her how she liked her work. "Fine," she replied, "I feel I'm doing a bit to help." She told him she cycled eight miles to work in the morning and back home at night.

Spirit Unbroken.

Mr. Waterous saw a shop with all the windows boarded up, displaying a sign saying "We're shuttered, not shattered." Another had all windows blown out and a sign went up "Open as usual." The next night another bomb took another big chunk out of the building. Another sign went up: "More open than usual."

Visits to the "tubes" or underground railway stations to see the million sleepers there left an unforgettable impression, said Mr. Waterous.

"All—men, women and children—had expressions of such fearless serenity—and determination— there was something in their faces I couldn't name—but it somehow was unlike anything I'd ever seen before."

Invariably where there were families, the father lay with his arm around his wife, the wife with her arm around the youngest child and then the other children—the whole setting of confidence and protective care was one of the most moving things he had seen, Mr. Waterous said.

Good Advice for Constipation!

A doctor will tell you that the best thing to do in case of sickness is to find the cause. If you are constipated, don't be satisfied with temporary remedies. Find the cause of the ailment!

It would be easy if your diet, like that of most people, is unbalanced — no doubt it lacks "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean quantity, but the kind of food that does not completely assimilate and leaves a soft "mass" in the bowels that helps the bowel to move.

If that is what is lacking, the solution is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran, crispy and tasteful, for breakfast. It helps form the "bulk" and contains Vitamin B1, the natural intestinal tonic.

Eat some All-Bran every day, drink lots of water and become "regular"! Made in London, Canada, by Kellogg. At all grocers.

POLAND LIVES IN THE SOULS OF HER WOMEN

Soldier's Wife Organizes Aid for Refugees from Her Home in Ottawa, Recalls Capital's Fall.

By GLADYS GLAD

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 28 (CP).—One of the women defenders of Warsaw, Mme. Sophie Arciszewska, now lives in a little street in Ottawa, organizing Polish women in Canada to aid refugees in England.

In her simply-furnished living room are two small oil paintings on wood — perhaps the work of some primitive artist of the thirteenth century. Above the fireplace are three fragments of Greek sculpture, a tiny head of Minerva, a fine base-relief impressed on a bit of stone more than 2,000 years old, a bit of a perfectly sculptured torso.

These are the bits of beauty this Polish woman artist, interior decorator and patroness of the arts in her beloved Warsaw in its golden days, carried with her out of Europe.

She is in Canada with her husband, Col. Arciszewski, who carried a call to arms to all Polish citizens in North America. They escaped from Poland by going through Hungary, Yugoslavia, Italy to France and from France went with Polish troops to England during the evacuation.

Mme. Arciszewska explained that in Polish the woman's name ends in "ska", the man's in "ski". A slim little woman, her dark hair parted smoothly in the middle and knotted at the back, she embodies that intense faith in the future of her country which drew praise from Agriculture Minister Gardiner. Just returned from the United Kingdom Mr. Gardiner told The Canadian Press: "Canadian soldiers have told me their admiration for the Polish aviators knows no bounds. Nothing stops them—they have such marvellous confidence in the future and victory."

Recalls the Siege.

Mme. Arciszewska left Warsaw in April of this year. She knew and experienced all the horrors of Nazi siege. "Four times we evacuated the same patients from burning hospitals," she said. "We would just move them to another hospital when incendiary bombs would be dropped on the new one."

After the first few days of siege Warsaw's anti-aircraft and fighter plane defence had been taken care of by the enemy. There was no defence against Nazi bombing. "We did not give up until we had been days without electricity and gas and no water or food," she said.

Mme. Arciszewska told how soldiers were offered poisoned cigarettes and candies by German women disguised as Poles. She read a notation in a small notebook, written Sept. 20, 1939:

"A continuous roar of exploding bombs deafens morning prayers. I said to them (hospital patients) 'Good morning, boys, I have come for inspection. Did you sleep well?'

"'Sister, I dreamed about Poland—Poland in the month of May—in flower blossoms—all wrapped in delicate scent', said one, his eyes sparking with temperature.

"I went down. There was suddenly an awful noise, a terrible blow shook the whole building and broke all windows. I ran upstairs. A bombshell had hit the window of the second floor. On the staircase I found five nurses carrying out five killed soldiers. Among them I recognized the one who last night dreamed about Poland in the month of May."

Mme. Arciszewska, her face strained and tight, described later how German soldiers made people dig up the graves in all the boulevards along the sterets where people had been hurriedly buried.

"They thought they were hidden munitions and arms," she said. "They were only the broken bodies of our children. I see the little Scouts yet — mown down because they wore a uniform which is international and stands for Christian principles."

Mme. Arciszewska's organization is known as the Committee for Polish Refugees. In addition to organizing Polish women in Canada to aid refugees in England, its aim is to build up a spiritual bond between Poles and British allies.

Mme. Marie Frankowska, now in Montreal, has just been made treasurer. She is the wife of the Polish naval hero who defended Gdynia, the Polish port, for many days after the war ceased. He died recently in a German concentration camp, Mme. Arciszewska said.

WIDER KNOWLEDGE WORLD'S CULTURE FOR SERVICE MEN

Legion Co-operating With Authorities — Education Officers for Canadian Fighting Units Abroad

Ottawa, Nov. 28 (CP).—An extended campaign of education among the young men in Canada's armed forces has been mapped out for the second winter of war.

In co-operation with military, naval and air force authorities the Canadian Legion War Services is out to obtain for the men in the forces a wider knowledge of the world, its culture, its sciences.

It is not expected that when peace returns, the ex-servicemen of the present war will be walking encyclopedias but so far as service training and operations permit an effort will be made to improve their general educational standard.

The latest move in this direction is a decision to appoint educational officers in each battalion or equivalent formation in the 1st and 2nd Divisions overseas.

Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, commander of the British Canadian Corps overseas, has decided to make these appointments in order that in each unit an officer will devote his time to organizing and promoting study among the men. Those educational officers will be army officers paid by the government and responsible to the officers commanding the unit in which they serve.

They will co-operate directly also with Canadian Legion war services which has mapped out courses of instruction in a wide variety of subjects and which provides the instructors. The overseas educational establishment of Canadian Legion War Services has recently been strengthened by the despatch overseas of Dr. A. E. Chatwin, M.C., of Saskatoon, who is on loan from the Saskatchewan Department of Education.

Overseas Director.

Dr. Chatwin had just arrived in London to take his post as overseas director of educational services when his hotel was bombed. He escaped without injury. Four civilian educational advisers will be appointed to assist him, according to an announcement from Legion headquarters here.

While no decision has yet been announced it is expected the plan of appointing army educational officers in each overseas unit will be extended to the units of the active army in Canada.

The Legion authorities have also concluded agreements with the Royal Canadian Navy and the Royal Canadian Air Force concerning educational work in those services. An educational adviser for the navy will be stationed at the principal east coast naval establishment and special courses for naval personnel will be organized there.

In the Royal Canadian Air Force the plans include refresher courses in academic studies for men who have passed their junior matriculation but have become somewhat rusty. The idea is to get these recruits back to something like school-leaving proficiency in the period between their enlistment and their posting to training schools, that is while they are in the manning depots.

Aims of Program.

The first aim of the educational program is to make the men better sailors, soldiers and airmen, on the principle that the man with an educated mind can better stand the strain of modern war than the uneducated man.

Another object is to prevent boredom in the long winter nights, particularly among men serving overseas in the army who have spent long months in training without experiencing the thrill of combat.

The third main objective is to prepare men for civilian life at the end of hostilities. Many men in the services have never held peacetime jobs. Some have worked at civilian pursuits for short periods.

The authorities believe that if they can be given a measure of training in some civilian calling or given a better educational background the problem of rehabilitation after the war will be eased.

TELLS OF GREAT BENEFITS FROM USING SYNTONA MEDICINE

Say: "Only Those Who Have Suffered as I Did and Have Regained a Normal Degree of Good Health Can Realize What it Will Really Do." Read Her Statement.

"Words cannot describe the way I suffered with rheumatic pains in my limbs and joints," said Miss G. L. Rogers, London, in a recent statement.

"My ankles would puff and swell and the pains in my back and limbs caused me to lose many a night's sleep. My circulation was so poor that my hands would turn white in cold weather. I was seldom without a headache. I had become badly run-down and had lost 12 pounds. My appetite was poor and what little I did eat would sour in my stomach, causing acidity, heartburn and biliousness. Frequently I had dizzy spells, spots before my eyes, my tongue was coated and my complexion was poor.

"I feel deeply grateful to a neighbor who recommended Syntona to me, for this medicine has proved a real blessing. After taking nine bottles my rheumatic condition has been cleared up and I feel healthier than I did for years. My weight is back to normal for my height and I feel so much better in every way. Only those who have suffered as I did and have regained their vitality and good health can realize what a fine medicine Syntona is."

MISS G. L. ROGERS

Syntona is made only from the pure juices of selected herbs, roots and leaves. It produces these results by cleansing the system of excess acids and poisonous waste matter and by aiding an assimilation of the food for strength and energy.

Syntona is now being introduced in Belleville at Dolan The Druggist. Make up your mind, begin taking it today. See how much better you, too, can be feeling in just a short time.

PREFERS BOMBING TO GERMAN BOAST

Man Who Escaped From Nazi - Occupied Jersey Tells His Experiences

London, Nov. 28 (CP). — George Turner is one fellow who would rather stay in bomb-blasted London than return home. He escaped here from German-occupied Jersey in the Channel Islands.

Turner, 58-year-old bachelor, who made his living growing tomatoes and potatoes, decided to remain when the Germans came but got so "fed up" with the boasting and appropriation of private property that he escaped with seven other men and a girl in an Irish ship.

"About 300 Germans were the first to arrive," he told a reporter. "I went on working until two Germans came and wanted to know whether my house was my property. They went in, opened drawers and took £63 ($279) saying I would get a receipt and be given marks to that value. When I went to an office in the town I got nothing.

"The Germans were quite nice and courteous and did not lay a finger on me but the next morning three more arrived, picked all my fruit and tomatoes and took them away. I asked them about the money and they said 'That will be all right' I never received anything.

"They took all the flour in the island and commandeered the hotels, billeted themselves there and emptied the cellars."

Turner said the invaders took food from boarding houses and warehouses, removed all the women's lingeries from the dry goods stores and helped themselves to jewelry. They told residents the islands would belong to Germany forever and Ribbentrop "would be the boss for Germany in England".

"The islanders are frightened," he added, "because they do not know what is going on as they are not allowed to receive news or possess a radio. If the Germans see anyone hanging about they put them to work in the fields. The banks are closed and there are no cinemas."

Burr's

Burr's, Nov. 27.—Mrs. Clare Campbell, Bowerman's, teacher, and Miss Norma Harris, Burr's, teacher, are busy practising their pupils for the Christmas entertainment to be presented at the Orange Hall in Allisonville soon. Their efforts are much appreciated as the proceeds from the Christmas concerts help considerably in carrying on the work of the Sunday school.

On Nov. 10 the last Sunday school service for the year was held. The members look forward to its reopening in the spring when more favorable weather will make it more convenient to carry on this important church work.

Mr. and Mrs. Ewart Harns were pleasantly entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Harns, Belleville, on Wednesday.

Mrs. Lorne Burr called on Mrs. James Duncan Friday afternoon.

Mr. Wade Pickering was through this district Friday and Saturday buying cattle.

Mr. Ross Burr and Mrs. J. E. Moran were in Picton Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Valleau, Melville, were Thursday evening callers at Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Burr's.

Mr. Floyd Huffman in company with Mr. Campbell, assistant agricultural representative, Picton, motored to Orillia on Wednesday to a judging competition.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. McHenry were Sunday afternoon callers at Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hubbs', Mountain View.

Mr. Geo. Empey and Mr. Ross were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burkitt on Friday.

Several young people from this locality were at the dance at Demorestville hall on Wednesday evening that was sponsored by the Junior Farmers' Club. A large crowd was present, an enjoyable evening was spent and a fine sum realized for Red Cross purposes. These young people are to be congratulated on a successful evening.

Britain Pays For Internees

Australians Reassured They are Not Taxed for Their Hospitality.

Melbourne, Nov. 28 (CP).—Cost of transport and maintenance of enemy aliens sent from Britain to Australia for internment is being borne by Britain. They will be repatriated to the country of their origin after the war. This was stated by the Minister of the Army in reply to rumors which, he said, had been circulated alleging that the cost was being defrayed by the Australian government, and internees might compete with labor.

"Both these suggestions are utterly false," Senator McBride said. "These internees have been brought to Australia at the request of the British government because of the difficulties which might arise in the event of an invasion of Great Britain."

Hot Water Car Heaters, Defrosters, Foot Warmers

Enjoy a warm comfortable car, plus clear vision, from October to May. All new 1941 models . . . many with powerful built-in defrosters that instantly remove sleet, snow or frost under the most severe weather conditions. Seven different models on display . . . all operating under actual working conditions. Save safely . . . buy direct from Canada's largest automotive house.

SENIOR DELUXE $13.95

This model embodies every feature that is of practical value in a hot-water heater. Extra large capacity, ruggedly built, yet having very smart lines. Normally the heat is distributed three ways . . to heat the car—to keep the feet warm—to defrost the windshield. Due, however, to its system of controls the operator may, at will, direct all or any part of the heat where desired. A heater that actually delivers 42% more heat units under test . . . an oversize blower system that will defrost and de-ice your windshield under all conditions. Finished in pleasing French grey, trimmed with sparkling chrome. The heater sensation of 1941. $13.95

The Heatmaster, $7.75

Outstanding value in better class heater construction. Furnished with chrome-plated, fully adjustable deflector doors with rubber insulation, making them rattle-proof, die-cast case, finished in light gunmetal with gleaming chrome trim. Cellular type all-brass core—full-size copper tanks. Quiet, powerful motor with variable speed control switch, dash mounting .. $7.75

SUPER - HEATER—$9.45

A heater unique in design and construction. It's a four-way model . . . heater, defroster, foot-warmer and air conditioner. Adjustable triple deflectors, chrome plated. Combined fan and blower provides 180 cubic feet of air per minute for greater heat output. Defroster—10 cubic feet per minute of heated air under pressure directed to the windshield for safe Winter driving $9.45

TIME OFF IN WAR TO TALK OF HATS

Women of England Advised on Headgear for Fashion and Utility

Manchester, Nov. 28 (CP).—Despite bombings and the distress of the blitzkrieg England's women are evidently losing neither their heads nor their hats, judging by the comment of a writer on "The War Hat—Fashion and Utility" in The Guardian.

"All hats are not, even now, war hats," this authority points out. "Tin hats will no doubt soon achieve priority, but it is noticeable among the elect who are entitled to battle dress that the pleasure of his form of headgear palls easily.

Hats fall into two categories—the strictly utilitarian and those in which fashion predominates. The fashion hat is the sequel of fashion hair, which at the moment is high in front and terminates in a knob or 'catogan' at the back."

Midway between pure fashion and pure utility comes the rather mannish felt, this observer writes.

"This may turn down or turn up anywhere, but points to remember are that the crown should err on the spiky side and avoid anything in the shape of a melon. These mannish felts are worn with all sorts of coats, and they are appearing in many colors, of which the various plums are perhaps the most popular. People like wearing a black dress and then a plum-colored coat and hat."

Curls and Topknots.

Talking of utilitarian hats the writer discusses the turban "ready made or fashioned cleverly out of the scarf."

"Turbans of any kind look best with a topknot of hair. A curl or two on the forehead makes a focus for the knot of the scarf which is just behind it. The ears should be slightly covered and the scarf pulled up with the edge round the head the tighter of the two.

"Turbans are a good antidote to curls. They not only keep this phenomenon—so strange in time of war—in thorough order but they allow it gradually to be transformed into something more shapely and less destructible.

"Classic hats are, of course, the tricorne, which is seen here and there in black velvet and is much liked by the older woman."

TALKS TO DUKE UP IN IRELAND

Prairie Soldier Met King's Brother in Ulster Parliament House

Belfast, Nov. 28 (CP).—Pte. Isaac Borgford of the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps was visiting the Ulster Parliament Buildings when the Duke of Kent arrived with the Duke of Abercorn and Lord Craigavon.

The Duke of Abercorn and Lord Craigavon chatted with Borgford, from Leslie, Sask., and then the Duke of Abercorn presented him to the Duke of Kent, who shook hands cordially.

"Where do you come from?" the Duke of Kent asked. "Saskatchewan, sir," Borgford replied. And the Duke, saying farewell, wished him the best of luck.

Borgford afterwards explained he was on leave and decided to visit Belfast. He was in an omnibus when a lady told him he should see the Parliament Houses. "It was lucky I did," he added.

Mines are being laid by the Royal Australian Navy at strategic points about the coastline.

GIVEN PARCHMENTS FOR HEROIC DEEDS

Several Westerners Cited by Royal Canadian Humane Association

Hamilton, Nov. 28 (CP). — Eight persons from Western Canada were cited for heroic action in the awards of parchment certificates announced here today by the Royal Canadian Humane Association. They are:

Neil Graden and William Szerban, Edmonton, for rescue of John Kondrosky from drowning in the North Saskatchewan River, Edmonton, Feb. 2, 1939.

Arthur Parker, Saskatoon, for the rescue of Dorothy Daniels in the Saskatchewan River, Saskatoon, March 7, 1940.

Sheila Chambers and Alfred Savage, Victoria, for assistance in rescue of Frederick MacPherson in Thetis Lake, B.C., Aug. 13, 1939.

John Houston, Nakusp, B.C., for the rescue of Louis Gensick from death by serious wounds, Nakusp Hot Springs, B.C., April 27, 1940.

A. R. Clement and Gordon Lindsay Mason, Courtenay, B.C., for assistance in the rescue of A. E. Jeffrey from drowning at Comox Bay, B.C., July 1, 1940.

N. Z. FARMHOUSES STRONG ON BATH

But Cowsheds Sometimes Have Running Water When Dwellings Have Not

Auckland, N.Z., Nov. 28 (CP).—Canadian farmers can compare their standard of living with that in New Zealand by reference to a survey recently completed in this southern dominion.

Of 445 farm dwellings, representative of various areas, 78 per cent. were excellent, very good or sound; 15 per cent. were defective, five per cent. were very defective and less than two per cent. dilapidated.

Furniture was excellent, very good or good in 82 per cent. of the cases examined, and in the remaining 18 per cent. was either meagre or bare. The latter description was applied to houses with an air of poverty or neglect, wallpaper hanging in strips, floors dirty or bare, furniture rickety, or boxes used as tables or as chairs.

It was found not unusual for water to be adequately supplied to the cow-shed but not to the dwelling. However, 85 per cent. of the houses had a bath attached to a drainage system of some kind, while 46 per cent. also had a sink, washbasin and washtubs. About seven per cent. had none of these facilities and seven per cent. had no drainage system.

The survey claims to have shown an unbalanced system of possession. For instance, 78 per cent. of dairy farmers had a motor car, but only 16 per cent. a septic tank; 82 per cent. had a radio, and 63 per cent. a telephone, but only 59 per cent. had a wash wringer.

Perfect Harmony Prevails As City Fathers, Candidates Speak Before Debating Club

Annual Bunfeed at Wharf Street Club Not as Fiery as in Years Past

REFRESHMENTS SERVED

Maybe Belleville is going sissy. Perhaps the ancient and honorable pastime of telling a speaker what one thinks of him and his policies from the safety of the back-row seats is becoming a lost art in this fair city. Or perhaps the lads opine there is enough fighting going on on the other side of the Atlantic without indulging in any amateur verbal brawls over here. Maybe it's the war, the weather or the wife. Who knows?

It wasn't the fault of President Eddie George and his gallant lads of the Wharf Street Debating Club. They furnished all the atmosphere, the setting and the refreshments. The stage was all set, when the contestants arrived, but the show was disappointing to any of the crowd who came expecting verbal fisticuffs, oratorical uppercuts and all the color and battle embellishments that formerly marked the annual bun-feed as one of the outstanding functions of the electoral season.

Plenty of Harmony

It was easy to believe what the majority of the city papas said about this year's council being a harmonious one. There was more harmony than in a symphony orchestra. The boys hobnobbed together like a Tuesday afternoon knitting class. They behaved like perfect gentlemen and except for an occasional good-natured remark from the gallery, that was more complimentary than critical, listened with all the attention of an erring son to a stern parent. They applauded each other in true Alphonse and Gaston manner, and if their policies differed perhaps, then everyone felt happy about the whole thing.

To give them full credit they did not attempt to bore each other or the audience with long-winded speeches. They told a few stories and narrowed their platforms down to a few slivers of oratory before giving way to a fellow-alderman, utilities commissioner or a new "seeker-for-office."

Various Chairmen Praised

It was a startling exemplification of what the model council should do when competing in the municipal jousts for office. The lads modestly took no credit for their work in the council chamber last year, but slapped their chairman verbally on the back, and told each other what a fine bunch of fellows the remaining members of council were. It was harmony of the high-plane, and augured well for the incoming council if not for the future enjoyment of the bun-feed attendants who love the good old-fashioned knock 'em down and drag-'em-out style of combat.

Even the ex-Aldermen and others who were seeking office for the first time were imbued with the spirit of gallantry that characterized the present office-holders. They too, modestly stated their virtues and qualifications, praised the present council for the past year's work and probably secretly hoped that a few changes would take place in spite of the verbal roses they showered upon the beaming gentlemen of the city council.

It was a perfect "Peace on Earth, Goodwill toward Man" gathering, one which fairly reeked with good fellowship, with no holier-than-thou complexes. In fact, it smacked more of the old-fashioned Sunday School picnic, than of a dress-rehearsal for municipal honors. The lads were in fine fettle, rare good-nature and no such a thing as the criticism of a worthy opponent or fellow councillor was going to send dark clouds of disagreement into the clear blue sky of mutual admiration and understanding. No sirree not if they could help it.

Good-Natured Badinage

Good-natured badinage, it is true, floated through the blue haze of tobacco smoke at times. But no one's feelings were hurt. Even the sally from a back-bench, "Never mind the country, what are you going to do when you get in?" that greeted Ex-Alderman Charles Hyde, was greeted with a roar of laughter.

Alderman Ormonde Butler's remark that probably some of the speakers were full of their own subject, spoken after a few orators had mentioned the gas works, drew another roar of mirth. Tempers were not going to flare, no matter what happened. That was plainly apparent. In fact, as one listener remarked afterwards, "I would not have been surprised to see them all resign in favor of each other, and then argue as to who would not take the seats."

Seriously, it was a good party, and the boys paraded cheerfully if not gracefully to Secretary "Bus" Dunlap's desk and without a grimace, forked over one dollar for their annual membership dues. Then someone suggested that a collection be taken for the Foster Ward Cigarette Fund for the boys overseas, and aldermanic alms and commissioner quarters tinkled merrily into a brace of hats.

And a few minutes after eleven after the gentle whispers and genial smiles had subsided slightly the host club regaled the prospective city fathers with succulent hot dogs garnished aplenty with mustard, and old cheese. This was chased immediately by a variety of soft drinks. Came more handshaking and congratulatory remarks and with smiles and hail-fellow-well-met attitudes, the potential caretakers of the destinies of the City of Belleville merged into the darkness and went home.

Platforms on Friday Night

A feature of the meeting was an address by David Harrison, ninety-year-old youngster of the club, who advocated the spending of more money for the troops and people in England than in city and municipal improvements. W. C. Mikel gave a vivid description of a "Quinte City" which he visioned would become a metropolis of hundreds of thousands and embrace the entire Bay of Quinte district.

The platforms of the various contestants for municipal honors will be published on Saturday following the general public meeting to be held in the City Hall auditorium on Friday evening.

Among those who delivered brief addresses were: Aldermen A. J. Allin, H. J. Clarke, E. O. Butler, Harold Armstrong, W. J. Harvey, R. J. Pringle, "Derby" Jeffery, Harry Rollins, Ex-Alderman C. R. Clapp, Ex-Ald. Thomas Marshall, Messrs. Frank Follwell, George Forhan, Arthur Wesley, Don Roe, Harry Knott, Leonard Reid, Commissioner Cliff. Baragar, Ex-Mayor George A. Reid, Messrs. George Wishart, Ray Zufelt, W. J. Harrison, Ex-Ald. Charles L. Hyde and His Worship Mayor Glencoe E. Thompson.

In a toast to Mr. David Harrison, given by W. C. Mikel prior to the National Anthem, the latter stated: "Mr. Harrison, may you be in heaven seven years before the devil knows you are dead."

A number of humorous telegrams purporting to have come from internationally known figures were read by President Eddie George.

NEW ICE CREAM FOR DIABETICS

Urbana, Ill., Nov. 28 (CP).—A new ice cream for diabetics has been produced at the University of Illinois containing about 40 per cent as much sugar as the standard product.

Scientists at the institution substituted a mixture principally of milk proteins for the glycerine used previously in efforts to freeze a low-sugar ice cream. These proteins, reported Professors W. J. Corbett and P. H. Tracy, came from fresh skimmed milk and reduced the glycerine to 4 per cent. Flavors produced satisfactorily were pineapple, pistachio, lemon, lime, orange, mint, apricot, vanilla and chocolate.

One out of each 260 persons in the United States is diabetic, the scientists estimated, and hence might receive benefit from such a product.

REPORT ON DEATH OF SOLDIER STUDIED

Ottawa, Nov. 28—(CP)—A report on the death of Murray Cohen from pneumonia after being brought to a military hospital in Toronto from the Long Branch compulsory military training camp "is receiving consideration from the various authorities concerned," it was said today at the National Defence Department.

A spokesman said it might be some time before action, if any, was taken because the report must go through the hands of several divisions of the department including the medical section.

LAY AWAY A GIFT A DAY

CAN YOU TELL SAILOR'S RANK BY HIS COAT?

Even a Button or Two Makes a Distinction for Officers and Men of the Royal Canadian Navy

By FRANK FLAHERTY

Ottawa, Nov. 28 (CP).—Canadians are slowly becoming navy-conscious as the nation's fighting fleet expands in numbers of ships and men to meet the needs of war and are learning something of the uniforms and insignia of the service.

Three types of uniforms are worn in the navy respectively by commissioned officers, petty officers and ratings having special trade qualifications and by seamen. Ratings are all naval personnel who are not commissioned officers .

The commissioned officers wear a suit of dark blue with double breasted coat, brass buttons and white collar and black tie. Their rank is indicated by gold bands on the sleeve near the cuff.

If the band is plain and straight it indicates the officer is a permanent navy man. A wavy band indicates the wearer is a member of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve who does full-time naval duty in war but pursues some civilian activity in peacetime. A criss-cross band denotes a member of the Royal Canadian Naval Reserve, who works in the merchant marine in peacetime.

Matter of Buttons.

Petty officers and certain other ratings with specialist qualifications wear a uniform somewhat similar to commissioned officers except that their coat has three buttons instead of four.

Their rank and trade qualification is indicated by badges on the cap above the peak ,on the sleeve or on the collar. Signalmen, telegraphists, motor mechanics, enginemen, artificers, shipwrihts, writers, victualling assistants, cooks and sick berth hands all rate thi uniform.

Finally there is the familiar outfit of wide trousers, jumpers and round cap, worn by all naval personnel, the seamen. Wearers of this outfit are buglers, ordinary seamen, able seamen and leading seamen. The next step up from a leading seaman is a petty officer and the next after that, chief petty officer.

All seamen wearing this uniform wear hat bands stamped with the name of the ship to which they are attached, if they were members of the ship's complement before war started. Since the war hatbands carry only the initials H.M.C.S. and when the old name-bearing hatbands wear out they will be replaced by those not giving the name of the ship.

In summer the navy changes from blues to whites if the climate warrants it. The commissioned officer's uniform has a coat with a high tight-fitting collar and on it the marks of rank are worn on the shoulder strap instead of on the sleeve as in the case of the standard blue uniform.

During six months of the year, whether in whites or blue, the officer wears a white top to his cap. The dates for wearing it vary in the northern and southern hemispheres. At the same period ratings change from blue to white caps.

An officer's winter greatcoat carries his rank on the shoulder as on his summer whites, instead of on the sleeve, as on the service dress.

AUSSIE SOLDIER IS ATHLETE

In Colorado it's against the law to mark a ballot in pencil. In neighboring Kansas the law says the voter must use one.

King Zog Gives Greece Support To Even Matters With Italy

King Zog

The former royal palace at Tirana

Crack regiment of King Zog's former army

Loyal mountaineers of Albania

By NELO GRIZARI

(Central Press Canadian Correspondent)

London, Nov. 28.—King Zog's long arm is reaching from London to even up the score with Benito Mussolini's Fascist legions now clashing with the Greek forces in Albania.

The former Albanian ruler is once again using long-distance tactics to win. While King Zog and his American-descended Queen Geraldine, with their son, Prince Skander, are dodging Nazi bombs in London's air raid shelters, his former officers are aiding the Greek armies against the very Roman legions that drove the royal family out of Albania "last year.

"Cheer up. I will return triumphantly when the right hour strikes." King Zog assures his people as he left behind the craggy gorges in Koritza's treacherous mountains where the war is raging.

The right hour must have struck for King Zog. Win or lose, he has made his choice. He has cast his lot with neighbor Greece against invader Italy. Now he has openly joined the "47,000,000 Churchills" against the axis.

Albanians Fight With Greeks.

Among the officers and men King Zog left behind in Greece a year ago last summer are those who may be in the thick of the battle between the Greeks and Italians. One of them is none other than Zog's own army chief, General Xhemal Araniti who saw the royal family safely into Greece nineteen months ago, when Italy invaded Albania.

Italian military plans to attack Greece and Yugoslavia are known in detail by General Araniti, for he was closely connected with General Pariani, now Italian chief of staff Pariani was military instructor of the Albanian officers until shortly before the Fascist conquest of Ethiopia.

Zog's other trusted lieutenant is Musa Juka, minister of the interior and head of the crack Albanian mountain constabulary which was carefully built into an efficient police force by a famous Briton, Maj.-Gen. Sir Jocelyn Percy, who left Albania in 1938 under strong Italian pressure—"lest he leave behind too much British influence". Juka used to spend his summers in the mountains of Devoll, where the Greeks are now meeting with successes, and knows every strategic inch of the area.

With Gen. Araniti and Juka is also the former ruler's right hand man, Kocho Kotta, who was prime minister and majority leader in parliament at the time of the invasion. Kotta is a native of Korcha (Koritza), where he has a large following among the hundreds of men whom he had appointed to political offices. Kotta is a friend of Greece, having fought for the Greek cause once before during the Balkan war. He was a medical student at the University of Athens.

Mati Important.

But above all, King Zog's beloved adviser and former superintendent of the Zog estates is certain to be in close touch with the other three. He is Abdurrahman Salih Mati, the 75-year-old man who accompanied the three Zog sisters when they visited the United States in 1939. He was last reported in Istanbul, Turkey, where he fled with the royal family. He knows every important man in Albania by his first name.

These "Four Horsemen" of the Zog regime have won for their ruler once before. Mati and the three others fought shoulder to shoulder with Zog on their triumphant return in 1924, when they defeated the forces of the American educated Bishop Fan Noli, who had seized power six months before. With Yugoslav aid, they attacked the Bishop's forces in the very area where fighting is now in progress.

"The Four Horsemen" are expert at using the ancient method in touch with their loyal followers of caravan correspondence to get inside Albania. This means that the tradesmen who do business on pack mules between Albania and other Balkan countries carry their messages back and forth. People on the borders and exiles, as well as men and women coming to the United States during the last ten months, report by word of mouth on actual conditions in the country.

Nephews With Mati.

Belief prevails that with the four Zog lieutenants are also two of his nephews, Prince Husen and Prince Salih, both of whom were very popular in Koritza. They attended the famous French Lycee as students They fought on for one month in the highland gorges after their uncle had fled the country. Then they escaped into Yugoslavia. They were last reported in Turkey with Mati.

King Zog himself might join the others. He got the green light in the British House of Commons recently, when an M.P. told the members that he still was the rightful monarch of his country.

Great Britain supported Zog in 1924, when he defeated the forces of Bishop Noli. When the European War began, Zog was made a major in the French army. When France capitulated, he and his family barely escaped to London, where they have been ever since.

NOBODY LOVES MAIL CENSORS ON WAR'S JOB

Work is Carried On in 21 Bureaux in Canada and Letters for 50 Countries Are Examined

By GLADYS ARNOLD

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 28 (CP).—Scissors and pitiless cutting have replaced the outmoded "blotting out" in twenty-one censor bureaux throughout Canada. The largest of these are in Ottawa and Vancouver and are modelled along lines of the highly organised wartime censorship in England.

"It may make the letters incoherent, but it's efficacious," said F. E. Jolliffe, chief postal censor here. "In the British laboratories it has been learned that no blotting out methods are foolproof."

The days of code and secret writings are over, he added. Every method and type of ink or writing fluid is known. The X-ray has put a crimp in some efforts while there are many other methods of discovery known to the censors.

About 250,000 letters go through the central Ottawa bureau every month. They are in every language. The Ottawa bureau catches the flow eastward towards the Atlantic. A battery of linguists is on the job sorting and reading all day long; baskets on the desks are marked for more than fifty different countries.

Letters are read much more for indiscretions and disclosure of information through carelessness or poor judgment than for deliberate attempts to send information outside the country.

Most indiscretions are involuntary, officials say. They are usually written in letters to relatives and mention, without thinking of the importance or the gravity of the question, ship sailings, movements of troops, location of factories or other factual details which might be of use to the enemy. "They write so naively that it is evident they have no appreciation of the seriousness of their carelessness," said the censorship director.

Many letters contain bits written purposely for the censors who come in for a lot of scoring and not a few insults. "I was going to tell you, but I guess I'd better not now because of these nosey censors" is the general refrain.

Others say "I had intended putting in $2 so you could buy yourself something, but I don't trust those censors."

Any enclosures of money, however, are always returned to the senders by the censors. On the other hand sometimes people say they are enclosing money and do not. Then the examiner puts in the letter a written note to that effect. This examination is made in accordance with the foreign exchange control regulations.

Two kinds of gummed labels are placed on the letters examined. On ordinary letters the label used to reclose the letter says "Opened By Examiner" and his number is given. On letters that contain money the label says that it has been opened under exchange regulations.

A knowledge of psychology is useful in the censor's bureau. "Anybody doing anything wrong rarely complains if his letter has been opened or hasn't reached its destination," Mr. Jolliffe explained.

On the whole Canadians accept censorship as a necessary evil created by the war. Complaints are relatively few.

BUILDS BRITAIN TO ITS VICTORY NEW PEER'S JOB

Lord Reith Has Wide Powers on Construction for Triumph and Reconstruction for Peace

By HAROLD FAIR
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 28 (CP). —Lanky, bushy-browed Lord Reith (Sir John) —once plain John Reith the successful Scottish engineer, has been charged with the mighty task of fashioning the greater Britain in the brave new world to follow the war but in the meantime his job, as Minister of Works and Buildings, is literally to "build for victory". He is Britain's wartime building dictator.

With his raise to the peerage comes a wider interpretation of his new duties. While he acts as a construction arbiter, he is to be the "planner in chief" of the new Britain. He will consult with government departments and any other necessary authorities, report to the cabinet on plans to abolish slums and provide for rehousing on a tremendous scale in London and other thickly-populated centres.

Meantime, except for certain highly-specialized service jobs—such as airports and fortification — his ministry will be responsible for erection of all new civil works and buildings required by another government department. It will license private building and determine what structures destroyed by air shall be rebuilt first.

For War Production.

The ministry may arrange, by agreement with service departments or the minister of aircraft production, to erect on their behalf new works and buildings not of a highly-specialized character, such as stores depots, for erection of new private factories under the minister of supply or extension of existing private factories required for war production.

The government's production council will lay down the general order of priority of building. Lord Reith will be a member of that council and responsible for the committee which says which buildings must come first. He will determine how the council's directions in this respect would be applied but if his decision is opposed an appeal may be taken to the council.

Another of his jobs will be to investigate such questions as adoption of substitutes for scarce building materials or modify designs and specifications to speed up building. He is to make use of all research facilities and can call on departments retaining responsibility for buildings to prove that they are taking full advantage of the latest research developments.

As Sir John Reith, his lordship was at one time general manager of the British Broadcasting Corporation and later Minister of Information. His newly-created post absorbs the Office of Works, longtime famous for being the government's builder—comparable to Canada's department of public works.

THE MAKING OF A NAZI

By PETER FORDHAM

Germany's armed strength represents not only total material mobilization, but also the mobilization of the mind of a whole generation.

Many of the youths who are now fighting in the German army, air force, and navy were only eleven or twelve when Hitler came into power; and it is upon the formation of their minds during the most impressionable time of life, that the ingenuity and organizing ability of the Nazi leaders have been concentrated.

Dr. Robert Ley, Leader of the German Labour Front, says:

> "We begin with the child when he is three years old. As soon as he begins to think, he gets a little flag put in his hand; then follows the school, the Hitler Youth, the S.A. and military training. We don't let him go; and, when adolescence is past, then comes the Arbeitsfront which takes him again and does not let him go till he dies, whether he likes it or not."

The Attack On The Family.

From infancy to manhood the German boy is now as far as possible removed from his parents' influence. It is the first object of Nazi education to break the family ties of love and loyalty.

One of Dr. Goebbels' propaganda films shows as its hero a small German boy who denounces his father and mother to their death at the hands of the Gestapo, the dreaded Secret Police.

Thus the unity of the family, the oldest and most cherished foundation of society alike in Asia and Europe is attacked and destroyed.

Recently a judge in Schleswig-Holstein took away from the care of their parents children who had not been allowed to join the Hitler Youth.

The judge said: "A father who keeps his children away from the Hitler Youth abuses his parental power."

The Perversion of Education.

In the schools, all training is directed towards producing unquestioning obedience, implicit belief in Nazi doctrine, and a faith in force.

Even the child of kindergarten age has nursery rhymes and little history lessons that produce hatred of other countries, and toys which familiarize him with the idea of war.

When he gets a little older and goes to an elementary school he is taught history, but history with a purpose. That purpose is laid down crudely enough in the latest edition of the handbook for elementary school teachers, which has just been published in Berlin. In it we read:

> "No weight should be attached to the historical continuity of events. The main object remains to give the children a most vivid picture of the fuehrer."

All school subjects are treated in the same way. Thus geography becomes "geo-politics". Mathematics are described often in military terms; and in arithmetic books the subjects of the problems set are of this kind:

> "How many people can seek protection in a bomb-proof cellar, length five metres, width four metres, and height 2.25 metres? Each person needs one cubic metre per hour, and they remain there for three hours."

Science is bent into the service of the National Socialist ideal, and courses in secondary schools deal with the use of poison gases, incendiary bombs, etc.

The Lesson of Hate.

But racial instruction takes the first place in German education today. There is no clearer example of the deliberate perversion of childish impulses than this manufacturing of hate. Small children at an impressionable age are made to study Der Sturmer—the paper produced by Julius Streicher, which is full of filthy abuse against the Jews and all those whom the Nazis regard as "inferior men". Every week the paper publishes letters from teachers and school children showing the widespread use of Der Sturmer in education.

The foreigner is always told that "not many people read Der Sturmer." The evidence of Germans does not bear this out. It is put up on notice boards in many schools — teachers are "inspired" by it and work small children up into acts of senseless rudeness and brutality. In the same way, small children are taught to hate people of other nations and to regard them as inferior beings.

At every stage of education, religion is undermined. All belief in God, or in any spiritual power higher than the state, is derided and attacked as a rival to the worship of the racial state and its fuehrer.

Regimented Youth.

While still at school, boys and girls from 10-14 are obliged to join the junior section of the Hitler Youth, which has supplanted or absorbed all the various free youth organizations, (Social-Democrat, Protestant, Catholic, etc.) which flourished before the Nazi era. The boys belong to the Jungvolk and the girls to the Jung-Madel.

From 14 to 18 all boys have to belong to the Hitler-Jugend proper. At 18 the youth passes into the Arbeitsdienst, a compulsory labor service which is employed on work such as road-making.

The Ideal of War.

The Hitler Youth is an army. Its divisions are military. Baldur von Schirach, its commander, is responsible directly and solely to Hitler himself. Work in the Hitler-Jugend consists of gymnastics, boxing, wrestling, swimming, athletics, shooting with a small-bore gun, and scouting.

Gliding is much encouraged; it was estimated just before the war that 15,000 boys could glide with efficiency. Boys who show proficiency are also trained in low-power aeroplanes, and are encouraged to learn metal work by the making of model aeroplanes.

There is much in this program to fire the boys 'enthusiasm. No doubt can now remain that the Hitler-Jugend has from the first been designed to produce a German soldier, blindly obedient to the fuehrer. Here is a typical marching song of the movement:

"Though the whole world lie ruined around us after the days of war,
What the devil do we care — we don't give a hoot any more,
We will go marching forward, though everything fall away,
For the world will be ours tomorrow, as Germany is to-day."

The young Nazi, having completed his four years in the Hitler-Jugend and six months of Labor Service, then passes into the army.

Nazi "Justice".

Throughout this training it is the avowed intention of the Nazi leaders to destroy the natural foundations of law itself. In order to achieve this end, there must be substituted a new law of right and wrong; for man is so constituted that he will always desire justification for his acts.

But whereas in normal human society a child learns from his parents, or from his religion, to distinguish between good and evil, the Nazi admits as right only that which is promoting the might of the nation—"the Nordic Law". This is the essence of Nazi education.

> "The blood-community of the race, i.e. the nation, is the pivotal point of all earthly existence. The nation alone is a purpose in itself. Everything else is a means to an end and must serve the good of the nation—everything, including justice and law. Justice is whatever is of benefit to the nation, whatever corresponds to the German feeling of "justice", the unadulterated voice of God in the race-pure soul."

This is the stuff on which the young Nazi is fed from infancy; this is what makes him in manhood a ruthless enemy of all mankind outside the ranks of his fellow-Nazis and their Fascist allies.

R.A.F. STEPPED ON HIS TOES

Two German prisoners are shown carrying a comrade, who was wounded in the foot during the aerial dogfight in which the R.A.F. shot down his plane. The photograph was made as a party of prisoners passed through London en route to a prison camp.

Dutton's Amerks Have Chance To Get Out of Cellar Position By Taking Fall Out of Rangers

Victory Would Shoot Team Into Fourth Place Tie With Bruins

HAS BEST ROOKIE

Johnny O'Flaherty Has Accounted for More Than Half of All Goals Gathered by Amerks

(By the Canadian Press)

Mervyn (Red) Dutton's New York Americans, who have been pouncing in and out of the National Hockey League cellar, get a chance to climb from the last position tonight when they play their second game of the season with their city rivals, the Rangers.

In fact, the last five clubs are so closely bunched in the standing that a victory for Americans would shoot them up into a fourth place tie with Boston Bruins at seven points apiece. By the same token, the Rangers can assume a third place tie with Detroit Red Wings if they defeat the Dutton men.

Tonight's contest between the two New York clubs is the only one up for decision, although Red Wings play host to Chicago Black Hawks on Friday night and five games are scheduled for the week-end. Rangers won 3-2 in their first clash with Americans on Nov. 19.

Dutton has one of the best men of this season's rookie crop on display in Johnny (Peanuts) O'Flaherty, former Toronto Goodyears' star. O'Flaherty leads all freshmen players in scoring at present with four goals, being only one behind the best mark in this respect. Five players, Tony Demers of Canadiens, George Allen of Chicago, Roy Conacher of Boston and Syl Apps and Gordie Drillon of Toronto, have five goals apiece.

O'Flaherty, in fact, has accounted for more than one third of the Americans' goal total for the season. In eight games, in which Americans have won two, lost five and tied one, the club has managed to score only 11 goals.

C. A. S. F. Members Take Part in Show

Montreal, Nov. 28.— (CP)—Two members of the Canadian Active Force from Petawawa, Ont., Gnrs. Harry Baltin and Al Billings, took part in the Amateur Boxing Tournament staged by the Overseas Association here last night, Baltin winning by decision, and Billings losing by a technical knockout.

Fighting in the 160-pound class, Baltin defeated Maxie Spoon in a close five-round encounter, while Billings' five-round bout was stopped at 1.35 in the fourth when he was unable to continue against Jean Paul Desjardins, 126-pounder.

Jerry Blanchard of Cornwall, Ont., pounded out a five-round decision over Roger Dulude in the 126-round division.

RED DEVILS LOSE

Montreal, Nov. 28—(CP)—Montreal Canadiens moved into fourth place ahead of Cornwall in the Quebec Senior Hockey League standing last night with an 8-3 victory over Verdun Red Devils, while the lowly Concordia sextette pulled an upset by holding Montreal Royals to a 7-7 tie.

CONN IS MADE HEAVY FAVORITE

Pittsburgh Pretty Boy Tangles With Lee Savold in N.Y. Friday

(By Sid Feder)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Nov. 28.—(AP)—The Charitable gentlemen who make the betting prices on fights ordinarily are about as dumb as a woods full of foxes and a room full of Einsteins—mixed together.

Yet every once in a while they seem to think it's Christmas, even though the calendar doesn't agree, and come up with a set of odds that are about as reasonable as baking a cake with talcum powder for flour.

That's why there was a wild rush around the 49th Street betting district today as those charitable gentlemen came from behind their white whiskers and realized they were all out of limb in establishing Billy Conn, the Pittsburgh pretty boy, favorite at odds of 1 to 3 that he can dissolve Lee Savold in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

Now Billy boy should, by all indications, whip the corn country clouter in their 12-round fuss, particularly since Savold, at best, boasts only a striped record. But Lee has proved he can hit, and the betting commissioners have discovered long before now that a fighter who carried the old equalizer in his fists isn't a 3-1 shortender against anybody.

So the betting boys started the hedging process today. All along Jacobs Beach there was a quick-change job going on. Instead of inviting all bets, the fraternity suddenly realized it was loaded with Conn money. Of course the boys couldn't come right out and tell their customers they wouldn't accept any more bets on Billy. So they did the next best thing; they made you lay $6 to win $1 if you liked Conn. At the same time they turned right around and continued to invite all the Savold money they could find.

CLEVELAND TEAM STEAMING ALONG

Barons Have Played Ten Games and Won Eight of Them

(By The Canadian Press)

The way things are shaping up it looks as if Cleveland Barons will finish up on top of the American Hockey League's western section in a breeze.

The Barons have played 10 games so far, winning eight of them, and now have a five-point lead over Pittsburgh Hornets, who have played 12 games. Hershey Bears come next with 10 points while Indianapolis Capitals and Buffalo Bisons trail far behind.

Barons' eighth victory came last night as they won 3-2 over Philadelphia Ramblers. In other games the Hornets won 6-4 over Hershey while Buffalo defeated Providence Reds 3-1.

The wining goal for the Barons was scored by Don Deacon, while other Cleveland scores went to Norm Locking and Earl Bartholome. The two Rambler goals were scored by Lude Wareing and Johnny Polich.

Johnny Sherf and Defenceman Mickey Blake each scored twice for Pittsburgh, with the others going to Lloyd Roubell and Eddie Convey. Hershey goals were scored by Bobby Kirk, Lauzon and Joe Krol, who got two. Shannon, Mercer and Klein scored for Buffalo while the lone Providence goal was scored by Jack Shill.

Tom Harmon Gets Award

New York, Nov. 28.—Tom Harmon, brilliant halfback of the University of Michigan's football team, was announced today as the winner of the Heisman Memorial Trophy, given each year by the Downtown Athletic Club of New York to the outstanding college gridder in the United States.

Harmon polled an unprecedented number of points, 1,303, in the countrywide balloting by sports writers and broadcasters to beat out John Kinbrough of Texas A. and M., who received 841.

The presentation will be made at a dinner at the Downtown Athletic Club, Dec. 9th.

Belleville Reliance Wins 4 to 2 in Van Horne Series

Local Team Score Early to Defeat Perth-Smiths Falls Sextette

HASTIE BRILLIANT

The Belleville Reliance Aircraft puckster broke into the win column of the Van Horne Memorial trophy series at Kingston last evening with a brilliant 4 to 2 victory over the Perth-Smith's Fall "Combines."

Paced by Bill Hastie, their shifty centre player from Gananoque, the Reliance six gave a fine exhibition of defensive hockey. Hastie scored two goals on solo efforts and slid a pass to rightwinger Tabby Gow for a third counter. Mark Storms chalked up the Belleville Reliance team's other counter of the quartette registered.

Storms Scores Early

The game was still in its infancy when Mark Storms split the Combines' defence and raced in on Goalie Rutherford for a sure counter. The Belleville team tasting its first advantage of the current puck season, moved to the offensive as a man, to be rewarded with another goal when Hastie shifted to pull the Perth-Smith's Falls defence aside and then "Gananoque Bill" slipped the rubber to Tabby Gow and the latter made it 2-0 at the seven minute mark.

With defenceman Bill Storms languishing in the penalty box the Combines scored when Bernie White flashed the red light behind Hewitt. At full strength again, however, Bill Hastie made it 3-1 on a solo effort as he hurdled the Combines' defence line and beat Rutherford from close in. Hastie got the only goal scored in the second period when he beat the entire Perth-Smith's Falls sextette as the result of some sensational stick-handling.

Fast, Clean Game

Belleville drew two penalties in the third period and the Combines applied the pressure and scored a goal as the result of some good combination play when Maney batted home Jackie White's pass-out to end the scoring at 4-2 for Belleville. The game was marked with clean hard checking, Belleville getting three to the Combines' one penalty. The Reliance sextette need but one more win in the Van Horne Memorial series to cinch a play-off berth. Playing coach "Speedy" St. Louis played the entire full game as a steadying influence on the defence for the winners. The lineups:

Belleville Reliance: Goal, Hewitt; defence, St. Louis, W. Storms; centre, Hastie; wings, Gow and Jackson; subs, Sanderson, Leary, Gill, M. Storms and Goyer.

Perth-Smith's Falls: Goal, C. Rutherford; defence, R. White and Davis; centre, J. Rutherford; wings J. White and Maney; — subs, Ferguson, Greenlaw, Burnshaw and R. White.

Referee: Bill Steen of Kingston.

Summary:

1st period.
Reliance—M. Storms 5.15
Reliance—Gow (Hastie) 7.25
Combines—B. White 15.00
Reliance—Hastie 18.23
Penalties: W. Storms, Davis.
2nd. period.
Reliance—Hastie 19.06
Penalties: None.
3rd period.
Combines—Maney (J. White) 8.15
Penalties—Sanderson, St. Louis.

EBBIE EDMISON SCORES TWICE AS OSHAWA WINS

Former Brantford Puckster Leading Scorer in the O.H.A. Senior Race

BRIGHTS EARN TIE

St. Catharines Battle From Behind in Game, While Marlies Defeat Sailors

(By The Canadian Press)

If Ebbie Edmison of Oshawa isn't on the negotiation list of some National Hockey League club, he should be. True, he's small but look at little Johnny O'Flaherty who played last season with Toronto Seniors of the Ontario Association.

Johnny, so the story goes, was overlooked by Toronto Maple Leafs because of his slim frame. Hockey experts figured he wouldn't last in the money circuit, although no one ever doubted his fighting qualities. So—New York Americans took a chance, grabbed Johnny this fall, and now he's right up with the leading N.H.L. scorers. He leads all freshmen players with four goals.

Edmison, who formerly performed with Brantford Seniors, looks like a second O'Flaherty. Last night he scored twice as Oshawa whipped London streamliners 5-0, to add to five points he picked up in his last game Monday. Now he's leading the circuit in scoring with 13 points, made up of four goals and nine assists.

In other senior tilts last night, the Niagara district teams, Niagara Falls Brights and St. Catharines Saints battled to a 2-2 overtime draw, and Toronto Marlboroughs grabbed their first home victory of the season, edging Port Colborne Sailors 4-2.

Seventh Straight Loss

At London, other Oshawa scorers were Doug. Maundrell, Johnny Thompson and Hal Cooper. It was the seventh successive loss for the treamliners, despite the addition of Sparky Weiler, a Woodstock product, and Boots Gothenn, a London intermediate.

At Niagara Falls, it was the fourth draw this season for the Brights, who scored both their goals in the first period on sorties by Blink Bellinger, who tried out with Toronto Maple Leafs this fall, and Mickey McQuade. Cooper and Bobby Walton drew assists on the first goal, and Art Stuart on the second.

Tom Forgie and Roy Heximer were the Saints' marksmen, Heximer scoring the tying goal late in the final period.

Marlborough's took sole possession of second place with their decision over the tars on the big surface of Maple Leaf Gardens. Toronto led 2-1 at the end of the initial session and punched home two more in the final frame before the Sailors notched their second.

Big Jimmy Drummond, smiling Eddie King, Edmonton's Cpl. Eddie Shamlock of the Royal Canadian Air Force, and Scotty Mair were the Duke's scorers. Umbo Concessix and Young tallied for the Canal Town team. The ports claimed a goal in the second period after the goal judge flashed his light but were overruled by Referee Army Armstrong.

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

There will only be three O.H.A. clubs operating in Kingston this winter, which means some strong squads will be iced in the Limestone City, where in previous years complete junior and intermediate groups were operated. Wally Elmer's Kingston Lions and the Royal Military College have entered junior clubs, while the Kingston Hockey Club will have full sway and rights in the intermediate ranks.

Entries into the O.H.A. closed last night and the sub-committee of the governing body will convene on Friday night to group the various clubs throughout the province. At least a four-teamed intermediate or possibly a senior "B" group will be announced on Saturday to include Kingston Peterborough, Belleville Reliance and the Air Force, while there is an outside possibility that an Oshawa entry may be included also. The O.H.A. is endeavouring to abandon the Intermediate "A" series and replace it by reviving the senior "B" series throughout the length and breadth of the province.

Senior "B" hockey was successfully played in Belleville a decade ago when Belleville, Oshawa and Queen's University were grouped together, all of these centres enjoying artificial ice facilities at that time. Unfortunately Belleville is not in that category today, however. That was in 1931 and Belleville won the group only to be eliminated by Windsor. The team was coached by Stan Burgoyne and boasted of such players as Ollie Mulvihill, Johnnie Leachman Montgomery and Smith who were imported for the occasion. The return of senior "B" hockey to Eastern Ontario with four teams should prove popular to the patrons of the game and all that is needed now is to have the weatherman provide the necessary freezing elements to assure good natural ice in Belleville and Peterboro and it's off we go to a banner season of puck chasing.

So much for senior "B", let's turn our eyes towards the junior O.H.A. picture, which doesn't exactly provide so amicable a picture. Picton is out of the O.H.A. this season, while Art Black and his Trenton cohorts are lobbying strongly to be included in the Lake Shore group, even if they have to journey to Peterboro. President Bill Cook was in Toronto attending the annual O.H.A. conclave last Saturday and also put in his ear in an effort to have Port Hope, Cobourg, Trenton and Belleville grouped together for a change. Down in Kingston Wally Elmer is twiddling his thumbs with a packed junior "B" squad, which had forced R.M.C. to cast covetous glances towards a junior "C" rating. President Cook says it's "no .. dice" with Kingston. "Elmer froze Belleville out of a junior grouping for years past and now we want no part of him or his Lions," defied Prexy Cook today.

Back to Kingston we find the Limestone City all agog over the prospects of a strong senior "B" club for 1941. With Queen's University definitely out of hockey at the conclusion of the Van Horne series, the Kingston Hockey Club may enjoy the benefit of some of the Queen's seniors, as well as the soldier boys now stationed in the Limestone City. Kingston Sport Scribe Bill Walshe says: "The pooling of player strength will give Kingston a new hockey interest and probably revive the enthusiasm of years ago, when crowds lined up in the afternoons to make sure of getting into the rink for games." Neither the Signals nor the 3-47th Battery are expected to enter the O.H.A. campaign, so it looks as though the Limestone City puck moguls are getting a long-awaited break at last. However, if the Williamsons and Neilsons from the Queen's seniors are permitted to play with the old Frontenacs no doubt a cry will go up from other parts of the district, but the better players in the group the classier brand of hockey will be played.

Under the heading "Hunter ducks, duck doesn't"—we give you the latest duck hunting story of the season. It seems Alf McCarthy and Johnnie Baker were taking a bang at the Blacks and Mallards down in Big Bay the other morning. Five beauties flew into the boys' decoys and Alf let bang both barrels, killing one and wounding two. One of the wounded ducks was a whopper of a whistler and the injured drake, stunned slightly, made a bee line towards Alfie flapping his wings and squawking like mad. Alf ducked as the big Whistler drove at him, but managed to reach up and grab the drake around the neck. Today Alf has the Whistler drake riding around with him in his automobile quite contented with his lot in domestic life. "He swims in the bathtub and has three square meals a day, what more could a wild duck desire?" points out Alf as he totes the large Whistler around in his automobile for a companion. An now its name is "Jimmie."

Playing a better brand of defensive hockey and checking strongly, the Belleville Reliance pucksters moved into the winning brackets in the Van Horne loop by beating the Perth-Smith's Falls "Combines" 4-2 last night. Truly the Aircraft boys gave Carl Hewitt, their sterling goal-keeper, much better protection out in front and best of all a little margin on which to work. After that Hewitt was brilliant. The Reliance sextette bagged the first two counters and early. They were never headed, although the Combines battled 'em strong in the last session, but "Speedy" St. Louis' squad held firmly to their advantage with some fine defensive efforts. Bill Hastie, the locals' shifty centreman, was the big noise as the former Gananoque lad scored two singletons and gave Tabby Gow a pass for another, which is no mean effort in that Van Horne series. Last night's victory will no doubt prove a tonic to the Reliance squad, as they don't have the opportunity of practicing like the other teams in the loop.

London Press Agree Softball Is Far From Pit-Pat Game

"Like All Canadian Games Softball is Exceedingly Fast," Says English Press

"NO ARMOUR"

London, Nov. 28 (CP).—"Don't run away with the idea that soft ball is a pit-pat pastime for young ladies," wrote "Twelfth Man" in the London Evening News, introducing the popular Canadian play-ground game to British readers.

"Twelfth Man" devoted a column to the game thousands of people play in corner lots and back yards from Halifax to Vancouver. Canadians might be a bit muddled by some of his descriptions but they're right up the Englishman's alley.

"The name is rather misleading," he wrote. "Soft ball is a Canadian game, and, like all Canadian games, it is pretty fast. Remember ice hockey and you will realize how fast Canadian athletes move when they get going at a game they really enjoy.

"Soft ball is a kind of baseball, played with an outsize ball on a 'diamond' rather smaller than the baseball pitch. Teams are nine-a-side and the pitcher is only allowed to deliver under-arm balls.

"Unlike batting in cricket, the ball is hit before it strikes the ground, but with a ball of such dimensions—as big as a small melon—a cunning pitcher can make it do aerobatics after it leaves his hand and the batsman, whose bat is very little thicker than a cricket stump, needs a quick eye and a supple wrist.

"The catcher wears neither the protective armor nor the mask used in baseball, and the fielders wear light pumps, for they have plenty of sprinting to do."

"ALL THE BETTER TO SEE YOU"

New York, Nov. 28 (CP).—The sight of a major league baseballer wearing glasses on the field isn't as rare as it once was. Outfielders Mel Ott of the New York Giants and Paul Waner of the Pittsburgh Pirates were the latest to don the window panes. They bring the American and National League lens-wearers' total to seven.

Another Pirate ace, Pitcher Danny McFayden, has been wearing specs—and winning games—for years. Pitchers Walter Beck of the Phillies and Bill Dietrich of the Chicago White Sox are others.

Two newcomers this year were Dominic DiMaggio, the Boston Red Sox's high priced rookie fly-chaser, and Russ Peters, Cleveland's reserve infielder.

16-YEAR-OLD BOY HERALDED AS "BOY WONDER" CRICKETER

London, Nov. 28 (CP). — British cricket fans are hailing Maurice Begent, 16-year-old Orpington player as a coming star.

The "boy wonder", as sports writers call him, had an aggregate of 1,838 runs for the season just ended, including six centuries, three of them scored in successive innings.

At the age of thirteen he captained Kent School's cricket and football teams and was given a trial at Canterbury before he was fifteen.

Ted Humphreys, the Canterbury coach, was so impressed by Begent's batting that he has hopes of his becoming a second Leonard Hutton. In a test match against Australia, Hutton set a record for the "Ashes" competition by scoring 364 runs in an inning.

BRUINS' CAPTAIN HONORED

Captain of the Boston Bruins, Dit Clapper is shown with President Frank Calder of the National Hockey League in Chicago as he received the pennant of the league for the Bruins' Championship last season.

C.A.H.A. War-time Puck Regulations Are Defined

The C.A.H.A., in accordance with the expressed wish of the government of Canada, has decided to operate its schedule and cup playdowns as usual this season and has announced the following war-time regulations:

(a) The residence rule will be entirely suspended for all players engaged in military service of any kind; and furthermore, such players may play for more than one club in the same season if they are moved by the military authorities during the course of the playing season.

(b) Any army team which may be organized in the respective military districts may be entered as a unit in the Allan Cup playdowns through the branch playdowns.

(c) Any professional player who goes into military service shall, with the consent of the National Hockey League, be allowed to play with and against amateur hockey players.

(d) Clubs which lose players during the season because of enlistment for military service may replace such players up until such time as the club enters its branch playdowns. Replacements in such cases, regardless of residence dates, may be secured from:

(1) Players who are engaged in military service and are moved into the district.

(2) Players from any other clubs in Canada or elsewhere provided the said club is willing to grant a release.

(e) Only players who were registered with the association, the N.H.L., the B.I.H.A., or the A.H.A. of U.S, the preceding season may be replaced

(f) A goal keeper may be replaced only by a goal keeper.

(g) All decisions regarding replacements shall be made by the following officers for the branches specified, and such decisions shall be final and binding: Maritimes A.H.A., Hanson Dowell; Quebec, Ottawa District and O.H.A., G. S. Dudley; Thunder Bay, Manitoba and Saskatchewan, F. Sargent; Alberta and British Columbia, Dr. W. G. Hardy.

The president, G. S. Dudley, wishes to draw the attention of all branch executive officers to the necessity of doing everything possible to co-operate with the military authorities in providing the troops with opportunities to play hockey and suggest in this connection that contact be made with responsible officers in various sections of the country and the facilities of the association and its branches be placed at their disposal to the fullest extent.

G. S. Dudley, President C.A.H.A.; W. A. Hewitt, Registrar-Treasurer C.A.H.A.

Bowling in the United States Has Been Built Into a $5,000,000 Industry

By WALTER L. JOHNS

(Central Press Canadian Sports Writer)

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Many, many years ago, perhaps, one of our prehistoric ancestors quit chasing the brontosauri and other huge dinosaurs out of his back yard and decided he needed some relaxation.

And, perhaps, he found that relaxation in throwing or rolling skulls at shin bones. He, unknowingly, "invented" a sport which today has been built into a $500,000,000 industry and which claims 16,000,000 United States devotees. The sport? Bowling.

From the prehistoric to the present day and we find that bowling, first an outdoor sport and now probably the most popular indoor sport, has progressed through the years until today there are 50,000 bowling alleys in the United States, representing an outlay of $80,000,000.

According to some bowling historians, the game of lawn bowls, as it was first known, had a hectic time in the early days of Edward III of England, who tried to curb the game in the fourteenth century. A century later Henry VIII of England made it unlawful for anyone to maintain a bowling establishment for gain.

A Religious Ceremony.

Even in the United States, the game of nine pins ,as it was called, was banned. It was a "wicket waste of time" to many in the nineteenth century. But today, government officials, sports celebrities, housewives and little Johnny can be found in bowling alleys, making their strikes and spares.

According to Frank Menke, the noted sports record authority, bowling originated as a religious ceremony, not from lawn bowling."

Friend Menke takes his notes from a book written on bowling by Wilhelm Pehle, a German, more than 40 years ago. His story goes like this:

In ancient Germany it was the custom to carry a "pin", shaped like the modern Indian club, to be used for several purposes, including the exercising of the wrists.

The German word for the pin was "keil", meaning a pin, or a wedge, and is from the same derivation as "kegel", which means bowl, the Germans always referring to a bowler as a "kegler".

Dutch Introduced it.

First bowling, according to the chronicler, was done in the cloisters of cathedrals, it being the custom of the canons to have parishioners, in turn, place their pins at one end of the cloister. This represented the "heide", meaning heathen. The parishioner then was given a ball, and asked to throw it at the "heide". If a hit was scored it indicated that the thrower was leading a clean and pure life and was capable of slaying the heathen.

All of this, according to the historian, had its origin as far back as the third or fourth century.

The Dutch introduced bowling to the United States. Bowling gained in popularity until along about 1840 in New York, when gamblers took hold and the nine-pin game was virtually barred.

In September, 1895, the American Bowling Congress was organized for the prime purpose of reviving bowling as a 10-pin sport. In 1901 the American Bowling Congress conducted its first national tournament. The entries totalled 41 five-man teams and 116 individuals.

Why It Is Popular.

Bowling this year is even more popular. Why?

Well, it is a clean, competitive sport where one and all have equal chance. You need not be a 210-pounder to play the line.

It is an individual game where the average player never reaches perfection, but finds perfection is there if he can attain it.

It is a sport for all. It is democratic. It is exercise. It makes friends. It is social. It improves good fellowship. It inspires good-will.

Above all, it gives the fellow who always is the sports spectator and never the player the chance to be a player himself.

New Alleys Opened.

The number of new bowling establishments opened up throughout the United States this year is staggering. No definite figures are available, but it must be in the hundreds. At the same time many new faces are being counted among bowling proprietors.

Typical of the new blood in bowling this year is A. S. Natherson, 55, a former auditor, who has opened a $45,000 establishment in Parma, O., his first venture in bowling. The 12-alley establishment is managed by Natherson's son, Russel, 24, who also is a neophyte in the kegling sport. Here, as at many other similar recreation centres in the United States, both men's and women's leagues daily attract a full house. The feminine bowlers pictured above roll at Natherson's emporium.

More leagues have been formed. More teams are entered in these leagues than ever before. More women are bowling. It is estimated that one-fifth the total number of bowlers are women.

All of this adds up to big business. It means thousands of workers and thousands of jobs. It means a stimulus in the building trades as new recreation centres spring up all over the United States.

As mentioned above, there are 50,000 bowling alleys in the United States. Equipment necessary to the game of bowling on these alleys represents another $5,000,000. Real estate value of recreation centres totals about $108,000,000.

ABC Sanction.

The ABC boasts of 14,913 sanctioned leagues, made up of 132,116 teams. The Women's International Bowling Congress embraces 100,000 sanctioned women bowlers. There are 33,419 certified ABC alleys.

Perhaps a few figures on bowling material costs will interest you.

Bowling pins cost from $5 to $13 a set of ten. Bowling alleys cost about $3,000 a pair installed. Bowling balls cost from $15 to $20, depending on color, etc.

Cleaner-polisher, floor machines for the alleys range from $165 to close to $300. Pin setters, new type, cost from $200 up. Pit and foul lights come $19.

Bowling shoes can be bought for $2.50, bowling bags to carry your ball for a few dollars.

Other Costs Listed.

Shirts for team members vary according to material, but can be bought for as low as $1.25 apiece. Ties are about the same as street wear.

Lockers for bowlers with ten or twelve compartments run from $25 to $40. Cone chalk costs about 60 cents for two and one-half pounds. Automatic ball cleaners can be bought for $2. Score tables range from $12 to $25.

Scoring sheets cost less than one-half cent a sheet. Crayons cost but 15 cents a dozen. Ball return equipment costs $40. Upholstered opera chairs for spectators range from less than $5 to over $10 a chair. Steel wool costs 17 cents a pound.

Best bowling pins come from trees 200 years old and are duly seasoned The bowling pin is 15 inches high. The best pin has an average life of 10,000 knockdowns. The surface of the bowling alley is extremely smooth and level. The mineralite bowling ball is 99.78 per cent. round, according to scientists. It weighs 16 pounds.

BEAUTICIAN IS ACTUALLY BOXER

New Orleans Featherweight Can Wield a Gentle Hand in Women's Hair-Dos

New Orleans, La., Nov. 28 (CP).—The sign above the door says 'Hortense Beauty Shoppe', and you'd scarcely expect to find a top-notch prize fighter inside gently clamping gadgets onto a girl's tresses.

Putting waves in ladies' hair and gentlemen's noses, however, are alike in the day's work to Jimmy Perrin, variously styled as featherweight champion of the world and as No. 1 challenger for the title.

That's not all. Perrin started his public career as a fancy dancer. Jimmy began boxing by accident. He just filled in for a boy who didn't show up. He was twelve years old then. Jimmy had 95 fights as an amateur, and was on the 1932 Olympic team as an alternate in the 112-pound class.

As a professional he has fought 45 times, and his managers say he has lost only four fights. Jimmy fought thirteen times in 1939 and lost only once, to Leo Rodak, a light weight. This year he has beaten Archibald, Al Reid and Bobby Ruffin in his only starts.

A master boxer who delights in humiliating an opponent by making him miss, Perrin believes his lessons in tap and fancy dancing have been a big help in footwork.

Jimmy says he just "naturally" took up beauty culture, his mother being in the business. He took a course in beauty culture in New York. His wife, Hortense, runs the shop while he trains.

CLOSE TO 200-GOAL MARK

DIT CLAPPER

Heading for the 200 goal division, which very few players in the National Hockey League history have achieved, is Aubrey "Dit" Clapper, durable defence player of the Boston Bruins, as he begins his fourteenth season under the big tent, all of which have been spent in the livery of the Boston team.

In league contests, Clapper had scored 196 goals when the present season began, so that entering the 200-goal Hall of Fame does not appear to be a difficult task. He has exceeded 200 goals, when the eleven he scored in Stanley Cup play are taken into account. In the series of 1930, when Bruins swept through their own section and down to the Stanley Cup finals against the brilliant Canadien team of that era, Clapper had his big cup year, scoring four goals. In the league season prior to cup play, he had his biggest season, right-winging the great dynamite line of Weiland-Clapper-Gainor, with 41 goals, 20 assists, 61 points.

A chequered career has been that of Clapper. From defence, to forward, back to defence, and starring in all three, probably stamps him as one of the most versatile players the National Hockey League ever has known.

When Clapper joined Bruins in 1926-27, he was a defence player. With Boston Tigers he was schooled as a right winger, with the result that when he joined the Bruins in 1928-29 he was a full-fledged forward and, in his third season, he blazed to fame as a unit of the highest-scoring forward line hockey ever has known, the 'Dynamite Trio' of 1929-30, with Clapper on one wing, Gainor on the other, tricky little Cooney Weiland in the middle. Weiland scored 43 goals on the season, while Gainor got 18. On goals and assists, this trio totalled the staggering figure of 183 points. The Bruins that year lost only five games of 44 ,tied one, captured 38, a phenomenal record. At one point they won 14 straight.

A few years ago, Clapper was relegated back to his old post on the defence, and dropped into the position as a hand drops into an old glove. With his physical bulk and strength, his ability to hit a heavy bodycheck, to break quick on attack and set up plays, he quickly became one of the most valuable players on the entire Bruin rearguard. And playing defence hasn't affected his scoring prowess so much as might be expected. Art Ross likes his defence man to do plenty of puck-carrying, and so Clapper fitted into that scheme naturelly. Last season, playing defence, he had 10 goals, 18 assists and was leading the defence players of the league in making points. At least, he was tied with another ex-forward, Ebbie Goodfellow of Detroit Red Wings, for the points honors, Goodfellow leading him by one goal in actual scoring. The previous season, with 26 points, Clapper also led the points-making defence players.

Clapper's Record.

PRIVATELY-OWNED STATIONS' USE OF SERVICE STUDIED

Transradio Service Not Carried by Stations on Networks of CBC

Ottawa, Nov. 28. — (CP) — The Board of Governors of The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation late Tuesday issued a brief statement which said it was still considering "The continued use" of Transradio news service by privately-owned radio stations in Canada.

The text of the statement:—

"The continued use of Transradio News Service by privately-owned radio stations in Canada is still under consideration by the Board of Governors of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

"It should be noted that the Transradio News Service is not carried by any station or networks of the CBC itself".

Governors Meet

The statement was issued after meeting of the Board last night.

Last week, the United States House of Representatives Committee on unAmerican activities issued a report alleging that a connection existed between Transradio News Service and Transocean News Service, an alleged agency of German propaganda.

The report referred to circumstances which affect Canada in connection with both radio and Press. Transradio News reports are broadcast over several Canadian stations.

Last Friday, the Conservative House Leader, R. B. Hanson, brought the report to the attention of the Munitions Minister, Hon. C. D. Howe, in the House of Commons. He asked if steps would be taken to deal with the situation.

Mr. Howe, who has jurisdiction over radio broadcasting in addition to his duties as head of the Munitions and Supply Department, replied the government would leave it to radio stations concerned whether or not they should continue to broadcast Transradio News, pending inauguration January 1 next by the CBC of "a new type of news service".

At New York, Herbert Moore, president of Transradio, issued a statement which alleged the committee on unAmerican activities had made a "flagrant error" in the part of its report referring to Transradio's arrangements with the Transocean Service.

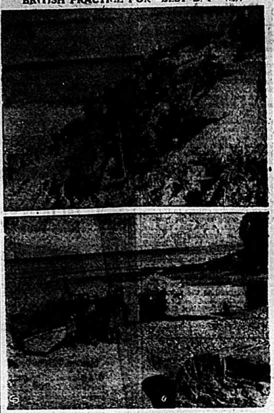
Rev. J. E. Beckel attended the missionary banquet at Bridge Street United Church when Dr. B. McClure of China was guest speaker.

BRITISH PRACTICE FOR "BEST DEFENCE"



The best defence is attack, according to the majority of the military strategists, and the British army is being thoroughly groomed to take the offensive when the time is ripe. Here you see a company of the London Irish Regiment engaged in the practice of landing operations on Britain's west coast. At TOP, a storming party charges in with bayonets and sub-machine guns to establish a beach head (foothold for big forces to come). BOTTOM, a base has been established and the boys that come after the storming party arrive with bagpipes skirling.

PLAN TO PEP UP CIVIL SERVICE

British Officials May be Asked to Work up to 11 Hours a Day.

London, Nov. 28 (CP).—Proposals for maintaining the efficiency of civil servants have been distributed for study in all government departments in London. The suggestions, most of which are expected to be adopted, include:

Doing some work at home to compensate for travel delays;

A reorganized working schedule which sometimes will mean working eleven hours a day;

Extension of existing luncheon club facilities, provision of evening meals and breakfasts;

Food allowance of three shillings (66 cents) a night when a worker sleeps at the office after being there during the day.

Several tons of paper will be saved by a new type of bus tickets issued in London, the tickets being shortened by an inch and a quarter.

FRENCH PARTY HAIL BRITAIN

Socialists Commend Resistance to Hitler and Mussolini

London, Nov. 28 (CP). — From "somewhere in France" the French Socialist party has smuggled to the Committee of Union of the French Socialists in Britain, the Jean Jaures group, a manifesto hailing British resistance to Hitlerism.

"The Socialists of France are convinced that England fights alone to defend the freedom of the entire world against the monstrous attempt to enslave Europe made by Hitler and Mussolini," the resolution said. "They salute with admiration the resistance of the British people and feel sure that in this they are at one with almost the whole of the French population."

The French Socialists urged Britain should not confine her war aims merely to destruction of Hitler's Germany but should prepare for the coming "of a new social order free from class distinctions and from the exploitation of man by man."

The manifesto said the French Socialist party "condemn fully and utterly the deputies and senators who on July 10, in Vichy, handed over the destinies of France to the reactionary and Fascist Marshal Petain and to the shady and dishonest Laval clique."

DALADIER'S SECRETARY

Count Rene de la Taille, former private secretary to former Premier Edouard Daladier, and former Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet of France, presenting his case to customs men, who questioned him when he arrived in New York. The Count will go to Philadelphia where he will write his views on the collapse of France. Daladier now is under arrest in France, awaiting trial by the Nazi-dominated French Vichy government.

NAZIS IN MOUTHS OF OWN A.A. GUNS

British Spitfires Chase Invaders Across Channel to Their Bases.

London, Nov. 28 (CP). — Three times within one week Spitfire pilots have chased German raiders across the English Channel and shot them down within range of their own anti-aircraft guns.

"We chased fifty Messerschmitt 109's from over London and came into range halfway between Dover and Cap Gris Nez," the Air Ministry News Service quoted one pilot as saying: "As we approached the French coast we continued to attack. The enemy were in a ragged looking formation. One of our chaps got the first one. I got the second."

Before returning to his base the same pilot spotted a Heinkel III lying in the water just off the French coast. A second Heinkel and eight Messerschmitt 109's were circling around it. He attacked the circling Heinkel and sent it into the sea to join the first.

Scots Wha Hae!

A Scottish fighter squadron chased fifteen Messerschmitt 109's from Ramsgate to Dunkerque and shot down three of them. Two were shot down into the sea during a dogfight and the third crashed on the same sands where the men of the British Expeditionary Force had stood waiting to embark for England during their heroic withdrawal from France. The Scottish airmen reached home without a loss.

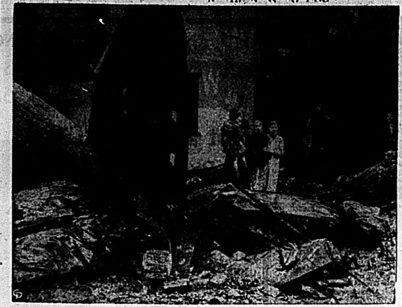
CO-ED MAKES VARSITY

Carlisle, Pa., Nov. 28 (CP).—Alice Abbott, Philadelphia co-ed, was so good the boys couldn't keep her off the Dickinson College male tennis team. She plays No. 5 position and has only lost one match this year. Miss Abbott prefers to play tennis with men while some of her male opponents object because they are torn between feelings of chivalry and the embarrassment of defeat at the hands of a pretty co-ed.

A Hussar officer, taken prisoner in Belgium by the Germans, has reached England after escaping his captors three times. He disguised himself as a refugee peasant to get to a friendly port.

[illegible] IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD



The wreckage of German warplanes is getting so commonplace throughout England that hardy Britons now take them in their stride. This big bomber that crashed into a house at Hornchurch attracted no more than a handful of neighbors. The caption failed to state if anyone were in the building wrecked by the fallen raider.

AUSSIES WELCOMED GERMAN INTERNEES

Soldiers and Veterans Turned in to Help Married Couples and Children

Sydney, N.S.W., Nov. 28 (CP).—A contingent of internees—men, women and children—has arrived here and is now in an internment camp.

Many of the internees, who are nearly all Germans, with a sprinkling of Italians, are young married couples with children. Tough Australian Imperial Force "Diggers" from garrison battalions became temporary nursemaids as, tenderly but efficiently, they disembarked all the essential paraphernalia of babies, feeding bottles, perambulators and wrappery.

The few people who saw the internees disembark from a ship in the harbor and leave by train watched the veterans of the last war carrying baby carriages down gangways from ship to ferry and from ferry to wharf. And when the train pulled out, two armed garrison battalion guards shared the back platform of its last carriage with two baby carriages. In one of the perambulators, which a woman internee had carefully made up with mattress and sheets, after boarding the train, slept a tiny baby.

Well Dressed.

Some of the younger women were conspicuously smartly dressed, and the men's clothing varied from smart linen suits, complete with sun helmet to heavy tweed sports kit and topcoats.

The internees were guarded by a detachment of British "Q" troops, including kilted members of a famous Highland regiment. Both internees and guards looked as though they had thoroughly enjoyed their voyage to Sydney, which was attended by comfort which for some of them was "probably unprecedented and unexpected."

Mr. and Mrs. William Jose spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Boyle and family at Cole Creek.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Alder and little son Keith of Bethel were supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Wallbridge on Sunday evening and Mrs. Clarence Sprague and two daughters, Pauline and Nellie, of Mountain View with Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wallbridge and Mr. Douglas Wallbridge.

Mr. George Huff and Miss Julia Huff were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. I. Nightingale on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wallbridge spent last Sunday in Peterboro with Mr. and Mrs. Victor Rowbotham.

Mrs. Snider is much improved after her serious illness.

Glasgow magistrates, by five votes to two, rejected a proposal for a curfew for children under 12 during the winter blackout.

RELUCTANT EVACUEES

Their lives may depend upon the move, but these little fellows obviously do not want to leave London. All labelled, they are shown about to depart for a safer sanctuary in the country. They are but two of the thousands of children who have been evacuated from the bomb-wracked capital.

WAS FOUR TIMES REAL STOWAWAY

Had Many Illicit Trips Abroad and Showed Them He Had to Go to Sea

New York, Nov. 28 (CP).—Bobby Stap, the lad who has a passion to go down to the sea, and did—four times as a stowaway—now has his seaman's papers.

Now sixteen, but just as snub-nosed and freckle-faced as he was two years ago when, in the space of five months, he stowed away on four vessels and travelled some 20,000 nautical miles, Bobby has graduated with honors, from New York Merchant Marine School.

Bobby, who expects a berth with the Clyde Mallory Line, was ordered by the children's court of New York to attend the Marine School when he returned from an illicit cruise of the Carribean. His travels took him to Enland, France and South America.

3rd. Hillier

Third of Hillier, Nov. 28. — The Girls' and Boys' Clubs of Prince Edward had a dance at Crofton hall on Wednesday night and $96 was made for war funds. Several of the young people from Hillier attended. Miss Lorna Adams of Hillier is president of the Girls' Club.

The Hillier Institute met Thursday at the home of Mrs. Charles Benway. Mrs. Norris Dafoe and Mrs. George Benway served lunch.

Miss Mabel Dainard is selling tickets on a quilt to be drawn for at the Anglican bazaar in the near future.

Mrs. Albert Chamberlain of Pleasant Bay spent Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Benway and family.

Mrs. George Huff of Wellington spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Leavens.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Bedell spent Sunday at Trenton with Mr. and Mrs. Claude Titus.

Mrs. Stewart Wood and the school children are practising for their Christmas concert.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hamilton, Belleville, spent Sunday with Mrs. Hamilton's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Palmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Benway and family spent Sunday at Wellington with Mr. and Mrs. A. W. McConnell.

Miss Ruth Benway spent Saturday afternoon with Misses Earle and Eula Campbell, Hillier.

Mr. Clark Clapp delivered canned goods to Kingston last week.

GIRL'S COURAGE IS RECOGNIZED IN AWARD LIST

Other Ontario and Quebec People Are Cited for Bravery by Royal Canadian Humane Association

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 28 (CP).—Sixteen-year-old June Mills of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., has been awarded the Royal Canadian Humane Association's bronze medal for heroic action last June 9. The girl, one of a party of seven, tried to save members of her party struggling in the water in Haviland Bay and succeeded in rescuing one.

Five persons were drowned, including the girl's mother and a young brother, Earl, when the boat in which they were returning from a camp across the bay was swamped and the seven persons tossed into the water. Others drowned were Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Macdonald and their son, Donald.

It was dark and most of the party disappeared in the water. June went to the rescue of Mr. Macdonald but was forced to let him go and then directed Macdonald's daughter, Dorene to the boat, and held her there until June's father arrived in another boat one hour later.

Other Medals.

Two other persons from Ontario—William Briscoe of Hornepayne and David McFarlane, Hamilton — were awarded the Society's bronze medal. Briscoe saved a baby from her burning home June 21, 1940. McFarlane, in a canoe with Edward Toswell and Vern O'Keefe in Hamilton Bay last July 9, swam in rough water to shore for help when the craft started to sink half way across the bay. The other boys were rescued.

Given Parchments.

Awards of parchment certificates for heroic actions in Quebec and Ontario follow:

Leonard Whitfield Glover, Montreal, for the rescue of Nick di Bello from drowning at Laval sur le Lac, near Montreal, Aug. 22, 1938.

Yvon Charbonneau, Montreal, for the rescue of Andrew O'Neill from drowning at Longue Pointe, Montreal, July 3, 1940.

Leonard Wells, Toronto, for rescue of George Hill in the Don River, Toronto, April 30, 1940.

Dalus Lee, Barrie, for rescue of Kenneth Dawson at the Barrie dock July 4, 1939.

Arthur Oswald, Toronto, who was instrumental in saving lives of employees and guests from the fire-gutted Avonmore Hotel, Toronto, March 15, 1940.

Jack Ray Harmer, Plattsville, Ont. for the rescue of Shirley Hamacher in the Nith River, July 5, 1939.

Patrick Yensen, Capreol, for rescue of Ian Nartin in the Vermilion River, Dec. 2, 1939.

Joseph Metzger and James A. Thompson, Fort Erie, for assistance in the rescue of William Kent in the Niagara River, April 8, 1940.

Lucien Labrade, Ottawa, for the rescue of Lt. Andre Lafleur in Brown's Inlet, May 1, 1940.

Murray Barlow and Eric Brown, Chatham, for assistance in the rescue of Carl Machacek in the Thames River, June 10, 1940.

GRACE DARLINGS OF TODAY

By WINIFRED HOLMES

One rough, wind-whipped September morning, just over a hundred years ago, the packet-boat "Forfarshire", with sixty-three souls on board, struck an outlying rock of the treacherous Farne Islands off the Northumberland coast.

A crash—a surge of waves over the decks—and forty-three men and women were washed overboard and drowned.

On another island of the group, a young woman cleaning the lenses of a Longstone Light, high up in a tall white lighthouse perched precariously on a rocky promontory, looked out to sea and saw the wreck. She rushed down to tell her father, the lighthouse keeper, and together they launched their small boat and rowed out through the storm to the survivors' rescue. Only special strength and skill and great courage could have taken them through the heavy seas safely, but they managed to reach the foundering ship and pick up four men and one woman who were clinging desperately to the wreckage, and bring them back in safety to the lighthouse.

Another journey brought in more survivors whom the girl nursed back to strength.

And so Grace Darling won the gold medal of the Humane Society and became one of the most popular heroines of our school-time history books.

Now, a hundred years later, we, who love the story of Grace and her father are being called upon to show the same qualities of courage, skill and endurance every day and every night. Each morning hundreds of girls and women in Britain put on their uniforms of Red Cross nurses, ambulance drivers, auxiliary fire service, air raid wardens and auxiliaries attached to the fighting services—the W.A.A.F.'s attached to the R.A.F., the W.R.E.N.'s to the Navy, the A.T.S. to the Army—and sally forth through bombs and gunfire to their duties. They do it without thinking consciously of the dangers; nor are they in the least conscious of being heroic: it is everyday life for us now in England. But sometimes out of it all stands forth a deed of special bravery, such as Grace Darling's, which wins special honor.

Girl Heroines.

There is Peggy Prince, for instance, a girl of twenty-one who lives by the sea in Sussex. During the war she drives an ambulance, but all her life she rowed boats and paddled canoes by the sea. On August 14 a British bomber crashed into the channel and sank in three minutes. A motorboat cruising round managed to pick up two of the crew but others struggled helplessly in the water. Peggy, seeing the accident from the land, set off at once in her canoe, accompanied by a soldier, but arriving at the spot where the bomber had sunk they could see no sign of life and returned to shore.

Peggy, however, was not satisfied and paddled out once again—this time alone—to have a last look. She was rewarded by finding one man, the sergeant wireless operator, clinging to a buoy. She managed to pull him, exhausted as he was, into the tiny canoe and paddled him back to shore, thus saving his life. For this she has been decorated with the O.B.E.

Then there is twenty-one years old Mary Cornish, a London music teacher, who volunteered to escort children going to Canada. When the "City of Benares" was torpedoed she rushed down to the cabins of the children in her charge and got them placed in one of the life-boats. For eight days and nights she cared for these children unceasingly in the icy and cramped conditions of the life-boat, masaging the boys' feet when their circulation was stopping and keeping them interested in the fascinating and exciting story of Bulldog Drummond—"her own version", she described it afterwards. When they were taken on board the rescue ship after having been spotted at long last by a Sunderland flying boat in mid-ocean, they were unable to stand up after sitting so long in their cramped positions, but the boys were cheerful and unharmed.

The first girl to win the George Medal for civilians is only nineteen. She is Sonia Straw, typist in a solicitor's office in Croydon. When volunteers for air raid wardens were asked for she offered her services and took her training. Then one night the bombers came. A high explosive fell on a public shelter and women and children in it were badly injured. Sonia offered to attend to them until other help arrived and although bombs were still falling all round she gave them what first aid she could and treated them for shock alone for a long time until she was relieved. For this act of gallantry she received the medal. But even before this she had shown herself outstanding brave and selfless, having one night walked through a bombed street and into a collapsing house to find a missing old lady who had taken refuge under her bed.

Such tales of women's bravery in this war are endless. There is the Auxiliary Fire Service girl operator in Whitechapel who stuck to her teleprinter all through a terrible night raid when the fire station had been hit and several firemen and girls killed.

And there is Corporal Pearson of the Women's Auxiliary Air Service, a Cornish girl who, hearing a 'plane making a forced landing on an aerodrome outside her quarters at night, dressed quickly, and rushed out in time to see the 'plane burst into flames on the ground. She helped two of the crew who were not injured to pull out the wounded pilot and, while they ran for an ambulance, freed him from his parachute straps. Then a bomb blew up. Cpl. Pearson threw herself on top of the wounded pilot to save him from the blast and splinters and they were both almost suffocated with the fumes of the bomb. But men were hacking down the fence and let in the ambulance and before the second bomb and petrol tank blew up both pilot and his rescuer were taken clear of the danger.

And then there is the enderly Lancashire woman, Mrs. Horton, trapped with a hundred people for six hours in an East London shelter, who calmed the frightened women and put the children to sleep again in their bunks, and after attending to the people's injuries and giving them water to drink from her own bottle drew them round in a circle and made them all talk of their childhood days so that they would forget the terrible situation they were in. All the time bombs were dropping with heavy explosions outside, but demolition parties worked unceasingly and eventually dug them out.

These stories have happy endings. The heroines have lived. But others die every day and night. Two ambulances manned by women, started off for the East End a few nights ago and completely disappeared in a vast explosion. The only links found were the two numberplates of the cars buried under a mountain of debris. And there are three women of a mobile canteen who answered an S.O.S. to go and feed people in the dockside area while enormous fires were blazing. They worked for six hours unceasingly and then an H.E. bomb fell and killed all three.

These then are the conditions under which the Grace Darlings of today are living and working. Several instances of bravery stand out, but the girl wardens in steel helmets and brown dungarees who walk coolly round the streets and visit the shelters at night, the typists who go off to work each morning through the day-time raids as a matter of course, and the school teachers and social workers who feed and clothe the homeless twenty-four hours on end through the fiercest bombardment, and thousands of others who cannot possibly be singled out for special mention, are equally as brave.

CANADA IS THIRD EXPORTING NATION OF THE WORLD

Has Definite Opportunity to Increase Sales to Central and South America

MISSION SENT

(By John Dauphinee, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 28—(CP)—Already the third exporting nation of the world, Canada now has a "definite opportunity" to increase her sales to Central and South America and the West Indies, a prominent trade official said today.

His comment came only a matter of hours before a four-man Canadian mission headed by Trade Minister MacKinnon leaves for those areas to find what demands Canadian products can fill, and what products Canada can use in return.

The official said "several difficulties" stand in the way of a further major increase in South American and West Indies trade; but members of the mission were "very hopeful" that extension of the existing trade agreement with almost all the countries to be visited could be arranged.

It was not expected actual discussions along this line would be started during the mission's seven-week tour, since the time available at any capital would be brief. "The main purpose of the trip is to explore the situation," he said, "and clear the ground for future negotiations.

"From our information here, there seems to be a definite opportunity to develop wider markets in this hemisphere."

To Travel by Plane

When Mr. MacKinnon leaves here tomorrow he will be accompanied by his deputy, L. D. Wilgress, and two other officials of his department, Yves Lamontagne and G. B. Smith. They leave New York by plane Monday for Nassau, Bahamas, returning to Miami on Wednesday.

From there the mission goes to Jamaica, Colombia, Canal Zone, Peru, Chile, Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil, Trinidad and Cuba. Canada already has a trade agreement with the British West Indies. It came into effect in 1927 for a 12-year period, and since the outbreak of war has been extended indefinitely, almost certainly for the duration. The Dominion also has "most favored nation" agreements with all the other countries to be visited except Peru, Chile and Cuba.

New Markets Had to be Found

Mutual problems developed for Canada and other western hemisphere nations as a result of the war. German aggression shut off trade with Norway, The Netherlands, Belgium and France. New markets had to be found. The British Navy has kept European enemy countries from shipping goods to this hemisphere.

Canada found new markets in a hurry. Shipments of huge quantities of war materials and footstuff to Britain and other countries more than replaced her lost markets in continental Europe. And in addition she got increased orders from western hemisphere nations. She replaced Germany as third exporting nation, behind the United Kingdom and United States.

Purchases Nearly Doubled

Mr. MacKinnon announced a month ago that exports to South America were valued at $21,509,000 in the first 12 months of the war, an increase of 62 per cent from the previous year. Argentina and Brazil nearly doubled their purchases and every other South American country bought more goods.

"The countries to be visited by the Canadian Mission still are suffering greatly from lack of markets and lack of source of supply," a trade official here said. "They are looking to North America to supply them with goods and to take their own products."

One of the Mission's principal duties, he said, would be to determine what things Canada could buy in the nations to be visited. Many of the products they could provide were available already to Canada, either from home production or from other empire nations.

In addition, many of the countries had only a limited amount of foreign exchange available to purchase Canadian goods.

"It's hard to say what Canadian products might be affected if extended trade with these countries is arranged," he said. "It all depends on what the Mission discovers the needs of the countries to be, and what products Canada can profitably import to maintain a fairly reasonable balance on imports and exports."

Receive Favored Nation Treatment

The official said that since most of the nations to be visited received "most favored nation" treatment with Canada, any major change in tariff arrangements affecting one country likely would mean changes involving the other nation as well.

While Mr. MacKinnon and his mission are on their tour, two members of the Inter-American Development Commission, Washington, will be in the same area, attempting to establish groups in each of the American republics for the betterment of western hemisphere trade.

This American move is in line with President Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy, under which the United States has signed trade treaties with most South American countries.

Through the permanent Inter-American Economic and Financial Committee established at Panama last year, the United States is striving to stimulate hemisphere collaboration on economic matters.

The U.S. Import-Export Bank also is extending credit to some Latin American countries under which they may purchase equipment and other goods in the United States to strengthen their home industry.

How to choose a Tender Chicken

Examine the breast. Is it plump and meaty? Press the breast bone. Is it flexible? Then you can count on a fine, tender chicken for dinner.

And here's the test for GOOD COAL

Is it trademarked with RED spots? If so, you've got the best Pennsylvania hard coal—the low ash anthracite—actually laundered to insure as nearly 100% pure coal as money can buy. There's only one Red trademarked coal. It's Famous Reading Anthracite. And that's the coal we sell.

Mountain View

Mountain View, Nov. 28. — The Mountain View young people held their regular meeting on Monday night in the Sunday school rooms with a good attendance. The meeting was opened by singing a hymn followed by prayer. Mrs. L. Wight read the Scripture lesson. The weekly issue of the club paper was read by Mr. Andrew Harris. Mr. L. Wight took charge of the Christian culture program. Miss Evelyn Young gave an interesting paper. Miss S. Wilson and Miss Madeline McKittrick gave readings. An amusing debate, "Resolved that face powder has done more harm than gunpowder" followed. Mr. Lewis Wight and Miss Madeline McKittrick were the affirmative side. The negative side and winners were Mr. William Nightingale and Mr. Harold Motley. Hymn and benediction brought the meeting to a close. Contests and games were enjoyed for a short time.

Mrs. Ben Anderson, Mrs. John Black and Miss Lillian Sprague attended the Past Matrons' Club at the home of Mrs. Harold Noxon, Christian Street, on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Cross, Christian Street, were supper guests on Tuesday night with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Sprague and family.

Mr. Jay Sprague spent Tuesday and Wednesday in Ottawa.

Quite a number of young people attended the dance in Demorestville hall on Wednesday night. This social evening was sponsored by the Junior Farmers and Girls' Clubs of the county, proceeds to be given to the Ambulance Fund.

Miss Muriel Burkitt was a supper guest on Wednesday night with Miss Evelyn Sprague.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Sprague were supper guests on Wednesday night with Mrs. J. E. Sprague of Big Island.

The Vanity Girls' Club held their meeting on Friday night at the home of Misses Shirley and Loreen Wilson with seven girls in attendance. The meeting was opened by singing the club song. Miss Miriam Keeble read the minutes of the last meeting and collection was taken. The evening was spent in club work. At the close delicious refreshments were served.

On Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Barber entertained a number of young people to dinner in honor of their son Willet's birthday.

Miss Elizabeth Jordan spent Saturday afternoon with her cousin, Mrs. B. Welch, Picton.

Mrs. Clarence Sprague, Pauline and Nellie were supper guests on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wallbridge, Massassaga.

Miss Irene Reid, Reg. N., Bloomfield, spent a few days last week with her sister, Mrs. Trumbel and Sunday afternoon and evening with Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Hamilton.

Mr. Grant Minaker and Miss Bernice Minaker spent a few days last week with relatives in Toronto.

Guests for dinner on Sunday with Miss Lillian Sprague were: Mrs. Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. L. Goodwin of Cherry Valley, Mr. and Mrs. John Black, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Anderson, Mr. J. G. Sprague, Mr. Charles Sprague, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Poste and Yvonne, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Chase of North Lakeside, Misses Elizabeth Jordan and Annie Blair.

Mrs. Howard Bovay and boys of Belleville spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wood.

Miss Hazel Benner, Reg. N., Belleville General Hospital, spent Monday with Miss Pearl Hamilton.

Rev. Adamson of Ameliasburg spent the tea hour on Monday with Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Hamilton.

Sidney Crossing

Sidney Crossing, Nov. 28. — Mr. and Mrs. George Millard took tea with the latter's parents Wednesday evening last.

The friends of this neighborhood extend much sympathy to Mr. Wm. McMullen and family in their sad bereavement.

Mrs. William Hamilton and Mrs. Theda Hess, Frankford, called on Mrs. Bruce Hogle on Friday afternoon, also Mrs. Ida Bowler of Belleville is a guest in their home.

Mrs. Stanley Spafford made some calls in the neighborhood on Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Perry Hamilton spent a few days recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burrell Hamilton.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Vardy entertained company on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Hogle, Mrs. Ida Bowler and Garnet May of Belleville took dinner on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Munroe, Belleville, and also called on Mrs. Earl Elmy who has been confined to her bed.

The friends of Mr. J. McGowan, formerly of this neighborhood, will be sorry to learn he is in Belleville General Hospital where he underwent an operation.

Friends wish for Mr. Fred Spafford a speedy recovery as he has been confined to his home through illness.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Stickle called on friends in this neighborhood one day last week.

THROW STONES AT GERMANS

London, Nov. 28 (CP)—Citizens of the Port of Brest in occupied France are so pro-British in sentiment they are throwing stones at German soldiers there and insulting Italians, according to a report by the British Broadcasting Corporation last night. The BBC said German authorities have had to warn citizens against continuing these actions.

The War Today

(By Guy Rhoades, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

What significance to attach to yesterday's statement by Ernest Bevin that a gigantic call-up of Britain's manpower might be expected next year has started observers guessing.

The Minister of Labor suggested in the House of Commons that men between 35 and 40 might be called then for training and the quickest assumption was that some offensive action was involved which might necessitate large-scale troop replacements.

In the same house with Mr. Bevin was Leslie Hore-Belisha, former war minister whose resignation was asked and received by the late Prime Minister Chamberlain. Mr. Hore-Belisha reiterated his belief in aggressive action by demanding more vigorious participation of British troops in assisting the Greeks. It was always Mr. Hore-Belisha's belief that the only real defence is attack and it was thought to have been this belief that cost him his portfolio last winter. He was reported then to have advocated a furious assault on the German westwall rather than the plan followed by the Allied High Command of remaining behind the Maginot Line.

The place of a major offensive is hard to guess. The logic choice would seem to be through Greece, to whose assistance British air and naval forces already have gone but German submarines might make troop transportation from Britain a difficult problem and Italian undersea craft would do their best to stop them.

Assault Not Too Difficult

The alternative is an assault on Nazi-held European positions. At first glance this would appear as difficult as a German assault on England. Actually it is not quite the case.

The southern coast of England at the Strait of Dover is high and the foreshore comparatively short for a considerable measure of its length. The French coast, on the other hand, is low and sandy, making an easier landing place.

It is conceivable that, since the Royal Navy, the merchant marine and volunteers with anything from yachts to canoes got a huge body of men out of Dunkirk they could put them back again. It is largely a question of whether the war office would consider the effort worth the risk, as it would almost certainly involve heavy losses.

Arthur Greenwood, Minister without portfolio, painted no rosy picture of the future, but said the government was confident Britain could win in the long run provided she could get help. The nation needs mainly ships and aircraft—aircraft to hammer the Nazis and ships to carry men, munitions and non-military supplies.

The Minister indicated the shipping position was not unlike that of the spring of 1917 when the German submarine blockade was at the height of its effectiveness.

The government would like to establish a huge war industry in Canada and buy heavily from the United States, perhaps, as the Marquess of Lothian suggested the other day, obtaining loans from the United States.

At present the United States cannot legally lend money to a belligerent and undoubtedly there are propaganda forces at work in this country on behalf of the Germans who will do their best to stop or delay any congressional move to sweep those barriers away.

"English, Bravest of All In Way in Which They Shoulder Burden of War"

"NEVER BREAK SPIRIIT"

c/o Base Post Office, Canada

Dear Mother, Dad and All:

Just a few lines to let you know I have received all the papers which you have sent so far. I received three lots one day and the very next day I got another bundle of them. I am waiting very patiently for a letter now for they don't get here even as quick as they used to but that can be expected the way this war is today. Mother, do you know that even though the paper mentions about the homes that are destroyed over here, it does not half show how much these people are standing up under the hardships of this war. Little do people realize at home even though they read it in the paper of what it is really like in a country so endangered by a war so close and around them. I have often thought how fortunate the people at home are, not having to black out all lights at night and spend most of their nights in underground shelters. Just think of what it is like going into a shelter to escape the shrapnel from bombs and anti-aircraft fire and probably come out when it is all clear to find your home a mess of ruins and everything you had worked so hard for gone in an hour or so. Credit is to be given to the people who live under these conditions in the way they bear up under these hardships which are in no way small ones. It is wonderful to go into a public shelter and hear the people singing and joking to pass the time and they never turn anyone away but make room for them even if there is very little of this for themselves. If Hitler thinks he can ever break the spirit of the British people he is all wrong for this I don't believe can ever be accomplished. So Mother, to me the English people along with the others of the British Isles are the bravest of all races and should be praised highly and looked up to for the way in which they shoulder their burden of troubles and sorrows. This is the only way I can find to express my feelings of how lucky people in Canada and U.S.A. are—no worry of blackouts, no fear of nightly bomb attacks, no thought of staying in a shelter all night where sleep is just about impossible and no chance of coming from a shelter to find their home destroyed. When I return home Mother, I will try to tell you more of what these people have put up with here, it is easier to tell it then write it in a letter, so I hope it ends soon for these peoples' sake as well as mine that I may return home.

Well, I have hardly mentioned anything but one thing so far in this letter. There is not much to say of course even though Jerry is over often he has never dropped bombs so very close to where we are. I don't want you to worry too much over me as I am o.k. and will take care of where I am walking when Jerry is near. As I write this letter I am sitting in the office at the Q. M. stores wondering what it is like at home for it is raining hard here and has been all day. How are all the kids and I hope Gerald and Lyle Skinner get my letters o.k., also that you get yours for I sent one in yours for Mr. Lloyd not only for that reason though for I worry about it if you don't get my letters. I guess Mother this Christmas I will miss my Mom and Dad worse than ever being so far from home and my visit for Christmas dinner at home. I guess if I am still near enough I will spend my Christmas at the Hodges family home for they have asked me to. I have grown to like these people pretty well for they have treated me so good and if I ever did anything to hurt their feeling I would be sorry the rest of my life. Well Mother in a couple of more months I will be away from home one year and it sure seems a long time since I sat in the house at home on my last visit before leaving for over here. I am still waiting for a reply from the legion about what they have found out about Ruth so if you have heard from them please let me know as soon as you can. Tell Dad I wish he would write just a few lines in one of your letters for I do miss him a lot, more than I knew for I used to like to sit and talk with him as he understands so well.

Well Mother I think I will close for now, hoping everyone at home is fine and in good health as I am at present. With loads of love and kisses to all, especially my Mother and Dad, from

Your loving son,
BERT

DESCRIBED AS "DISGRACEFUL"

Indianapolis, Nov. 28 (AP)—Henry F. Schricker, governor-elect of Indiana, Wednesday described as "disgraceful" the drinking which he said he saw at the Indiana-Purdue football game at Lafayette last Saturday.

"I saw full-grown women, their feet dragging the ground, being supported by drunken men trying to get out of the stadium."

Koritza, An Opportunity

Koritza, principal Italian base within Albanian territory for the invasion of Greece, has at last fallen. Rome admits that the town is in Greek hands. This is a suitable triumph for Greek arms. Argyrokastron, the second Italian base, a little more to the westward, is now under attack.

Roles have been reversed in the Pindus Mountains. It is the Italians, not the Greeks, who are on the defensive in this new stage of the conflict. Porto Edda is threatened, the advancing Greeks being only a scant thirty miles away. Valona is no longer safe. The sole port in Albania securely left to Italy is Durazzo, far to the north. British airplanes have already bombed Durazzo, but if the Italians are pushed back to the sea it may become their only outlet.

A good Italian-built road leads from Koritza to Durazzo, through Tirana, the capital. It is along this road that the Italians are retiring. But a good road for the Italians is also a good road for the advancing Greeks. With it in Greek hands, all the Italian forces in Albania could be outflanked, cut off among the mountains.

That is the present prospect indicated by Greek success—the Italians kept on the run, the Straits under British domination, and Yugoslavia nerved to resist German and Italian pressure. It probably needs only a comparatively small number of British divisions with accompanying artillery, tanks and airplanes to bring it to fulfillment. But where are the divisions and whence are they coming? Is British land armament and trained man power yet sufficient to spare enough for this providential chance? If the answer is affirmative, this may prove to be a turning point of the war. — N. Y. Times.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop and we came to a little crowd of people with 2 men arguing pollitics in the middle, being a big man and a little man and the big man doing almost all the talking, saying, Do you realize how many airoplanes Germany had at the time of Munick at the very time you claim England should of declared war? 36 thousand, that's how many in actual numbers, and do you know how many England had? he said.

Well no, I cant say I accurately do, the little man said, and the big man said, Then I'll tell you, she had exactly 3 thousand 5 hundred Is that supremacy in the air, or is that just peenuts, I'm asking you? And besides that Germany had 2 million men right up on their toes ready to pounce on Checko Slovackia like a cat on a mouse at the drop of a hat, and do you know how many men Checko Slovackia had in uniform? he said.

Well I cant say precisely, the little man said, and the big man said, Well I can, she had precisely half a million undertrained men.

Wich just then pop pushed in a little ways saying, You're wrong there, brother, she had a million and a quarter men, and every one of them could hit a half a frankfurter at a distance of 500 yards. And furthermore England had a 4 thousand anty aircraft guns hidden in secret emplasements along every square yard of the channel coast, with 18 thousand expert gunners to man them, and furthermore Belgium had 500 thousand parashoot troops that nobody knew about, he said.

That's news to me, the big man said, and pop said, It would of been news to the Germans too, and bad news too, believe me.

And he quick kept on going, me saying, G, pop, how did you know all that? and he said, I didn't and I dont, but I've found that a man with too many statistics never really knows what he's talking about, and the only way to beat him is with more and louder statistics, although the funny part is, I believe his side of the argument was right.

Wich maybe it was.

WALL STREET

New York, Nov. 28. — (AP) — Scattered recoveries appeared in today's stock market but the list, as a whole, displayed considerable difficulty in regaining its balance.

Prices dipped moderately at the start, then steadied when buying seeped into the Steels. Dealings slowed to about half those of the preceding session and, near the fourth hour, minor advances and declines were well distributed.

Among stocks which got up as much as a point or so there were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Youngstown Sheet, U.S. Rubber, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Boeing, Anaconda, Great Northern, Dow Chemical and Public Service of N.J.

Down occasionally were General Motors, Texas Corp., Douglas Aircraft, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak, Consolidated Edison, American Telephone and Union Carbide.

Canadian issues dipped generally. Off 1-8 of a point each were Dome Mines and McIntyre. Canadian Pacific steadied while Canada 4s among bonds, lost 1-2 point.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 28 (CP)—Mining stocks were a bit heavy in the early hours on Toronto Exchange today while the industrials and western oils posted minor gains. Volume was fair at 140,000 shares for the first three hours.

O'Brien was again conspicuous in the action, trading heavily on a rise of 28 cents to 1.53. It was holding part of the gain at 1.42 this afternoon. Several golds sold ex-dividend and they were down a few cents from Wednescay's close. Among them were Kerr-Addison, Perron and McKenzie.

In the base metals Smelters, selling ex-dividend 1.25, was down a point to 41. Noranca weakened a small fraction.

Bell Telephone, Loblaw A, McColl Pfd., B. A. Oil and Imperial Oil all registered minor gains and Home Oil and Calgary-Edmonton were gainers in the western oil list.

For instance, he said, in all temporary war buildings being erected for the government and in airplane hangars across the country wooden trusses were used instead of steel. Also manufacturers making steel shelves, desks, filing cabinets and such things were being encouraged to use wood instead.

David B. Carswell Appointed Controller Of Ship Building

Ottawa, Nov. 28—(CP)—David B. Carswell, Director General of the Naval Construction Branch of the Department of Munitions and Supply, by order-in-council has been appointed Controller of Ship Construction and Ship Repairs, the Munitions Minister, Hon. C. D. Howe, announced Wednesday.

The purpose of the appointment, Mr. Howe said in a statement, is to assure a maximum utilization of Canadian ship building and repair facilities in order to meet the present and potential wartime needs.

Mrs. Carswell will continue his duties as Director General of the Naval Construction Branch of the Department. Upon his appointment as controller, he automatically becomes a member of the Wartime Industries Control Board, which now includes also the controllers of the timber, steel, oil, metals, machine tools, and power industries.

Wide administrative and regulatory powers have been conferred on the new controller. Under the terms of the order-in-council he has virtually complete control of the Canadian shipbuilding and representative industry.

At his discretion, he can fix fees, allocate work, determine priorities, designate the facilities to be employed by any ship requiring repair and redistribute any machines and tools employed by the industry. He is also empowered to take possession of shipbuilding and repairing tools and subject to order-in-council, to acquire and operate any plant.

ANTONESCU TRIES

These reports slipped past a screen of censorship:—

The blood purge, started by a rebellious wing of the Iron Guard "Legionary Movement," struck down not only those incarcerated in Jilava Prison but also numerous politicians who never were arrested.

Prompt Action Saves Officials

Only prompt government protection saved former Premier George Tatarescu and Ion Gigurtu and former War Minister Gen. George Ilasievici from assassination.

Antonescu himself is considering resigning if Extremist Guardists cannot be restrained.

The whereabouts of Juliu Maniu, famed leader of the one-time National Peasant party, is not known and fears are expressed for his safety. He has had a strong bodyguard since Iron Guard rule began after Carol's abdication in September.

Antonescu's efforts to cool off the Iron Guardist extremists are backed by German divisions on Rumanian soil and by Rumanian garrisons, both reported ready for instant action.

A terse government communique acknowledged the purge by bullets yesterday in Jilava Prison and said the government "disapproves."

The Iron Guard, in power since it overthrew the regime of King Carol II and chased him from the country, admittedly was settling its chief political score—avenging the death of its founder, Corneliu Zeala Codreanu.

Saturday will be the second anniversary of the death of Codreanu, killed in Carol's administration and buried in the courtyard of Jilava Prison. To the Iron Guard, Codreanu is a martyr.

The Bucharest communique merely said "some political prisoners"—those "considered principally responsible for the crime against Codreanu and other Legionniares under the last regime"—were shot dead by Guardists who were exhuming their bodies.

It did not specify how many were slain, nor in what circumstances, but other reports said there were 64, among them such once conspicuous leaders as former Premier George Argesanu, former Supreme Court President Radu Pascu and other Cabinet officers.

George Bratianu, leader of the old Liberal party and Victor Iamansi, former Minister of Justice now are listed in unconfirmed reports with the others known to have been slain yesterday.

Purge Remorseless Affair

The purge was a swift, remorseless affair, according to reports through diplomatic channels.

Shortly before dawn yesterday, they said, several hundred men got into Jilava Prison, seized the keys from Guards and, one by one, unlocked the cells. The prisoners were called out and shot dead on the spot.

There also were reports of arrests of scores of others in disfavor of the ruling Guard and of resignations among Rumanian officials and army officers over the outbreak.

Antonescu, however, was said to have the situation in hand, backed up by the presence of German troops in Rumania and by Sima who told the Guard "the only law must be that of saving our Fatherland...... I order every Legionnaire to follow the orders of his leader."

Friction within the Iron Guard has flared several times recently into gunplay and Antonescu has been endeavoring to reconcile factions among his Guardist followers.

Antonescu, who became the Guardists' "Spiritual" leader when he donned their green shirt after becoming premier, is described here as having pinned his hope for a national renaissance on Siam's ability to convert party extremists to an orderly program.

Instead, Sima was bitterly criticized by Ion Codreanu, father of the Iron Guard founder, who led an abortive attack on the Bucharest "Green House" headquarters of the Guard and is now reported in custody in a hospital.

The split became so dangerous that some members of the Codreanu faction were put to death by the government on charges of treason but even this did not dissuade it from attempting a purge, it was said.

A brief commentary on the Bucharest radio last night deplored the prison "incident" as an "error of youthful mentality by armed people" who took revenge on the old regime and thus did the Iron Guard "great damage".

Disappearance of Prof. Nicolae Iroga, former mentor of King Carol, was rumored but whether it was meant he had been taken into custody by the government or by rebellious Green Shirts was unknown.

Severe Penalties

Bucharest,—(AP)— Premier Ion Antonescu issued a decree today providing severe penalties for "violations of personal liberty".

It authorized sentences up to death for theft of public funds.

Welland Ship Canal Shipping Increased By Million Tons

Port Colborne, Ont., Nov. 28—(CP) — More than 1,000,000 tons more shipping used the Welland ship canal in 1940 than in 1939, canal officials said today as the navigation season neared its close.

Although final figures are not yet available, officials said they expected a decrease in grain shipments, but an increase in those of ore, coal, steel and cement.

Congestion at elevators here was held responsible for decreased grain receipts, while congestion at elevators farther east caused a decreases in shipments.

Marine officials said they expected more than thirty vessels to winter in Port Colborne harbor. Most of them will be used to store grain for milling companies.

Churning Cream Rises One Cent

Toronto, Nov. 23.—The easy tone that has been evident since the first of the week prevailed in fresh eggs on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Butter remained firm, but churning cream was lifted a full cent.

Inclement weather failed to influence the egg market, and prices to shipper on the two top grades again eased slightly. The retail section showed no change. Demand was only fair on all grades.

Lack of selling pressure and small arrivals of current receipts kept prices firm on the butter market under continued cautious buying. No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids were sold at the former level of 30 3-4c a pound. Buyers raised churning cream 1c to 31c for No. 1 grade on truck country points, the result of the edging up in butter prices during this week.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Nov. 28.—Produce market prices here as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 32c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 31 1-2c.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 40c; A-medium, 37c-38c; A-pullets, 35c; A-large, original, 31c; B-original, 29c; C-original, 24c. Receipts: 470 cases.

GOEBBELS VISITS NORWAY

Oslo, Norway, (Via Berlin)—Nov. 28 (CP)—German Propaganda Minister Goebbels arrived here today for a visit in German-occupied Norway.

ADD TWO TRAWLERS

The trawlers were the Dungeness and the Fontenoy. "In neither case were casualties sustained," the Admiralty said.

The Hunter Chased The Fox and the Fox Bit the Hunter

All manner of unusual hunting experiences are being reported from the district west of Peterborough. First it was the episode of the hunter and the wolf and the liver; now, along comes a story of two Ashburnham fox hunters relating the peculiar manner in which they despatch their foxes.

It seems that their dog, and they claimed he was a good one, "holed" the fox and there stood barking until his master came to find it. The hole in which the fox had sought refuge proved to be a skunk hole, however, and soon he was to be seen backing out, but not motivated by that force called free will. The skunk, it is said, was in the hole, and his presence made it untenable from the viewpoint of the fox.

Upon seeing the tail of the animal emerge, one of the hunters seized it and pulled. It wasn't difficult to extricate the fox, but a tail with a fox on the end of it is a hard thing to manage even under the best of circumstances, and with a real live fox, the situation becomes almost critical.

The hunter decided that the only way to kill the fox without giving it a chance to escape would be to slam it against the ground. This he tried, whirling it above and around his head, but he forgot the presence of his companion. The fox didn't, and on his way around, made a grab at the hunter and made contact. He bit part of the hunter's pants away and a goodly sized piece of flesh went with it.

Well, the story could have only one ending; the fox was killed after such a mammoth battle, defeat was inevitable, and foxes shouldn't bite people anyway.

LONDON IS QUIET

and Home Security Ministries said the night's casualties in Britain were few and damage "not extensive."

Unofficially, 11 persons, including six children, were reported killed in a village near the southwest town attacked by the German night fliers.

London had another air raid warning around noon, followed shortly by the all-clear.

It was disclosed that two famous London hotels—the Savoy and the Carlton—and the Town Hall in Leicester were damaged in recent raids.

Two Messerschmitts, fleeing from British pursuit planes, dropped two bombs on a town in southeastern England this morning.

One of the bombs damaged a maternity home. Two persons were cut by flying glass.

Between 150 and 200 German planes participated in the raid, it was estimated.

German or Italian planes were reported near East Anglia this morning.

Several small groups of raiders crossed the Kent coast at great height. Anti-aircraft fire broke up their formations but they headed inland toward the northwest.

Roof Torn Off Hospital

One bomb tore off the roof of a hospital wing, killing some patients and a nurse in London while at another point in the capital six bombs started a fire which could be seen for miles.

Raiders appeared over the southwest town at intervals of 10 minutes, scattering incendiary bombs, followed by high explosives.

An unofficial report from there said many raiders were driven seaward by a "terrific anti-Aircraft barrage" before they could empty their bomb racks.

The Government communique said the southwest town was under intermittent attack from dusk last night until 2.30 a.m. but "at no time were the raids on a heavy scale."

London's first alarm today sounded at 6.30 a.m. (1.30 a.m. EDT) and ended about an hour and a half later.

The Press Association said police and home guards were scouring the countryside in the vicinity of South Godstone, Surrey, for the crew of a Junkers 88 bomber brought down in the early morning hours.

Crew members were seen to bail out of the plane when it was crippled.

ELEVEN STUDENTS KILLED IN PARIS

New York Says BBC Reports Over 500 Sent After Riots to Concentration Camps in Germany

New York, Nov. 28 (AP)— The British Broadcasting Corporation said today 11 students had been killed in Paris, more than 500 sent to concentration camps in Germany and others deported to unoccupied France as a result of recent rioting which began Armistice Day.

The report, heard here by National Broadcasting Company, said the students, supporting the Free French movement of Gen. Charles De Gaulle, attempted to eject Germans from a university campus in Paris and that the university later was closed.

Reports from Vichy said today that Georges Ribbert, Minister of Public Information, was in Paris negotiating with German authorities there for the reopening of the University of Paris.

R. C. A. F. PLANES CONTINUE SEARCH

Two of Nine United States Bombers Leave for Home, Others Warm Up for Departure

St. Hubert, Que., Nov. 28—(CP)—Two of the nine United States bombers which aided in the search for missing Royal Canadian Air Force fliers at East Lake, Que., took off today for their home bases and the other seven were being "warmed up" for their departure.

The planes were heading for Langley Field, Newport News, Va.

An official said they had received word that the Canadian government had released them from the search, in which they had been taking part since Nov. 20.

R.C.A.F. planes, however, are still seeking the three missing men, two of whose companions have been found alive. The R.C.A.F. craft remained grounded here due to bad weather conditions at East Lake, approximately 250 flying miles northeast of here.

LAURIER ELECTED IN OTTAWA EAST

Nephew of Sir Wilfrid Laurier Has Majority of 9,000 Over Two Opponents

Ottawa, Nov. 23 (CP)—Appointment of Hon. Robert Laurier as Minister of Mines in the Ontario Cabinet has been overwhelmingly approved by the electors of Ottawa East provincial constituency.

By a clear majority of more than 9,000 votes, the 48-year-old nephew of Sir Wilfrid Laurier was elected in yesterday's by-election in the riding to take the legislative seat held by his predecessor in the Cabinet, Hon. Paul Leduc.

His two opponents, Pte. Alax Denomme, Social Credit, and Aldege Scott, Independent Liberal, polled only slightly more than a tenth as many votes as the official Liberal candidate.

When counting of ballots ended for the night, Returning Officer Joachim Sauve, K.C., said that with 187 of 188 reported, the vote stood: Laurier, 10,147; Denomme, 626; Scott 324.

Poll Quite Light

The poll was one of the lightest in the constituency's history, only a third of the registered voters cast ballots. A snowfall which continued through much of the day was believed responsible for the small turnout.

When Mr. Leduc, now clerk of the Supreme Court of Canada, was elected to the legislature in the 1937 provincial election, he received a majority of 13,134 votes over his Conservative opponent, Nelson J. Lacasse, and Pte. Denomme, also a Social Credit candidate then.

Election of Mr. Laurier last night left the party standing in the legislature at 63 Liberals, 21 Conservatives and one United Farmer of Ontario, with five seats vacant.

Dungannon School Entered by Vandals

Bancroft, Nov. 28—Some time during the night of November 22nd the schoolhouse in School Section No. 1 Dungannon was broken into by some vandals, who had no regard other than destruction. Contents of the pupils desks and teacher's desk were strewn all over the room. Canned goods, which are kept in these rural schools for the convenience of the children in serving hot lunches were stolen. Rice and flour, which evidently was of no use to the ransackers was scattered over the entire room. A number of incidentals from the teacher's desk are also missing. The contention is that apparently the same thug or thugs, who held up the teacher of this school on November 4th on a lonely section of the road between her boarding place and the schoolhouse are responsible for this later development.

Other sections of this district are also feeling the brunt of these marauders for the home of John Anderson was broken into and two dozen quarts of preserved fruit was stolen. Mrs. Gardiner, who lives close to the school, reports quite a number of her chickens missing and William Garrett's poultry house was visited and turkeys stolen, which all seems to prove that these menacing individuals are remaining in the district and keeping under cover of the woods and pilfering by night. Provincial Police officer S. W. Palmateer is still conducting a search, which is quite difficult without snow for tracking.

Miss Dorothy Stoughton, of Wilberforce, spent the week end at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Hermon Kelusky of Bancroft.

Miss Wigmore one of the staff of nurses in the Bancroft Red Cross Hospital returned home from Wilberforce Sunday where she had been relieving at Wilberforce Outpost for the past ten days.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Flynn and son Tom of Bird's Creek motored to Orillia over the week end to visit their daughter Margaret, returning home Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Maurice Kennedy who is working with government surveyors east of Peterborough spent the week with his brother Reverend J. L. Kennedy of Bancroft.

Mr. U. A. Hubbel, of Paudash Lake, is in Huntsville this week on business in connection with their mill situated in Algonquin Park under the supervision of his son Frank.

Mr. Cecil Wiggins motored to Belleville Tuesday morning, where he will be replacing one of the Imperial Oil staff temporarily.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Bandy of Craigmont last Friday in the Red Cross hospital, Bancroft, a son.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Wannamaker of McArthur's Mills in the local hospital, Bancroft, Tuesday, a son.

Mrs. Adam Mitchell, Mr. Mervin Mitchell and Mrs. Norman Mitchell motored to Belleville on Tuesday.

Mrs. John Moxam, of Bancroft, has purchased the home vacated by Oscar Creighton on Spring Street moving in Tuesday morning.

In Bancroft Police Court Tuesday Marshall Hayes was sentenced to six months in jail and an additional fine of five hundred dollars for the possession of an illicit still, with a further jail extension of six months in default of the fine.

Bancroft Wednesday morning was blanketted by a four inch fall of snow and is still snowing hard with a temperature of 13 above. Monday was quite cold as the temperature never went higher than eighteen above during the day.

Miles Quadruplets Celebrate Birthday

St. Neots, England, Nov. 28 (CP Cable)—Britain's Miles quadruplets are five years old today, but there was no birthday party because Ann and Ernest are in hospital with scarlet fever while Paul and Michael are recovering at home from chicken pox.

Ann and Ernest, better now, got plenty of presents but celebrated quietly. Ann had chicken pox also.

Paul and Michael were in bed three weeks. An older brother, Gordon, had chicken pox too and the father Walter Miles, was in bed with tonsilitis.

No wonder the mother said: "For 10 days I've had a very rough time of it."

The quads started school two months ago.

"They love it and are disappointed at having to stay away," the mother said.

TWO TRAWLERS LOST

London, Nov. 28—(CP)—The loss of two naval trawlers "as a result of damage received in action with enemy aircraft" was announced today by the Admiralty.

SEEK DATA ON U.K.'S FINANCIAL RESERVES IN U.S.

Banking Committee Hopes to Answer Question When Matter of Credits Arises

STUDY FOREIGN SYSTEM

Washington, Nov. 28 (AP)—The United States Senate Banking Committee, it was learned today, is seeking to establish the exact extent of Britain's remaining financial reserves in the United States—data considered essential to any Congressional discussion of loans or credits to the empire.

Chairman Robert Wagner (Dem-New York) disclosed that this was one of the major questions which the committee hopes to answer by a broad monetary and fiscal investigation authorized by the Senate more than a year ago.

Senator Wagner said he expected to open public hearings on this and numerous kindred subjects shortly after the next session of Congress meets in January.

"The invetigation also probably will include a study of how Germany, England and other nations are financing their costly war outlays and avoiding inflation," he said in an interview. "It may develop that we will need legislation to control any tendency toward inflation."

A growing Congressional dispute over giving Britain the financial aid now prohibited by law has produced a secondary argument as to what funds and resources, Britain still has left in the United States for purchases of munitions, airplanes, ships and other supplies.

Delay Action

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday delayed action upon British aid requests until January and Chairman Walter George (Dem-Georgia), said that an evaluation of British resources and purchases was pertinent to any future Congressional action.

Several high administration officials have estimated that Britain's remaining financial reserves were equal to at least another year of heavy war supply purchases. British spokesmen, however, recently have been saying that their financial problem would become acute in 1941.

Senator Wagner pointed out that the Banking Committee in the private investigation already underway has asked for detailed facts on foreign capital, investments and balances in the United States. The information has been requested from the Treasury Department, Commerce Department, Federal Reserve System and affiliated banks, and numerous other public and private sources.

The investigation, authorized before the European outbreak, aimed at recommendations for a "national monetary and banking authorities of the Federal Government shall be guided and governed."

It was approved by the Senate after continued disputes over gold devaluation, purchase of foreign and domestic silver, and other fiscal and monetary issues.

Greek Steamer Sends Out SOS

Thomaston, Me., Nov. 28 (AP)—The British freighter Urla, responding to the SOS of the Greek steamship Eugena Cambanis, drew alongside the disabled vessel last night as darknees fell over the stormy North Atlantic.

The Cambanis, her engine room full of water, was drifting dangerously 125 miles southeast of St. Johns, Nfld., before wind and sea. Her foremast was down and a part of her lumber cargo was washed overboard in seas swept by winds of gale force.

While the Urla, a 5,189-ton vessel of London registry, went to the aid of the Cambanis, other radio reports told of a crew's abandonment of the Canadian vessel Lisieux also buffeted by the storm. The Lisieux was in a position estimated to be 400 miles northeast of St. Johns.

Mackay Radio, intercepting messages between the Urla and the 3,517-ton Cambanis, reported the British vessel had asked the other to resort to blinkers for further exchanges.

Radio reports from ships in the area were limited, apparently because of danger of exposing ship positions to enemy craft.

PLANS APPROVED FOR NEWS SERVICE PREPARED BY CBC

New National Service Will be inaugurated by CBC on January 1st

NO RADIO MONOPOLY

Ottawa, Nov. 28 (CP)—Plans for establishment of a National News Service prepared and edited by The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's staff have been approved by the Board of Governors, a statement issued by Gladstone Murray, General Manager, said today.

The statement follows:

The Board of Governors of the CBC has given final approval to the plans for the establishment on Jan. 1 of a National News Service prepared and edited by the CBC staff. The National News Service will be carried by all CBC stations and in addition by all private stations needed to extend coverage throughout the country. The service will be available to all other private stations desiring it. No advertising will be permitted, the service being strictly unsponsored.

No News Monopoly

While setting up a National News Service, the CBC does not aim to create a radio news monopoly in Canada. Private stations will still be permitted to carry the services of approved news agencies, subject, of course, to censorship regulations. Also there will be further limitation of the nature and amount of advertising that may be associated with these supplementary news services.

Last summer the CBC ruled that sponsored news bulletins on private stations would not be permitted to insert advertising matter in the body of the bulletins. After Jan. 1 next, the only advertising permitted in connection with radio news will be of the "institutional" kind, by which is meant only the naming of the sponsor and the product before and after the news.

The continued acceptance in Canada of the Transradio News Service by private stations remains under consideration, pending further information which will result from investigations now in progress.

C. P. Turns Over Service

Montreal, Nov. 28—(CP)—Gladstone Murray, general manager of The Canadian Broadcasting Corportion, announced today that the CBC Board of Governors has approved a contract with The Canadian Press whereby effective January 1 next the news-gathering organisation turns over its entire news service to the CBC free of charge.

The CBC is setting up a Radio News Compilation staff with Dan MacArthur of Toronto as chief editor. The staff will prepare news bulletins at Vancouver, Winnipeg, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax for use without advertising sponsorship over CBC stations and such other stations as request them.

The provision of its News Service without charge is a continuation of the Public Service Policy adopted by The Canadian Press toward radio in 1933. Until 1939, The CP prepared a bulletin service at its own expense. From July 1, 1939, until the present the CBC has paid the cost of compilation of news bulletins by Canadian Press staff men.

Co-operation Splendid

"In lining up his staff, Mr. MacArthur is relying upon the experience of The Canadian Press in the Radio-News field over the last seven years", Mr. Murray said. "The co-operation of the management of The Canadian Press in facilitating the shift over to the CBC compiling staff at the year-end has been admirable and invaluable".

The chief editor of the CBC National News Service has almost 20 years of experience in newspaper and publicity work. He spent five years on the staff of The Toronto Globe in the 20s and more recently was for five years with the McLean Publishing Company. Prior to his appointment he was Ontario representative of the CBC in its Press and Information Department. He is a son of the late Peter MacArthur, noted Canadian writer and journalist.

Cost Will Be Slight

The new radio set-up will mark the disappearance from the air of "The Canadian Press News" which has been carried in four 15-minute bulletins daily over the CBC network. From Jan. 1, the CBC bulletins will be prepared from the World-Wide News Service of The Canadian Press and its Allies, and from other news sources if the CBC so decides.

Under the contract, the CBC agrees to emit its news bulletins over nine CBC-owned stations and 25 privately-owned stations. All privately-owned stations designated as essential for national coverage will receive the service free of charge. Any other stations may receive the service at no other expense than wire-line cost.

The CBC New Service will be maintained on a strictly sustaining basis, with no credit in any announcement to any news agency, newspaper or other newsgathering source, and no commercial sponsorship, direct or indirect.

Under the contract, the CBC will not permit any station in Canada to broadcast news obtained from the columns of any daily newspaper without the newspaper's written authority.

Comenting on the use of Transradio news, which is sent from the United States by short wave to some Canadian stations, Mr. Murray said: "Transradio News Service is not accepted for any network or station of the CBC."

Viscount Craigavon Buried at Belfast

Belfast, Nov. 28 (CP)—Viscount Craigavon, late Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, was buried today in the new cemetery in the Parliament House estate following private services at his residence. He died Sunday at the age of 69.

Soil from each of the six counties of Northern Ireland was sprinkled over the grave. The soil was taken from a bowl used for the same purpose at the funeral of Lord Carson, Craigavon's chief in the struggle against the Irish Home Rule Bill before the First Great War.

The flag-draped coffin was borne on a gun carriage along a road lined with men of the Ulster special constabulary. Men of the Royal Ulster Rifles marched alongside.

The ashes of W. S. Johnstone, one of the earliest members of the Launceston, Australia, Golf Club, were scattered over the links from an airplane in accordance with instructions in his will.

"WHAT MEN WEAR"

INDIAN MASCOT PRESENTED TO OVERSEAS REGT.

Headquarters Company of H. & P. E. Regt. Makes Presentation to Honorary Colonel

COMPANY PARADES

Trenton, (Special) — In a cold biting wind, in the worst blizzard that has struck this district in many months, soldiers of the Headquarters Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Second Battalion, lined up on the shores of the Bay of Quinte to witness the dedication and presentation of the new Indian mascot to the First Battalion now serving overseas.

Lt. Col. B. O. Donnan, E.D., made the presentation of the mascot to Lt. Colonel A. V. Yates, M.C., Honourary Lieut. Colonel of the First Battalion.

The scene was laid on the shores of the Bay of Quinte near the mouth of the River Trent, where the Chief's ancestors have often hunted and sat around their pow-wow fires in years gone by. The ranks of the company stood as rigid as the Chief himself, their faces lighted by the glow of signal fires. In the background the drum beat out the slow, insistent call of the spirit tribes to war. The bugle sounds and the troops snap to the present arms. The officer commanding, Lt. Col. Donnan, steps up, salutes and hands the "Chieftain" to Lt. Col. Yates.

Today the mascot is lashed to the deck of a destroyer on its way overseas where he will take the place of "Little Chief," who now lies buried overseas in France.

For fifty years there stood on the roof of the Canadian Canners' building in Picton, the striking figure of an Indian Chief in full war paint. He had braved all the heats of summer and the frost of winter and the storms of lightnings of the heavens and the bad marksmanship of small boys with 22 rifles. He was a symbol of courage and "stick it boys till H— freezes over."

The First Battalion of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment was quartered in the canning factory right under the eye of "Little Chief." This was in the autumn of 1939, when the regiment was mobilized and preparing to take its place in the First Division of the C.A.S.F. This "Indian" finally found its way into the ranks of the Hasty Pipe.

The story goes that it was one Private Secord of No. 1 Platoon Headquarters Co., who led the scaling part that brought our Indian to the ground and set him up in front of the sergeant's sleeping quarters. He was duly taken on strength with the approval of the owners as C0000 Pte. Battle Axe.

Little Chief sailed with the regiment and in England he stood at proud attention on the barracks square, where he was saluted and respected by all ranks even by the proud officers. When the Canadians went to France, Little Chief proceeded with them, but when the troops withdrew the mascot was carefully buried and the spot marked on the map.

The new mascot, Chief Peta-Wa-Wa-Much will replace Little Chief as the regimental mascot.

In an effort to do their part towards winning the war, the boys of the Trenton High School have organized a Spitfire Fund. Every week the boys lay aside a certain sum of money for the fund. The money will later be sent to the British Government with the request it be used to help in the construction of a Spitfire.

2 LONDON HOTELS DAMAGED IN RAIDS

Savoy and Carlton Hotels in Downtown London Hit by High Explosive Bombs

London, Nov. 28 (CP)—Censors gave permission today to disclose that two of London's most famous hotels—The Savoy and the Carlton—were damaged in recent raids.

The residential portion of the Carlton was closed indefinitely after a high explosive bomb plunged through the roof. About 120 persons were in this part of the building at the time, but there were no fatal casualties.

At the Savoy, where the facade above the court was among the sections damaged, six guests and members of the staff were injured, none seriously. Several rooms were damaged and masonry was hurled from the fifth floor into the street, narrowly missing the Savoy Chapel.

FINN PRESIDENT RESIGNS

Helsinki, Finland, Nov. 28 (AP)—Kyosti Kallio, Finland's 67-year-old president, has resigned because of continued poor haelth, the Government Information Bureau announced today.

Kallio suffered a heart attack Aug. 29 and since then Premier Risto Ryti has been acting president.

(In September the German News Agency D.N.B., published an erroneous report that Kallio was dead, but this was quickly denied in Helsinki, where his condition was reported improving).

Reduction of the 'officer problem" in the Australian Imperial Forces has increased the problem in the militia, the army ministry says, as officers were taken from the militia

AT THE CAPITOL

"Ride Tenderfoot Ride"

The secret to Gene Autry's tremendous popularity is out at last!

There are hundreds of cowboys. There are as many cowboy singers. There are certainly many who are more handsome, who have more of this so-called sex appeal for the ladies. But none of them receive a tenth of Gene Autry's fan mail, and none of them have been acclaimed internationally as Public Cowboy No. 1.

It is fourteen year old Mary Lee, former singer of the Ted Weems Band, who tells us why she thinks Gene Autry is the most popular cowboy in pictures. And Mary is well qualified to say for she knows Gene Autry. She has been swimming in his pool. She has played the kid sister to June Storey in all of his pictures for the past year. And she has seen him on his personal appearance tours.

Mary's reason for Gene's success is a very simple one. Yet it has been the magic keynote for the success of many men. It is the same reason that Spencer Tracy stands in the top brackets as an actor.

"Mr. Autry's so natural", is Mary Lee's reason for the cowboy's fame, and that just about hits the nail on the head. No, he doesn't act. He just acts natural, and that is the secret of his wide appeal.

According to Mary, theatre audiences are never disappointed when they see Autry personally. He is exactly as he is in his pictures —a real fellow, simple and unassuming. The fourteen year old starlet thinks Autry will always retain his popularity for this very reason.

"The folks that like Mr. Autry most, the middle class ranchers and people in the country, see a slice of their own lives in his pictures, and that's why they enjoy them", is the young actress' observation. She believes there's nothing "movie" about Autry pictures. The settings are identical with the real ranch settings in the Middle West and the stories capture the same flavor of its people.

No temperament has Mr. Autry, according to Mary, and on the set there is no one she would rather work with. Of course, once in a while, he reminds her that she shouldn't poke her tongue out to moisten her lips while the cameras are grinding, but that's "constructive criticism". and she appreciates it.

"He's so nice — he's always nice to everyone", was Mary's parting remark about Gene Autry before returning to the set to join the Autry troupe.

Gene and Mary, with June Storey as the girl friend, appear in "Ride, Tenderfoot, Ride", now showing at the Capitol Theatre. Smiley Burnette provides the fun as usual, and the cast includes Warren Hull, Forbes Murray, Joe McGuinn, Cactus Mack and Herbert Clifton. William Berke produced and Frank McDonald directed the picture.

TAKE THE "LEAD" FEELING OUT OF YOUR LEGS

Get More Oxygen In Your Blood and Get the Pep that Sends You Bounding Up the Stairs

People who smother to death die because oxygen has been completely cut off from them. Just as surely you are slowly smothering if your blood lacks red corpuscles. Red corpuscles are your oxygen-carriers. They carry the oxygen you breathe in to every part of your system. Without enough oxygen-carrying corpuscles, your kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels slow down. Your skin gets pale, flabby, often pimply. Your nerves may become jittery — you tire quickly — feel depressed.

What you need is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These world-famous pills help make more and better red corpuscles and thus increase the oxygen-carrying power of your blood. Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today at your druggist. See for yourself how quickly this time-proven blood-builder will help give you back your pep. Copr. [illegible], G. T. Fulford Co., Ltd.

Some Members of Vichy Government Resist German Pressure

London, Nov. 28 (CP)—Reports from a special correspondent of the Free French News Agency suggest there is a nucleus of resistance to Germany among members of the Vichy Government, the British Broadcasting Corporation said Wednesday.

This resistance was the reason for a recent broadcast by Marshall Petain, head of the Vichy Government, in which he announced the readiness of Vichy to collaborate with Germany "in a vague and indefinite form," the correspondent was quoted as saying.

Some weeks ago, after the conference at Paris between Vice-Premier Laval and Hitler, there was some probability Hitler's terms would be accepted, the correspondent said, but he added:—

"After some discussion, the more patriotic members of the Cabinet were able to expose Laval's attempts to disguise what the terms really meant.

"The leader of the opposition to accepting the terms declared Germany had made the proposals because her military position was not as favorable as one might think.

"She wished, therefore, to trap France into a position in which she could be dragged into the war against her ally. This showed that Berlin was not sure of victory and he was able to dissuade the Cabinet from compromising France and falling into the trap."

The correspondent said the German terms included making French ports available to Germany, and provided for economic collaboration with Germany in the war against Britain.

New Ambassador Welcomed

Berlin, Nov. 28 —(AP)— Russia's new ambassador to Germany, V. G. Dekanzoff, arrived today and was welcomed by high Foreign Office officials in the absence of Foreign Minister Ribbentrop, who is resting at Salzburg.

Ordered to Stand Trial

Vichy, France, Nov. 28 —(AP)— Pierre Vienot, Under-Secretary of State in the Popular Front government of former Premier Leon Blum, will appear before a military tribunal at Clermond-Ferrard Dec. 12 to face charges of "abandoning" his post as a captain and "wartime desertion," it was announced today.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Fighting Gringo"

George O'Brien, recognized as Hollywood's foremost outdoor star, according to box-office analysis has climbed to the top by establishing himself as an individual. Currently starring in "The Fighting Gringo" now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, O'Brien is alone unto himself insofar as dress, plot of story and western action are concerned.

In each of his screen characterizations the popular outdoor star dresses in the simplest style. He does not go in for ten-gallon white sombreros, flashy "kerchiefs," fancy chaps nor decorated saddles. Instead O'Brien wears a black Stetson (occasionally he changes to a brown one); if he wears a "kerchief" it is of a dark color; his trousers are always of a black or brown whipcord or heavy gabardine, or dungarees; his shirts are of black, brown or grey gabardine or heavy silk.

The plots and locales of O'Brien westerns vary continually. In "Timber Stampede" he brought a story of conflict between cattlemen and lumbermen, with the locale among the timbered foothills of the Rockies. In "Marshal of Mesa City" his role was that of the Marshal and now in "The Fighting Gringo" the story is laid near the Mexican border, and deals with a roving young westerner and his group of vagabonds who hire themselves out as professional gun-fighters.

The western vernacular is conspicuous in all O'Brien films by its absence. Recently O'Brien received a letter from an admirer, a letter typical of thousands he has received. In part it reads:

"I am so glad you talk the way you do. We all like "westerns" pretty well, but when they start talking the way they think cowboys do, or start yodeling, it just ruins it for us."

Lupita Tovar, Mexican screen actress who has been doing Spanish versions of American films in Hollywood, makes her debut as a leading-lady in "The Fighting Gringo," while such well-known players as William Royle, Glenn Strange, Slim Whittaker, Leroy Mason and Lucio Villegas are cast in prominent supporting roles.

"The Fighting Gringo" is the kind of a western you've always wanted to see come out of Hollywood and George O'Brien in his role makes the picture alive with action and thrills. On the same program the newest Higgins Family feature-comedy, James Gleason in "Earl of Puddlestone" is a seventy minute riot. Bring the entire family to this show for the two best movie hits of adventure and fun, playing at the same time is the grand treat for all.

AT THE BELLE

"Tom Brown's School Days"

Returning to the popular literature of many decades for the source of their second production, Gene Towne and Graham Baker selected "Tom Brown's School Days," Thomas Hughes' absorbing portrait of English school life, to succeed their initial producing venture, "Swiss Family Robinson."

"Tom Brown's School Days" is now on the Belle theatre screen.

Translated into many tongues, internationally renowned and read by millions since its publication in 1857, "Tom Brown's School Days" has been recognized as an outstanding human interest story. The memorable tale is set at Rugby, England's noted school, to which young Tom Brown is sent for his education. He is befriended by Harry East, and the two become bosom companions.

As soon as Tom meets Flashman, Rugby's prize ruffian, Tom becomes the target of the bully's ill-nature, which is abetted by a rowdy clique known as the Sporting Set. They invade Tom's study and consume the jams, cakes and fruit which he brought from home. When Tom, in accordance with custom, has to solo-sing without stopping, Flashman sling-shots a walnut into Tom's cheek. Flashman is punished for his act, but later takes it out on Tom in a blanket-toss to the ceiling, Tom sustaining a broken leg. East, too, is victimized in a roasting over on open fireplace.

The indignities pile high, and Tom, East and their classmates launch an offensive against the Sporting Set. They retaliate with harmless but discomforting pranks. East prepares a self-incriminating written recitation for Flashman, which earns the bully an instructor's birching. The youngsters turn the rowdies' room topsy-turvy, upsetting the furniture and defacing the walls. Finally, Tom challenges Flashman to a fist fight, which sets off a series of actionful adventures, recaptured in the movie with all the thrill and drama and amusement which marked the book.

Sir Cedric Hardwicke was the logical choice for the role of Dr. Arnold. Freddie Bartholomew is seen as East. Sixteen-year-old Jimmy Lydon, who has only "Two Thoroughbreds" and "Back Dood to Heaven" to his screen credit, has the vital Tom Brown title role. Josephine Hutchinson, currently featured in "My Son, My Son," is cast as Mrs. Arnold. Billy Halop of Dead End Kid fame, portrays Flashman.

"I'm Still Alive"

Dealing with the romance between a daring Hollywood stuntflyer and an imperious screen star, RKO Radio's "I'm Still Alive," the companion feature attraction, features Kent Taylor and Linda Hayes in what is said to be an unusually exciting picture.

Several spectacular stunts, with behind-the-scenes glimpses of how they are made, add to the interest of the offering, which discloses for the first time on the screen the amazing lives of the men who furnish the thrills for motion pictures.

Howard da Silva and Ralph Morgan have important roles in the production.

"Foreign News Fronts" is the title of the new issue of March of Time. Here is the exciting story of Foreign Correspondents reporting the war news from the news fronts of the world.

"THE GORGON'S MASK"

by Van Wyck Mason

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

When the Englishman had disappeared among the banyan trunks, North faced Phedre.

"I must talk to you," he said with reassuring calmness. "Let us go this way." North led the darkly silent girl through the garden and onto a wide stone terrace overlooking the ocean.

When both were seated on a coping, North began: "Mademoiselle, I am about to ask you a very simple question: Will you help me?"

For a long moment the Frenchwoman made no reply; then, "That depends."

"You know what depends . . . many thousands, perhaps millions of human lives."

La Renoire's face continued to look hard and blank. Desperately North pressed on: "I'm very serious. A terrible thing has happened. Honolulu may soon become another Sarajevo."

"What makes you think so?"

"That." He pointed to the volcano of reddened smoke. "Your presence, and the presence of certain other people. You see," he continued, in a matter-of-fact voice, "I know who you really are."

"And who am I?"

"You are Phedre Renoire La Tour of the French Intelligence."

"How do you know that?"

"Because," he replied steadily, "I knew your husband, even before you did. During the World War we worked together, though afterwards—"

She nodded promptly. "Mais oui, but he forgave you for that affair in Cuba. He always said you were the cleverest intelligence officer on your side of the Atlantic."

"Then you knew me?"

A tired smile flitted over the girl's carefully made-up features. "You knew I did."

Far below the rush of the waves over the ragged coral formations made a mournful noise.

"Now," North pursued, "I must have help. I believe you and your government are friendly."

"Why should I help you?"

"For fairly obvious reasons. In a war between the United States and Japan, Russia could reestablish her lost supremacy in Manchuria, she could sell vast quantities of raw materials to Japan. Whether victorious or not, Japan would be financially exhausted and bled white, and so fall an easy prey to the Soviets. I am very sure that the Quai d'Orsai does not want to see Red Russia become any greater."

"You argue well. I may say that we are friendly to America." Phedre Renoire was nervously clasping and unclasping her hands in her lap. "Tell me what you have guessed."

North pulled out a cigarette case, tendered one to his companion, and opened up.

"Abner Polk, von Rentner, and your illustrious compatriot, Dunant, some time ago organized a company known as the Transpacific. Am I right?"

"That is true."

"They plotted to bring on a war between Japan and the United States. Right?"

This time she shook her head, and North hastened to amplify:

"I should say rather that von Rentner and Dunant plotted war; Abner Polk, however, was led to believe that only a war scare would be created."

"Why do you think that?"

Beneath his scorched white linen coat North shrugged. "Because Polk himself told me so before dinner."

"Mon Dieu!" burst out the French agent. "Ah, but I am glad that, after all, he listened to me! Days and weeks I have pleaded with him!"

The American then demanded gently: "Tell me, just what is to happen when the Japanese fleet arrives at Honolulu?"

His hope perished stillborn when she cried out with a bitter smile: "Unfortunately, that is the one thing I was not able to find out."

"Look here," he urged in French, as black figures loomed at the far end of the garden, "try to think! Can't you remember anything that might give me a clue?"

Phedre Renoire made a helpless gesture with her shapely hands. "Ah if only I could help you! But, tiens," her eyes widened, "I remember, yesterday on the terrace"—she hesitated a little—"Abner was napping; talking in his sleep, said something like this: 'Wednesday night—thirteenth boat—work fast—Kauai'." She smiled apologetically. "I am sorry it is not clear—but that is all I remember."

"Kauai?" North's straight black brows met in a puzzled frown. "What is that? All these Hawaiian names sound so much alike."

"It is an island which lies northwest of Oahu."

"Hum—the thirteenth ship?".

Into North's brain shot a sudden inspiration. "Now one last question. Please answer it, though I know it's personal. Why did you, Aristide La Tour's wife, become associated with Abner Polk? Why did you do it?"

"I would join the devil himself," she replied, "if I could avenge the murder of my husband. It was to Moscow that the Red Gorgon lured him—my Aristide. . . . Perhaps La Gorgone knew that they killed him by slow torture after she had promised him immunity, perhaps she did not."

Uncertainly, Phedre Renoire's hand crept up to her throat and she suddenly blazed out: "Yes, it was Nadia Stefan who made Aristide, like so many others, forget his duty—forget his country!"

Appalling was the hatred in her voice as she added: "And she made him forget me." There was a touch of hysteria to her laugh. "She bewitches, snares, and then destroys men. Mais oui, she is well named the 'Gorgon' . . . masked!

"Look here," North broke in hurriedly, "we've got to talk further about this. Meet me tomorrow morning at eleven on the beach of the Moana."

"At eleven," agreed Phedre Renoire as Kilgour came running up. "There's no sign of Polk anywhere. Kanamura is swearing he saw someone resembling North shoot Polk shortly after we got upstairs."

"Nice of him!" grunted the intelligence captain.

"Is there any trace of—er—the Stefan woman?" demanded Phedre Renoire with chill venom. "I am sure she is safe."

"No. She seems to have dropped from sight."

"What? Hasn't she been seen?" North sprang to his feet and, abruptly deserted his amazed companions.

Strange how, all at once, his thoughts had become so confused, his very being shaken by a fear that Nadia Stefan might be lost.

"I must stop this," he told himself firmly. "I mustn't let myself think of her." And yet he was utterly dismayed to find that his will power was not under his control.

Breathless, he hurried back and forth through the shrubbery, staring at the faces of a dense throng. . . . People yelled questions, reporters tried to stay his progress, and once a khaki-clad police lieutenant checked him. . . .

He encountered von Rentner, smoke-blackened and wild-eyed, who snarled, "Where iss Miss Stefan?" and added, "If you haff done her harm!"

"Don't be a fool!" North's accents cut as the flick of a lash. "I'm looking for her myself."

Baron von Rentner glared; then, murmuring in German, he veered away through a throng of frightened servants as a plow parts a drift.

The silence in Captain North's bedroom was broken as he ripped open the envelope of a cablegram and Bruce Kilgour asked, "More news from home?"

"Yes," North snapped bitterly. "It's Washington wanting to know why I haven't some progress to report. Progress to report! I'd have had plenty—but for that fire." His voice took on the rasping quality of a carving knife being sharpened. "I tell you, Bruce, it was Nadia Stefan—I'm sure it was she—who was at the bottom of it."

"Why not suspect our Japanese friend?"

"He might have done the job, but I think not. I blame Nadia and her organization. She must have been informed within two minutes of my leaving this hotel for Polk's place. In four, she'd probably decided what the O.G.P.U. was going to do about it."

"Poor ol' chap!" Kilgour laid a sympathetic hand on North's unwounded shoulder. "It's too bad, but what are you going to do?"

"I don't know," North replied vaguely. "I'm utterly helpless." Then with a rare burst of exasperation, "Now why couldn't Polk have given me more details of this plot! I begged him, Bruce, I all but threatened him. But he wouldn't do so before dinner."

"And your Russian friend," the Englishman observed, "evidently took care to prevent his telling you anything after dinner."

Flushing, North made no comment. Kilgour then asked about a cable previously received and North answered, "[illegible]as a copy of certain Navy Department orders."

"What were they—if that's not a secret?"

"Just a duplicate of instructions to the officer commanding at Pearl Harbor . . . orders to foresee and to counteract any contingency that might provoke hostilities. Admiral Blakeburn is to extend every courtesy to the visiting fleet. But—" North's voice quivered a little, and Kilgour lost his weary manner.

"But what?"

"But if the Japanese commit an overt act of any kind, every ship of the American cruiser squadron is to go into action, and to stay in action until the last enemy ship has surrendered or been sunk."

"Short, sharp, and to the point," commented the Englishman with a deep frown. "I'm sorry we've only one light cruiser in the harbor. But I fancy she will be on the right side if trouble comes. And there's our battle fleet at Singapore."

A brief silence fell while North flung his hopelessly scorched clothes into a corner and then indicated the third cablegram.

"There's more dangerous news," said he. "No—you can't read it—it's in code. It reports the main force of our Pacific fleet is now less than a day from Hawaii, and that a Japanese submarine division left Sasebo base five days ago."

"Headed where?"

"Ah, that's the rub — nobody knows."

British and Enemy Naval Forces Clash in Channel

Italian Battleship Hit by Torpedo, Cruiser Set Afire

Another Cruiser "Almost Certainly" Hit, Another Damaged By Near Misses of Bombs and Two Destroyers Damaged is Extent of Blow Struck By Royal Navy

By LEON EDEL

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Details are now known of Wednesday's naval battle which occurred off Sardinia, the large Italian Island that lies below France's Corsica on the highways of the Mediterranean.

An Italian battleship of the Littorio class has been hit by a torpedo dropped from a plane. An Italian cruiser was set afire, two destroyers were damaged, still another cruiser was "almost certainly" hit by a torpedo and another cruiser was damaged by near misses of British bombs.

Two Enemy Craft Shot Down at Malta

Valetta, Malta, Nov. 29 (CP).—A bomber and a fighter plane engaged in an air raid on Malta yesterday were shot down by British defenders, a communique announced today.

The island had five air raid warnings during the day, the communique said, "but there were no casualties", although bombs were dropped.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Nov. 29 (CP)—The weather has been cold in the western provinces with light snow in many districts and snow is falling this morning over the greater part of Ontario.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Sun drawing water: That is the old and popular explanation given when sunbeams are seen either just after sunrise or before sunset, shining through open spaces in a partly cloudy sky. The beams seem to diverge as they approach the earth's surface; but that is an illusion, they are really parallel. The rays become visible in the same way that light beams finding their way through chinks in a darkened room illuminate the floating dust particles. Thus the sun shining through clouds illuminates dust and water particles, and the beams are readily seen against a dark background. The expression, "the sun drawing water", is poetic but not scientific.

ADMIRALTY GIVES MAJOR CREDIT TO FLEET AIR ARM

Swordfish Aircraft Carried Out Principal Attack on Six Italian Warships

ARK ROYAL ACTIVE

London, Nov. 29 (CP)—The Admiralty's account of the latest Mediterranean clash between the Royal Navy and Italian sea forces gave the fleet air arm a major share of the credit today for damage inflicted on six Italian warships.

The Admiralty's statement on Wednesday afternoon's fight off the Island of Sardinia, issued last night said torpedo planes hit a 35,000-ton battleship of Italy's new Littorio class and a 10,000-ton cruiser of the Bolzano class, while dive-bombers scored "very near misses" against two other cruisers, damaging one of them.

WILL ASK PRIME MINISTER IF HE WILL GIVE ASSURANCE

London, Nov. 29 (CP).—When the House of Commons meets again, probably next week, Prime Minister Churchill will be asked if he will give the House assurance that the government will not barter the sovereignty of any British territory in return for war supplies from any foreign country.

Oliver Simmonds, Conservative, gave notice of the question today. It was believed prompted by recent unofficial discussion of possible trades of British colonies in the western hemisphere for munitions from the United States.

DEATH SEPARATES TWINS

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 29 (AP).—Death has separated Alford and Alva Neill, 76-year-old twins who had lived together since birth. Alford Neill, a widower, bedfast two weeks with paralysis in their two-room house north of here, died yesterday. They long were partners in masonry contracting.

Romantic South Seas Adventure Turned Into Death for 3 on Yacht

Suva, Fiji Islands, Nov. 29 (AP)—The story of a romantic South Seas adventure by two couples which turned grimly into death for three of the party and near-starvation for the fourth, was pieced together Thursday from the crude log of the wrecked gig, Wing On.

The Wing On, which sailed from the United States last August, came to grief on a coral reef off Vanua-Levu.

Details from the log and various papers found in the boat helped identify the victims as:—

Dalton Arthur Conly, Los Angeles.

Eva R. Larson, or Conly, presumably Conly's wife.

Chester A. Thompson, Los Angeles.

The only survivor is Thompson's widow, Fern Thompson. She was found in an emaciated condition aboard the yacht and brought to a hospital in Suva. Her condition was pronounced grave.

Thompson died at sea on Nov. 7, the log indicated, Conly on Nov. 12 or 13, and Mrs. Conly about Nov. 23.

Kept in Amateurish Manner

Kept in amateurish manner, the boat's record read grimly after an entry telling of striking a "cyclone."

"Discovered Chet had died. What next? Help us, oh God," was the entry on Nov. 7.

"Buried Chester Thompson, 21, died starvation; too far gone at any rate stand any more remaining can apricots," was the notation the next day.

The last entry, on Nov. 12, was merely, "D. A. Conly, master yacht Wing On."

The yacht with a hole 13 feet by four feet in the starboard side, was sighted Nov. 24 on Visogo Reef by a Seventh Day Adventist Mission ketch. A missionary boarded the wreckage and found an emaciated young woman, the body of a woman who had died recently and the body of a man, dead for some time.

Cleared on August 14

The second book said the Wing On cleared Seattle Aug. 14 for the Marquesas Islands. Apparently land had not been sighted since the party left the United States.

Post mortem examination showed that Mrs. Conly died of starvation.

Visogo Reef is located at an isolated spot on Vanua-Levu Island, which is northeast of here.

(Mrs. A. M. Conly, mother of the wrecked mariner, said in Oakland, Calif., that her son and daughter-in-law left their infant daughter with her when they sailed for the South Seas. The Thompsons' two children, acquaintances said in Los Angeles, had been left there with their maternal grandparents.

(Both Thompson and Conly were expert seamen.)

BRITISH BOMB U-BOAT PLANTS IN 1300-MILE TRIP

Stettin on Baltic and Mannheim Visited by Royal Air Force

OIL PLANT BOMBED

War Plants in Other Parts of Germany Are Hammered

London, Nov. 29.—(CP)—British bombers struck last night at German plants producing the submarines which prey on Britain's shipping, the Air Ministry disclosed today.

The submarine shipbuilding yard at Stettin, on the Baltic Sea, and a factory at Mannheim which turns out U-boat engines were chief targets of the Royal Air Force's thrust into Germany.

The Ministry's News Service said the bombers made a round trip of 1,300 miles in the raid on Stettin and on a synthetic oil plant at Politz.

Duesseldorf, industrial city in western Germany, was another point concentrated on by the R.A.F.

Action in Walking Off Job Illegal Says Labor Minister

Ottawa, Nov. 29 (CP). — Labor Minister McLarty said Thursday night he has notified 200 employees of the Kingston (Ont.) ship building company that their action in walking off the job was illegal under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act.

Mr. McLarty said the employees went on strike after he told them that he could not give them assurance that a board of conciliation would start to deal with their grievances by next Monday.

When he learned they had left work he sent another communication, advising them that their action was illegal and that no board of conciliation would commence investigation of their grievances until after they returned to work.

British Warship Damaged And Damage Inflicted on Foe; Enemy Retires at High Speed

Light British Naval Forces Pursue Foe Vessels Towards German-Held Port Of Brest

CLASH IN EARLY MORNING HOURS

London, Nov. 29.—(CP)—A British warship was damaged and "damage was inflicted upon the enemy" in a clash between light forces in the English Channel early today, the Admiralty announced.

The Admiralty Communique said the "enemy" units retired at high speed towards Brest, German-held port in France, when pursued by British Naval forces.

The communique said:—

"In the early hours of this morning contact was made in the English Channel between our light forces and those of the enemy.

"The enemy units retired at high speed towards Brest, pursued by our forces. It is known that one of our units sustained damage.

"A report has been received that damage was inflicted upon the enemy, but the extent of this is not yet known with sufficient certainty to enable an announcement to be made.

"Further details will be made known as soon as possible".

(The Germans claimed that in a "skirmish" at the western exit of the English Channel near the English coast German destroyers "succeeded in torpedoing two British destroyers".)

Macedonian Peasant Women Roll Stones Down Upon Italians

By J. WES GALLAGHER

Associated Press Staff Writer

Salonika, Greece, Nov. 29—(AP)—An "Amazon company" of Macedonian peasant women who helped the Greek army defeat 3,000 Italian troops by rolling rocks down upon them from the peaks of the Pindus mountains was described today in a Greek dispatch from the Epirus front.

The correspondent quoted one middle-aged farm woman, Helen Codjamani, who was wounded in the fighting, as telling him:—

"A sergeant who passed through our village wanted to know the way to the Chapel of St. George. We told him and when he started off about 100 women took the trail after him. When we neared the chapel, we saw many Greek soldiers. When the officer saw us, he got very angry and ordered us to go back, but we started shouting, 'we shall not go back. We want to fight with you.'

"Since they wouldn't give us guns, we got hold of an ammunition magazine and trench mortars, and we followed the soldiers to the high peaks of the mountains.

"During the night other women joined us and we took our places on the plateau of a mountain called Pournara.

"Next morning at 10 o'clock, Italians appeared in a ravine below us. Our soldiers let them advance. When about 3,000 of the enemy thus entered the gorge, our soldiers started shooting. I cannot describe what followed.

"The Italians began to scatter and ran in all directions. Then we went into action and appeared at the extremity of the mountain and began throwing stones on the invaders. That was a terrible shower. When the sun set in the ravine there was not a single Italian alive."

LONGER HOURS, LESS OVERTIME PAY IS HINTED

Drafting of Men From Non-Essential Industry to War Time Production Possible Says Labor Minister

LABOR NOT TO SUFFER

By C. R. BLACKBURN

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 29 (CP)—Labor's sacrifice to the war effort may be a longer working week and less overtime pay, coupled with possible drafting of men in non-essential industry for work on essential war production.

The House of Commons yesterday heard Labor Minister McLarty mention the possibility that concessions in hours and wages, long fought for by workers' organizations, might have to be sacrificed.

But the Minister emphasized that so far as the government is concerned, these sacrifices would be only temporary.

The chief proponents of labor interests in the House, members of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation Group, and all others listened with close attention to the Minister's speech and there was little interruption.

Angus MacInnis (CCF Vancouver East) asked if Labor, after the war, would "have to go through the same fight they had over the years to get these rights restored."

Mr. McLarty replied that Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the Government as a whole were on record that Labor was co-operating in the war effort and "any concessions made by labor in this emergency would be for the emergency only."

It was the government's accepted obligation that "when Labor was making these concessions it was our definite duty when the emergency was over to see that they did not suffer as a result. I do not think there can be any doubt about that," Mr. McLarty said.

Detailed Account Given

The Minister gave a detailed account of the efforts of his department to maintain the supply of skilled workmen for war industries, through vocational training and co-operation with industry which conducts training classes.

But this might not be enough,

ARRESTED AFTER ESCAPE

London, Nov. 29 (CP).—Sapper H. R. Spence, 22, of the Canadian Active Service Force, was arrested in London yesterday after a daring escape from the guard room of a military camp in southern England. Spence was awaiting sentence after his conviction at a court martial on a charge of manslaughter. He shot a soldier in the barracks in July. It is understood he will likely be sent back to Canada.

RELIEF WORKERS ACTIVE DURING PROGRESS OF RAID

Many Homes Demolished as Nazi Raiders Heavily Bomb Western English Port

MANY HOMELESS

Families in Some Instances Buried Under Tons of Debris but Casualties Light Says Report

Liverpool, Nov. 29—(CP)—Relief workers provided food and shelter today for many families bombed out of their homes overnight in the worst German air assault on the Merseyside.

Many homes were demolished but relief work began even while the bombs were falling and most of the homeless were fed and established in new quarters while the raid still was in progress.

Wave after wave of raiders swept inland from the Irish Sea and spread over the northwest area.

At several points in Liverpool rescue workers dug in wreckage for victims trapped in their bombed homes. A number of persons were believed buried under tons of debris in one place. Two persons were killed in a direct hit on one public shelter.

Many Windows Shattered

In many streets there was not a window left intact in buildings and residences.

One district of Liverpool which was heavily attacked in the first days of the concentrated attacks on the Merseyside area was most seriously damaged.

A police station, a movie theatre, a block of flats and a bank were among the damaged buildings but casualties in Merseyside were described as "amazingly slight, in

RUMANIA FACES POSSIBLE DANGER NEW INCITEMENT

Saturday Will be Second Anniversary of Slaying of Codreanu

ARMY IN COMMAND

Bucharest, Nov. 29 (AP)—With German and Rumanian military forces ready to help quell Iron Guard terrorism, Rumania faced possible danger today of new incitement for the Green Shirt Extremists who have taken more than 64 lives in the past three days.

Tomorrow will be the second anniversary of the slaying of Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, founder of the Iron Guard and the "martyr" whose death its blood purge was to avenge.

Before dawn today thousands of Rumanians — men, women and children — waited in line for a chance to file past the green-draped Coffins of Codreanu and the 13 lieutenants killed with him in Jilava Prison Nov. 30, 1938, during the reign of King Carol.

Continuous Mass Held

Other thousands already had passed through the church where a continuous Greek Orthodox Mass was being said.

The purge started when Guardists opened the common grave of their 14 heroes in Jilava Prison Thursday to move the coffins here. Victims of the vengeance killings of prisoners there accused of a part in the two-year-old executions included once prominent government leaders, among them generals and cabinet members.

Besides German troops brought to Bucharest from Pitesti, 65 miles away, at the request of Premier Ion Antonescu late yesterday, a Rumanian Army division was reported en route to the capital to tighten the government's control.

Italy's Gateways Into Albania Bombed by RAF

Bombs Explode on Wharves—10 Italian Planes Shot Down In Two Days

Athens, Nov. 29 (AP)—Fierce bombing of Italy's sea gateways into Albania and a route of Italian destroyers bombarding the British-defended Greek Island of Corfu were announced today by the Royal Air Force.

"Bomber aircraft carried out raids on Santi Quaranta (Porto Edda) where destroyers bombarding the Island of Corfu fled on approach of our formations, Durazzo and Elbassan (Elbasani)," said a communique apparently covering action yesterday and last night.

Bombs Explode on Wharves

Shipping at Porto Edda was attacked and "bombs were seen to explode on wharves," said the R.A.F., communique. At Durazzo, another Albanian port, and Elbasani, an inland base, "all the bombs fell in the target area but the results were not observed due to weather conditions."

Two of the British planes "failed to return to their bases."

One was a fighter lost in collision while in combat with an Italian plane which also crashed in flames. The British pilots bailed out but had not been found.

Ten Italian planes in all were downed in the last two days, including seven out of 20 fighters surprised by a R.A.F. fighter formation over Southwestern Albania yesterday.

"Our aircraft at once attacked and in less than a minute seven enemy aircraft were shot down," the communique said.

Italian Defeat Even Greater

Greek information from the front suggested that defeat of an Italian "regiment of death"—picked Fascists sworn to die rather than retreat—may have been greater than at first reported and that the Italians may be in full flight up the coast.

This front, in the region of Argirocastro, Italy's last remaining advanced base which the Greeks have been threatening, admittedly was the centre of the "most serious resistance" and it was acknowledged that the Italians still were counter-attacking at some points.

There was no indication of the fate of Argirocastro or other towns in the path of the Greek advance.

On the centre and north sectors, Greek forces were said to be consolidating their gains to avoid the danger of stretching their lines too thin in mountains easily snow-locked.

Coroner Decides No Inquest Necessary

Brockville, Ont., Nov. 29 (CP).—Coroner T. F. Robertson said today there will be no inquest into the deaths last night of three small children, sons of Earl Cooper, of suffocation when fire destroyed their home.

The children—David, four; Wilson, three, and Roy, two—were confined to their beds with colds when the fire broke out. Cooper jumped from a second-storey window and was unable to get back into the home to save his children.

It is believed the blaze started when the kitchen stove became overheated and ignited the ceiling and partitions of the frame structure.

Firemen recovered the bodies of the boys before flames destroyed the home and medical officers and first-aid experts from Military Training Centre No. 3 situated near the Cooper home, applied artificial respiration for more than an hour in an effort to revive the youngsters.

CHINESE NOTABLES OF PUPPET GOV'T BELIEVED KILLED

Train on Which They Were Enroute for Saturday's Treaty Signing Derailed by Bomb Explosion

FOREIGNERS ABOARD

Shanghai, Nov. 29 (AP). — Five coaches of a Shanghai-Nanking train were blasted from the tracks today and between 100 and 400 persons killed or injured as the toll of a dynamite mine reported laid by Chinese guerrillas to spoil the impending ceremonious signing of a Japanese-sponsored treaty at Nanking.

One report had it that passengers on the train included Japanese and Chinese officials bound for Nanking to participate in the signing tomorrow of a pact of recognition and collaboration between Japan and her creation, the Wang Ching-Wei Chinese puppet government.

Foreigners Aboard.

It also was considered possible that foreigners were aboard the train, including newspaper men en route to Wang's capital for the treaty ceremonies. However, Japanese military authorities who direct operation of the line denied that either officials or newspapermen were aboard.

SUFFERS HEART ATTACK

Calgary, Nov. 29 (CP).—One of Western Canada's outstanding farmer-business men, Paul F. Bredt of Winnipeg, died here last night following a heart attack suffered soon after he finished an address to delegates attending the Alberta Wheat Pool's annual convention.

HOUSEHOLDERS NOT SAFE

Swissmont, Pa., Nov. 29 (AP).—Joseph Chervan, 70, lives in a house by the side of a road that goes up a steep grade. A car stalled on the hill. The brakes failed to hold and it sped backward—crashing into the house. The impact tore out one wall, and Chervan was pinned by the automobile against the other. He suffered a broken leg.

WILLIAM SULLIVAN TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

William "Smiler" Sullivan, well-known Belleville bricklayer and plasterer, was taken to the Belleville General Hospital late last night after sustaining a heart attack. Mr. Sullivan had attended the Wharf Street Debating Club annual "bun feed", being one of the charter members of that well-known Foster Ward organization. Today hospital officials stated Mr. Sullivan was resting quietly.

BAY OF QUINTE IS FROZEN OVER

Visions of skating parties and other sporting activities on the ice formed in the minds of the younger generation this morning as a vast sheet of ice reaching from shore to shore appeared on the Bay of Quinte. Although the ice which formed is definitely not safe for such activities, the coldest night of the season, which saw the thermometer drop to only 2.9 degrees above zero, resulted in one of the earliest freeze-ups for the bay as ordinarily the bay is not frozen over until the first or second week in December.

20½ TONS TURKEYS AND CHICKENS SOLD AT POULTRY FAIR

Sales of dressed poultry at the annual Napanee two-day fair were down compared to figures of last year. Approximately 18 tons of dressed chickens and 2 1-2 tons of turkey were sold. Prices paid for the chickens ranged from 18 cents to 19 cents with occasional lots of extra selects bringing as high as 21 cents.

Turkeys brought 21 cents for the general run and some of the better finished, 22 cents. One attractive lot of young birds brought 23 cents from one purchaser. A Montreal firm with six tons and a Toronto purchaser with 5 tons, were the heaviest buyers.

"RIGGSONIA" TO BE HEARD OVER RADIO

Belleville will again be accorded musical honor tonight over the airwaves when the overture "Riggsonia" composed by Reg Hinchey, and dedicated to Mr. Leo Riggs, brilliant Belleville pianist, has been selected by the Toronto Symphony Band for their broadcast over American and Canadian networks. The program will be heard between 8.30 and 9 p.m.

RECEIVE NOTICE TO CONTINUE TRAINING

Young men of Belleville who come within the military scope of the Argyll Light Infantry Regiment (Tank) and who recently completed their thirty-day, training period at Peterborough, have received notification to report to the local militia unit for further training according to regimental headquarters here.

The instructions were forwarded by mail to the trainees by Major H. E. Alford, upon receipt of instructions from the Department of National Defence. The period of training was not disclosed in the instructions, and the trainees will drill with the regular members of the unit until further instructions are received.

It was not learned to what number the men will swell the ranks of the unit which has upwards of 600 men already on its roster.

WAS AT 'BUN-FEED'

The name of Alderman Andrew M. Kennedy was inadvertently omitted from the list of candidates for aldermanic honors who attended the annual "Bun-Feed" of the Wharf Street Debating Club on Wednesday night. "Andy" was there and addressed the "boys" briefly, stating he was again in the running for a seat at the council table.

TO HOLD MARKET IN AUDITORIUM OF CITY HALL, SAT.

Market vendors will offer their produce for sale in a different environment on Saturday. Owing to the fact that the exhibits of the British Empire Dairy show are now on display in the regular market rooms, the vendors will operate in the City Hall auditorium on the second floor of the building.

DAMAGE SLIGHT IN TAXI FIRE

The Belleville fire brigade was given a short run around eight o'clock Friday morning to the corner of Front and East Dundas Streets when the cushions of a taxi cab were reported afire. Grotto's taxi was returning to the city after a trip to the country when the driver discovered the cushions to be ablaze. The cause of the fire was undisclosed but as the driver did not smoke, it is believed sparks from a fare's cigarette became deposited on the seat and started to smolder. Damage, however, was slight, reported firemen.

QUINTE SEED GROWERS ELECT CAMPBELLFORD MAN AS PRESIDENT

J. Locke, Campbellford, was elected president for the ensuing year, at the conference of the Quinte Seed Growers held here this week in Shire Hall. Other officers elected were: Hon. president, Garnet Rickard, Bowmanville; 1st vice, J. M. Carl, Stirling; 2nd vice, Brodie Ness, Portsmouth; fair secretary, Fred Campbell, Picton; secretary-treasurer, H. L. Fair, Stirling; fair manager, Pat O'Keefe, Belleville; auditors, Col. R. Vanderwater, Foxboro and P. O'Keefe, Belleville.

The conference decided to hold the 1941 Quinte Seed Fair in Belleville on March 13th., 14th, and 15th. The Hatchery Approval Association was invited to stage their annual Baby Chick Exhibition at the same time and in co-operation with the Seed Fair.

The convention was addressed by J. D. McLeod, Toronto; G. B. Rickard, Bowmanville; W. J. MacKay, Ottawa; A. M. Stewart, Ailsa Craig, Ontario.

The Quinte District Seed Growers' Association covers the counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Durham, Ontario, Frontenac, Lennox and Addington, Northumberland, Peterborough and Victoria.

Pennies or Cents, They're "Singles" South of Border

His face did take on a rather scarlet hue, because he was a cigar store clerk who thought he knew all the answers when it came to Canadian or American wise-cracking.

However, a local cigar store vendor found himself in difficulty yesterday when a lone airman walked into his store, tendered a five cent piece and asked for "five singles, please."

The clerk turned his head slowly and replied with one word —"Singles?"

"Yes, break it up, please," continued the airman not realizing he had stumped the clerk momentarily with his English accent, although it was later learned he was an American.

The clerk nonchantly handed the airman five coppers, cents, pennies, or, in his Southern term, "singles."

Suffice to say the clerk was happy about the whole thing, that is to say none of his wise-cracking friends were around to catch him in his embarrassed predicament.

Municipal Candidates To State Platforms at City Hall Meeting

The final warm-up for the electoral battle for mayoralty, aldermanic, trusteeship and commissionership honors will go into action in the City Hall auditorium tonight when the potential city fathers and other aspirants for civic honors will address the electorate in preparation for the title bout here on Monday.

Mayor Glencoe Thompson will defend the seat he has held for the past year against Ex-Alderman Charles L. Hyde. Seventeen aldermanic candidates will attempt to fill thirteen seats while nine aspirants for the Board of Education will vie for positions in the six vacant chairs. The vacancy on the Public Utilities Commission will see a straight fight between present Commissioner Clifford Baragar and Ex-Mayor George A. Reid.

Interest in the forthcoming elections has been anything but enthusiastic on the part of the ratepayers, but tonight may see a large crowd turn out to hear the respective candidates expound their various platforms. The meeting will likely get under way at eight o'clock and continue until the last speech has been made.

Hundreds of Free Gifts Await Claimants at City Stores Tonight

Tonight's the Night.

Shortly after eight o'clock a glittering panorama of Christmas merchandise will open a new vista of holiday shopping to thousands of Belleville shoppers.

Tonight the stores and shops of the city, transformed into a colorful spectacle through the magic of seasonal attractions will be thrown open to the general public.

It is Belleville's first Christmas Inspection night and large crowds, it is expected, will avail themselves of the opportunity to see first-hand what foresighted merchants of Belleville are offering for their holiday approval.

Hundreds of fortunate visitors will go home with attractive gift packages under their arms. In many of the stores, cards bearing the names of residents of the city and rural districts have been placed on handsome gift packages. All that is need is the proper identification and the gifts become the property of the person whose name the card bears.

Fine Decorations

Stores will be a riot of colored lights and brilliant seasonal decorations. For the first time in the history of the city, the shopping public will have the opportunity to stroll through the brilliantly lighted stores at their leisure and gaze their fill at the attractive merchandise on display.

Colored city street-lights will enhance the Christmas glitter and color of the shop illuminations. The Salvation Army's fine band will furnish the lovely music of well-known Christmas Carols. Added to this will be other seasonal melodies which will be played in many of the shops and which will be furnished by the management.

Belleville and district goes on shopping parade tonight.

Everyone is invited to join in the fun and pay salutory tribute to the most joyous season of the year.

OBITUARY

REV. DR. D. MORDEN, (Picton).

Picton, Nov. 29—There passed away in Kingston General Hospital early Wednesday, Rev. Dr. Dorland Morden, B.A., who for many years was a prominent minister in Presbyterian and United Churches in Canada and the United States. He had been ill for several weeks and ten days ago was taken to Kingston for treatment.

Dr. Morden was born at Christian Street in Hillier township, a son of the late David R. Morden and Mrs. Morden, who is 94 and resides on the homestead. He was educated at Hillier and Picton and after receiving his teacher's certificate, taught for several years. Entering the ministry, he went to Manitoba and then to the United States, occupying pulpits in prominent churches in New York State and Dakota. On his return to Canada, he attended Queen's University and entered the ministry of the Presbyterian Church and at Union became a United Church minister.

He was an outstanding preacher and thinker and was noted for the social work carried on during his ministry. Though he retired this summer, he was much in demand as a speaker and was guest preacher in many pulpits.

For a number of years he was minister of St. James Presbyterian Church in Toronto. He was at Chalmers United Church at Walkerville for eight years and at Perth United Church for six years, this being his last charge. He also served at St. Mary's and at Erskine United Church, Ottawa.

He is survived by his aged mother, his wife, two sons and two daughters, Keith of Ottawa, Dr. Erskine of Lambton County, Mrs. Fred Trebell of Toronto and Mrs. George Grant, Montreal. Clayton Morden, Picton and Arthur W. Morden, Christian Street, are brothers.

The funeral is being held in Picton United Church on Saturday afternoon with interment in Glenwood cemetery.

MRS. ANNA (BOLSTER) MURPHY (Formerly of Belleville)

Mrs. Anna (Bolster) Murphy, widow of Dr. John B. Murphy, died at her residence, 69 Prince Arthur Avenue, Toronto, on Thursday, November 28th.

The late Mrs. Murphy, resided in Belleville many years ago when her husband the late Dr. Murphy, practised his profession here and resided on Victoria Avenue. Upon leaving Belleville, Dr. Murphy went to Brockville, where he was superintendent of the mental hospital for some years.

Surviving her are two daughters, Mrs. G. S. Osincup of Orlando, Florida, and Mrs. Ivar Stack of Stockholm, Sweden; one son, Mr. Gerald Murphy, Toronto.

The funeral will take place in Toronto on Saturday, November 30.

HIGHWAY TRAFFIC IS SLOWED DOWN

Roads Are Rough and Rutty According to Patrol Officer

Highways leading out of Belleville are reported to be rough and rutty with the result that motorized traffic has been slowed down considerably since Wednesday's heavy snow and blizzard, Motorcycle Patrolmen of the district reported today.

Two minor accidents were reported on the Trent Road yesterday, both as the result of motor cars skidding on the snow-covered rutty highway. John McNab, Trenton, was returning home when his car skidded in a rut and continued into the ditch, where the vehicle struck a mail box, breaking the post off at the base.

Late yesterday afternoon Mrs. J. Alfred Crews, of Trenton, sustained extensive bruises and shock when the automobile in which she was riding, and driven by her husband, went out of control, skidded on the slippery highway in a sideway position until it collided with a bakery truck driven by J. P. Miller of Cannifton. Considerable damage resulted to both vehicles, but Mrs. Crews was the only person injured. She was given medical attention at her home in Trenton.

Motorcycle Patrolman J. H. Hatch investigated both accidents and reported the highway to be in a treacherous condition.

JUDGE REYNOLDS TO SIT AT COURT

Four Cases Down for Decision at Sessions to Open Next Week

Four cases are entered for trial at the General Sessions of the Peace and Jury Sittings of the County Court which opens before His Honour Judge Reynolds in Belleville next Tuesday.

Two of the cases were handed down from the recent sitting of the Supreme Court and both arise out of a fatal motor accident which happened north of Madoc last fall resulting in the death of Mrs. Jessie Allore, Trenton. Hubert Herrington, Belleville, driver of a truck which allegedly struck the motor car in which Mrs. Allore was riding, and Edward A. Kellaway, also of Belleville, and owner of the truck are both charged with dangerous driving, preferred under the Canadian Criminal Code.

A jury case of John Read versus Smith and Van Allen is an action for damages brought on as the result of a motor accident in which Read and two small children sustained injuries. There is a counter claim entered by the defendants. E. O. Butler, local barrister, appears for the plaintiff while the firm of Porter, Payne and Arnott is representing Smith and Van Allen.

In the only non-jury action listed claims for damages are entered in the case of Wilkinson vs. Duggin with counter claims registered by the defendant.

POLICE COURT

The Christmas spirit of charity and goodwill imbued the city police court rather early this year when several persons seemed quite jubilant with the findings of the court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today.

An old offender appeared on a charge of intoxication. "I'm tired of seeing your face in this court. I think the best place for you is in the Reformatory," emphatically stated His Worship with a ring in his voice that sounded serious results for the accused.

"This man tells me he will take the pledge if he is given one more opportunity," interrupted Chief Kidd, speaking on behalf of the accused.

"Alright, but make sure you take the pledge and keep it, because if you come into this court again I'll send you to the Reformatory for one year, without reservation," warned His Worship.

Given Suspended Sentence

William Cameron, Thurlow, was given a six months' suspended sentence when he appeared for sentence after being convicted of theft from the Belleville General Hospital in a previous court.

S. Gordon Robertson, County Crown Attorney, openly recommended leniency and suggested a suspended sentence.

"Yes, I understand his family would suffer if the accused was imprisoned," added His Worship as he gave the lad six months' suspended sentence.

Several Paid Fines

Phillip Connors, Belleville, paid $5.00 and costs after admitting a speeding charge, while John Thompson, Mountain View, paid the minimum fines after admitting to charges of careless driving and also to that of operating a motor vehicle equipped with defective brakes. Mr. A B Collins, K.C., appeared on Thompson's behalf and asked for the minimum fines in each case. "They both arise out of the same investigation and I can't quite understand why two charges have been preferred," added Mr. Collins.

Sir Hugh Walpole, novelist, told a woman's meeting he had "a strange sense of the absolute passing of the old world and the absolute certainty of the coming of a new world."

JUDGING OF 600 PRIZE CHEESE STARTS TODAY

Arrangements Are About Completed for Opening of Exhibition on Monday

COLORFUL SCENE

Six hundred golden cheese stood proudly on decorated tables in the Market Rooms of the City Hall today awaiting the critical eyes of the judges. Outstanding samples of the Canadian cheese makers art, the products of the Dominion will go on public exhibition on Monday when the British Empire Dairy Show and Cheese Exhibition inaugurates a three-day convention of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association.

The Market Rooms have been appropriately decorated for the occasion. While a definite patriotic motif is visible throughout, gay colors of orange, white and green festoon the walls and ceiling. Banners of colored bunting hang in profusion with the whole enhancing the gold of the products.

From the far-flung parts of the Dominion, cheesemen will converge on the city over the week end. Outstanding dairymen and agriculturists from the Provincial and Federal Departments of Agriculture will also be here. Addresses by outstanding men connected with the cheese and milk-producing industries will be heard at the convention. And the cheese-making champion of the Empire will be declared not later than noon on Monday.

Quebec entries are high and will offer a serious threat to the honors held by their Ontario colleagues. Western Ontario is also, well represented.

Judging of the entries will start today under the supervision of Messrs. George Bourbeau, Montreal; T. J. Hicks, Montreal; Garnet Bain, London; J. H. Henderson and Joseph Burgess, Ottawa.

Canadians in England Anxious To Get a Crack at the Enemy

Lieut. John Reycraft Returns to Become Instructor at Training Camp

MEN QUITE HEAVY

Picton, Nov. 29—Returned from overseas this week, Lieut. John Reycraft of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, stated that the Canadians in England are well and happy but anxious to get a crack at the enemy. Their health is excellent and they are well prepared for the winter weather as a result of their outdoor training and general good physical condition.

Lieut. Reycraft, who is a son of Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Reycraft, Picton, stated that there was plenty of food and good food at that, for the men. The morale of the soldiers and civilians alike is high and the war has united them closer than ever before. Rich and poor alike share in the war effort and sacrifices necessary.

There have been no casualties in Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment as a result of bombs, he said, though most other regiments have not been so fortunate.

The men are at present in winter quarters, many occupying beautiful estates. He stated that Col. Howard Graham was a very popular officer commanding of the district unit.

The usual regimental routine consists of Revielle 6.30, breakfast, 7, followed by either physical training or drill. The remainder of the day was likely to be taken up with tactical exercises. On long route marches, these were likely to be combined with tactical exercises. The Canadians had done a great deal of travelling and were often called McNaughton's Travelling Circus.

Lieut. Reycraft was one of the small group of officers chosen to return to Canada as instructors for the army at home. He will leave Monday to commence his work at [illegible]mp Borden.

A Federal Matter is Claim

Marketing should be a federal matter, was the contention of H. L. Newman, Crops and Markets Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture, when he spoke at the meeting of Prince Edward County Chamber of Commerce Wednesday night.

The speaker pointed out that the Marketing Act was in effect only in Ontario and that canners, for instance, had to compete with the Quebec market where there was no Marketing Act and no Minimum Wage Act.

Mr. Newman recalled the Dominion Marketing Act, which the Bennett Government had proposed and which had been found to be "ultra vires." He praised this act and stated that with changes to make it workable it should appear on the statute books.

Mr. Newman pointed out that the Marketing Act, which controlled prices and aided in marketing, cost the taxpayers nothing as a small levy is placed upon the volume of each produce handled through each marketing agreement.

In order to keep the wheels of industry turning, the farmer must be prosperous, the speaker stated. The farmer must have better prices if we are to have balanced economy. Dilapidated barns cannot be repaired if the price of farm products is low. Farmers cannot pay the current high scale of wages with prevailing prices for their produce, Mr. Newman said in urging that efforts be made to have a Federal Marketing Act.

Reports to R.C.A.F.

Rodger Ross received word on Thursday to report to Ottawa on the following day, his application for the R.C.A.F. having been accepted. He had applied some months ago but had not been called and joined "C" Company, Second Battalion, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment here, holding the rank of sergeant. He has been active in young people's work and will be greatly missed from the town.

Miss Annie Hopkins died at her home here on Wednesday and the funeral was held at her late residence Friday afternoon, interment being in Glenwood cemetery. Rev. J. B. Creeggan of the Anglican Church of which she was a member, officiated. For many years she was a tailoress in local business establishments. Surviving are two sisters, Miss Minnie at home and Mrs. E. M. Herrington, Picton.

The play "What A Life" went off like greased lightning last Thursday and Friday before full and appreciative houses which rocked with laughter at the rather peculiar antics of 'our hero" as portrayed by Ralph Atyeo and the other members of the cast.... orchids for the deserving!....We heard with varying feelings of regret, last Saturday evening, that our rugby team had been defeated by Bowmanville with a score of 10-4....leaving us in the hole by one point....'Twas too bad but we're bearing up .... An Elevator meeting was held last Monday and plans were made for the forthcoming issue....the theme to be "Our War Effort" and the cover contest being practically over .... Sale of War Saving Stamps gets larger and larger as the days go by and Mr. MacLaurin announced in assembly the other day that the school is selling stamps at the rate of one hundred dollars worth a day....Word was received lately from Miss Bunting, a member of the staff who has been in New York for the last three months, and she will be back teaching in two weeks. ....Red Cross units are all working at top speed and in the one period allotted every week to the girls for knitting a surprising amount of work is being accomplished....although we did notice that several girls always seem to get tied up in double bow-knots or somethin' trying to wind wool....we can readily sympathize with them as we have peculiar habit of getting tangled up too....

Small Talk:

"Well, here we are again," as was quoted from the year-old "You Can't Take It With You" after the final curtain of "What a Life". The quoter was, of course, Ralph Atyeo, and it all goes to show what a memory the lad has....Under the capable direction of art maestro Miss Ash, murals are being planned for the two cafeterias. Needing the approval of the Board, the plans are still just "hazy and indefinite" ....And to continue the art motif, "stained-glass" windows are to be "installed" in the Art Room for the Christmas season. The Grade XI students who wield the brushes are thankful it comes but once a year ....Noticed the picture of Lon Chaney in the library's 'picture-of-the-month' display (North-West Mounted Police) but failed to notice the connection between the actor of yesteryear and the epic of today....For those who like their murder stories gory with corpses thrown around helter-skelter, we suggest they read the fairly recent 'Penguin'—"Murder Gone Mad" by Philip Macdonald....The Elevator's in full swing with the covers being judged and the schedule recently drawn up.

Our Weekly Joke:

In History of Trade and Industry class, Miss Priest, searching for an example of the text-book statement to the effect that individual wealth in the Middle Ages was the result of the rise of different occupations, said: "Let us take, for example, tool-making and bread-making—is there any money in break-making?" "Well," said Frank Jones, "there's a lot of dough!"

U. S. Correspondent's Story Inaccurate Says London Times

London, Nov. 29 (AP)—The Times diplomatic correspondent today took issue with a dispatch by Drew Middleton, Associated Press Staff writer, claiming that his strictures against British censorship were unfair and his description of Britain "passing through the darkest hours of the war" since Dunkirk was inaccurate.

Such a picture, The Times correspondent said, must "cause surprise on this side of the Atlantic." He said British authorities must give correspondents "all the help needed for a fair and balanced picture."

He added that "it is no accident that within the past few days American correspondents should in the same dispatch have criticized British censorship and then have gone straight on to paint the British position in unusually and unduly gloomy colors."

(In a dispatch Tuesday Middleton wrote that "the way the censors work is reminiscent of the conduct of French censorships before the fall of France." He said also "the Germans have killed thousands of civilian men, women and children without really damaging morale.")

The Times said Middleton's comparison of British to French censorship was less than fair," and argued that the directness and openness of British criticism and reporting would not have been allowed in France."

If American correspondents are to be treated supremely well here," the writer said, it does not mean they will all send declarations home that everything in the garden is lovely.' British interests wouldn't benefit if they did paint such pictures...Less than the truth, or more than it, can only help the enemy who is ready to exploit any point for the sake of propaganda."

The Times correspondent said that United States correspondents were given unrivalled press facilities and added that doors have been opened to them where British journalists have knocked in vain."

Commenting on the conclusion that Britain is passing through dark days, the article said Greek courage and talent in tactics, Italian unpreparedness, and British courage, both at Taranto and in the air on other fields, have brought brighter prospects than would have seemed possible a few weeks ago."

Wall St. Stock Operator Dies By Own Hand

Jesse Livermore, 62, Won and Lost Four Fortunes

WAS BIG SPENDER

New York, Nov. 29 (AP)—Jesse L. Livermore, 62, the one-time "boy wonder" of Wall Street who parlayed $10 up to $10,000,000 and then went bankrupt four times, was found shot to death late Thursday in the Sherry-Netherland Hotel, and police said he had killed himself.

His body was found in a cloakroom on the first floor of the fashionable hotel facing Central Park.

He had been shot behind the right ear by a .32-calibre revolver.

Livermore lost his fourth successive fortune about six years ago. Early in 1939 it was reported he was making another comeback, but nothing developed.

Livermore first witnessed stock speculation at the age of 16 when, newly arrived from a farm at West Acton, Mass., he went to work as an office boy in a Boston brokerage house.

Bucketshops prevailed in those days—places where stocks could be played like horses, on bets of $2 and up. Livermore played them and won a capital of $2,500,000 by the time he was 25.

In 1903 he came to New York and again headed for the bucketshops. Those he didn't ruin were wiped out later by law.

His first fortune was made in 1906 when he went "long" on Anaconda Copper when it boomed. He ran his luck to $3,000,000, and then went "short" at just the right moment in the 1907 panic.

He continued to increase his wealth until, finally, in 1915 he lost it all in the wartime markets. His debts were enormous, but two years later he announced:

"Gentlemen, I have paid them. All of them. A hundred cents on the dollar. I have paid for my mistakes, too. And one of them cost me $2,000,000."

He came back, however, making new fortunes in cotton, in steel, in wheat, in almost anything.

But he lost them again—in 1924, 1929 and 1934.

Gave $100 Tips

Known in Wall Street as a lone player, and by nature reticent, he soon was surrounded by legend.

He was said to have been a prodigious spender. Once he hired a special train to take him from Palm Beach, Fla., to Jacksonville—because he was unable to get a lower berth on the regular train.

In the days of his meteoric operations in Chicago grain, he was said to have handed out frequent tips of $100 to board-boys.

Probably the last big spending he did, however, was in 1937, when he paid more than $800,000 in back taxes to the Federal and New York State Governments.

Shot by Mother

About a month later he went to court to resist payment of a $450 doctor's bill for his son, Jesse Jr., the ward of his first wife, Mrs. Dorothea F. Longcope. Livermore said his second wife paid most of his bills, that his son, then 17, had an annual income of about $1,800, and that under a 1931 separation agreement Mrs. Longcope "should have about $12,000 or $13,000 a year" out of which to pay their expenses.

During the trial Livermore, being questioned about his income and expenses, denied he had made $5,000,000 on a single deal, but added: "I can't remember back twenty years or so."

The suit, brought for medical services necessitated by the accidental shooting of young Livermore by his mother in Santa Barbara, Cal., on Thanksgiving Day, 1935, was settled for $400.

The youth and his mother agreed to pay $300, but it was not known who paid the other $100.

Young Livermore's mother shot him during a party, calling him a "drunkard" as she fired. The son, who had handed her a rifle, maintained the shooting was accidental.

LONGER HOURS,

and extension of the working week from 44 hours to 48 might be necessary. The high rate of Sunday and overtime pay also might have to be changed, since they were "punitive" rates designed to prevent unnecessarily long hours when no emergency existed.

One of the studies being made in his department had to do with use of men in non-essential industries, the Minister said.

A survey was being made to establish a list of such industries which employ men in the trades where a shortage of men was in prospect, and to determine the number so employed.

"It may be found necessary to deny such industries the right to engage any additional men required in the essential occupations," he said, "and, secondly, to transfer some of their skilled labor to war industries."

Mr. McLarty was the eighth Cabinet Minister to speak in the debate on the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. He was followed by private members representative of all parties in the House.

Premier Makes Statement

Today Prime Minister Mackenzie King may makee an announcement concerning some further business planned for the present stage of the session before the long Christmas adjournment which now seems likely to come about the middle of next week.

Mr. King also said he might make a statement today on progress of the war, with especial reference to recent reports of heavy damage to British war industries and dwindling British financial resources.

Aside from Mr. McLarty's speech, yesterday's debate was featured by the maiden speech of Alfred Bence (Con. Saskatoon), who declared much of the difficulty in the wheat-growing areas of western Canada could have been avoided by an adequate government policy in relation to farm-stored wheat.

Mr. Bence advocated wider distribution of war industries so labor might be more equitably utilized. This would enable all parts of the country to aid in the war effort and facilitate post-war adjustments.

D. King Hazen (Con. Saint John-Albert) complained of alleged waste in military camp construction and expressed fear there was political patronage in war contracts despite the Prime Minister's declaration against it.

Not Going to Lose War

"Some say it does not matter how we spend money because if we lose the war it will be no good anyway," Mr. Homuth said. "Well, we are not going to lose the war."

He said the war effort should be conducted with that in mind. Mr. Homuth ended his address with a plea to the government to "give members of this House something to do to help win the war." He recalled that members of the House had co-operated readily in carrying out national registration.

"Give us something to do," he urged, "whether it is on the war loan or anything else we can do to help.

"There are no politics now. When the war is over and won we will go back to politics and fight it out, but until then let there be no politics."

Thomas Farquar, Liberal-Algoma East, said the speeches of Opposition members failed to substantiate the charges of Conservative House Leader Hanson in his amendment to the motion on the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne

If Mr. Hanson was the man he thought Mr. Hanson was, the Conservative leader would withdraw it.

Member Asks Question

T. C. Douglas (CCF Weyburn) said the war had brought a new sense of the value of the common man, without whose co-operation the war could not be won.

Mr. Douglas claimed the House was entitled to know "what is wrong" at the Lysander Aircraft Works in Malton, Ont. He quoted reports that more than 900 men, many of them key officials, had quit their jobs in the last year. He said delivery from the plant on war contracts had been slow and he thought members of Parliament should be told why.

Mr. McLarty was complimented on his address by Karl Homuth (Con. Waterloo South) who said "An address like that is the sort of information which this House wants from the Ministers who have the responsibility of carrying on our war effort.

Mr. Homuth said jail was too good for some of those who refused to register for National War Service. "There can be no neutrality in this country in regard to war," he said. "We are either for the war effort or against it."

No Shrinking of Sacrifice

Mr. Homuth said he was afraid the Government was endeavoring to operate on a peacetime set-up. He referred to the numerous boards which had been established and declared his doubt that any Cabinet Minister could give the number and duties of all the Boards created in Canada since the start of the war.

He said there was no likelihood of Canadians shrinking from any sacrifice necessary to win the war but they wanted to know where the money was going and if it was being put to the most efficient use.

Mr. Homuth feared too much money was being put into "bricks and mortar", constructing new factories in order to centralize war industries in Quebec and Ontario.

There were many unused factories throughout the Dominion and use should be made of them. Centralization of industry would mean tremendous expenditures on temporary housing for the workers.

COLONIAL EMPIRES STAND FIRM

Though the rude Hun dominates the soil of Belgium and tries to enslave the people, he cannot dominate the spirits of the Belgians. No one under Hitler's iron heel but resents the invader's presence in his country and execrates the Hun.

The Belgian Congo considers itself at war with Italy too as well as with Germany. The Governor-General of the Congo says the colony would continue in the closest collaboration with Great Britain and her Allies. Italians' interference with Belgium strengthened the Congo's determination against Italy. The Italians have committed hostile acts against Belgium in using Belgian airdromes for bombing Britain.

"Though the homeland of the Netherlands and Belgian empires have been overrun, the empires of these nations determine to keep their lands free from the Hun and loyal to Holland and Belgium. From these empires will in time come a pressure that will help to crush Hitlerism and Fascism. Though France is in a peculiar position in a state of armistice with the enemy, the French empire countries are as anxious as ever they were to remain true to their own unfettered France. The success of General de Gaulle is proof of this.

WOMEN OF POLAND APPEAL "FROM THE DEPTHS"

"From the depths of our martyred souls we cry to you, sisters, throughout the world," runs an appeal from the Women of Warsaw which was brought out to America by a secret and circuitous route which circumvented the plans of the German invaders. It is an appeal from the heart from those who have endured invasion—one of the most tragic in history. They look forward to the deliverance of Poland.

The appeal tells the women of the world that "history fails to record a Calvary equal to that, which we, the women of Poland, are living through now.

"There is no chord in our souls which has not been torn and been trampled upon; there is no thought which is not a tormenting and heart-rendering grief."

The horrors of invasion by an enemy which crushes everything that he can crush and steals everything he can deprive the people of were never more vividly depicted than in the words of the letter which tells of their plight— the mass murders; of the men who by tens of thousands perished, dying slowly in dungeons or war prisoners' camps; the sons, the pride and future of the nation, perishing as their fathers did or taken away to prison camps in Germany not to return; the daughters apprehended on the streets or abducted from their homes under cover of darkness, imprisoned in company with vile women so mothers, no longer able to shed tears, ask God for only one thing, 'that their daughters might die;' babes first seeing the light of day in refugee shelters, in freight cars, slowly dying in their mothers' arms.

But there are other crimes in the Hun invasion of Poland, churches burned, priests imprisoned, statues of Christ and of the Blessed Virgin broken, wayside shrines overthrown, chopped down and destroyed, religious services banned; schools closed, education lacking, so that the Poles may be a nation of serfs; homes are standing empty, since every German might enter at any time and take away furniture, linens and the last remnants of supplies; crime, misery and ruin ploughing through the land.

The letter sums up the situation in these striking words. "Poland has forgotten laughter, forgotten words other than those of despair."

One of the tragedies of the Poles in their suffering is to hear the lies and hypocrisy of the German taskmasters, who deny a single act of terror or brutality, of Hitler who said that not a Pole has been deprived of an opportunity to work, of the spokesmen to the outside press saying that Poland is prospering and is satisfied and that the rumors of terror were but the figment of the Allied propaganda. This is "the abyss of falsehood and hypocrisy." The answer of the women of Warsaw to this is that while the statement of Polish co-operation was being given to the press, the "thousands of human beings all over Poland were perishing amid tortures and all over Poland there was but one voice of execration of the Germans."

The letter makes the plea, "From the depths of our martyred souls we cry to you. Do not believe what the Germans say. Before God Almighty we swear that our words are true and that our accusations are not exaggerated. We are living in hell. This hell is all around us, it is smothering us and we are its helpless victims."

But the Poles are trying not to yield to despair for they believe in Divine Justice, in the justice of history and in the victory of good over evil. "We have faith in the victory of the Allies and we wait for the day of their triumph. The endeavor of the Germans is to exterminate and to destroy our entire nation."

The appeal closes with a picture of Poland which in the last war as on numerous occasions in the course of Poland's history "formed a bleeding rampart'" and a little over a year ago dared to defy the enemy.

That is the picture the women of Warsaw send to the women of the world and particularly of America.

From news stories which come out from Poland, the world gathers that the Poles in Poland are losing no means of frustrating the cruel invader. At the risk of their lives Poles disobey the German edicts. The Nazis cannot crush their patriotism.

Poles are serving in the British army, there are organizations of Polish aviators serving with the Royal Air Force, the Polish Government in exile in Britain is doing everything to keep the Polish spirit set on its one aim, victory for the Allies, so that to Poland, as to the other overrun lands, redemption to their former freedom may come and with it removal from the earth of the curse of Nazism and Fascism.

Nazis As Empire Builders

The Nazis have invented a new and purely Germanic term for "empire." They call it "Machtstaat"—power-state—a name which in itself reveals the Nazi attitude towards allies and protectorates. Nazis regard all subjugated countries, whatever their culture, as German colonies. Colonization for them is a gradual process undertaken so as to break more easily all internal and external resistance. The process has gone farthest in Poland.

The beginning of the second year of Nazi rule in Poland was made the occasion for many public speeches and for the enactment of new laws. Dr. Frank, the German Governor-General, boasted of Germany's "historic mission in the East" and declared that it was the duty of every German to be concious of it. "A German who goes to Poland," said Dr. Frank, "goes there as master. He is entitled to all respect for he is a free man; the Pole is his servant."

"A Pole may not be treated with friendliness or even with familiarity by a German. A Pole, whatever his position, remains a Pole. Friendship with a Pole is incompatible with German self-respect." Such was an injunction printed in "Voelkncher Beobachter" for the guidance of German administrators in Poland. Every German in Poland has the right—the duty indeed—to seize by the scruff of the neck and throw out any Pole who sits beside him in a tram or who enters a restaurant frequented by Germans, for German law only allows Poles to enter certain eating-houses not thought good enough for Germans—and then only at stated hours. Poles are permtited the use of a small space at the rear end of trams and may only travel third-class on the railways. The same laws further forbid the Polish police to proceed against a German for any crime or offence. Germans in Poland are subject exclusively to German authorities.

Strangely enough, German control of the Polish press has not prevented the appearance of certain "treasonable" announcements in Polish newspapers. By these insertions despairing Polish families announce the disappearance of their daughters and beg for possible news of their whereabouts. Most of the missing girls are aged between 16 and 20. Does this point to an epidemic of suicides, such as are common wherever the swastika is planted? If so, where are the dead bodies? On the other hand, reports filter through of Polish girls being abducted for German brothers.

The beginning of the second year of German terrorism in Poland coupled with the fact that, after a year of apparent successes, a final German victory is still not in sight brings one change; the despatch of Polish workers to Germany, which last year was called "voluntary", is now openly referred to as "compulsory deportation." The Nazi war machine needs German hands, and German agriculture is a matter for the "slave-peoples" It is estimated that one million Polish men and women are thus compulsorily employed in German agriculture called upon by the German authorities to report for work at short notice, they are bundled off to Germany at once without even being allowed to take leave of their families. On occasions, streets in some of the larger Polish towns have been closed by a cordon of German troops, and pedestrians rounded up and sent away to work in Germany.

Neutrals in Poland, especially Red Cross officials, say that no words can describe the conditions in the trains in which Polish workers are despatched to Germany. Once there, they are compelled to wear a mark to show that they belong to the "slave-race."

By every conceivable means the Nazis are trying to instill into the Poles a feeling that they are a morally inferior people, outcasts, in fact. A Pole must step off the pavement to let a German pass, must thrive on a smaller ration of bread and fats than a German, must go without tea, coffee and rice. Poles in Poland have to work at half wages for as many hours a day as they are ordered to. They have no amusements and no hospitals.

At the beginning of this second year of Nazi rule, the main streets and squares of Polish towns were re-named. The fine Ujazdowska Street in Warsaw has become the "Siegesallee" and "Hitler Streets" are legion. Street-names which recall Kosciuszko, Wilson or bygone days of Polish freedom are forbidden. In order to impress upon the Poles that the second year of Nazi domination is to bring no mitigation of their lot, but rather a still "stricter organization," thousands of people belonging to the more cultured classes have in recent weeks been arrested and either put in a concentration camp or shot. Acts of violence have been directed particularly against Catholic priests, whom the Nazis regard as their most dangerous enemies and as the stronger moral props to the Polish population. Priests have been made to sweep the streets and do other degrading jobs. Their homes have been turned into dance-halls.

Executions in Warsaw usually take place in the working-classes quarter of Praga, where once ten thousand Polish workers helped to construct a new Poland. Praga is now nothing but a cemetery. The Nazis forbid their slave-peoples to engage in industry, they want a market for German industrial goods. Much Polish industrial plant has been sent to Germany. Now, however, that Germany is feeling the effects of British air raids, the Nazis are beginning to move factories from Germany to Poland.

The transfer of German industries and the evacuation of German children to Poland are encouraging the resistance of the inhabitants to German territories. This resistance to the foreign yoke, so far mainly passive, is extremely well organized. German officials in Poland are compelled to buy food-stuffs on the quiet from Polish peasants, food which by German law the peasant is bound to deliver to the German authorities, but which he prefers to bury and destroy rather than hand it over to the enemy.

The Nazis will never break the spirit of the Poles, never make them a nation of slaves. The Poles were among the first people of Europe to enjoy democratic laws. More than half a century before Christopher Columbus discovered America, a Polish law proscribed tyranny and established trial by judge.

Shopping in Germany

Hitler is now offering to the women of Germany a surprising gift — clothes from Paris! German officers, soldiers and officials are buying up all possible clothing in France and sending it home. All through the years of German military preparation, beginning with the assumption of power by Hitler in 1933, German women were obliged, along with many similar sacrifices, to dispense with a normal wardrobe. As soon as war broke out, clothes could only be obtained in exchange for the unpopular coupon. Now clothes are suddenly arriving from Paris. Will this convert the enthusiasm of German women for their Fuehrer into an undying attachment?

German women are not famed for their elegance. Still, even the plainest housewife is a woman and cannot resist an occasional piece of dress material or a new hat. In pre-Hitler days the women of Berlin and the Rhineland had even a curious and slightly risque chic. Later, of course, they suffered under the numerous Nazi restrictions on dress. But alas! even the trophies of victory now arriving from Paris are not the unalloyed pleasure they might be. For of what value is the most ravishing Paris confection if it has to be worn with shabby shoes? Or perhaps with a pair of shoes which does not match the dress? Men are bad at buying women's clothes. They have no mind for detail and send home anything they can lay hands on.

Despite large imports from the conquered territories, leather is still extremely scarce in the Reich. Hitler's subjects are entitled each to 1.2 pairs of shoes a year, that is to say, to one pair of shoes in every ten months. True, the article sold as a leather shoe is not really leather; it is like so much else in the Fatherland — "ersatz". The substitute material for shoes is called "Buna" and is an artificially manufactured, synthetic product made of leather waste, cellulose and synthetic rubber. Anyone who has worn these shoes for hours on end, knows how painful are the results. Though "Buna" looks like leather, it is completely non-porous and causes the feet to perspire. As there is not enough leather for the soles of civilian shoes (still less for women's shoes, which are regarded from the point of view of national economy as less important than man's), German women have to put up with wooden soles. Propaganda commends the cheerful sound of wooden soles, but whether their hard clatter is equally pleasing to the wearer in very doubtful.

Most of the clothes hastily bought by Germans in France for their women at home, have to be altered, being either too big or too small for the wearer. This leads to a further difficulty. Even thread is rationed in Germany. The monthly allowance is to the value of 2½d and if anyone needs more, she has to surrender part of the clothes ticket. The latter consists of a number of "points". A few weeks ago the annual number was raised from 100 to 150, but this again is only an apparent improvement. Last year, when the point system was first introduced, the purchaser received so many articles for a given number of points: e. g. a coat and skirt for forty points. At present the number of points varies with the quality of the clothing. A woollen dress "consumes" 42 points, while a dress made of artificial silk takes only 32. A warm woollen coat can only be afforded by a woman whose demand for other garments is modest, since a woollen coat uses up 75 of the annual points. Women who still favour a certain variety in their wardrobe prefer to buy thin clothing of artificial silk, which absorbs only a small number of points. In winter they depend for warmth upon plenty of underclothing.

Every woman in Germany must be prepared at any time to receive a visit from a female official on the Reich Committee for Economic Instruction, who will order her to open her wardrobe. There are twenty-two million homes in Germany and wardrobes, like other things in Germany, are only in appearance private property. The state assumes the right to open every private cupboard and to search for all old garments that are in a condition to be "repaired." Tailors have been given official instructions to recommend to customers the "repair" of even their oldest clothes.

A particularly awkward problem in the Nazi woman's wardrobe of 1940 is the question of stockings. Hitler allows only seven pairs of stockings a year, and even that number cannot be procured in the desired shades and sizes. Plundered stocks from France and Belgium are already dwindling

Children, too, are strictly rationed in their clothes. Rapidly growing boys and girls must not mind cutting a comic figure in garments either too long or too short for them. Each new issue of clothes tickets for children is preceded by the fulfilment of exceedingly strict formalities. A mother has to produce the child in his or her worn-out clothes and to submit to the authorities various documents before it is decided whether little Adolf really needs a new pair of breeches or can do with a patch in the old ones.

THE KING OF THE EAGLE PEOPLE

In a quiet room not far from Hyde Park Corner, I met one of the saddest monarchs in Europe—Zog, King of the Albanians. The last time I saw him was in his own country, standing on the balcony of the palace outside Tirana.

King Zog has been for many of us a legendary figure, living an unreal existence in a country almost completely unknown to the outside world. His sudden and violent rise to power at the head of a band of his own Mati tribesmen, his attempt to rule his country infested with Fascist spies, his whirlwind romance followed by a pathetic flight with his beautiful wife and their newborn son, was all in the Balkan tradition—the tradition of violence and unexpectedness.

When the Italians marched in on Good Friday 1939, they claimed a bloodless victory over the Albanians —they also claimed that the country "stood with open arms to welcome the Fascist liberators". So warm was that welcome that they found it necessary to massacre thousands of helpless women and children in order to terrify the people into submission—"restoring order in the disloyal areas" they happily called it.

Italy would never have dared to invade Albania if she had not brought to perfection her system of graft and spying that completely undermined the national security of the state. Albania had her own brand of Quislings long before the unhappy fate of Norway made known the remarkable efficiency of bribery and corruption as media for the break-up of a country's general morale.

With a mob of hired hooligans at the palace gates, King Zog had to make an ignominious flight over the mountains to Salonica. His wife, Queen Geraldine, had but two days previously given birth to the infant heir to the throne. Ciano had been one of the King's best men at the wedding!

After a fourteen hour drive over appalling roads to the frontier at Florina, the Queen was so ill that it was thought that she would never survive the ordeal. Meanwhile the Duce's toadies in the Albanian government posted up outside the palace the official excuse for their capitulation. They said that "the king has by his egotism and criminal neglect of his country's welfare, shown himself to be no longer a fit person to rule the state, and that therefore all his goods and property are forfeited to the protectorate."

"But you will see that we shall rise again," said King Zog, "for are we not the most ancient of all the people in the Balkan peninsula?" We were talking about the thousands of Albanians scattered all over the Balkans, and of those who had emigrated to the United States. "Whatever their political views, whatever they may desire for the eventual system of government of their country, in one thing they are completely united — their absolute conviction that Europe will never know the meaning of peace as long as the menace of German and Italian totalitarianism is allowed to exist.

If anybody here in England thinks that they will be able to make any sort of lasting peace in Europe while half the minority populations are under the unjust rule of foreign powers, then all I can say is that they are doomed to a horrible awakening. Albania is a small and a poor country but she is populated by some of the fiercest and most intrepid fighters in Europe. We have no fantastic territorial claims neither have we any desire save to be left to live alone and happily in the exercise of our rights as free men of Europe."

I mentioned the fifth column activities of certain Albanians when the Italians invaded the country, and the king told me that he thought that in every community no matter where it was, one would inevitably find traitors. "Provided the price is high enough, I think that one can always find disgruntled men with an axe to grind, who for thirty pieces of silver will sell their country, their families . . . even their own lives. Few of those who betrayed my country have really benefited by their treason, for the Italians have never been notable for keeping their promises and many who thought that their treachery would be handsomely rewarded have been bitterly disappointed."

King Zog speaks with a beautiful soft cadence, making an occasional swift movement with his hands to press home the points of his conversation. His voice is sad and quiet; I could not but help thinking how well this grave, finely built man personifies the character of the people he rules.

Rightly is his country called Mbretnis Shquiptare, "The Country of the Eagle", for its people with their proud courage will soar above the present tribulation with the strength and power of the tribal totem that has given its name to their little country.

It is expected that 10,000 wood gas generators will be in use in motor vehicles, tractors and fishing vessels in Finland by the end of the year.

POLES-CZECHS IN NEW ACCORD

Declaring an end to past recriminations and disputes, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia have laid the foundations of political and economic union. And thus they pave the way to a wider federation of nations and the establishment of a new order in Europe.

Agreement between the two countries is announced in a joint declaration, text of which was issued by Victor Podoski, consul general of Poland in Canada.

It reads:

"The Polish government and the provisional Czecho-Slovak government have decided to issue the following declaration: Imbued with an inflexible faith that the heroic struggle now being waged by Great Britain, together with her allies, against German tyranny will end in the final defeat of the forces of evil and destruction; animated by a profound conviction that the future order of the world must be based on the co-operation of all elements which recognize the principles of freedom and justice as constituting the foundation of all our common civilization the two governments consider it imperative to declare solemnly even now that Poland and Czecho-Slovakia, closing once and for all the period of past recriminations and disputes and taking into consideration the community of their fundamental interests are determined on the conclusion of this war to enter, as independent and sovereign states, into a closer political and economic association which would become the basis of a new order in Central Europe, and a guarantee of its stability.

"Moreover both governments express the hope that in this co-operation, based on respect for the freedom of nations, the principles of democracy and the dignity of man they will also be joined by other countries in that part of the European continent. The two governments are now resolved to co-operate closely for the defence of their common interests and for the preparation of the future association of the two countries. The two countries stigmatize the cynical farce which leaders of Nazi Germany are endeavoring to stage by proclaiming themselves the builders of a new European order. The hypocrisy of these assertions is most clearly revealed in the light of German endeavors aiming at the destruction of our two ancient nations, which have contributed their important share to the common treasure of human civilization, in the violence and cruelty to which our two nations are being subjected; the expulsion of the two native populations from large areas of their ancient homelands; the banishing of hundreds of thousands of men and women to the interior of Germany as forced labor; mass executions and deportations to concentration camps; the plundering of public and private property; extermination of the intellectual class and of all manifestations of cultural life; spoliation of the treasures of science and art—unparalleled in all human history. They offer a striking example of the spirit and methods of the Germanic 'new order'. The two governments address this burning appeal to all free people immune from the German terror that, in the measure of their strength, they should help the nations allied in the struggle for the freedom of all nations and the deliverance of the world from its present monstrous nightmare."

Little Benny's Note Book

Mr. Riley the hooken ladder driver used to be a saffer before he was a fireman, and he showed me and Puds Simkins how to tie different knotts in a rope, and this afternoon I was practicing some of them on a loose piece of cord, and ma was in her room reading a book with a green cover, and I said, Hay ma, you're the world's champeen knott untyer, aren't you?

I'd hardly go so far as to say that, but thanks for the compliment, I'm sure, ma said, and I said, Well try to get this one out will you ma? Jimminy, ma, if you can get this one out you ought to get a gold meddle, I said.

Oh deer, every time I get lost in a book something like this happens, ma said. What knott are you talking about? she said, and I said, This one, ma, I dont believe even you can undo this one, ma.

And I handed her the cord with 2 knotts in it and she started to take one out, being such a fierse one she started to use her front teeth to help her finger nales, saying, Well of all the knotts for land sakes, I dont see how a person of ordnerry intelligence could get a knott like this in anything even if they tried.

I told you I didn't think you could do it, ma, I said, and she said, Well then you were wrong, because it's practically untied, by some miracle.

Wich it was, and I said, Jimminy, ma, you're a reguler knott detective, now see if you can untie the one on the other end, I said, and ma said, What, is there still another one? What is this old piece of twine, anyway, for land sakes? she said.

It's just an old piece of twine I was using to practice knotts on, I said, and ma said, Well of all the unheard of ideas to take me away from my book. Now you'll just undo this second monstrosity yourself before you leave this house before you leave this room, she said.

Wich I did, taking me about 50 times longer than what it took me to tie it and being about 50 times less fun.

West Huntingdon and District

West Huntingdon — The Misses Irene and Marguerite Elliott entertained the Young People's Union of United Church on Thursday evening. There was a fair attendance of members present and a very helpful program was presented presided over by the president, Mr. Harold Elliott.

A most interesting part of the Worship service was a Bible discussion when all members joined in answering perplexing questions from the Bible. In the business period, the Young People assumed the responsibility of the Christmas concert.

The special feature was in the form of a discussion, each member submitting a question. As a result of this discussion, it was decided that in the future fifteen minutes of each meeting would be devoted to Bible study. Following the Benediction an interesting contest was conducted by Marion Hammond and a lunch was served.

Mission Band Meeting

The Mission Band held a meeting on Saturday at Donald and Glen Wilson's home when 17 members and six visitors gathered for the regular meeting. Joan McCurdy read the Scripture lesson. Readings were given by Theda Moorcroft and Annie Cooke. Special music was contributed by Mrs. W. J. Fitchett, Mrs. Albert Ashley, leader of the Baby Band gave an interesting story. At close a lunch was served. Proceeds $2.45.

Ridge Road Red Cross

The Junior Red Cross Society of the Ridge Road school, of which Miss B. Keene is principal, sponsored a pie social in the auditorium of the school on Friday evening. Mr. Volney Richardson was chairman for the following program:

Opening chorus by the club members; welcome address by Grant Stapley; recitation, Keith McGee; solo, Barbara Loney; dialogue by Junior members; recitation, Douglas McGee; duet, Joan McCurdy, Louis McGee.

Mrs. J. C. Sills was the special speaker and gave a wonderful address on the work of the Red Cross the singing of "There'll Always be an England" and National Anthem close the program. The ladies served a lunch of pie and sandwiches. A small fee charged, swelled the treasury by $7.00. The officers recently elected are: President, Grant Stapley; Secretary, Louis McGee; Treasurer, Joan McCurdy.

Nominations

Huntingdon Township held their nomination meeting on Friday, Nov. 22. There was a very small attendence. Reports of year's work were received from each of the councillors and the Reeve. The 1940 council were elected by acclamation.

Friends are glad to congratulate a former townsman and popular county treasurer, Mr. Jas. W. Haggerty, on having passed another birthday on Nov. 23rd. Mr. Haggerty is carrying his seventy-one years well and his many friends around West Huntingdon and throughout the county will wish for him yet many years to serve the county in his present capacity and in the enjoyment of the best of health.

SECRET SESSION HEARS REPORT BY ANTHONY EDEN

War Secretary Reviews Organization of the British Army

NO EMERGENCY

London, Nov. 28—(CP) — The House of Commons in a secret session today heard a review of the army's organization by War Secretary Anthony Eden.

Before the doors were closed the House discussed the treatment of British Fascists held in internment camps. Herbert Morrison, Home Secretary, announced a decision to release some lesser officials of the British Union of Fascists.

He indicated, however, that the government was not considering the release of Fascist leaders such as Sir Oswald Mosley.

Parliamentary circles said there was nothing of an emergency nature about the secret session.

Prime Minister Churchill had told the House it could expect a secret report of the War Secretary's "recent adventurous journey" to the near east and "the position generally of the great armed forces over which he presides and which are gaining in force, numbers and equipment as every week passes by."

Asked of Circumstances

Mr. Morrison, in discussing Fascist matters, was asked the circumstances surrounding the departure of Princess Stefanie Hohenlohe Waldenburg-Schillingsfurst from this country to the United States. He explained that "this Hungarian subject left the United Kingdom in December, 1939."

"When applying for an exit permit she gave as her object a visit to relatives in the United States," Mr. Morrison said.

Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, asked: "As she is a notorious member of Hitler's spy organization, why was she permitted to leave this country to do that sort of work over there?" There was no reply.

(Princess Hohenlohe last figured prominently in the news in November, 1939, when she lost a suit against the late Lord Rothermere, in which she claimed the British publisher had agreed to pay her about $20,000 a year for life for acting as his political representative and emissary to Hitler).

Mr. Morrison confirmed that Signor Cosmati, an Italian cartoonist, had been severely beaten by two Fascist internees at an internment camp on the Isle of Man because of an anti-Fascist cartoon published in a London newspaper.

During June and July of this year, Mr. Morrison disclosed, 1,662 persons were detained for examination.

3 MONTHS ON BISCUITS AND MILK

Women's Digestive Troubles

Everyone who is subject to any form of indigestion should know of this woman's experiences. Advice from one who has had such severe attacks is advice worth having. She writes:—

"I suffered from indigestion, gastritis and constipation, and was so very ill, I had (on medical advice) to live on soda biscuits and milk for three months. Well, a friend advised me to take Kruschen, and now I am pleased to say I am greatly improved. I can eat and enjoy a good meal without any painful after-effects, my skin is clearer—in fact, quite clear—and there is no sign of constipation. I would advise anyone suffering the same to take Kruschen."

—(Mrs.) M. R. L.

The immediate effect of the several salts in Kruschen is to stimulate your liver and kidneys to normal action and help to free your system of poisonous waste matter. Soon after you start on Kruschen you will find that you are able to enjoy your food without distressing after-effects.

MORE CONTROL OF FOOD FORECAST

Every Encouragement Will be Given by Government to Increase Production of Milk, Vegetables

London, Nov. 28 —(CP)— Additional government control of food through a wage-price-marketing policy was forecast today by informed sources.

The government is confident it can weather the months ahead without difficulty or hardship, these persons said, but extension of rationing and expansion of communal feeding systems are likely.

Every encouragement will be given by the government to increase production of milk, potatoes, bread and vegetables and to secure more home-grown forage for cattle.

Food Minister Lord Woolton told a refrigeration council luncheon that meat importations may be reduced to conserve shipping.

He added that apples, apricots, grapes and bananas "must disappear for a time from our tables."

Britons "for the rest of the war," he said, must change their eating habits. He noted, however, that "we enter the second winter of the war with confidence in our supplies."

Meanwhile the Board of Trade issued a statement denying a shortage of tobacco. Present stocks, it said, are "sufficient to last for a long time," although there are "local and temporary" shortages of particular brands.

Expect Largest Holiday Trade Ever Recorded

Washington, Nov. 29 (AP)—The United States Commerce Department predicted today the biggest Christmas stocking of holiday trade that American business has ever enjoyed.

Experts of the Department have advised Secretary Jesse H. Jones, it was learned, that their surveys show that the physical volume of Christmas retail trade—sales between Thanksgiving and Christmas—will be the largest on record.

They reported they could not make advance estimates in dollars and cents, but said that, on a value basis, it might be a little under the $5,000,000,000 record set in 1929. They explained that prices of goods are much lower now than in 1929, so that merchants may sell more items without taking in quite as many dollars.

The experts found no lack of gifts on counters because of the war. American-made goods of similar quality, they said, have replaced to a large extent such items as French laces and gloves, Czechoslovakian glassware and textiles, German cameras and musical instruments, Belgian gems and linens, and Italian textiles.

As for toys, the officials announced, that, contrary to popular belief, American factories largely displaced Germany and Japan in the toy market years ago.

Appeal for Damages Dismissed by Court

Ottawa, Nov. 29 (CP)—The appeal of Alexander Leeson, Havelock, Ont., to obtain damages from the village of Havelock because of an injury suffered when he fell on an icy street in March, 1939, was dismissed with costs by the Supreme Court of Canada yesterday.

Mr. Leeson alleged gross negligence on the part of the village. The municipality contended street-sanding operations had been carried out the day before Mr. Leeson was injured and that he was aware of sidewalk conditions.

Last January Mr Justice W. D. Roach in the Supreme Court of Ontario found in favor of Leeson to the extent of $3,20, covering damages and costs The Ontario Appeal Court reversed this judgment and yesterday the Supreme Court of Canada dismissed with costs Leeson's appeal against this reversal.

Hid British General Under Bomb Rack To Escape Bombs

Toronto, Nov. 29 (CP)—FO. L. L. (Slim) Jones of the Royal Air Force recounted how he had hidden Maj.-Gen. Adrian Carton de Wiart under the bomb rack inside a British Sunderland flying boat in Namsos Fjord while taking the General to Norway to take charge of the British forces which fought there against the Nazis.

Jones, native of Saskatoon, said he was headed for Namsos Fjord where he found a number of Nazi planes bombing a destroyer with which he was to have a rendezvous.

"We squatted down to find they (the Germans) were knocking the spots off the destroyer," Jones said. "Bombs dropped all around us and we put the General under the bomb rack for safety. After we had floated around for a bit, dodging the bombs, it began to get dark and the Germans had to head for home to be able to land while it was still light."

The Canadian airman, awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross during the Norwegian campaign, arrived in Toronto yesterday on leave.

Ask any Exide Dealer:

"WHAT DOES COLD WEATHER DO TO A BATTERY?"

PLENTY, he'll tell you—and prove it with his new, scientific Starting Power Indicator. Batteries, you'll see, are allergic to cold; not only does cold lower their efficiency, it adds to the work they have to do.

But there's one way to dodge battery trouble in cold weather. You don't have to find a dead engine in your garage some fine cold morning soon. Go to your Exide Battery Dealer now. Let him give you a graphic eyeful, via his Starting Power Indicator of what cold does to a battery; then let him test yours on his Exide Sure-Start Tester, an instrument that's as revealing as an X-ray. When he's through, you'll know whether you need a "recharge", a new battery, or whether you're all set for Winter.

Look for the daily weather forecast at your Exide dealer's gas pump. To avoid starting trouble, have him check your battery now. This service is free.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. H. Redfern wishes to announce the engagement of his daughter, Margaret, to Thomas W. Hetherington of Toronto, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. Hetherington. The marriage to take place the latter part of December.

Mr. Charlie Goyer, of the Merchant Marine, is visiting relatives in the city for a few days.

Miss Geraldine McCarthy has left for her home in Ottawa where she will be the guest of her mother, Mrs. W. J. McCarthy.

Mrs. K. Cleeton has returned to her home after three weeks in the Belleville General Hospital, her condition being somewhat improved.

Harry Lee, Vancouver, B.C., son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Lee, Cedar Street, visited with his parents in the city for past two days.

James Stark, 12 years old, of 12 Benjamin Street, is in Belleville General Hospital, where he underwent a minor operation.

Mr. Fred Spafford is gravely ill at his home on the Second Concession of Sidney.

Christ Church A.Y.P.A. held an interesting meeting on Wednesday evening in the Parish Hall. After a hymn and prayer the secretary gave a financial report that was very satisfactory. Many new and senior members were present for the first time this season. The remainder of the meeting was devoted to a social evening with all manner of games, carpet bowling, ping pong, Chinese checkers, quoits and darts enjoyed. Lunch was served followed by dancing to music furnished by Garnet Hicks with an electric phonograph, radio attached. Appreciation was expressed to the firm so kindly supplying the music.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxilary to the Y, a most successful afternoon tea was held yesterday in the Y parlours. The guests were welcomed by Mrs. J. E. Shortt and Mrs. Newton Thompson. Mrs. J. N. Boyd and Mrs. A. Gilroy were conveners of the tea. The spacious reception room with its glowing grate fire made an ideal tea room. Green tapers and bronze chrysanthemums were used with touches of green decorations on the tea table at which Mrs. B. Jennings, Mrs. J. Arbuckle, Mrs. Harry Thompson and Mrs. Coulson poured tea. Those assisting in serving were Mrs. A. E. Cainan, Mrs. Roblin, Miss Elsie Forman and Miss Jessie McGie. The home cooking table was in charge of Mrs. J. N. Boyd, Mrs. T. Ketcheson, Mrs. B. McMurray and Miss Ila Boyd. Mrs. H. E. Fairfield was treasurer of the tea. The table bouquet was won by Mrs. W. Boyd, Catherine Street.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Carter, 219 Foster Avenue, observing their fortieth wedding anniversary yesterday, received the congratulations and good wishes of a host of friends who welcomed the opportunity of thus honoring life-long members of the community. The spacious rooms of their home were filled with lovely bouquets, bearing messages of greeting on this happy occasion. Little Miss Marjorie Carter, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carter, opened the door to the guests who were received by the host and hostess. The tea table was charming with its dainty lace cloth, beautiful arrangements of chrysanthemums, and handsome silver and crystal appointments. Mrs. D. Harrison, Trenton, Mrs. Carter's sister, poured tea and the tea assistants were Miss Alice Harrison, Trenton, Mrs. Earl Jackson and Mrs. Francis Carter. Mr. and Mrs. Carter were the recipients of many lovely gifts, a tribute to the esteem in which they are held. The Past Grands' Club of which Mrs. Carter is a popular member, visited her home in a body and presented Mr. and Mrs. Carter with flowers, a crystal and silver relish dish and an anniversary cake. Both natives of Belleville, Mrs. Carter being the former Albertina Falle. Mr. and Mrs. Carter have spent their lifetime in the city. They have two children, Miss Marguerite Carter, and Mr. Francis Carter. Present at the delightful celebration yesterday were Mrs. Carter's three sisters, Mrs. Harrison, Trenton, Mrs. J. W. Miller and Mrs. Alice Yerex, Bowmanville and Mrs. Miller's daughter, Miss Leola Miller, Bowmanville.

YOUNG WOMEN'S GUILD

On Monday, November twenty-fifth, the Young Women's Guild of Tabernacle Church, held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. J. R. McCullough on Charles St.

Mrs. Stanley Kerr, vice-president, was in the chair and conducted the business of the meeting.

The devotional period was on the subject of "Jesus' teachings about God" and it fitted very well with the general topic of the evening tracing the idea of the Old Testament teaching of Jehovah through to "Our Father".

Mrs. Harry Mills led the discussion on the very interesting subject "The Growth of Trade Unions in Canada". The general history of trade unions from the time of guilds in the fourteenth century up to the present was given. It was interesting to note that until 1824 these had to be secret. At this time an Act of Parliament made legal these trade unions.

In describing the various unions the first printers' strike in 1872 was mentioned. Several strikers were put in jail but shortly after this strikes were made "not illegal". One of the now very strong trade unions "The Brotherhood of Railway Engineers" held one of its first meetings in Belleville.

Mrs. Harrison gave a short talk on "Strikes" and Mrs. Buck spoke of social legislation which has been won by trade unions. Labour has come a long way until now that some of the strong men of the British Cabinet are from the Labour Party. Here one finds Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor, Herbert Morrison, Minister of Supply, Arthur Greenwood, Chairman of British War Production Council and C. R. Attlee, Lord Privy Seal.

The social committee under the leadership of Mrs. Melville Clark and Mrs. Roy Gibson served refreshments at the close of the meeting.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Sending Regrets

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I have just received an invitation to the wedding of my nephew. The invitation is from the parents of the bride-to-be, and includes an invitation to the ceremony and to the reception following. I have seen my nephew only a few times, and I have never met his bride-to-be or her parents.

1.—My husband and I will not be able to accept the invitation. Will you please tell me how I should word our "regret"? If there is a certain type of card that I should use, will you tell me what it is? How should I end the letter? Where should I write my address—on the top right of the beginning or at the lower left at the end?

2.—Is it proper to send a gift? If you tell me it is, what would you suggest as an inexpensive gift?

M. P.

1.—You could correctly use the double-sheeted white letter-paper on which you wrote to me, and write your address—with no abbreviations of the word "Street" or of the name of the state— in the upper right corner.

I assume that the invitation you received was a formal one—in the third person—and so your reply must be formal. Its not necessary to answer the invitation to the church ceremony, but you should answer the reception-invitation. This is the correct form for your regret:

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Peterson regret that they are unable to accept
Mr. and Mrs. David Wood's kind invitation to their daughter's wedding reception
on Tuesday, the tenth of December

2.—Wether or not you send a gift depends on your own wish. It is more or less customary to send one when we are invited to the reception and, even if you do not know your nephew very well, you would probably wish to pay compliment to his bride-to-be by sending her a wedding gift. (The wedding gift, you know, is always sent to the bride-elect, even if we do not know her.)

An appropriate and inexpensive gift might be a linen breakfast or tea set, or four or six lace-edged tea napkins, or a half dozen china or glass salad or dessert plates, or a lemon fork, or a simple small crystal vase.

Engagement Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I are invited to an engagement party. Does this mean that we ought to take or send a gift, send a telegram, or what should we do?

Mrs. W. L.

You may, if you wish, send the engaged girl a gift or take a gift to the party. But an invitation to an engagement party doesn't necessarily demand a gift. Customarily engagement gifts are given only by near relatives and close friends. If you do decide to give the engagement gift, remember that it is supposed to be something for the personal use of the bride-elect, not something for the new home.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Is He Conceited?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"We've known each other only a short time, and he has taken me out several times. I really am very fond of this boy. He often came to the house for an evening of bridge and a supper afterwards, and he seemed to enjoy himself. The last time he came over, he had to leave for a short time to do an errand, but he came back. Since then he hasn't been around any more. I can't understand what happened.

He is very popular with girls, but he seems unaware of them. At one dance several girls seemed to chase him all evening. I've heard if a boy gets a notion you are after him he is through with you. Is that what happened in my case?

Marian

The girls who "seemed to chase him" may have made him conceited and perhaps he's unable to decide on which of the many to choose.

You've known him only a few weeks. From your letter, which was too long to print in its entirety, you have given me the impression that you rushed him a bit too hard. Suppose you wait a while before you invite him again to come to supper and cards.

Flirting Husband

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We've been married about ten years, and whenever I go out with my husband he flirts with other girls. When I ask him not to embarrass me, he tells me he doesn't love me and therefore can't make love to me.

We have three lovely children, and he is very good to them. However, if I leave him, I couldn't go out to earn money for our support, as the children are too small to leave alone. Please tell me what to do to make him stop his philandering.

Y.

In your place I'd ignore this flirting of your husband's. That's a form of silliness some men seem to think is cute. I get letters from young girls saying how bored they get wtih these married men who try to make love to them in the presence of their wives.

As he's good to the children, I don't believe he's likely to go much farther than his public lovemaking. Try to take his weakness good-humoredly. Don't nag him about it.

To Demonstrate Cooking Can Be Real Fun!

A cooking school, yes—but so different. Recipes that have been developed and tested in a home kitchen will be demonstrated to the housewives of Belleville in a real home kitchen, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Crisp, colourful curtains frame the windows, a plant blooms on the sill. Over the door the kitchen clock ticks away, and the tea kettle hums merrily.

Mrs. Day, the lecturer, believes firmly that cooking can be fun. She practices what she preaches in this model kitchen on the stage, so that you can actually see what makes the kitchen wheels go round. She has a genius for shortcuts. She has a knack for hunting up new ideas in food. She can show you why quality, rather than quantity in buying is economy in the long run.

Last year, from Fort William, to Vancouver, more than 100,000 housewives attended her thirty-eight cooking schools. At each session of her schools the auditorium was crammed to the doors as hundreds of old and young, experienced and inexperienced cooks came for the refresher course.

The Cooking School sessions in McCarthy Theatre will take place three afternoons beginning Monday, at two o'clock.

One-inch increase in chest girth and about four pounds weight in muscles are gains which men called up by the selective service draft can expect in the new peacetime army, figures show.

Don't Fret If the Tot Is Unsocial

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Many a mother eager to have her child become a good playmate very early is exceedingly discouraged with his lack of sociableness toward other children of his age. She expects too much of him. She should know that up to about three he is by nature an individualist. He just has to learn gradually to cooperate in play with others. While frequent contacts with other children hasten this social acquirement a good deal of it is inherent in his growth and development, in his growing older.

During this early period he plays by himself a great deal of the time even if in a nursery school. Though he likes to have other children play near him he prefers to follow his own interests most of the time.

It is when the child's imagination develops rapidly that he is more likely to enjoy dramatic play and choose, therefore, to spend part of his playtime with one or two other children. How well the young child's interest in creative imagination unfolds depends largely on how well his parents adapt themselves to this development, play the part of the young dramatist assigns to them, and read and tell folk tales to him.

Association With Other Children

Even the child of five may follow his own play interest most of the time, in the presence of other children of his age. While you won't insist that children of this age play cooperatively, it is well for them to play alongside other children of the same age, thus affording them increased inducements to play together.

In the home it is well for the young children not to have duplicate toys. If, for example, two children have a cart or wagon just alike they will confuse the ownership and quarrel over it each growing more independent and selfish. But if one has a cart and the other a wagon, provided each had been trained to respect the other's ownership, they will discover it to their advantage to exchange and coopearte. Two or more children at creative play with blocks may choose to work together for a long stretch of time on the same structure.

Stages of Play

Contrary to popular belief, the play interests of boys and girls up to five or six are very much alike. Much greater sex difference is apparent at the age of eight or ten.

While children differ widely in respect to play interest they all tend to go through the following stages: They first handle materials and enjoy the experiences they get through the senses; then they gradually put things together, first very crudely, later with more and more likeness to the things they say they are creating As more definite ideas take shape there develops more and more dramatic play. Fortunate the child whose parents encourage his creations and inventions, however crude, in terms of things or words; who enjoy his yarns of fancy, go with him into his land of make-believe, and who fire his imagination by reading non-fearful fairy tales to him.

If you are over 50, eat one meal less per day and put the money into war savings, advised Comedian Geo. Robey, 72, of London, and a fairly hearty specimen himself.

Keynote of Chic Lies in Harmony

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

TO KNOW what is becoming and to make selections accordingly is to be suitably dressed and to enjoy a sense of composure. A woman's appearance should be as definite and rhythmical as the notes of a musical composition or a fine piece of scripture, so that there is harmony of line and coloring from head to heels.

Madeleine Carroll knows the art of dressing well

It is one thing to be chic and dashing, another to be conspicuous. Too much make-up will appear to change a woman's character, while a restrained tinting of cheeks and lips will make her look vivid and charming. Size up the girls who use no lip coloring, and those who do and you must come to the conclusion that it is possible to improve upon nature. Lips naturally bright red are rare, like small shell-like ears and beautiful hands.

Watch Hats and Dresses

The woman who packs a plump body into a frock that is a size too small calls attention to her curves. The thin one whose gown is a bit too large looks even thinner because the figure is not trim but is draped with ugly folds.

Hats are important. The right one will shadow bad features, play up good ones. Neck lines play a part, too. The V cut makes a plump neck seem more slender while the rounded line chucks the double chin down onto the chest.

When you drag out the make-up kit, prepare to put on the gardenia complexion and the rosy cheek glow, do not overlook the ear lobes. When the natural blush appears ears take on a delicate pink coloring, so one might as well follow the original idea. Touch the lobes with a rouge pad. Before doing that, fluff powder over the entire surface of the ears.

Religious Education Council Of Sidney Township Convenes

Madoc Jct. — The Annual Convention of the Sidney Township Religious Education Council was held in Eggleton United Church on Thursday, Nov. 21st, with afternoon and evening sessions.

During the afternoon the Devotional period was conducted by members of White's Sunday school. Mr. Oliver Stapley, superintendent of Eggleton school, gave the address of welcome. Mr. S. W. Spafford, Township president, gave an interesting address. Hymn 192 "Rock of Ages" was sung in memory of Mr. F. Finkle, who had passed away during the year. The late Mr. Finkle had always taken an active part in Sunday School work. The report of the last convention was given by the secretary-treasurer, Mr. Ralph Campbell. Following this was the roll call of Deportment Leaders and reports of schools by delegates. Rev. W. E. Mercer led a discussion on the reports.

Mrs. Frederick of Marsh Hill favored with a solo.

The afternoon session closed with a splendid address by Rev. A. M. Laverty of Stirling. Supper was then served in the church by the ladies of Eggleton and a social period was enjoyed.

In the evening the Song Service and Worship Service was conducted by Wallbridge Sunday School.

Report of the Nominating Committee was received and Rev. L. W. Scott conducted the installation of officers. Solo by Miss M. Parks of Chatterton. Temperance play by primary class of Eggleton School. Solo by Mrs. L. W. Scott. Following the report of the Resolution Committee another inspiring address was given by Rev. A. M. Laverty.

Mrs. Sarah Stapley of Stirling spent a day recently at Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Stapley's.

Miss L. Johnson of Minto spent part of last week with Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Stapley.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Harlow visited friends at Roseneath on Sunday.

Miss N. Sarles and Mr. I. Sarles of Minto and Mr. J. Watson of Campbellford were guests at Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Stapley's, Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Danford, Miss Marion McMullen, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. C. Fitchett and Rosella attended the funeral of the late Mrs. R. J. Clarke of Trenton on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Stapley visited Mr. and Mrs. Harold West of Stirling on Sunday.

Mrs. James Rayner of London, spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Waterfall.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Wannamaker of Stirling were recent visitors at Mr. and Mrs. R. Chambers'.

"You call this thing a biscuit—why, it's a brick! Why don't you go to the COOKING SCHOOL!"

JELLY HINT

In making jelly, remember that rapid boiling rather than long, slow cooking of the sugar and juice, and cooking in small rather than big lots, help to get a bright, clear product.

TO CLEAN PAPER

To clean papered walls, take a fresh loaf of rye bread, cut in half and use cut surface to clean paper, working from ceiling to floor. When loaf becomes soiled, cut off slice and use surface. Keep on hand a good commercial wallpaper cleaner to use on badly soiled spots.

3 WISE GIRLS!

ONCE upon a time there were three wise girls who set out to get more good fun and good health out of the Winter season.

They each bought a C.C.M. Matched Skating Set, with stylish white shoes, of course, and now they are having the time of their lives figure, pleasure or speed skating, with skating "dates" galore.

Not only were these girls wise in going in for skating but they were wise also in choosing C.C.M. Matched Skating Sets as their equipment. A C.C.M. Matched Set consists of a pair of C.C.M. pleasure or figure skating blades expertly matched for height, length, ice-lay and balance, securely attached in the correct position to a matched pair of comfortable glove-fitting skating shoes built on special combination lasts, the sole property of C.C.M.

With such equipment wise girls and indeed, boys and men and women are enjoying the sport of skating, year after year on their comfortable and efficient C.C.M. Matched Skating Sets.

See the new C.C.M. Matched Sets at the better stores and sports departments and be sure to find the C.C.M. winged tag of identification which is attached to every genuine set.

Dr. Dafoe's Column on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Children's Weight

The considerable publicity given to the fact that the Dionne Quintuplets were placed on a reducing diet a number of months ago, has caused many letters to come to me from parents desirious of putting their own children on a similar diet because of overweight. To all of them I have felt it necessary to address an emphatic warning that the greatest care must be exercised in the matter.

For the problem involved in reducing an overweight child safely is much more complex than that encountered in slimming the overweight adult. In the case of the child, food must be adequate for both energy and growth. In measuring adult's food needs, growth doesn't have to be considered. The harmful effects of a too rigorous diet on a child can be lasting..

For obese adults it is nearly always safe to prescribe a diet low in calories. The calorie, as you probably know, is a unit of measurement in the energy, or heat, value of food. If you take in too many of these calories, the surplus is stored in your body in the form of fat. Cutting down these calories in the case of the child is fraught with danger. If too many are taken away, he is left without enough energy for growth, and in cutting down on calories, vitamins vital to his good eyesight, immunity to disease, etc., may be eliminated at the same time, with additional harmful results.

When the weight problem to be dealt with is that of a child's it is even more necessary than in the case of adult, that the diet and exercise regime be carried out upon the advice of a physician. Before it is begun, tests and examinations will be made by the doctor to establish that the trouble isn't glandular, and to make certain that growth or health won't be impaired. Obviously, if the child's variation from normal weight has a glandular cause, diet alone isn't going to be much help. On the contrary, it may be very dangerous.

In reducing overweight in children, chief reliance should be placed, I believe, on inducing them to take more exercise, i.e., to burn up more energy. It is always safer than to cut down to a marked extent food intake. This is good advice to adults, also.

In bringing the Quintupelts' weight more nearly in line with what it should be for children of their age, height and family tendencies, we modified their diet so as to reduce their consumption of starches, and at the same time we arranged their days so they would get a greater amount of vigorous exercise. This meant, of course, planning new games and outdoor activities for them. This was no problem in their case, for they have a natural zest for competitive play. Many children lack it ,unfortunately.

That is what often happens: Johnny doesn't have playmates or doesn't get into active play. He eats with a good appetite, however, and surplus energy is stored up as fat. This makes him sluggish and less willing to play or exercise, and the child gets fatter. His fat makes him a less desirable playmate. He may overeat also, because overeating is a compensatory pleasure in a lonely life without playmates. In any case, a vicious circle is created.

From several standpoints, the best way to deal with this child's overweight and sluggishness, obviouly, is to devise means to get the child to burn up more energy—to play and exercise more.

TO COOK EGGPLANT

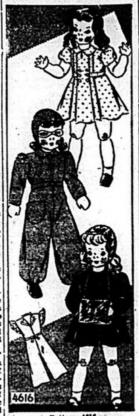
Peel and grind one medium-sized eggplant. Salt. Then drain well. Add 1 beaten egg and 1-2 cup flour and beat thoroughly. Then fry in shortening like pancakes. These are delicious, tasting somewhat like potato pancakes.

FOR MILK BOTTLES

Wash milk bottles, paying particular attention to mouth and cap. With paper cartons wipe spout or opening with a clean, fresh cloth before each pouring. Store at a maintained temperature of 50 degrees F. or less—even a temporary rise aids the development of bacteria to an alarming extent.

Doll Wardrobe For Christmas

By ANNE ADAMS



Pattern 4616

When Old Man Winter comes to stay, even dolly will be ready with this adorable doll wardrobe—Pattern 4616 by Anne Adams. Won't a small girl be pleased to receive these tiny garments for her doll as a birthday or a Christmas surprise? For everyday wear there's a cute pleated dress, gay in print. Then there's an aviatrix outfit or a snowsuit, complete with a helmet. Dolly will smartly accompany her small owner on "social calls" dressed in the adorable coat with a cap and muff of, say, fur cloth or velveteen. And when the busy day is done, the dainty pajamas will be donned for bedtime. The fabric required for each of these garments is so little that remnants of your own dressmaking will be sufficient.

Pattern 4616 is available for dolls measuring 12, 14, 16, 18, 20 and 22 inches. For individual yardages see pattern.

Considerate Children

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

We want our children to learn to feel and exercise a high regard for the rights and possessions of others. How much regard for others rights and possessions have we revealed in our living?

For instance would you use the crayons of your three-year-old without first getting his permission? Would you read a letter addressed to him before he had the opportunity to ask you to do so? Would you lend the toys of your child while he was at school to a visiting younger child to mar or demolish? Would you destroy the creative work, however crude, that your child of six or ten had left? Would you use your son's tools at his work bench without being sure he would want you to do so? Would you go through the purse or pockets of your son or daughter of five or fifteen? Surely you would not think of opening letters of your child old enough to read; and you would rather go to jail than be guilty of peeping into your daughter's diary.

Affection and Trust

There's something more to be gained than just respect for possessions when we regularly respect the children's. It is something that transcends material things. And how delightful it is to live in a family where every one trusts completely everybody else there. No occasion then for doubt about mutual affection.

Mrs. Myers and I readily admit that we have done many things not so good in relation to our children—and I have been the worse offender. My children are fortunate in having an awfully good mother—but we are proud that we have succeeded pretty well in practicing the ideal held forth in this article. And what dividends we have been clipping on this investment!

We cannot recall a single instance when one of our children opened our mail (unless we asked him to); nor can we recall that we ever asked him not to do so. Neither can we recall a single instance, except by mistake, when we ever opened theirs. Even when a letter comes addressed to one of the children from either parent while away from home, the other parent would not open that letter. This just happens to be the way we do in our family. We like it and our children say they like it, too.

Solving Parent Problems

Q.—What do you think of parents having their child address them by the first name?

A.—While for a few it might be desirable, don't like it. The practice seems to me to discourage the cultivation of a desirable level of dignity and respect. In the case of a step-parent of a child beyond the age of eight or ten, the practice might, however, be desirable. With the objectives the same, the psychology is different, as you can see.

Q.—Always when our family sits down to eat they must wait several minutes for my nine-year-old son. Often when he arrives, he is not washed or combed.

A.—Give him a warning signal and final call. Let him know that if he fails to appear promptly on the second call and properly washed and combed, he will have to sit in a chair several feet from the table until all the rest have finished eating before he may eat. Then make your word good.

HALLOWAY W.M.S.

The November meeting of the Halloway Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. Harry Townsend on Wednesday.

Following the delicious dinner served by the hostess, the regular meeting was presided over by the retiring president, Mrs. Earl Snider. Quiet music was played by Mrs. H. Townsend. Miss Bessie McMullen read the Scripture Lesson and Mrs. Percy Kelly read an appropriate poem followed by prayer by Mrs. Snider. The second chapter of the study book entitled "Men of Africa" was very capably presented by Rev. Mr. Cook. The offering of $3.70 was dedicated by Mrs. Harold Wilson.

Election of officers for 1941 was conducted by Rev. Mr. Cook, the following being elected to office:

President, Mrs. Don Rose; vice-president, Mrs. Embury Hough; recording secretary, Mrs. Coleman Townsend; corresponding secretary, Miss Bessie McMullen; treasurer, Mrs. Harry Townsend; supply secretary, Mrs. Ernest Wilson; Christian Stewardship and Finance, Mrs. H. Wilson; Missionary Monthly, Mrs. G. H. Rose; press secretary, Mrs. E. Emerson; literary secretary, Mrs. P. B. Kelly; associate helpers, Mrs. A. Wilson; community helpers, Mrs. W. Cadman; temperance and Christian citizenship, Mrs. Sylvester Reid and Mrs. Geo. Cadman; flower committee, Mrs. E. G. Snider and Mrs. Cassidy; pianist, Mrs. Geo. Cadman; assistant, Mrs. H. Townsend.

The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. Harry Townsend.

A special guest at the meeting was Mrs. Geo. Ostrom who recently celebrated her 93rd birthday and who all were delighted to have in attendance.

QUINTE BRANCH, W. I.

The Quinte Branch of the Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. K. R. Vivian on November 5. The meeting opened with two minutes silence for Armistice day followed by Institute Ode and Lord's Prayer. Mrs. Harry Grills gave a report on Red Cross work and then Mrs. Connor, the President, handed the meeting over to Mrs. Roluf. The program consisted of instrumental music by Miss Simmons, very interesting paper on peace, read by Mrs. MacDonald and prepared by Mrs. Portt and a piano solo by June Stewart. Mrs. D. Atkins and Mrs. H. Grills gave a report on Institute Convention which was greatly enjoyed. Solos were given by Mrs. Tulk and her daughter, also a musical selection by Miss Simmons. Community singing and roll call on current events concluded the program.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem and Mrs. Vivian and her conveners served a dainty lunch.

SAYS NAZI RAIDER PARTY REPULSED FROM N. W. I. JULY 28

New York World-Telegram Quotes Unidentified Witness as Saying British Repulsed Germans Attempting to Destroy Oil Refineries at Curacao

New York, Nov. 29 (AP)—The World-Telegram said yesterday a German landing party from a raider operating in the Caribbean was repulsed by British forces at Curacao, Netherlands West Indies, when the Nazis attempted to destroy valuable oil refineries there. The paper, quoting an unidentified eyewitness, said the Germans invaded Curacao the night of July 28 and that British land forces and shots from two armed tankers in the harbor killed or wounded 35 Germans.

This informant said strict censorship kept the 'invasion' a secret.

The paper said the invaders were supposed to have come from the German raider which sank the British freighters King John and Davisian last July 10, about 240 miles northeast of the Virgin Islands.

The informant said he learned of the attack when he drove a crew member of one of the tankers to a pier. The World-Telegram quoted him as follows:

Informant's Story

"Just after dark....one of the gun crew (from a tanker) said he wanted to go back to his ship. I offered to drive him down. We were about a half-mile from the dock when a Dutch officer, with a revolver strapped on his hip, stopped us, flashed a light in our faces and said he wanted to use my car to move his family away from the gasoline tanks.

"The gunner got out and hurried on to his tanker. The docks were alive with reports that a Nazi landing party already was heading that way for an attack on the refinery....

"As the tanker was moving around so it could train its guns on the shore, the shooting started. There was murder going on—machine guns and hand grenades. Then the tankers began firing into the mess. I know that it must be really serious when the tankers were firing, for every time they shot they were running the chance of blowing themselves to pieces by igniting a gas pocket that might have formed while they were taking on gasoline.

"The fighting stopped almost as suddenly as it started.

"The next day officials seemed to agree that 35 Germans had been killed or wounded."

The Women's Missionary Society of Thomasburg United Church held an open meeting in the Church on the evening of Nov. the 19th. The visiting auxiliaries were Tweed. Women's Missionary Society, Bethel Women's Missionary Society and Thomasburg Anglican Woman's Auxiliary. The president of the local Society, Mrs. Harold Morton, conducted the opening devotional with hymns and the Lord's Prayer in unison.

The pastor Rev. Mr. Doggett extended a hearty welcome to all, on behalf of the Society. The Scripture was read by Mrs. J. R. Bateman.

The ladies of Tweed had charge of the program which was as follows: Mrs. Wilbur Gordon gave an inspiring talk on 'Personal Stewardship", and Mrs. Fred Foster a reading. Mrs. Alfred Davis sang a solo. A playlette stressing making use of one's talents was enjoyed. Mrs. W. Beatty sang a solo. Mrs. (Rev.) Morrison spoke on ways to interest would-be workers. Another reading on "Personality" was given and a meeting of much interest was brought to a close as Mrs. (Rev.) Doggett gave the benediction.

The ladies of Thomasburg served a tasty supper in the Sunday School rooms and a social time was enjoyed.

The Anglican Woman's Auxiliary met at the home of Miss Emma Porter on Friday evening for a quilting.

Several from here attended service in St. Paul's Anglican Church, Roslin, on Sunday evening when Bishop Lyons made his annual visit to the parish.

Mr. Cecil Geen and Mr. Clarence Mouck represented the local Anglican Church at the Laymen's Association Banquet held at St. James Church, Kingston, on Monday evening when the Rev. McAdam Harding, D.D., of Winnipeg, Archbishop of Rupert's Land was the special speaker. Miss Emma Porter represented the local Auxiliary at a special meeting in the afternoon in the same church, when Rev. Harding addressed the ladies.

CHEESE BOARD

Three prices were made at the weekly meeting of the Belleville Cheese Board of Trade at the City Hall last night when 478 boxes of white and 312 boxes of colored, totalling 790 boxes in all, were sold. W. R. McCreary took all of the colored cheese offered for sale at 14 1-2c and 323 boxes of white at 13 3-4c. H. R. Hunter, of the Swift Company, took the remainder at 13 11-16c. Other buyers present were Messrs. W. H. Morton, J. S. Cook and C. Fraleigh.

Secretary-Treasurer F. R. Mallory was instructed by the board to inform the Minister of Agriculture of the Dominion Government, that cheese producers in this area would be unable to maintain their average production of cheese next year owing to the depletion in their hired help and the increase in living costs. A bonus was suggested as a medium to relieve the unfortunate situation that has arisen. The factories listed were:

FAST CAMOUFLAGE BRITAIN'S NEED

Committee Urges More Disguise for Forts and Industrial Plants

London, Nov. 28 (CP).—More effective and speedier camouflage of important industrial properties and fortified points in Britain must be carried out, a sub-committee of the select committee on national expenditure urged in its report.

The sub-committee was not satisfied with the rate at which vital industrial points are being camouflaged or that arrangements for controlling design of the camouflage of fortified posts proved satisfactory.

The testimony of the (government) department witness with the longest experience of camouflage of all kinds was emphatic that certain specimens of camouflage of this kind of building were absurd and could not be regarded as camouflage at all, the committee held. It blamed any errors on the hitherto-insufficient number of officers specially qualified for the work. That number has now been increased.

Cases were brought to the committee's notice where private practitioners and camouflaged industrial premises. Some of their attempts were futile and might be dangerous. The committee learned such firms now had gone out of existence.

The committee called for a single camouflage organization—instead of four as at present—with its own research staff and administered by the ministry of home security.

Standing Committees For the House Are Appointed

Ottawa, Nov. 29 (CP)—Standing committees of the House of Commons met Thursday for organization purposes and in each case re-elected the chairman who served last session.

They are as follows:

Rawdon

Rawdon—Miss Esma Cole opened Mount Pleasant, Rawdon Young People's Union on Wednesday evening at the hall.

Mrs. Will Jeffs played quiet music and Mr. Robert Melville read the Bible lesson. Mrs. Cyrus Summers offered prayer and all sang a hymn.

The meeting was based on 'Stewardship' and the program was arranged by Misses Muriel Sine and Eileen MacMullen.

There were thirty-three in attendance. Plans were made to have Ivanhoe talent present their play. Master John Reid contributed a piano solo. Miss Evelyn Melville read a poem.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen presented a topic on "Stewardship" in several parts and pointed out that Jesus used the word "stewarship" with unusual repetition in one of his parables. She based her synopsis on "The significance of stewardship, the blessing of giving and closed with this story: A certain farmer was asked why he gave so generously and still seemed to have more to give, said "I keep shovelling into God's bin and God keeps shovelling more and more back into mine and God has the bigger shovel."

Several short sketches of persons who exemplified the stewardship principle were read during the presentation of topic as follows:

"A farmer who was a success as a worker, neighbor, citizen, father and a Christian" by Miss Eileen MacMullen; "The friend of a needy community" by Mrs. Merle Spencer; "One of God's Mothers" by Mrs. Irwin Reid; "Diamonds in the Rough" by Miss Gladys Sharp.

A poem was given by Miss Doris Sine.

It should be remembered that Stewardship is a bounden obligation which every individual should put into peacetime

Mrs. Will Jeffs contributed a guitar solo and was tendered a hearty ovation and she responded to an encore. Mr. Eric Summers read a temperance selection. Miss Gladys Summers sang a vocal solo with guitar accompaniment. Miss Muriel Sine read a poem. Gordon Reid and Don Spencer gathered the one-cent collection.

The service closed with the Epworth League hymn and several games of card were enjoyed.

Mr. Robert Melville, Jerry and Evelyn and Miss Gladys Summers were recent guests of Mrs. H. Melville, Marmora.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry McAdam were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Reid.

Marmora

Marmora — The regular monthly meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held in the Separate School on Tuesday evening with the president Miss A. V. Foley in the chair. There was a good attendance. The meeting opened with prayer and the League hymn and roll call. The president gave a synopsis of the speeches delivered at the Diocesan convention at Brockville in October, after which Miss Mary Hughes gave an interesting reading entitled "Top of the Morning". This was followed by a reading by Mrs. S. McWilliams entitled "If". Miss Florence Auger then sponsored a contest on Shakespeare in which all members participated. This ended in a tie between Miss A. V. Foley, Mrs. John Doyle and Mrs. Charles Cook, Miss Foley eventually winning the prize.

Rev. H. J. Farrell then addressed the meeting briefly thanking the members for their co-operation during the recent bazaar. Euchre was then enjoyed for an hour, the prize going to Mrs. M. O'Connor. Mrs. V. Lynch held the lucky ticket in the draw for the door prize. After a delicious lunch served by the ladies in charge, the gathering dispersed.

Constable and Mrs. J. Hatch and family of Belleville spent Wednesday with friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. F. K. Granville of Nobel, Ontario, spent Monday in the village.

St. Paul's Laymen's Association held an executive meeting at the home of H. R. Pearce on Wednesday evening.

LABOR TROUBLE IN POLAND

London, Nov. 29 (CP Cable)—The existence of labor trouble in German-occupied Polish territory was indicated in a speech to Nazi party instructors at Lodz by Hauptbelfehlsleiter Schmidt, according to the Polish Telegraphic Agency.

Schmidt referred to traitors in the midst of the German working classes, particularly among German Catholic workers who have shown their solidarity with Polish workers on questions of working hours and wages.

Even Newspapers Have Their Use

Atlanta, Nov. 28—(AP) — The Atlanta Constitution's telephone rang—for perhaps the 99th time during the day—and a feminine voice inquired:

"How wide are your columns please?"

She was informed a newspaper column is two inches wide.

"Thank you ever so much," came back the inquiring one. "I have a recipe here which calls for a pan so many inches in diameter and there isn't a foot rule in my house. I have a copy of your paper and can figure it out from that—and bake a cake."

AT THE BELLE

"North West Mounted Police"

Two great love stories, and a thousand thrills—a thousand at the very least!—mark the new Cecil B. DeMille epic film, "North West Mounted Police", which Paramount will present as the next feature attraction at the Belle Theatre, with Gary Cooper and Madeleine Carroll starred, and Paulette Goddard, Preston Foster, Robert Preston, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman, George Bancroft, Lon Chaney Jr., and Walter Hampden rounding out a list of the starring players.

The most important of the love stories happens to be a triangular affair, one in which Gary Cooper, cast as Dusty Rivers, a Texas Ranger, and Preston Foster, playing Brett, Sergeant of the Mounted, both become romantically persuaded of the loveliness of Madeleine Carroll, seen as April Logan, a charming nurse at a settlement in the Canadian northwest called Batoche. The love story of these three goes forward under exciting circumstances as a Mounted attempt to put down the revolt of thousands of Metis, a half-breed people. Although many may be anxious to know, it would hardly be fair to tell who wins the lovely Miss Carroll in this instance.

The other love story, hardly less important, concerns Robert Preston, who holds down the role of Ronnie Logan, one of the Mounted, and Paulette Goddard, who has one of the best roles she has ever played, that of Louvette, an Indian girl about as tame as a wildcat when it comes to matters of the heart. In short, she's out to make Ronnie hers, and she does for a time, even though she has to make him her personal prisoner, thereby making it possible for thousands of half-breed Metis to ambush and cut down a troop of the red-coated Mounted.

Motivation for the main plot of the story has its basis in actual fact: in 1885, the Metis rebelled against the Canadian Government. DeMille has built the rebellion into a story which finds the leading members of the cast, when they are not concerned with romance, trying to save the Mounted from being destroyed by the half-breeds, fighting back gallantly against almost insuperable odds.

Filmed on an epic scale from any standpoint one might consider "North West Mounted Police" looms as DeMille's greatest picture, possessing a huge starring cast, romance, action, thrill after thrill—everything moviegoers might want including Technicolor to lend reality to the vivid scenic background.

The popular Belle newsreel will be exhibited on the same program.

"Highways of Peril" is the title of the latest chapter of the thrilling adventure story, "The Green Hornet" to be presented Saturday matinee.

A new issue of free comic books for each boy and girl attending the Saturday matinee, is announced.

"Tom Brown's School Days"

Another famous book reaches the screen, we refer to "Tom Brown's School Days", a grand appealing story now being exhibited with the romantic thrill drama, "I'm Still Alive" featuring Kent Taylor and Linda Hayes. A new issue of the March of Time will also be exhibited.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Fighting Gringo"

Abounding in thrills, excitement and adventure, and with a story that arrests attention until the final fade-out "The Fighting Gringo" starring popular western star George O'Brien, is now delighting patrons of the McCarthy theatre as no other George O'Brien western ever done before. Do not miss it.

Abounding in thrills, excitement and adventure, and with a story that arrests attention until the final fadeout. "The Fighting Gringo" with George O'Brien starred.

This is a tale of a young westerner at the head of a band of vagabonds who make their living by hiring out their guns, but who always manage to be on the right side of the law.

The group intercepts a bandit hold-up of a stagecoach, in which rides an attractive Mexican senorita returning from a convent in Mexico city to her father's rancho near the Texas-Mexico border. That night a fiesta is given at the rancho honoring the vagabonds. O'Brien learns the rancho is about to be taken from the old Don through false surveying of the land by the local banker. When the banker is found murdered in the Don's study, a series of complications arise that involve practically every member of the cast. The story sweeps to a thrilling climax and a surprise ending, in one of O'Brien's best films to date.

O'Brien's portrayal of the Robin Hood vagabond is excellent, and Lupita Tovar, as the senorita, is clever and pleasing to the eye. Lucio Villegas, LeRoy Mason, Mary Field, Slim Whittaker, William Royle, Glen Strange and other members of the cast give notable performances.

New Higgins Family Riot

Also now playing at the McCarthy theatre is the feature-comedy "Earl of Puddlestone" newest of the Higgins family series of popular laugh hits, and again starring Jimmy Gleason with the same grand cast of funmakers including Grandpa Davenport, Lucile Gleason and Russell Gleason.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Ride, Tenderfoot, Ride."

Little Mary Lee, starlet of Gene Autry pictures, has her first romantic "crush." Just because she's only fourteen and going on fifteen is no reason why she shouldn't like boys, says this young unsophisticated miss that has been brought up on singing at night clubs with Ted Weems' Band. But in pictures she's just a little girl, one of those "no-account" little sisters that always gets in the hair of her big sister, June Storey and her boy friend, Gene Autry.

In "Ride, Tenderfoot, Ride," Mary's latest film, now at the Capitol Theatre, screen writers let her have her first "crush." And Mary Lee was tickled pink, for the object of her affections is none other than Gene Autry, who is also her off the screen favorite.

In order to cut the fare of a plane ride back from boarding school, Mary poses as Gene's "wife," entitling them to a half rate. Aboard the plane Gene and Mary, in a brand new up-swing hairdo, get along very well and upon her arrival home she tells her big sister that she and Gene are "that way" about each other and June hasn't a chance! The sister feud is one of the funniest scenes in the picture in which June Storey and Gene Autry do some tall wrangling as the rival owners of large meat packing concerns.

Smiley Burnette helps Gene and Warren Hull, who resorts to a little sabotage as June's unscrupulous adviser. Forbes Murray, Joe McGuinn, Cactus Mack, Mildred Shay and Herbert Clifton also appear in the film which was produced by William Berke and directed by Frank MacDonald.

On the same program the added feature is "Under Suspicion," starring Jack Holt, picture with action, mystery and suspense throughout, also shown is the 8th chapter of "Tim Tyler's Luck" and the Universal News.

Oshawa's Centre Ice Star Scores 13 Points in O.H.A. Senior Race

Toronto, Nov. 29 (CP)—Ebbie Edmison of Oshawa took over the Senior Ontario Hockey Association series scoring leadership with a total of 13 points, moving in front of Hamilton's Doug Fritz who held top position since the season got underway. Edmison, who played in Cornwall last winter and before that with his native Brantford club, collected seven points in Oshawa's two games of the current week.

Fen Heximer of St. Catharines, Eddie King of Toronto Marlboros and Johnny Thompson of Oshawa also made impressive gains and are now tied in third position with 11 points each. Leaders are:

The Big Seven

(By the Canadian Press)

Phil Watson of New York Rangers shoved a half-dozen other players out of the National Hockey League's big seven last night by scoring a goal as his team lost 2-1 to New York Americans. The point picked up by the Ranger player sent him into a fifth place tie with George Allen and Mush March of Chicago Black Hawks. Another Ranger, Bryan Hextall, gained an assist on Watson's goal and went into a third place tie with Gordie Drillon of Toronto. Both Drillon and Hextall are a point behind the leaders, Syl Apps of Toronto and Syd Howe, of Detroit.

The leaders:	G.	A.	Pts.
Apps, Toronto	5	5	10
Howe Detroit	4	6	10
Drillon, Toronto ..	5	4	9
Hextall, Rangers ..	4	5	9
Allen, Chicago	5	2	7
March, Chicago ..	3	4	7
Watson, Rangers ..	2	5	7

Refuse to Sanction Playing

Montreal, Nov. 29— (CP)— The Quebec Amateur Hockey Association Thursday refused to sanction to three Regina youngsters to play in Quebec's Junior Amateur Hockey Association pending receipt of their transfers from the Saskatchewan branch.

The trio—Ken Smith, Cyril Beigler and Albert Tilson—had signed cards to play with Montreal Canadiens juniors after coming here from Regina last October.

IN MEMORIAM

HARROW—In loving memory of my dear husband, who passed away November 29, 1938.

I hear his voice so gentle that spoke sweet words of hope to me,
Again I claim his blessings far dearer than all joy that be.
Time can fondly gather no memory that will longer last
Than that which breathes around me from out this treasure of the past.

—Sadly missed by his Wife, Abbie A. Harrow; his Family, Grandchildren, Great Granddaughter. N29

MacDONALD—In loving memory of Mrs. Mary MacDonald, who passed away November 29, 1939.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Charles W. Cole and family wish to acknowledge with grateful appreciation the many kind and thoughtful expressions of sympathy of friends and neighbors during their recent bereavement; also for the beautiful floral tributes and the kind offers of the use of cars. N29

The Stars Say—

For Friday, November 29
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A BAFFLING and unpredictable state of affairs, with things in all connections moving drastically at "sixes and sevens," is read from the very lively operations of the subtler planets. There may be great tendency to large, pretentious, and extravagant moves, with the feelings expansive and inflationary, impulses reckless and strenuous, but with subtle or singular elements arising to disconcert and to thwart. By shrewdness, restraint and determination the balance may be turned to lucrative and productive climax.

Those whose birthday it is have a year of fine opportunity for major achievement, with gratifying productive results, if they will make efforts to check impulsive, extravagant objectives.

A child born on this day should have much ability and initiative, with rather inflated and extravagant ideals and ambitions. With waywardness properly directed, it may succeed in a big way.

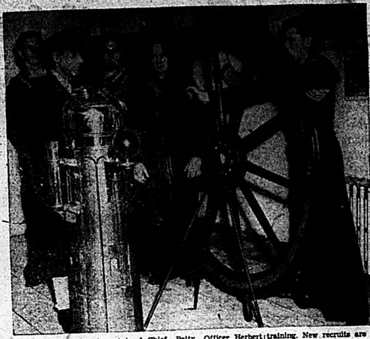
SEA-MINDED YOUTH ARE READIED FOR ACTIVE SERVICE ABOARD "H.M.C.S. STONE FRIGATE" AT KINGSTON

Navy-minded youth down Kingston way get up as early as 5 a.m. to hitch-hike from surrounding towns to H.M.C.S. Stone Frigate, the R.C.N.V.R. division headquarters, and start classes by 8. Here a group of tars-in-the-making study a destroyer model.



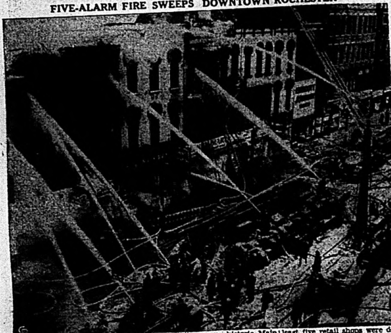
Handling the helm is an important item in the course for ratings, and Chief Petty Officer Herbert Sykes sees to it they get the proper training. New recruits are tried as probationary ratings before acceptance for active service.

It's two bells of the first watch, and all's well aboard the Stone Frigate as Don Metcalfe sounds the bell that means 9 p.m. Only active service ratings wear uniform.

PLEASE DO NOT

"Bends and hitches," which are knots in landlubber language, are a science in themselves. Here C.P.O. Sykes presents a class of ratings with the finished products. Training goes on from daylight to long past dark aboard the "ship."

FIVE-ALARM FIRE SWEEPS DOWNTOWN ROCHESTER



Eight streams of water are played from the street on the fire that raged through a series of brick and frame buildings on historic Main St. bridge over the Genesee river in downtown Rochester, N.Y. At least five retail shops were destroyed. Four firemen were injured. The damage was estimated at $200,000.

Lack of Thyroid Juice Slows Up Mental and Physical Actions

Before examining a heavyweight wrestler I was convinced that I would find a very rapid heart beat as he had the bulging eyes that are found in goitre—that is when thyroid gland is too active. To my surprise I found the rate of the heart beat was normal, 72 to the minute. I told him how mistaken I had been and he smiled and told me that he had had a goitre removed some months previously and his weight had increased about 30 pounds. "I was so weak and tired and had lost so much weight that I thought I was finished".

Similarly there are outstanding symptoms when the thyroid gland is not active enough—waxy looking skin, excess weight, slowness of speech and action.

The trouble is that if we do not see these outstanding symptoms such as waxy skin, overweight, sluggish mind and body—we may never think of the thyroid not being active enough yet the patient may have a dry skin, be slightly overweight and just a "little" slow in his physical and mental reactions .

Should lack of thyroid juice—hypothyroidism—be suspected, the metabolism test is usually all that is necessary to show if thyroid gland is not active enough. If it shows a minus rate of more than 15, that is 85 or less, the thyroid gland is not sufficiently active.

A brief but clear description regarding these cases lacking in thyroid juice was given some months ago by Dr. A. Bassler in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Pain in the abdomen, pallor, a dry skin, blood pressure normal or below normal, a tendency to low temperature, mental depressions and poor memory, with changes in the blood; should be sufficient evidence of hypothyroidism".

Most physicians are naturally looking for hyperthyroidism—goitre—and not hpyothyroidism, just as they find more cases of high blood pressure than of low blood pressure.

The thought is that when there is an increase in weight, pallor, and a little mental and physical "laziness" present, a metabolism test should be made.

All that is necessary to correct this condition is a little thyroid extract daily. This will speed up the body processes and the symptoms will disappear and will not return as long as the thyroid extract is taken.

Manchester spent £2,000,000 ($8,-900,000) on air raid precautions in the year ending March 31, 1940, being one fifth of the city's total local rates.

Barbara Stanwyck and William Holden co-stars of the production, "Golden Boy," which will be at the McCarthy Theatre evenings only next week. Cooking school classes will be held every afternoon and no screen program will be presented.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 29 (CP)—Stocks declined on Toronto exchange today. Trading was moderate only 140,000 shares changing hands.

Foods held up but other industrials were a bit heavy. Two senior oils, Imperial and International Petroleum were selling ex-divided 25 and 50 cents respectively and they weakened the amounts of the dividends. Abitibi stocks were a little stronger.

O'Brien turned heavy, dropping to 1.21 off 10 cents overnight. It recovered to 1.27 this afternoon. Preston, McLeod-Cockshutt and Chesterville were lower and Cariboo, Kerr-Addison and Perron higher. Senior base metals, including Nickel and Noranda, lost ground.

Home Oil weakened 10 cents to 2.40.

WALL STREET

New York, Nov. 29 (AP)—Mild bidding for selected issues enabled the stock market to get a slight toehold on a rally today.

Steels, Motors, Aircrafts, Shipbuildings and Specialties were among the best but the majority, near the fourth hour, restricted gains to fractions. Many leaders were at a standstill. Dealings were slow.

Ahead the greater part of the session—Several eventually faltered—were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Boeing, United Aircraft, International Mercantile Marine, N.Y. Shipbuilding, Westinghouse, N.Y. Central, Kennecott, U.S. Rubber and American Smelting.

Consolidated Edison and Public Service of N.J. dipped ti new 1940 bottoms. Other laggards included Great Northern, Dow Chemical, Western Union, North American and Standard Oil of N.J.

Canadian issues were generally inactive. Canadian Pacific dipped 1-8 of a point. Among bonds Canada 4s lost one point.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Nov. 29 (CP)—Prices were unchanged at Brantford, Hull, London and Stratford in bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Dressedweight: Brantford $10.25 plus transportation, Hull $10.20, London $10.25 plus transportation, Stratford $10.25 plus transportation.

At Chatham, liveweight were up 10 cents at $7.10 and dressedweight up 15 cents at $9.85.

PATROL BOMBER SEAPLANE STARTS

First of 28 Craft Leaves San Diego, Calif., Ultimately to Join in Defence of Britain

(Passed by Censor)

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 29 —(AP) First of a fleet of Consolidated 28 patrol bomber type seaplanes took off today for an unannounced destination—en route ultimately to join in the defence of Great Britain.

The craft, camouflaged an olive green, left at 4:35 a.m. (8:35 EDT) from the United States coast guard base.

Aboard the ship, which has a 104-foot wingspan and is similar to the United States navy's famous PBY flying boats, were Naval Reserve Lieut. W. Cleveland and Buglas Kelley, a San Diego aviator, as pilots; and Russ Rogers and I. G. Ross as observers. Rogers piloted the Archbold plane Guba on its around the world flight. Ross is a Canadian civilian pilot.

Delivery is to be taken by the Canadian Government on the east coast. The company refused to say where. Consolidated announced last March that a release had been given by the government for export of the patrol bombing planes for "Allies use." The number being built or the amount of the contract was not made public, however. They have two 1,000 horsepower motors.

Weekly Livestock Report

Toronto, Nov. 29—(CP) — Cattle prices were firm on the few good and choice killers and weak on other grades at the Livestock Market here this week. Calves and hogs were steady, and lambs a shade stronger. Sheep were unchanged.

The cattle supply included only 700 western.

Holdover from last week was heavy at 1,800 head of cattle, which was reduced to 900 by the close of the current week. A few good and choice weighty steers sold at $8.25 to $8.75. Other butcher steers and heifers were $5.50 to $7.25 with good quality butchers at $7.50 to $7.75 and a few at $8. Boning steers and heifers sold at $4.25 to $5. Butcher cows sold at $4 to $5.50 with canners and cutters at $3 to $3.75. Butcher bulls brought $5 to $5.50 with one at $5.75. Bologna bulls were $4 to $4.75. Fed calves sold at $8 to $10.50.

There were several hundred stockers of from plain to good quality unsold at the close. Prices were 25c or so lower at $4 to $6.50 for stockers with a few stock calves up to $7.35. Good forward springers sold at $85 to $95 each. Other springers and milkers sold from $45 to $80 each.

Calves were steady at $10 to $11 for choice with common heavy and light vealers downward to $6. Grassers sold from $4.50 to $5.50.

Hogs were unchanged at $10.75 dressedweight and rail grading and at $8 liveweight. Sows sold at $4.50 to $5.25 dressed.

Lambs were strong at $9.50 to $9.75 for good ewes and wethers with a few up to $9.90 and some Southdowns at $10. Two cars of fat western lambs sold at $9.85. Heavies and bucks took a discount of $1 cwt. Culls were from $6 to $8 cwt. Sheep were steady at $2 to $5.50 cwt. Western breeding ewes brought $9 to $11 each.

Lighter Supplies Help Butter Prices

Toronto,— Rising tendencies were evident in butter prices on the Toronto open produce market yesterday when light offerings at unchanged quotations met ready absorption. Fresh eggs were again slightly easier.

Sellers reported no difficulty in clearing available supplies of No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids at 30 3-4c a pound on the butter market. It was doubtful if further offerings at this price could have been obtained near the close as holders were asking 31c. One sale was said to have been recorded at the higher level.

Quiet trading prevailed on top grades on the egg market, with small arrivals of receipts enough to cover local demand. Grade A-medium and pullets weakened 1-2c a dozen in the graded section, and the three top grades declined 1c in the retail division. Good inquiry appeared for the lower grade eggs.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Nov. 29.—Produce market prices here as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 32c; first grade solids, jobbing price 31 1-2c.

ITALIAN

Thus the Italian fleet has been struck another severe blow by Britain's sea arm. The Admiralty communique, giving these details, did not, however, disclose one thing: Why did the action take place near Sardinia?

There seems to be no reason for either the Italian or the British fleet to be in those waters, removed from the Italian-Greek theatre of war. Unless, of course, both fleets had special missions and met up in this zone—the Italian fleet, as on all previous occasions, starting to run at the first sign of the presence of the British warships.

Several Theories Advanced

Several theories can be advanced. It has been rumored that Britain is giving Greece more substantial aid than has been reported, and there is the possibility that convoys and transports were moving toward Greece when the Italian fleet was sighted. Also the Italian vessels may have been sent to those waters to attempt to "intercept" the British ships. If so the "interception" has been reversed; much like the reversed invasion of Greece.

No official explanation may be forthcoming for some time, until convoyed ships reach port their movements are, of course, a military secret.

Britain Not Pulling Punches

Observers recalled that in the House of Commons there have been repeated demands that Italy, regarded as the weakest link in the Axis chain, be knocked out of the war. Britain has been bombing Italian objectives heavily, particularly southern naval bases, since she acquired bases from Greece. The blow struck at Taranto, where the Italian fleet was caught napping and in a static position, was a heavy one, and it is possible that Britain will not pull her punches now that the weakness of the Italian enemy is clear.

With Britain striking severe naval blows, and the Italians in retreat over the rough terrain of Albania, Il Duce's predicament may become increasingly painful. He may soon be shouting for help from Berlin.

In the House of Commons Thursday, Anthony Eden, War Secretary, just back from an extensive trip to the Mediterranean area, probably disclosed the exact situation there. He spoke to a secret session, however, and the gist of his remarks may not be made public for some time. One thing is clear: That in the Mediterranean Britain is making the most of every opportunity.

ADMIRALTY GIVES

Another cruiser was reported "seriously on fire aft" and two destroyers were damaged by gunfire.

Another eight-inch gun cruiser was disclosed to have "reduced speed immediately after" an attack by torpedoing Swordfish planes, but the Admiralty did not say she was damaged.

It announced damage to a British cruiser but said it was slight and that the ship remained in service. Seven men were killed aboard her.

During the course of the chase which was carried to within a few miles of the coast, British planes from the aircraft carrier Ark Royal attacked repeatedly, the Admiralty said.

Seen to Hit Battleship

"One force of swordfish aircraft carried out a torpedo attack on the enemy battleships and one torpedo was seen to hit a battleship of the new and powerful Littorio class," the communique reported.

"Another force of swordfish attacked an enemy unit consisting of three eight-inch-gun cruisers, one torpedo hit was almost certainly obtained on the rear ship—a 10,000-ton ship of the Bolzano class —and the leading ship of this formation was observed to have reduced speed immediately after this attack.

"A force of skuas (naval dive-bombers) dive-bombed a formation of three six-inch-gun cruisers of the Condottieri class. Two very near misses were obtained, and it appears that one of the enemy cruisers was damaged."

Seen Down by Stern

A Fascist destroyer of the Grecale class was seen down by the stern, listing heavily, and another destroyer was listing slightly and losing way.

British fleet air arm and naval forces have hit four of Italy's six battleships in recent weeks. Three were damaged in the air on Taranto Nov. 11th.

After the main part of Wednesday's battle, Fascist bombers attacked in waves late in the afternoon and at one time, the Admiralty said, the Ark Royal disappeared from sight behind the splashes from about 30 bombs falling close to her.

British Press Jubilant

"She emerged from the spray," however, "with all guns firing furiously, having sustained neither damage nor casualties."

The British Press was jubilant over the victory.

Typical headlines:

The Daily Mail: "Big British Naval Victory."

The Daily Herald: "Duce's Navy Smashed Again."

The Daily Express: "Six Italian Ships Hit as They Raced Away."

(The Rome radio said an "Important British naval formation" was attacked several times by Italian planes west of Malta yesterday afternoon and that the bombardments were believed to have been "very effective." There was no immediate comment in London on the report.)

Italian Version

(The Italian High Command, in its story of the Sardinia fight issued earlier yesterday, listed the Fascist casualties as "serious" damage to a destroyer and a hit by a dud shell on a cruiser. This version said two British cruisers were damaged by shell fire while three other British warships including a battleship and an aircraft carrier, were bombed.)

The Admiralty said the 10,000-ton British cruiser Berwick was hit twice, resulting in the deaths of seven men, including an officer. The damage, however, was slight and "the ship is ready for service."

A British fighter plane was shot down, the Admiralty communique said, while two Italian bombers were destroyed.

Almazan Followers Demonstrate Before U. S. Embassy

Mexico City, Nov. 29.—(AP)— A pro-Almazon demonstration before the United States Embassy last night which police ended with tear gas after stones had been hurled marked a stormy beginning for the visit of United States Vice President-elect Henry Wallace.

"Viva Almazon —down with Wallace!" A crowd of 150 to 200 shouted when the latter arrived here to represent the United States at the inauguration of President-elect Manuel Avila Camacho Sunday.

The demonstrators, disgruntled followers of Gen. Juan Andreau Almazon, who was defeated by Avila Camacho in the disputed election of last July 7, jeered Wallace and threw stones at the steel-shuttered windows of the Embassy before police scattered them with tear gas.

No attempt was made to molest Wallace but the military and naval attaches of the Embassy, Col. Gordon McCoy, and Cmdr Wallace Dillon, reported they were cuffed about by the crowd.

Almazan, who maintained that he defeated Avila Camacho in the July elections, renounced claims to the office last Tuesday. He said he was withdrawing in the interest of peace.

His followers expressed resentment toward Wallace because his presence here constituted United States recognition of Avila Camacho as the president-elect.

SNOW AND STORM COLLIDE

Stafford Springs, Conn., Nov. 29 (AP).—Cars driven by Elmer Snow of New Britain, and Walter Storm of Cambridge, Mass., collided head-on here after one of the machines skidded on pavement made slippery by the first snow-storm of the season.

LIVERPOOL FOCUS OF AIR ATTACKS: A. A. FIRE HEAVY

Damage Done to Many Buildings and Some "Serious" Fires Caused

London, Nov. 29 (CP)—Germany's raiders singled out Liverpool, one of Britain's great cities and her chief western port, for their heaviest hits in last night's trading of air blows.

Britain's ports, through which the vital commerce of this island kingdom must flow, apparently have become the focus of Nazi raids.

By picking out Liverpool, shipping centre for the industrial midlands, the Germans added another to the lengthening list of British ports recently bombed—among them Bristol, Plymouth and Southampton.

Besides "the main wave of the attack" on Merseyside, a joint communique of the air and Home Security Ministries disclosed that German bombs fell on "a large number of isolated points in the southern part of England."

But nowhere outside of the Merseyside and northwest, it said, were casualties or damages heavy and even there "the numbers of killed or injured are not as great as might have been expected."

Although damage was done to many buildings and some "serious" fires were caused, reports said the raiders were met with such violent anti-aircraft fire they literally were blasted away from their targets and were unable to smash their main objectives.

The Press Association said the damage to Liverpool was not heavy and that fires set by incendiary bombs were brought quickly under control.

Although Londoners heard the thrum of heavy bombers' engines during their 1,000th hour under air raid alarm, the raiders passed the capital by after the early night hours and the all-clear sounded before 4 a.m., following a long period of quiet.

Three areas of London were identified officialy as scenes of recent heavy air raid damage—Silvertown, East London district which was flattened by a disastrous munitions explosion in the last war; Hackney, in Northeast London and Willesden, in the Northwest.

TWO NAZI SHIPS LEAVE TAMPICO

Large Merchant Vessels Apparently to Try to Slip Through Blockade

Tampico, Mexico, Nov. 29 (AP).—Two German ships, apparently bent on an attempt to run the British blockade, steamed out to sea today.

The 5,033-ton Idarwald entered the open sea, sailing eastward, at 8:19 a.m., while the 6,031-ton Rhein followed several miles in her wake. They had found haven here since early in the war.

Both ships were reported carrying limited cargoes of fuel and provisions.

These ships were among four which tried unsuccessfully to dash to sea Nov. 15, turning back when they sighted warships offshore which they believed to be British. Later it developed that United States destroyers had been on neutrality patrol in those waters.

The crew of one of the ships in the earlier dash, the 4,137-ton Phrygia, scuttled her. The fourth vessel, the Orinoco, was undergoing repairs at her moorings ten miles down the Panuco this morning. She developed engine trouble in the Nov. 15 attempt.

Flight of Italians Leaves Greek Army With More Supplies

London, Nov. 29 (CP)—Flight of Italian troops from Koritza left the Greek Army with more supplies, according to a Reuters' News Agency correspondent quoted by the British Broadcasting Corporation Thursday.

"Great stores of ammunition and arms of all kinds were abandoned," the correspondent wrote. "Motorcycles and lorries stood ready for the road and now the Greeks are using them to pursue their former owners."

Medical supplies and piles of first class service materials such as sandbags, barbed wire, and field telephone parts were left for the Greeks to collect, the correspondent added, and along the roads were great dumps of shells and small arms ammunition.

CORVETTES REACH CANADIAN PORT BEFORE FREEZE-UP

Canadian Shipyards Awaiting Final Word to Begin Construction of Cargo Ships for Britain

DELIVERY IN OCT.

By R. K. CARNEGIE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 29 (CP)—A number of sturdy corvettes, anti-submarine warships built in Canadian shipyards, have reached Eastern Canada ports well ahead of the freeze-up, D. B. Carswell, Director-General of Shipbuilding in the Dominion, told The Canadian Press today.

"Canadian shipyards are awaiting the final word to begin the construction of 18 cargo ships for Great Britain," said the Director-General, who works in the Munitions and Supply Department.

"They will be 9,500-ton ships and 12 will be built in eastern tidewater ports and six on the Pacific coast. They should be ready for delivery next October."

Mr. Carswell, a veteran of the shipbuilding industry who has stepped out and established new production records himself when occasion demanded, said he was pleased with current progress.

Six Launched in Week

"Five corvettes and one minesweeper were launched between Nov. 16 and Nov. 23 in Canada," he said. "That's a pretty good showing for one week."

These ships will be fitted with engines and be ready to take over active service when the spring break-up comes.

Mr. Carswell said the building of cargo ships would not interfere with the steady flow of corvettes, 54 of which have been ordered by the British Government and 10 by the Canadian Government. Quebec and Montreal shipyards were putting in additional ways to look after the building of cargo ships.

Much preliminary work is necessary in building a cargo ship, it was explained. The exact shape and length of the steel required has to be ascertained and ordered from the steel plants. Accordingly, while this is going on the ways can be installed so there will be no particular delay.

To Be No Let-Up

"When we start making cargo ships there will be no let-up in corvette construction," Mr. Carswell declared. "Every shipyard now is working to capacity, except in one or two instances where there is a shortage of supplies or other difficulties which cause temporary hold-ups.

"We have planned what every shipyard will do. It will entail some extensions to shipyards but for the most part they are doing this themselves.

"It will not require much additional labor. The labor situation is pretty fair.

LITTLE DANGER OF FOOD SHORTAGE

In Some Parts of England There is Some Danger of Overeating

Cornwall, Ont., Nov. 29 (CP).—Dr William Allen who accompanied Agriculture Minister Gardiner on his recent food mission to Great Britain, said last night that Britain is in little danger of a food shortage.

"In some parts of England there is more danger from over-eating than from bombing," Dr. Allen said, addressing an Eastern Ontario Cheesemakers' banquet here.

However, mass migration of people from one area to another had made the food problem difficult in some places, he said. Shopkeepers in one evacuated London area had suffered from loss of trade while supplies in other districts had been heavily taxed by influx of population.

Speaking of the new cheese agreement with the United Kingdom, Dr. Allen said he had heard complaints that the price of 14.4 cents, F.O.B. Montreal was not high enough to allow cheese makers a fair profit. He added, however, that Canadians must be prepared to make sacrifices.

CHINESE NOTABLES

Japanese military quarters expressed belief that 100 casualties was the "approximately correct" figure for the wreck but unconfirmed Chinese reports were that the number was much higher—100 dead and 300 injured.

The accident occurred at Soochow, about 50 miles west of Shanghai.

The railway has been under Japanese military operations since the Japanese capture of Nanking Dec. 14, 1937.

It was considered possible here that foreigners were aboard the wrecked train, including American newspapermen en route to Nanking for the treaty ceremony, but an accurate check could not be made immediately.

The wrecking was interpreted here as an effort by followers of Gen Chiang Kai-shek's government to discredit and trouble Wang's regime

Wang's administration, preparing for the formality of recognition by Japan tomorrow and treaty signing, was disclosed yesterday to have sent Chiang a "last exhortation" that the Chungking government stop fighting and join in peacetime co-operation with Japan.

view of the length of the raid and the method of indiscriminate bombing by relays of planes."

Firemen Praised

Liverpool's populace praised the heroism and efficiency of its fire department and the auxiliary fire service which tackled fires set by uncounted incendiary bombs dropped by the first raiders and put them out before the glare could guide the follow-up waves of bombers.

In another northwest town a whole row of houses was crumbled and a warehouse badly damaged. However, only three casualties were reported in this area, where most of the inhabitants took shelter.

Some persons were known to have been killed in another northwest town which suffered the longest raid of the night in this area. Demolition squads tunnelled into the debris this morning searching for bodies.

A HANDY WIFE

Stafford, Kas., Nov. 29 (AP). — Mrs. F. L. Heyens walked in on three men holding up her husband in his gun shop. Ignoring their shouted "hands up", she opened fire. One surrendered. The other two fled, but were captured after a 90-mile-an-hour chase by sheriff's officers.

PUPILS TO GET CHANCE TO GUESS WEIGHT OF CHEESE

As an additional feature to the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Convention and Exhibition a prize of $1.00 will be given to the pupil in each of the Primary Schools of this city, Prince of Wales School and the Ontario School for the Deaf, guessing the nearest correct weight of a cheese set up for that purpose. This cheese will be on exhibition Monday morning, December 2nd., at 9 o'clock and the contest will close at 8 p.m. Monday evening. The names of the winners will be announced at the afternoon session, Tuesday, December 3rd.

Balmy Beach Will Present Strongest Team Rough Riders Have Met During the Season Team Record Shows Eight Straight Victories With Only 12 Points Scored Against Them

LINE BIG AND FAST

Bobby Porter Will Hold His Own in Kicking With Sammy Sward

By SYDNEY GRUSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Nov. 29 —(CP)— The longer one studies Toronto Balmy Beach football club, the more convinced the observer becomes that they carry as potent a challenge as Ottawa Rough Riders, the glamor boys of eastern football, have faced all season.

They clash here tomorrow in the first game of a two-game, total-points series for the Eastern and Canadian Rugby Union Championship, and the odds on Ottawa have been falling since the first of the week as Balmy players' confidence spreads.

It is impossible to tell from their season's play if the Balmies are really a great football club, great enough to lick the Interprovincial Union's two-time champions with such "name" players as Tony Golab, Sam Sward, Andy Tommy, Murray Griffin, Dave Sprague and Bunny Wadsworth, to mention only a few.

Yield Only 12 Points

But their record shows eight straight victories and their goal line uncrossed in the last two play-off games against Sarnia Battery. They have yielded only 12 points in the eight Ontario Union games while scoring 99. The question of the opposition's calibre, apart from Sarnia, is the only cloud to mar these achievements.

Their line is big, fast and strong, led by Bob Reid, Cec Foderingham, Bruce Barron, Gord Shields and George Downard. Their backs are versatile. The left-footed Bob Porter may have to yield something, but not much, to Sam Sward's kicking distance but there is no surer safety man than the big, amiable Porter.

Have Variety of Plays

Don Crowe, Jack Frizelle and Bill Drinkwater are all young and fast-running backs, rounded into a fine attacking unit by the plunging of Frank Seymour and Johnny Manson. They have an amazing variety of plays breaking from an unusual T-formation.

These are the men who will carry the mail for Beaches against a machine which subdued classy Big Four opposition without a great deal of trouble. The Riders have everything Beaches possess and it seems to be a question of which club can execute the work better.

Against a line that charges as fast and hard as Beaches, the Ottawa end run may boomerang into the fumbles that have plagued Riders all season. That the Ottawa line is far from impregnable was shown when Argos went through to block two placement field-goal attempts last Saturday.

Will Miss Reynolds

Beaches will miss Syd Reynolds, stricken with appendicitis last week. He is a great downfield tackler and a defensive master against an end run. Andy Tommy, Riders' greatest scoring threat, will be all the harder to stop because of Reynolds' absence.

With cold weather holding, it appears as if the teams will play on a dry but rock-hard surface. This observer thinks Beaches will win the first game, but not by enough to take the round in Ottawa's Lansdowne Park the following Saturday.

TORONTO MANAGER

Russell "Lena" Blackburne has been given the job of manager of the Toronto Maple Leafs baseball team to replace Tony Lazzeri. The appointment of Blackburne spiked the numerous rumors that Toronto would not be represented in the International league next season.

Several Requests For Transfers Refused By Quebec League

Montreal, Nov. 29 (CP)—Executive of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association voted against issuing players transfers until a thorough investigation is undertaken in the cases at a meeting here Thursday in which several requests for transfers were refused, although two were granted.

Application of W. S. Murray, with Quebec Aces in the Quebec Senior Hockey League last year, for permission to transfer to Niagara Falls, Ont., was approved as was that of George Gobel from Saskatoon to Geraldton, Ont. The support of Gobel's transfer was asked by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association in a wire vote.

Players Jimmy McCurry, Jack Moley and Rossignol all were refused permission to transfer to Washington Eagles of the Eastern United States Amateur Hockey League, as was that of Walter Nicholson from Sudbury, Ont., to Quebec in the Q.S.H.L. McCurry and Rossignol both played with Verdun Maple Leafs in the Q.S.H.L. last year while Maley was with Sherbrooke in the Provincial Senior Hockey League.

The Association decided that no further penalties would be given five players who were given match-misconduct penalties for using over-length sticks in a Q.S.H.L. game here Wednesday. In this connection, President Norman Dawe pointed out that players receiving match penalties do not receive a one-game automatic suspension. The game suspension is at the discretion of the Q.A.H.A. executive.

Many Player Trades Seen When Major Leagues Meet

(By Ray Peacock, Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 29—(AP)—For everybody except the Detroit Tigers who are "in coventry," the annual meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues in Atlanta come Dec. 4, should be a bright lively trading session.

That's the usual optimistic forecast, even though it may turn out (as it has so often in the past) that the only player trades involve a couple of Joes nobody had bothered to mention before the meeting or does afterward, for that matter.

Larry MacPhail just couldn't wait until the Atlanta meeting to announce that he had acquired Kirby Higbe from the Phillies to pitch for the Brooklyn boys. MacPhail may be one of the busiest traders at the session—he just can't resist buying outfielders at $25,000 a throw.

If it isn't MacPhail who sets the pace, it may be Mr. James Dykes, of the Chicago White Sox, the American League's most active ivory broker.

About Ted Williams

One trade rumor, complete with denials, has Pitcher Johnny Rigney and an outfielder going from Chicago to Boston for Outfielder Ted Williams, the modern Joe Jackson. Dykes also would like to pick up a second baseman somewhere and has to prepare for First Baseman Joe Kukel's pension.

National League clubs still are nibbling at the Phillies' remaining trade bait, Pitcher Hugh Mulcahy.

Fear of the draft, of course, may hold up things. The Yankees, now that they have moved out of the American League's doghouse to make room for Detroit, have a lot of elderly talent they would like to dispose of at pre-war prices.

Crosetti on Block

The Yanks have offers for Frank Crosetti, who might do a Bartell in a different uniform. But the chance that Uncle Sam may put Phil Rinzuto in khaki for a year is a long one for the Yankees to take.

The market for catchers is bullish, the Cardinals are comfortably overstocked, and the Cubs, Giants and Dodgers are reportedly in trading moods. Hank Danning, Mickey Owen, Babe Phelps and one or two backstops may change uniforms.

Possibly the Cardinals will peddle Walker Cooper, rookie catcher and brother of Pitcher Morton Cooper, but it doesn't seem likely that such a box office attraction would be broken up.

Here's a list of players most likely to figure in any winter exchanges:

Sports Roundup

By Eddie Brietz Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Nov. 29 (AP)—Tattle tales: Lou Nova has a magazine piece coming out next month that will be a shocker—to some folks —also, Arch Ward, the Chicago Sports Editor, has had a brand new set of feelers from the pro footballers. (You'll recall he turned down a $25,000 a year bid a year ago).... Everybody around the Giants thinks the world and all of Gabby Hartnett, but they say he's out of the picture as boss farmer at Jersey City .... Billy Conn is 1-3 over Lee Savold tonight—just the same, a lot of guys on Broadway have the idea the good-looking Pittsburgher may get tagged for once.

Today's guest star.

Jack Miley, New York Post: "I see by the papers that Col. John Reed Kilpatrick of Madison Square Garden is going to try to bring back honest rassling, which is a much tougher job than bringing back My Bonnie to Me—and they've both been away about the same length of time....If he succeeds this will be the most stupendous single-handed achievement since Houdini made the elephant disappear, and then had to retire because he couldn't think of a bigger trick to use as an encore."

Nominations for our own All-American football team: Spirit of Notre Dame, Eyes of Texas, Marriage of William and Mary, Hard of Knox, Dead of Centre, Holdem of Yale, Poopoo of Purdue and Hall of Columbia.

SHIBICKY HURT AS N. Y. RANGERS LOSE TO AMERKS

Red Dutton's Squad Moves Out of Cellar With 2 to 1 Victory

A ROUGH GAME

Harvey "Busher" Jackson Scores Winning Goal Two Minutes Before Time

By Robert Clarke Canadian Press Staff Writer.

The point has been reached where it hardly would be amiss to have an ambulance on hand outside Madison Square Garden in New York every time those two Manhattan rivals, the Rangers and the Americans, meet in National Hockey League combat.

The New York clubs have met only twice this season, but out of those two encounters has come a heavy list of casualties. The hospital charts seem to indicate that Rangers have suffered most, to the point where their chances of finishing up in the top flight might be endangered.

The first meeting between the teams, on Nov. 19, resulted in a 3-2 victory for Rangers and two casualties to each side. Those sent to the sidelines for varying lengths of time were defencemen Pete Slobodian and goalie Earl Robertson of Americans, and defencemen Art Coulter and forward Dutch Hiller of Rangers.

Likely to be Out Some Time

Robertson and Hiller have returned to action, but Slobodian is likely to remain on the sidelines for another three weeks while a fractured cheek-bone mends and Coulter is likely to need another two weeks for a broken bone in his right shoulder to heal properly.

The loss of Coulter has taxed the Rangers' defence heavily for Coulter is recognized as one of the steadiest rearguards in the league. But Rangers suffered an equally heavy blow last night, as Americans topped them 2-1, when Alex Shibicky was injured near the end of the second period.

Hurt Along Boards

The clever left winger, one of Rangers' better scorers, was taken to hospital to be X-rayed for a possible break in his right shoulder, Shibicky was hurt in a mix-up along the boards but said that he did not know who toppled him.

The Americans gained their victory, one which sent them hurling out of the cellar into a fourth-place tie with Boston Bruins, through goals in the third period by Murray Armstrong and Harvey (Busher) Jackson. The Ranger goal was scored by Phil Watson late in the second period, while Jackson's winning tally came with less than two minutes of the game left.

The winners were without the services of Johnny (Peanuts) O'Flaherty for the third period. The former Toronto Goodyears' amateur entered the contest with an already-injured knee, which received a further buffeting during the first two periods. He gave way to Squee Allen for the last session.

The All-New York clash was the only game up for decision last night, but tonight Chicago Black Hawks invade Detroit for a game against the Red Wings. The Wings can consolidate their hold on second place with a victory but would be forced to share the runner-up spot with the Hawks if the Hawks win.

INDIANS, BARONS BATTLE TO A 1-1 OVERTIME DRAW

Leaders in Their Respective Sections Put on Grand Show at Springfield

COSTLY FOR INDIANS

Max Kaminsky Suffered a Probable Shoulder Fracture When Boarded Heavily

By The Canadian Press

Both Cleveland Barons and Springfield Indians might command the due respect accorded to leaders in their respective American League sections, but each evidently is just another hockey club to the other.

Both have been rolling along at a merry clip to open wide margins at the top of their divisions—Cleveland in the western section and Springfield in the eastern. The pair clashed last night and, even after 10 extra minutes, the result was still a stalemate.

Playing on the home ice of the Indians, the sectional leaders battled to a 1-1 overtime draw. Springfield drew first blood when Fred Hunt lifted a backhander into the net half-way through the second period after a scoreless first frame, but Norm Locking tied it up at 14:38 of the third period on a pass from Joffre Desilets.

Battle a Costly One

The battle was a costly one for the Indians, who are leading their section by five points over the second-place New Haven Eagles, as centre Max Kaminsky suffered a probable shoulder fracture. The draw left Cleveland with a clear margin of six points over the idle Pittsburgh Pirates in the western section.

Three other inter-sectional games were played last night. New Haven moved a point closer to Springfield by whipping Buffalo, 6-1; Philadelphia Ramblers kept a point behind New Haven in third place with a 4-1 victory over Hershey Bears, and Indianapolis Capitals scored the only triumph for the western section by defeating Providence Reds, 2-1.

Bisons Score Lone Tally

At New Haven, the Eagles scored two counters in each period, while holding Buffalo to a single tally in the second session. Marcel Tremblay and Gus Mancuso counted the opening period goals while Jack Cain and Polly Drouin scored in the second period after Tony Hemmerling had counted for Buffalo.

The Eagles finished the scoring on tallies by George Mantha and another by Drouin in the last period. Farmed to New Haven just before the game by the National Hockey League Montreal Canadiens defenceman Tony Graboski helped in one of the Eagles tallies.

Indianapolis meanwhile kept well ahead of the cellar-dwelling Buffalo in the western section with their close victory over Providence, last place team in the eastern division. Playing at home, the Capitals went two goals up on counters by Carl Liscombe and Buck Jones in the final period before Normie Mann scored for Providence.

A crowd of about 7,100 at Hershey watched the home-town Bears lose to Philadelphia Ramblers. The first period was scoreless but the Ramblers went into a 2-0 lead in the next on counters by Bill Calladine and Herb Foster.

McCreavy cut the lead to one goal early in the final frame but tallies by Lude Wareing and Johnny Polich gave the Ramblers a clear margin in the closing minutes.

RED BIRD HURLER CAPTURES HONORS

Ernie White Leads in Percentage Column and Earned-Run Average for 20 or More Games

Chicago, Nov. 29—(AP) — Ernie White, ace southpaw of Columbus Red Birds, captured top honors among American Association pitchers for 1940, official averages showed today.

Pitching 136 innings, White lead the field both in the percentage column and the earned-run averages for hurlers taking part in 20 or more games. Charley Wagner of Louisville, was the nominal leader with his mark of nine victories and one loss, but appeared in only 11 contests.

White won 13 games and lost four for an average of .765. The Columbus left hander had an earned run average of 2.25.

The honor of pitching the most complete games went to Bob Logan, Indianapolis left hander, who had 24. He also faced the most batsmen, 1,033, and tied with John Lindell of Kansas City for the most victories, 18 each. Frank Melton of Columbus issued the most bases on balls, 139, and struck out the most batsmen, 142, as he was winning 10 games and losing the same number.

Harry Kelley of Minneapolis allowed the most hits, 295, while Walt Tauscher of the same club appeared in the most games, 53. Jimmy De Shong of Milwaukee allowed the most runs, 161, tied with Johnny Marcum of Toledo in the mst earned runs allowed, 132 each, and made the most wild pitches, 19. The "losingest" hurler was Charles Marrow of Milwaukee, who dropped 19 games while winning eight.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

The originator of basketball, Dr. James A. Ainsmith, died at Lawrence, Kansas, one year ago this week. A native of Almonte, Ont., Dr. Ainsmith was 78 years old at the time of his death. Early in life Dr. Ainsmith was interested in sporting events and it was to provide competitive sport for those who did not play out-of-doors during the winter months that Dr. Ainsworth first introduced the game of basketball. At first he fastened two peach baskets of the round deep variety, to the walls at opposite ends of a room and used a soccer football for the first game of basketball ever played late in 1891 at Springfield, Mass. The first advertised basketball game was played on Jan. 20th, 1892 and proved quite acceptable to the American public and players alike.

Basketball, popular from the night it was first introduced by Dr. Ainsmith, is not played in more than 75 countries in the world. It boasts of more players than any other comparative or combative sports—over 20,000,000 playing the game annually. In the U.S.A. the game has the distinction of drawing more paid admissions, nearly a hundred million last year, than any other pastime. The world's record crowd for a basketball game was established in Peiping, China in 1931. Historians say a game resembling basketball was played in ancient Maya, this conclusion coming because in the Mayan ruins were found metal hoops hung high at the ends of a long corridor, which doesn't alter the fact that Dr. Ainsmith originated the modern game of basketball.

So much for digging into the archives of the cage game—let's do an about face and look into the future of the pastime. Phil Brockell, Kingston, was elected President of the E.O.B.A. for his 25th term of office. Actually Prexy Phil seems to be a fixture on the job, which he has handled in a capable manner for all these years. We received a letter from Jack Walters of Picton, some little time ago and Mr. Walters was anxious to ascertain what was being done relative to the organizing of the game among the hoopsters of the Bay of Quinte area, as it seems Picton is anxious to enter a team into the Intermediate "B" ranks of the Ontario Baseball Association. Mr. Walters' letter stated there were a number of ex-students from the Picton Collegiate who were desirous of playing basketball and with the influx of Air Force men to be stationed at the new Picton training centre, Mr. Walters thinks the game of basketball would flourish in the Prince Edward County seat.

Belleville has been grouped with three Kingston quints for years past and perhaps a new basketball grouping might act as a stimulant to the cage game. Many of Belleville veteran players have passed on to the gallery, or wherever hoopsters go when they retire to boo instead of being booed, and a new deal in local basketball circles is anticipated. With Picton, Belleville and the Trenton R.C.A.F. grouped together a splendid compact sage loop could be assured, especially if one other team could be procured within a radius of 25 miles. At any rate Mr. Walters says to "count Picton in," so all Joe Shortt and his "Y" cohorts have to do is organize locally.

Slowly, but surely, "Speedy" St. Louis is garnering together a formidable looking senior "B" team of pucksters. Right now he is angling for a seasoned defenceman and a couple of scoring forwards to balance off his squad before the O.H.A. campaign opens. Incidentally one of the reasons the district puck group accepted the senior "B" elevation was to protect the clubs in the matter of imports as apparently there are not as many restrictions against importing senior players as prevail in the lower brackets.

Do you remember when the Norton H. Crow Memorial trophy for 1939 was awarded Larry O'Connor, Toronto hurdler and sprinter, a year ago today, after the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada judged him the outstanding amateur athlete of the year. O'Connor was a member of the Canadian Olympic team of 1936 and of the British Empire Games team two years later.

Max Jackson, who was appointed to the executive of the Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association from Kingston, is arousing much interest in the sponsorship of hockey among the teen-aged of the Limestone City. Two groups have been organized, one called Mites, ranging from 12 to 15 years, and the other juvenile loop taking care of boys from 15 to under 18 years of age. There is to be a civic outdoor rink at the Kingston Fair Grounds on which these boys will learn the elementary principles of hockey. Actually the Kingston kids will be tutored at the Fair Grounds and the open air rink at Queen's University, while the older lads will be taken care of early evenings and Saturdays at the Jock Harty arena. A juvenile group has been organized by Mr. Jackson and includes three clubs from Kingston, Regiopolis, K.C.I. & V.S., Kingston Ponies, Gananoque, Seeley's Bay and Lansdowne.

Already having played four ties in the N.H.L. "Pudgy Jawn" Adams, manager of the Detroit Red Wings, comes to bat with the suggestion that three points should be given for a win leaving the singleton for a tie. Jack's contention is that with three points at stake, instead of one for a tie, the clubs will take more chances, particularly when the score is tied in the latter stages. If they'd toss out tie games altogether and not count 'em in the standing at all, then the teams would play real wide open hockey when the overtime period rolled around. In such cases the managers would know that a tie meant no points at all, which would be incentive for victory at all costs.

Sport Slants—Just when Stanford had expressed desire of meeting the Texas "Aggies" in the Rose Bowl, along comes the University of Texas to upset the mighty Aggies' football apple cart yesterday....Yes sir, the lowly college boys blazed their way through for a last second touchdown and a 7-0 surprise victory over the here-to-fore unbeaten, untied Aggies for another major upset of the year..Coming events sometimes cast their shadows before them, so the cocky Stanford team had better tend to their knitting in their next two games, or they may find themselves along with Cornell, Notre Dame and the Aggies....Tony Golab has a fractured rib, but will play on Saturday if Balmy Beach prove a stronger stumbling block than expected by Coach Trimble.. Practically every mine in Northern Ontario is sponsoring a junior or juvenile hockey team this winter as minor league puck chasing is booming in the land of the gold ....Wish we were.

"THE GORGON'S MASK"

by Van Wyck Mason

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

The yelping of a newsboy beat in through the open window. "JAP BATTLE FLEET SAILING FOR PHILIPPINES. U.S. STRENGTHENS CANAL ZONE DEFENSES."

North and Kilgour went to the window and, peering out, saw that the even flow of Honolulu's daily life had been interrupted. Everywhere knots of people stood arguing over newspapers. Significantly, there was not a Japanese to be seen anywhere.

"This war scare's getting worse every minute," Kilgour commented. "Downing Street will be raising hob with me, so I must run along and code a cable report on the situation. Wish I could send more favorable news—this looks serious, my lad. Isn't there anything we can do?"

"I wish I knew." The intelligence captain passed a quivering hand over his brow. "I've never been so completely licked."

"Can't you arrest von Rentner and Dunant?"

"I can, but what positive proof of the plot can I dig up on such short notice? Of course, they won't keep any around. You know I've got to have some documentary evidence, at least, to lay before the Jap consul in Honolulu. He'll never believe me otherwise, and he'll undoubtedly advise his government that it's an attempt on the part of my country to back water. Tokyo would probably construe that as fear, and the militarists would have more of a case than ever."

The Englishman crossed to the bent figure in front of the desk and laid his hand on the sagging shoulder, with, "You've got until around noon tomorrow."

Kilgour gallantly tried to install a tone of confidence in his voice as he said: "I'm sure you . . . and I . . . will find a way out. Now I'm going to send my cables. If you want me, phone the club. Good-night."

North remained hunched in his chair. His voice was thick and strained as he said: "Good night, Bruce—you've been a real friend. In case we don't see each other again, remember that I'm most grateful for all the risks you've run with me."

Halfway to the door the English agent stopped and, in a perplexed way, asked, "I hope you don't mind my asking—but that Stefan woman—you've not got the wind up over her? A sort of crush?"

North made no reply. Kilgour gazed unhappily at his silent friend, uttered a soft "good-night", and went out.

Captain North dropped so heavily into the chair at the desk that it creaked protestingly under his weight. How lonely he was here in this thriving city! The two men who should have helped him were—dead. He shivered to think of young Wilson Clark stretched out in the morgue. He and Teodora Mazro, both victims of—of this sordid international plot.

Sordid, that's what it was! Vile, greedy, and vicious—the whole affair. Imagine those two swine. Dunant and von Rentner, coolly and deliberately preparing to send countless souls howling to . . . so that more money might clatter into their already crowded treasure vaults. . . . Brutal, that was what the human race was — selfish, treacherous, and primitive. . . .

"Nadia," he murmured while the grim lines faded a little about his eyes. "She is the only one who really knows—who understands."

With electric suddenness, his hand shot out to snatch up the telephone. "Fifteen twenty-nine," he read from the slip of paper which Nadia had passed him at dinner.

Almost at once her rich tones answered in French. "Oui, mon Capitaine, c'est moi." She spoke eagerly, a little breathlessly.

All North said was: "I've decided to go with you. How soon can you be ready?"

He heard her catch her breath, despite her training, before she murmured in joyous, tremulous tones: "A gray-painted cabin cruiser, the Bonita, will be there at the Kalihi Channel Pier at twelve-thirty. Go aboard her."

Then, faint as the whisper of wind in a tall pine, she added: "Oh Hugh, mon cher, I am so happy!"

Having reached his decision North proceeded to attend to certain details. Methodically, he selected a sheet of letter paper from the rack in front of him, dipping pen in ink and began to write:

"Dear Bruce:

"Since there's absolutely no use my hanging on, I'm going away with—you-know-who. I've thought it all out, and though you may not understand, I hope you'll try to . . ."

For several minutes more his pen flashed across the surface of the paper. After rereading the letter, not once, but twice, he signed and sealed it.

Next, being by habit an essentially considerate person, he wrote a brief note to Phedre Renoire. No use letting her wait vainly at Waikiki Beach. By that time he and Nadia would be far away.

* * *

At precisely twelve-thirty, Captain North's cab reached Kalihi Channel Pier. How dark it was, save for the brilliant moon!

North thrust his head out of the cab window to distinguish a long, gray, rakish outline—a cabin cruiser with a single light burning at its masthead, made fast to the end of the pier.

It proved to be the Bonita. Two men in dark clothes got up from the bollards upon which they had been sitting.

"Here's the cab," one of them called in an undertone which summoned from the yacht a small white-coated Chinese who took North's luggage.

Was it indeed Nadia Stefan who awaited him aboard the Bonita—or—. Well, if Nadia chose to make him another victim, there was nothing he would do about it. Gambling on the genuineness of her affection, he had burned several vital bridges. Well, the past was past, and he firmly intended to keep it there. . . .

He noticed that the two seamen who were now occupied in eyeing him with frank curiosity looked thoroughly American.

"Okay, Jake, let 'er go," one grunted. "Orders was to cast off soon's the gent showed up." Exhibiting regular white teeth, this individual added, "You've got a swell night for a sail, sir; I guess you'll find the Bonita pretty comfortable."

North, who had been fully expecting to board a sinister craft manned by foreigners, again marveled at the subtle enigma presented by Nadia Stefan.

While the yacht's engine gave a preliminary cough or two, then settled to an even, subdued purring, North entered the charthouse and nodded to the spruce young man he found at the wheel.

"Nice night for a sail, sir," the yacht captain ventured. "We're always glad to see the moon."

"How so?"

"Means good business, sir."

"Oh, then the Bonita often takes cruises like this?"

The young man in the white yacht cap grinned and winked elaborately.

Smoothly the Bonita was slipping past the blinking lights of Fort Armstrong.

"They," remarked the helmsman with elaborate tact, "are expecting you on the after deck, sir." Accepting the hint, North made his way aft to the stern.

They? Evidently the yacht's captain had been super-tactful for North could distinguish only one figure yonder. Soon he halted by her chair. She arose. Then, as naturally as though he had done so a thousand times, Hugh North took her into his arms. From that brief instant, his doubts and fears dissipated. . . . Gradually the lights of Honolulu receded.

North had led Nadia to the settee which commanded a view of Oahu, delicately silvered by the tropic moonlight.

"That's not Oahu," Nadia murmured. "It must be Avalon—and ahead of us lie the Hesperides—the Isles of the Blest.—Oh, mon ami!" Nadia turned aside from her tender watching of Hugh's profile. "I hope you are not sorry that you've come with me. You—your safety has come to mean so much."

"I am not!" said he with that fierceness of one who seeks to convince himself. "I'm so glad, I'm almost terrified. I'm glad, too, that our coming together could be so perfectly exquisite. Look at that—" he pointed to phosphorus in the broad wake left by the Bonita.

"You're not looking—what is it?" he demanded when he noted that Nadia had been looking off to port.

"Nothing, beloved, nothing," she whispered. "All our worries and our fears lie astern in that beautiful exciting city."

That was very fine and picturesque, but . . . North wondered if there was not an almost invisible white streak running a course parallel . . . a white streak that might be caused by a boat cruising without lights!

* * *

Said Nadia Stefan next day as she plucked still another golden cluster of bell-shaped floribundia and thoughtfully arranged it against a background of bird-of-paradise flowers: "This IS the loveliest place I have ever seen!"

And Captain North agreed with "Kauai, mon cheri, is another bit of heaven which fell from out the sky one day."

Mercurially, her mood changed and, with head on his shoulder, she said, "Do you know? I would like always to live and then to die here. Oh, Hugh, you do think the world well lost—don't you?"

For answer he swept her with unconscious roughness into his arms and kissed her fiercely.

"It's unbelievable — I never thought I could be so happy," Hugh suddenly remarked a little later. "I can't imagine what's come over me during the last ten hours."

"Ten hours?"

"It's only that we've been away from Honolulu."

"And we're not going back for ever so long," she cried gayly. "Come along, let's go down to the wharf."

OPPOSE SKI SPECIALS

Toronto, Nov. 28.—(CP)—A resolution opposing proposed legalizing of Sunday ski trains was passed by the council for Social Service of the Church of England here yesterday.

The resolution expressed concern over the necessity for increased requirements of train workers on Sundays if the scheme is made legal.

Most Rev. Derwyn T. Owen, Archbishop of Toronto and Primate of Canada, was named chairman of the Council.

Group Capt. Lawrence Stresses Need Of Education in Talk to Trenton Students

Trenton, (Special)—Education can never be stressed too much, Group Captain T. A. Lawrence told the graduates and students of the Trenton High School during the first half of the annual Commencement held in the school Thursday night.

"We will need all the resources we can get to aid us in the war," said the Commanding Officer of the Trenton Air Station, "and education is of primary importance. This war is going to be long and drawn out. After the war the struggle will continue for some time. In view of this, you students should obtain as much education as you possibly can not only in an effort to aid your country but to aid you in your future life."

The Group Captain extended the highest praise to the air cadets of the Trenton High School, which were praised by Group Captain J. A. Sully during the inspection of last year. "Any help needed by the cadets will be given by the airforce," said Group Captain Lawrence.

"The presentation of these diplomas is an important event in your lives. It is up to you to continue your studies even though some of you will not be returning to school," he said.

Presents Certificates

Group Captain Lawrence presented the Intermediate Certificates to the following: Gerald Baker, Robert Beale, Irwin Beattie, Marion Bell, Jean Blair, Lois Bonter, Murial Brown, Agnes Campbell, Marion Campney, Douglas Carswell, Eric Colp, Gerald Dafoe, Marjorie Donaldson, Robert Emerson, Gratia Foster, Evelyn Fritz, Jean George, Phyllis Hendricks, Norman Howard, Vivian Humphrey, Mary Hutton, Gerald Ireland, Isabella Jordan, Clare Langman, John Little, Phyllis Madena, Roslind May, Audrey Maybee, Dorothy Miluck, Margaret Orr, Robert Reynolds, Allan Richards, Carma. Sarles, Edward Simmons, Ted Snider, John Stringer, Birdie Sweet, James Thompson, Phyllis Vanalstyne, Lorna Waldron, Elmer Weaver, William Westfall, Alice Wilkins.

Athletic Awards

Thelma Beale was presented with the cup, which she captured as Senior Girls' Champion of the Bay of Quinte District as the C.O.S.S.A. field day held at Stirling last year and Gerald Anderson was presented with the award as Senior Boys' Champion.

The John Proctor Cup for the best cadet was presented to Allan Patrick and the Strathcona Medal for shooting to Frederick Burtt.

Musical Program

Songs by the "Soldiers of the King" including many favorite songs of the navy, airforce and army were sung by a large group of students representing the three arms of Canada's fighting forces. The sailors were represented by A. Cronkwright, E. Colp, D. Carswell, A. Clark, G. Ireland, D. Reid, G. Anderson R. Weller, H. Filion, C. Langman, N. Armstrong, A. Little. The airmen were R. Reynolds, C. Sarles, B. Ireland, K. Rosenplot, W. Jeffery, J. Keane and the militia by Lieut. J. McKibbon and Cpl. Sutherland; Nurses were A. Maybee, B. Floud, M. Gainforth, B. McNab, M. Campbell, E. Fritz, M. Bell, A. Wilkins, M. Weaver. A dance was put on by C. Miller, B. Gitelman and R. Cory. The pianists were J. Miller and A. Campbell.

Slippery Roads Cause Accidents

Several minor accidents have been reported in the district as the blinding snow and slippery roads has made motor travelling dangerous. Three motor vehicles went into the ditch between Trenton and Belleville this morning but little damage was done.

Trenton High School students are doing their share to win the war by selling War Saving Stamps. In the past four weeks the students have sold $1000.00 worth of stamps.

Morley Sine Named President As Sidney Liberals Convene

W. N. Gilroy is Principal Speaker at Annual Meeting of Association

TOASTS PROPOSED

Liberal stalwarts of Hastings County's oldest township congregated at Sidney Town Hall on Thursday evening as the Sidney Township Women's and Men's Liberal Association held their annual meeting and election of officers for the forthcoming year. The meeting took the form of an informal banquet and the traditional time-honored toasts to the King and the party were proposed and responded to by Liberal supporters of the township. The guest speaker for the occasion was Mr. W. N. Gilroy, of Coe Hill, Vice-President of West Hastings' Liberal Association.

The election of officers for the forthcoming year was accomplished in almost record time with last year's president, Mr. Morley Sine, being re-elected to the honored post for another year, as were all other officers. Supporting Mr. Sine in guiding the destinies of the Sidney Liberal Association for the year 1941 will be Mr. Harold Longwell, 1st Vice-President; Mr. George Heaseman, 2nd Vice-President and Mrs. Percy Utman, President of the Women's Association, as 3rd Vice-President. Mrs. Utman, as President of the Ladies' Association automatically takes the post of 3rd Vice-President. Mr. Erle Bonisteel was re-elected as Secretary-Treasurer.

In his short address as the guest speaker of the evening, Mr. Gilroy complimented Mr. Morley Sine upon his re-election to the presidency of the Sidney Liberals and also upon the capable assistance he will be afforded as the result of his former officers being returned to office. In complimenting the Ladies' Association upon their success as an organization, Mr. Gilroy expressed the wish that such an organization existed in Wollaston, his home township.

Referred to War

Mr. Gilroy referred briefly to the war and to the fact that the conflict in which we are now engaged, was entirely different from wars of the past. "In the Great War of 1914-18 our soldiers enlisted and many sacrificed their lives on the battlefront, but today," said Mr. Gilroy, "it is the women and children on the British home front, who are in the war theatre and who are being slaughtered by the ruthless bombings ordered by a war-crazed maniac."

Mr. Gilroy stated that the British Empire was indeed fortunate in having a man like Churchill at the head of the Government during the present trying period, but at the same time paid tribute to Churchill's predecessor, the late Neville Chamberlain. "Chamberlain did all in his power to maintain peace," stated Mr. Gilroy.

"There are two elements in this world — light and darkness," said the speaker. "Two years ago we were enjoying peace, while getting ready for war, and now we are at war and are all praying for the end and for peace. To create peace we must destroy war and in creating war, we destroy peace."

Confident of Victory

"We are confident of ultimate victory because we are in the right and because we strive to maintain peace, but if we are to have peace, we must make preparations for peace," said Mr. Gilroy as he predicted that Canada will see an influx of immigrants from Europe at the close of the war. "The people of Europe are looking to Canada as a possible retreat from the war-torn countries of their homeland and when we accept them, we, as Canadians must show them what it is to be loyal citizens of the British Crown and prove to them that we are a peace loving nation." In closing, Mr. Gilroy threw out a challenge to the Liberal party and its supporters to set an example for these new immigrants. "Even while we are watching them, they will be watching us, so it is our duty to set the example and prove what true Canadians are."

In proposing the toast to "The King," Col. Roscoe Vanderwater asked if "we in Canada, considered the privileges which are ours?" "We have been taking these privileges too much for granted," said Col. Vanderwater, "but today we are beginning to appreciate these privileges and the result is a united Canada, with only one aim in view —that of the successful prosecution of the war. Take stock and let us figure out our duty," concluded the speaker; "a country worth living in is a country worth making a sacrifice for."

Mr. Sam Nicholson, Deputy-Reeve for Sidney, responded to the toast by asking "Why are we at war?" "At one time," he said, "German culture was considered by other nations to be paramount and as a direct result of this the thought was imbued in the German mind that they must dominate the world."

"During the war of 1914-18 Germany discovered that on the little island of England there was a bulldog and that this bulldog had teeth. Canada and the British Empire demonstrated during that era that they produced men," said Mr. Nicholson and predicted that they will do the same again. In conclusion the speaker quoted the lines: "We have a right to brag, if we are born in Canada 'neath the British flag."

Toasts Proposed

The toast to the Liberal Party and its leaders, the Right Honorable Mackenzie King and the Hon. Mitchell Hepburn was proposed by Mr. David Thrasher and responded to by Mr. B. O. Lott who upheld the accomplishments of the Liberal leaders during this time of stress. "Never has there been heard a word of scandal against Mackenzie King," he said. "True, there has been some criticism, but this war has seen little profiteering as was rampant during the last war. It is a time to lay aside party politics and get together to save our country and Christianity," concluded Mr. Lott.

Mr. Harold Chambers proposed the toast to the Sidney Liberal Association which was responded to by Mrs. Roscoe Vanderwater. Mrs. Vanderwater stated that organizations such as the Sidney Liberal Association had great political influence but lamented the fact that women did not take a more active part in politics. That women could be successful as public speakers was evident by the record of Miss Agnes Macphail, Canada's first lady member at Ottawa, said Mrs. Vanderwater.

The final toast of the evening was to "The Ladies," and was proposed by Mr. Ben Bleecker and responded to by Mrs. Percy Utman. Mr. Morley Sine acted as toastmaster for the evening. Community singing, led by Mr. Wickson and Mrs. Vanderwater, acting as accompanist, was enjoyed, while several musical numbers rendered by the Austin Orchestra were much appreciated. Dancing to the Austins concluded the evening's entertainment.

Majority of Rumanian Legation Staff in London Resigns in Protest Against Reign of Terror

By HAROLD FAIR
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 29 (CP)—Majority of the Rumanian Legation Staff in London has resigned in protest against the reign of terror being carried on by the Iron Guard in their country and a formal statement is expected from the Legation later.

The resignations were written as reports reached authoritative quarters here confirming press stories of Iron Guard violence in which more than 64 persons have been killed.

One informed source commented: "Affairs in Rumania are just bloody and it seems the government is doing nothing to stop the violence."

Violence Severe in Bucharest

The violence was described as particularly severe in Bucharest where the Antonescu Government is either unable or unwilling to do anything to keep the Iron Guard extremists from avenging the slaying two years ago of Cornelius Zelea Codreanu, founder of the Iron Guards.

It was recalled that Antonescu protested the Government's inability to handle the Green-Shirted Extremists in September when Capt. John Edward Treacy, Canadian engineer, his wife and three British Oil Company officials were arrested by Iron Guards and roughly handled. Capt. Treacy and his wife were released recently.

Meanwhile, the press reported without official confirmation that Queen Helen had returned to exile and that young King Michael may follow.

Iron Guard killings were reported continuing and there was some speculation here whether a new government might be established to stamp out the violence.

'Funny' Canadian Rescued by Swede

Montreal, Nov. 29.—(CP)—Capt. Sven D. Orlander, Commander of the Swedish freighter which rescued crew members of the heroic Jervis Bay, told today of a "funny" Canadian which his vessel picked up in the Atlantic after the Jervis Bay had been sunk in a battle with a Nazi raider.

Capt. Orlander said in an interview that the Canadian was sighted as his vessel searched for survivors of the armed merchant cruised which saved the majority of its convoy by attacking the German pocket battleship.

"There he was in the middle of Atlantic, standing on a piece of wood about two feet wide and four feet long, riding it like a surf board and singing away at the top of his voice. He was a brave fellow".

It was dark when the freighter reached the spot, said Capt. Orlander, and they had a difficult time finding survivors. He told how on the trip back to an East Coast Canadian port three of the Jervis Bay survivors died. They were buried at sea wrapped in Swedish and Canadian flags.

Italian Prisoners Landed in East For Internment Camp

An East Coast Canadian Port, Nov. 29—(CP)—A group of Italian prisoners landed here today under military escort from St. John's, Nfld., bound for an internment camp in eastern Canada. The number of Italians was not revealed.

German and Italian prisoners held in Newfoundland were said to be "getting along badly" together because of taunts by the Nazis over Greek successes in Albania. It was decided to separate the Italians and Germans to avoid trouble.

Will Protest Proposal To Legalize Sunday Ski Train Service

Toronto, Nov. 29—(CP)—A message urging Ontario citizens to protest the proposed legalizing of Sunday ski trains has been sent to 3,000 ministers and church leaders in the province, officials of the Lord's Day Alliance announced today. The message, signed by George Weber, General Secretary of the Alliance, and Rt. Rev. A. R. Beverley, of Toronto, contends there are already enough means of Sunday travel for those seeking recreation.

COUPLE FINED $200 EACH AND GIVEN 4 MONTHS

Alleged Members of Jehovah's Witnesses Persecuted Under Defence of Canada Regulations

GIVEN REPRIMAND

London, Ont., Nov. 29 —(CP)— Convicted today on two charges each under Defence of Canada Regulations, Clarence Leeson and his wife, Agnes, were each fined $200 and sentenced to four months in jail, with additional terms of three months if the fines aren't paid. Trial of the couple was held about a month ago, and judgment was given by County Magistrate C. W. Hawkshaw.

The parents were arrested after two of their children refused to take part in patriotic exercises in suburban Merwin Heights school. They were charged with advocating the principles of Jehovah's Witnesses, an illegal organization, and with making statements intended or likely to cause disaffection to His Majesty.

It was the heaviest sentence imposed in district court since the sect was ruled illegal. Previously, three young women received terms of three months for continuing to be members of the sect.

Refused Adjournment

There had been several adjournments in the case, and application of A. B. Siskind for further delay was opposed by Crown Attorney Norman Newton. Mr. Siskind represented Defence Counsel J. L. Cohen K.C., of Toronto, who again was unable to appear today.

"Every courtesy has been extended Mr. Cohen," declared the Crown. "The feeling is abroad that delays have been caused by authorities being afraid to prosecute. One of the most important papers in the Dominion commented editorially that there appears to be pussyfooting in this case."

Mr. Newton said that in recent Communists and illegal picketing, trials involving Jehovah's Witnesses, Communists and illegal picketing, "the defence always seems to originate in the same spot, and it looks like a vicious tieup."

Magistrate Hawkshaw stressed Canada is going through "troublesome times," and he found that through the actions of the lessons their children "had been taught to disrespect the Crown and the flag."

The children involved were a girl of nine and a boy, seven years old. They were sent home from school first on Sept. 20, allowed to return, and suspended a few days later when they still refused to sing the National Anthem. Arrest of the parents followed.

Clear, Explicit Warnings

Members of the sect have had "clear and explicit warnings," Crown Attorney Newton maintained, in urging the maximum penalty for the lessons.

"And what do we find?" he asked. "As if by pre-conceived plan, children throughout the province have decided they will not take part in patriotic exercises in school.

"Norway, Holland, Belgium and France were undermined, betrayed, conquered and destroyed because Nazi Germany was clever enough to take advantage of any group or sect that spread discontent.

"In Canada there has been some studied defiance of the law, in distribution of pamphlets and in other ways. There must be subversive influence behind it. It may be these people are gullible fools who allow themselves to be used after warning has been given, but at the same time an example should be made of them."

MINT HAS HARD TIME MAKING MONEY

Denver, Nov. 29 (AP). — Having trouble making enough money? So is the Denver mint. Although it is working at capacity—three shifts seven days a week—the mint is behind on treasury orders for the first time since the first great war. Mint officials attribute the increased demand for coins to Christmas shopping, tax paying, more coin machines in use and generally better business.

GREEK OFFICIAL REPORTS SAID CONSERVATIVE

Correspondent on Tour at Front Says Immense Amount of Booty Taken

COMMUNICATION POOR

(The following dispatch is the first independent verification that Pogradetz, Albanian town 20 miles north of Koritza, has been captured by the Greeks. Its capture has not been claimed officially in Athens although it was reported Tuesday in London. The Greek command said at that time only that its forces had "overshot it.)

(By Peter Tompkins, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Pogradetz, Albania, (via Athens) Nov. 29—(AP)—Greek official communiques have been on the Conservative side both as regards Italian casualties and the amount of booty taken.

Every Albanian village and all along the coastal sector through which I have travelled to this little settlement 20 miles north of Koritza, I am amazed by the number of trucks, motorcycles and guns littering the roadside, to say nothing of the quantities of war materials already collected by the Greeks.

I can also understand now why the communiques have been so reserved about the present situation. In reality, there is no front and fighting, spread over a wide area far into the snow-covered mountains, is being carried on mostly by small units. These detachments operate more or less independently and communications are so poor it is impossible for commanders even in the immediate sector to know the exact situation.

Military leaders even in this advanced post are unable to tell just how far beyond here their forces have penetrated into the wild mountains. They say, however, that their forces far to the north and west of Pogradetz are meeting no concerted resistance. They say there is some rearguard action but for the most part, the Italians are retreating faster than the Greeks can advance.

I am writing this dispatch on a typewriter used only a few days ago by an Italian officer who apparently left hurriedly. A half-written letter was found in the machine. I left the Greek city of Ionnina yesterday and drove where the Albanian frontier crosses the River Aoos. I went the rest of the way to Koritza by motorcycle.

The weather is extremely cold in the mountains and the soldiers are suffering great hardships and privations—the Greeks as well as the retreating Italians.

I arrived at Koritza in time to see the population celebrating the anniversary of an Albanian Independence Day. Greek and Albanian flags moved side by side as hundreds of inhabitants marched through the streets and heard speeches in which leaders cried "Down with Fascism and Mussolini." Youth groups carried banners calling for "arms to help drive the Italians from Albania."

LEAKING GAS IS BLAMED FOR 7 DEATHS

Toppenish, Wash., Nov. 29 (AP) —Leaking gas, set off by some mysterious spark, was blamed today for the devastating explosion and fire which killed at least seven persons yesterday in a warehouse-business building here.

An eighth body was sought in the charred ruins after seven bodies were recovered from the smoking wreckage yesterday.

Fire Chief Leo Henle said he was convinced a gas explosion was to blame.

The blast shook virtually the whole community, on the edge of the Yakima Indian reservation.

AIR RAID TESTS AT ROSTON ON THE DON

Moscow, Nov. 29.— (AP)— Air raid defence exercises are being held in the important southern city of Rostov on the Don. Tests similar to those previously held at Leningrad, Kiev, Batum and other industrial centres began yesterday with the sounding of an alarm during which "fire" in another quarter was extinguished.

PLANE MAKES 'BAD LANDING'

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 29.—(CP)— Pilot Officer J. W. Bradley, formerly of San Francisco, Cal., and Lac. R. F. Watson of Hamilton, were taken to the hospital for observation last night after their airplane made what officials termed a "bad landing" at Collins' Bay Service Flying Field.

The men were shaken up but did not appear to be injured. The plane was slightly damaged.

NAZIS ADMIT STUDENTS ARRESTED

Berlin, Nov. 29. —(AP)— Nazi sources said today that students of a Paris university had been arrested "recently" as the result of a hostile demonstration but claimed that foreign reports that some had been shot were untrue.

BELGIAN OFFICIAL KILLED DURING BOMBING OF LONDON HOTEL

London, Nov. 29.— (CP)—Camille Camus, high official of the Belgian Colonial Ministry, was killed in the recent bombing of the Carlton hotel, in London, it was disclosed today. He was about to leave on a mission to the Belgian Congo.

Hubert Pierlot, Premier of the Belgian government in exile here, was a guest in the hotel but escaped injury.

NO ILLUSIONS ABOUT GRIMNESS SAYS COL. RALSTON

Minister of National Defence Arrives in England to Confer With Authorities

By SAM ROBERTSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

London, Nov. 29 (CP Cable) — Hon. J. L. Ralston, Canadian Minister of National Defence, has arrived in London for an extended visit, determined to see the battle of Britain at close range and consult with officials of the British armed services and the government.

"Canada is resolved to contribute not only all her strength but her most effective strength, and the Canadian government wants, by consultation and collaboration with the United Kingdom government, to ensure that Canada's participation represents the best teamwork we can devise," Col. Ralston said.

He added that Canadians have no illusions about the grimness of the days and years ahead.

Col. Ralston was accompanied by Maj.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, Chief of the Canadian General Staff, and Col. A. A. Magee, Senior Executive Assistant to the Minister.

(The party's safe arrival in London was announced in Ottawa last night.)

Will Confer With Officials

Col. Ralston plans to discuss with Hon. Vincent Massey, the Canadian High Commissioner, Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Corps Commander, Maj.-Gen. P. J. Montague, Senior Officer of Canadian Military Headquarters in London, and the Canadian Divisional Commanders and their staffs, matters affecting the administration, training and employment of the Canadian troops and their co-operation with those from other parts of the commonwealth.

British officials will be consulted regarding war plans for the present and the future and Canadian formations on the British front line will be visited.

"Our visit will help in preparation for the tasks in front of us," Col. Ralston said. "We welcome the opportunity of mingling on this battlefront not only with the men of the services but with the civilian fighters—the men and women and boys and girls of Britain.

"They have already given the world a demonstration of fortitude and staying power which is unbeatable."

30-Foot Steel Fire Escape Has Disappeared

Maybe they anticipate a fire and merely hope to add a little precaution—but such a story will never be believed by the Belleville police department.

Believe it or not some person stole a complete 30-foot steel fire escape in Belleville some time within the past three days. The fire escape had been salvaged from the old Kyle House Hotel, when that building was demolished, and had been placed behind Geen's drug store where it was to have been erected in the near future as a fire escape for the benefit of the tenants, who reside in the apartments of that building.

Today the entire 30-foot steel fire escape was gone. It had vanished as if by magic. Belleville police were notified and alter in the day Detective Fred Isard unearthed the first clue in the case. Five men were seen in the vicinity of the rear of the building early Thursday morning. They had a truck nearby. The rest of the story is elementary deduction — apparently the men loaded the 30-foot steel fire escape on the truck, drove away and no doubt sold the metal for scrap iron.

Canada May Grant "Corridor" to U. S.

Washington, Nov. 29—(AP)—The possibility of Canada granting the United States a "corridor" for a highway to Alaska, over which troops and supplies could be moved in an emergency, was mentioned today in speculation on the terms that might be involved should any additional American warships be transferred to Britain.

There was no confirmation in official quarters that the release of additional United States naval vessels was under consideration, or that a grant from Canada for the proposed defence highway might figure in such a transaction.

Talk of such a development was heard, however, in the discussion that has sprung up since the Marquess of Lothian, British ambassador, returned from London recently with word that more ships were among his country's urgent needs.

Completion of a highway between the United States and Alaska has long been advocated as a means of freeing American military outposts in Alaska from dependence upon a long sea route for supplies and relieving the navy of convoy duty in this area in event of war.

Anthony J. Dimond, delegate in Congress from Alaska, has estimated that a good road could be constructed to close the existing gap between Hazelton, B.C., and the existing Alaskan highway system for $25,000,000.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The presence of Italian warships in the locality where part of the Royal Navy's Mediterranean fleet attacked them Wednesday remained a puzzle today, but there seemed at least two possible answers.

The Italians might have been seeking to prevent British convoys from reaching Malta or Greece with supplies, or they might have been convoying ships of their own with supplies shipped overland across non belligerent Spain.

It was noted, however, that neither the admiralty statement describing the rout of the Italians, nor the extravagant Italian accounts of the affair, made any mention of merchant ships being in the neighborhood. That, of course, does not necessarily mean they were not there.

It is highly probable that Italy has been attempting or will attempt to get supplies via Spain, for the Italians appear to have stepped into two wars with thoroughly depleted stocks of everything needed to keep at least the home front in operation.

The United States Department of Agriculture issued an illuminating report today, predicting that the Italians faced a winter with a great number of the poorer classes already suffering from malnutrition.

The department credited the British blackade with having cut off sources of more than 80 per cent of Italy's imports and said that Italy's economic structure was severely disorganized.

May Have Six Meatless Days

During this winter, the American authorities said, it would not be surprising if the Italians had to endure five or six meatless days a week.

Mussolini's people appeared in an additionally tough spot because they can import very little agricultural produce from their neighbors. Their ally, Germany, has taken care to collar all the surplus these other European countries can release.

It is interesting also to note the reports of feeble Italian resistance to the Greeks and the report of Italian prisoners desperately trying to give away their money in return for food. They are often described as emaciated and hungry. That may be one of the reasons for their poor showing.

If Hitler has collared all the spare food in Central Europe, Mussolini will have to look elsewhere. He might look to his old friend Spain. His legions helped Franco win the Civil War. Franco has not much food to spare, but if Mussolini can pay the price, undoubtedly it could be shipped into Spain, Because Spain is not subjected to blockade.

Supplies could be unloaded at west coast Spanish ports, moved by rail across Spain and reshipped from eastern Spanish ports.

It is just possible that was why part of the Italian fleet was caught off the west coast of Sardinia, far from the scene of action in and around Greece.

SHELLING UNNECESSARY

Halifax, Nov. 29 (CP).—Lt. H. G. Moss, senior surviving officer of the Jervis Bay, told the Halifax Junior Board of Trade last night that he thought it "unnecessary for the pocket battleship to shell the survivors of the engagement as they were getting ready to abandon the ship". Holding a piece of shrapnel taken from his head, he said: "I hope to return this some day with interest". When describing the heroism of Captain Fogarty Fegen, V.C., Lt. Moss said, "if anyone deserved the Victoria Cross in this war it was he."

Steamer Goes Aground

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 29 —(CP)— The wheatloaded steamer Keymont, owned by the Keystone Transports, Limited, Montreal, went aground during a heavy fog at the western entrance of Cardinal canal last night. It is believed the ship is not in serious difficulty.

The tug Salvage Prince was sent to the scene.

Sergeant Reported Missing

London, Nov. 29 —(CP—Cable)— The Air Ministry today listed as missing Sergeant G. G. S. Hills of Port Arthur, Ont. The announcement said he was lost while serving the Royal Air Force during the evacuation of the British Expeditionary Force from France in late May and early June.

NAZIS HAVE NOT ABANDONED DESIGNS

London, Nov. 29 (CP)—The British Broadcasting Corporation said Thursday the German newspaper Frankfurter Zeitung, claims "that Germany, in spite of a temporary setback to her diplomatic offensive in the Balkans has not abandoned her designs there."

The BBC quoted the newspaper as saying that none of the Balkan states have been independent as long as 100 years, "and although reluctant to lose their independence in becoming part of the new order they would not be giving up anything long-standing.

Third Successive Night Cologne Given 'Going Over'

British Endeavour To Cripple Naval Shipyards by Constant Bombing

London, Nov. 30 (CP).—For the third successive night Royal Air Force bombers centred their attack on Cologne, important industrial centre and inland port in western Germany, last night.

Besides docks and other installations in the inland port, communications were attacked in the Cologne raid, a communique from the air ministry said.

A secondary objective was found in the naval shipyards at Bremen, where German building is in progress in an attempt to replace the heavy war losses of the German navy.

On the invasion coast, Boulogne and Le Havre were bombed, while a number of enemy-occupied airdromes were attacked. No British planes were lost in all these operations.

Churchill Celebrates Birthday Quietly

London, Nov. 30.—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill celebrated his 66th birthday today and received a gift from residents of The Netherlands East Indies of money to purchase seven Spitfires for Britain's defence.

"Business as usual", was the Prime Minister's plan except for a week-end family gathering attended by his seven-weeks old grandson and namesake, Winston, son of Randolph Churchill.

Mr. Churchill also received a cigar box carved with Maori designs from New Zealand's Arawa tribe.

Climate and agriculture! Climate dictates in a general way what may grow in certain areas. Thus in uncultivated regions forests occupy the rainy regions while in the driest areas deserts prevail. Between these two extremes there are steppes or prairies for grazing, wet enough to raise grass but not for forests. Nature also dictates in a general way what man shall grow profitably. Man, however, often employs many devices to help out nature: he irrigates where water is insufficient, screen his crop to retard too rapid ripening, builds fences to protect against high winds, etc. But in general he must grow what is most suited to the climate of his area.

17,267 Tons British Shipping Lost in Week Ending Nov. 29

(By The Canadian Press)

Sinking of three British merchant ships totalling 17,267 tons was reported through neutral sources in the week ending November 29. Another British ship, the 9,430-ton Port Hobart, reported she was being shelled by a German raider 500 miles northeast of Puerto Rico, but her fate was unknown.

Another ship reported sunk during the week was the 1,590-ton Norwegian vessel Princesse Ragnhild. The 5,135-ton Swedish freighter Anten was torpedoed 250 miles west of Ireland but the last report was that she was "still floating".

The British Admiralty does not announce individual sinkings and therefore some do not become known publicly. The Admiralty's latest summary, covering the week ending November 17, announced the sinking of 59,534 tons of British, allied and neutral shipping. This was 747 tons over the weekly average since the war began.

Negro Policeman Expresses Regret For the "Incident"

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP)—Stephen T. Early, President Roosevelt's press secretary, made public today a letter from James M. Sloan, New York negro policeman, expressing regret for the "incident" in New York October 28th, in which Sloan complained he was hurt while trying to prevent Early and reporters from boarding the President's train in Pennsylvania Station.

"The misunderstanding was not your fault nor was it ours," Sloan wrote under date of Nov. 22. He accepted an apology Early offered Oct. 31 and said he wanted to "count the whole thing as an accident that happened void of all malice."

Early said he was making the letter public with Sloan's permission.

The secretary in a formal statement three days after the incident said he was endeavoring to obtain permission for a group of 35 newspapermen and others in the President's party to board the train, but that the police unfortunately had instructions to let nobody pass.

He added that there was a great deal of jostling and shoving in the crowd and he was "deeply sorry that a policeman appears to have been hurt" while carrying out instructions. He said he "did not attack or kick any officer."

First Military Ski School Prepares to Open at Ottawa

Ottawa, Nov. 30 —(AP)— As the first heavy fall of snow packs down on the ski trails of the Gatineau hills, Canada's first military ski school is being organized in Ottawa.

Skilled users of the hickory blades from units in all parts of Canada are assembling at Lansdowne Park for training as ski instructors, starting Monday.

They will learn how skiing fits in with military operations and on completion of their training will return to their units to teach others how to use the 6,000 pairs of skis ordered for the army by the Department of National Defence.

The syllabus for the school includes both theoretical and practical instructions, field work and lectures. Instruition in the case of equipment also will be given.

Between lectures the future ski professors of the Canadian Army will have ample chance to test the famed ski trails around the nation's capital.

Each unit represented at the school is sending one officer and one noncommissioned officer. Established camps and training centres are also represented.

Infantry units sending men for instruction are the Grey and Simcoe Foresters of Midland, Ont.; the Irish Regiment of Canada, Toronto; The Canadian Grenadier Guards, Toronto; Victoria Rifles, Montreal; Sherbrooke, (Que.), Fusiliers; North Nova Scotia Highlanders; Algonquin Regiment; Picton, (Ont.) Highlanders and Edmonton Fusiliers.

Among other establishments sending men is the Engineer and Signal Training centres in Military District No. 3 (Kingston).

FATAL SHOOTING OF MEXICAN ARMY MAJOR PROBED

Police Believe Affray Part of Organized Movement to Arouse Anti-American Feeling

OFFICIALS STONED

Statute of George Washington Also Stoned but Police Disperse Crowds

Mexico City, Nov. 30.—(AP)—The fatal shooting of a Mexican army major and two stoning incidents were reported today under the scrutiny of police who sought to determine whether they were part of an organized movement to rouse anti-American feeling on the eve of the inauguration of President-elect Manual Avila Camacho.

Major Guillermo Garcia Gallegos was slain last night as he attempted to enter Communist Party offices where police said a "subversive meeting was being held". Police arrested 75 persons and seized three rifles, 15 pistols, a bomb and a quantity of cartridges. They did not explain what "subversive" activities were suspected.

Creates Sensation

The incident created a sensation in the capital, since Communist headquarters is near the National Palace. Avila Camacho declared recently Communists would have no part in his administration.

Earlier last night, a crowd assembled in downtown Mexico City and stoned a statute of George Washington. Police dispersed the crowd without making any arrests.

The night before, a group of disgruntled followers of Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, defeated presidential candidate, gathered at the United States Embassy shortly after Vice-President-elect Henry A. Wallace arrived and stoned the building and Wallace's car.

Almazan later disavowed the demonstration.

For the most part, however, a fiesta-like atmosphere prevailed in Mexico City as Mexico prepared for tomorrow's inauguration of her 46th President.

Envoys of 27 countries, headed by Wallace, were on hand for the ceremonies, and a round of entertainment was arranged for them, including a festival in the National Stadium.

Italian Plans Frustrated By British Naval Victory

Experts Believe Enemy Trying to Establish New Lines of Communication With North Africa

BRITISH NOW ON OFFENSIVE

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Nov. 30 (C.P. Cable)—The offensive staged by the Mediterranean fleet nipped in the bud an attempt by the Italians to establish new lines of communication with their forces in North Africa, British naval experts suggested Friday.

These experts suggested that the Italian force that was routed off Sardinia on Wednesday, with damage to six of the enemy warships including a battleship, was attempting to patrol a new line of communication, perhaps using French territorial waters off Tunisia to reach Libya where Marshal Graziani's offensive against Egypt has been stalled for a long time and apparently needs reinforcements and supplies.

Invention of Boy Closely Studied

Nelson, B.C., Nov. 30 (CP)— A new type of directional aerial bomb orginated by a 14-year-old Nelson boy, Allan Ramsden, is being closely studied by the inventions board at Ottawa.

Young Ramsden conceived the idea of a bomb which through a photo-electric cell, might be self-directed by light action when dropped on a target from a bombing plane.

A few days ago the young inventor received a letter from O. J. Waters, private Secretary to Hon. J. L. Ralston, Minister of Defence, stating his idea had been placed before the inventions board. Friday another letter came—from S. J. Cook, Secretary of the board —advising young Ramsden that his invention was under consideration.

Sheean said he thought Russia would not enter the war of her own will but sooner or later would be attacked by Germany and then she likely would put up a fight.

CHINESE PUPPET GOV'T SIGNS PEACE PACT WITH TOKYO

Oriental Splendor and Ceremony Seen in Administrative Hall at Nanking

PACT OUTLINED

Shanghai, Nov. 30 (AP). — With Oriental ceremony, Nanking's Japanese-created government signed a pact for peace today with Japan while Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's Chungking forces were reported to be fighting determinedly in provinces purportedly covered by the new Nanking-Tokyo treaty.

Thus, in the great Nanking administrative hall which the military leader Chiang had built within the shadow of Purple Mountain where lies the body of Sun Yat-Sen, the founder of the Chinese republic, Chiang's Japanese foes recognized the regime of his political rival, Wang Ching-Wei, as China's "national government".

The pact, signed by Wang and Japanese Ambassador Gen. Nobuyuki Abe, proclaimed an end to the bloody, undeclared war which started July 7, 1937, with a volley of shots across Marco Polo bridge near Peiping.

Toiling Rescue Crews Brave Treacherous Rock Falls to Reach Entombed Men

28 IN PARTY

Cadiz, O., Nov. 30—(AP)—Toiling rescue crews braved treacherous rock falls and deadly gas today in a grim race to reach at least 28 miners entombed by a blast two miles from the entrance to one of Ohio's largest coal pits.

M. Speicher, mine personnel director, listed 28 missing, including his brother, Pete and said "four more names may be added" to the total.

"It's anybody's guess when we can get to them," said F. R. Sinclair, Superintendent of the Ohio and Pennsylvania Company's Nelms mine northeast of here in a remote and hilly bituminous field.

As the hours passed, officials indicated they held little hope of finding the men alive in the bitter cold 466 feet underground.

CAPITAL IMPROVES DEFENCE AGAINST NIGHT ATTACKS

Blenheim Bombers Believed Refitted as Fighters and Equipped With "Ear" Detector

LONDON IS CENTRE

Nazi Losses Over and Around Britain Said to be 3,000 Since the War Started

London, Nov. 30 (CP).—The Nazi air force made one of its strongest drives in recent weeks to bomb London today, but only a few of the hundred or more planes which roared toward the capital got past the outer ground defences and the Royal Air Force.

There were two daylight raids by mid-afternoon, following a night attack in which the Germans used upwards of 300 bombers against London and the home counties, while hundreds of others struck at the midlands and the Merseyside.

The first of the daylight raiders came over the Thames estuary breaking up the Nazi formations and forcing most of the planes back.

Some bombs were dropped in a London residential district.

One hit a building and sent a small tower crashing on a taxicab in a main shopping street. Pedestrians dashed to cover.

German planes also attacked a convoy flying barrage balloons. Persons on shore heard anti-aircraft fire from the ships and bomb explosions and saw high columns of water.

Towns in Southern England suffered heavily last night, with six killed in one town, several injured and much property damage.

In London mothers and babies escaped when the maternity ward of a London hospital was hit. There were more than 30 persons in the ward but only slight injuries were reported although beds were flung on them and debris almost buried them.

(Informed German sources said about 400 tons of explosives and 36 tons of incendiaries were dropped on London during the night, in a "large scale attack." Secondary raids were said to have been directed against Birmingham, Liverpool and Plymouth, while Italian fliers attacked Ipswich.)

For the second night, a mysterious, bluish-white beam of light stabbed the darkness over London, arousing speculation that it might be a "mystery weapon."

Reports were current, too, that Blenheim bombers re-fitted as fighters and equipped with an "ear" for detecting hostile planes were having increased success intercepting night raiders. This week's bag of German planes was said unofficially to have boosted Nazi losses over and around Britain to 3,000 since the war started.

Many Fires Started

"Many fires" were started in the London area by last night's bombing, but all were "under control" by early morning, the Air and Home Security Ministries said in a joint communique.

Motorship Believed Responsible for Raids in Pacific

Sydney, Australia, Nov. 30 (CP)—Australian naval authorities said today the enemy raider reported to have sunk 87,000 tons of shipping in the South Pacific and Indian Oceans is a 6,000-ton motorship armed with torpedo tubes and four four-inch guns.

Survivors of two of the raider's victims, the merchantmen port of Brisbane and Maimoa, described the raider as having a raked stem, a cruiser stern and squat funnels and searchlights, leading them to believe it was a modern motorship.

Premier Antonescu Struggling to Keep Control of Country

18-Year-Old King Michael Reported to Be on Border Ready To Flee Into Yugoslavia

Bucharest, Nov. 30 (AP)—The Iron Guard paraded the gold coffin of its "martyred captain", Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, through the streets of Bucharest today in a funeral procession led by Green-Shirted Premier Ion Antonescu and Vice-Premier Horia Sima.

The body of Codreanu, the Guards' founder, whose execution in 1938 now is being revenged by the Guards in a nationwide blood purge, was taken five miles through packed streets to the Iron Guard headquarters on the city's outskirts for burial.

There were no new reports of violence in the strife-torn kingdom.

Border dispatches earlier had indicated the riotous Iron Guards' long-awaited day of 'total revenge' might be at hand with this second anniversary of Codreanu's slaying with 13 comrades in Jilava Prison.

German and Rumanian soldiers with bayonets fixed were among the thousands marching in a vast pageant of mourning.

King Michael was represented only by an army officer, but Hitler sent two high Nazis and Mussolini sent two Fascist dignitaries.

(Michael was reported in border dispatches to have fled Bucharest as a result of the disorder.)

There were no Britons or Americans among the diplomatic corps attending.

GREEKS REPORT NEW GAINS IN DRIVE TO NORTH

Some Italian Forces Are Believéd Cut Off at Porto Edda

MORE AIR ACTIVITY

Athens, Nov. 30.— (AP)— The Greek High Command reported new gains today in the drive north of Konispolis, toward Porto Edda, Albania, where some Italian forces were believed cut off from retreat by Greek operations farther north around the embattled Fascist base at Argirocastro.

The High Command said the advances put Greek troops in command of new positions "at various parts of the front"—especially north of Konispolis.

Two Italian cannon, large numbers of automatic guns and many prisoners were reported taken.

The High Command's communique made no specific mention of the operations at Argirocastro (which the Italians said still was held by their troops, or north of Pogradetz at the opposite end of the battlefront (where Italian reports said their reinforced troops were counterattacking.)

The communique told of heightened air activity on both sides of the front.

Greek planes were said to have made reconnaissance flights over the Italian lines.

The communique said Italian fliers bombed Greek front line troops and attacked villages in Epirus, towns on the western coast of the Peloponnese peninsula at the south of Greece, The Ionian Sea Islands of Levkas and Cephalonia, and the City of Xanthe in Macedonia almost as far east as Thrace.

Canadian Athlete Dies in Vancouver

Vancouver, Nov. 30 (CP)—Howie McPhee, 24 year old Vancouver sprinter and representative for Canada at the Olympic Games in Berlin in 1936, died at his mother's home here last night following a relapse from a recent ailment.

McPhee collapsed at Grand Forks, B.C., November 12, a few hours after playing an English rugby game.

McPhee was physical instructor at the Grand Forks High School where he had been a teacher since last September and was also disciplinarian for an army unit at Grand Forks.

He graduated from University of British Columbia in 1936 but continued studies there until last summer.

Born in Sydney, N.S., McPhee came to Vancouver with his parents when less than a year old and adopted this city as his home.

He was best known as a sprinter and was considered one of the fleetest ever to represent Canada in international sport. Some believed him the equal of the great Percy Williams.

He excelled in the 100 yards and 110 meters and once equalled the world record for the latter distance during a sport meeting in Vancouver.

McPhee was the holder of two Canadian records and was one of the few world athletes who ran the 100 in 9 3-5 seconds.

While playing English rugby against Stanford in California he was described by a California sports writer "as the fastest rugby player in the world."

MINOR FIRES CAUSE TWO ALARMS

Two alarms were answered by the Belleville Fire Department since Friday morning, both for minor blazes with no appreciable damage amounting in either case however. The first was for a chimney fire at 41 Great St. James Street at the noon hour Friday and the second early Saturday morning to Bleecker Ave., where the cushions of a Moira Taxi were smouldering. Ash from a cigarette was believed to have been the cause for the fire.

Bishop of Ontario Wins First Prize For Best Lake Trout

The Right Rev. John Lyons, Lord Bishop of Ontario, took first place in the lake trout division of the Lucky Strike competition, inaugurated in Peterborough, according to results released yesterday.

Bishop Lyons' catch, taken in Papineau Lake north of Bancroft, weighed 25 pounds and measured 27 inches in length and 22 inches in girth.

An American, Lee Stachler, Danville, O., took first place in the maskinonge division with a 27-pound beauty caught in Rice Lake.

Another American, Dr. A. R. Livermore captured honors in the small-mouthed black-bass class with a six-pounder. Brown trout honors were taken by Adam Sands, Peterborough; large mouth bass by Mrs. W. S. Robertson, Peterborough have arrived in unoccupied zone Peterborough.

The competition covered the district running north from Lake Ontario to Orillia and from Lake Simcoe east to Madoc.

New War Industry For Belleville Will Be Operating Soon

About 100 Persons Will be Employed by Deacon Shirt Company in New Plant

MAKE FLYING SUITS

The whirling wheels of a new war industry will, in the immediate future, add to the rising tempo of this city's efforts towards the Dominion's increasing war production.

The empire's airmen, the Galahads of the Clouds over an embattled Britain, will soon be garbed in the latest model flying suit manufactured in Belleville by the Deacon Shirt Company.

A substantial order for the suits is already in the hands of the management of the local manufacturers and preparations for production are being rushed. The new industry, which will be a subsidiary to the commercial business of the firm, will be housed in the Graham Building, Front Street, where a number of special machines, which require forty hands to operate are now being installed. Employees will work two shifts a day.

Result of Collaboration

Design of the new flying suit is a result of close collaboration between experts of the Deacon Shirt Company and those of the Department of National Defence. It is a new development in this part of the uniform of the flying services, and is said to be a distinct improvement over models now in use and which hitherto were manufactured in England.

The outer garment of the winter two-suit flying combination is made of a strongly woven fabric which contains 40 per cent linen yet which has the property of ventilation. The inner suit is comprised of windproof fabric and an inner lining of rayon, which permits easy donning. Between these layers is a thick padding of Kapok. This material not only dispels cold but has the property of retaining warmth, something indispensable to the flyer in cold weather. Another feature of this part of the suit is that in the event the wearer becomes submerged in water, it will assist in taking him to the surface and to remain afloat for an indefinite period of time.

The outer covering of this inner suit is made of special windproof cloth. A detachable fur collar is part of the suit and is attached to the garment by zipper.

Produce War Orders Alone

The new manufacturing subsidiary of the Deacon Shirt Company will be utilized exclusively for the production of war orders. It will provide employment for some hundreds of people and will assist Belleville in taking its place among the communitions of the country which are contributing through their facilities to the production of vital war necessities for the Empire.

Pre-Christmas Shopping Tour Arranged by Local Merchants Much Appreciated by Public

Potential Shoppers View With Interest the Beautiful Merchandise Displayed

GIFTS AWARDED

The assurance of the merriest Christmas of all, the glowing hearth, stockings hung in a row from the mantel awaiting the arrival of Santa Claus were visualized by thousands of potential shoppers in Belleville last night when a pre-Christmas shopping night tour of the city's business section developed into a panoramic kaliedoscope.

Enhanced with the brilliance of the colored street lights and gaily decorated shop windows, potential purchasers from near and far eagerly wended their way from store to store gazing with awe upon the splendid merchandise that was on display. The majority of stores along the main streets welcomed the non-purchasing public, while the patient clerks met with grace and satisfaction the questions of the public regarding the merchandise displayed.

Adding to the season's atmosphere to the occasion the Salvation Army Band paraded Front St. playing Christmas carols and music, while in the music stores other seasonal melodies were heard to add to the success of the venture. A novel note was struck in the Georgia Salon, however, when music was provided by an old fashioned music box finished in walnut with a richly inlaid cover of blonde wood. The history of the music box dates back to the reign of Henry VIII. and was at one time in the possession of Queen Victoria before coming to Canada.

Suggestions Appreciated

Suggestions for Christmas purchases were appreciated by thousands of eager and potential customers, who shopped with intense and adept interest as all stores open welcomed the large throngs of appreciative citizens in the latest feature of modern business.

Keen was the interest of the public in seeking of the names placed on gift cards, as hundreds of free gifts were afforded the public as a gesture of the merchants. All that was necessary to claim a valuable gift was to find one's name upon a printed card in any of the stores open and upon doing so produce their registration card and claim the gift gratis.

Regardless as to the inclement weather the throngs that congregated in the downtown area of Front Street last night not only proved the venture a success, but assured the merchants of a boom in Christmas trade due primarily to the splendid class of merchandise as displayed in the stores of Belleville.

OBITUARY

LATE MRS. MARY FENWICK

Friday afternoon, Nov. 29th, the funeral of Mrs. Mary Fenwick, widow of Dr. T. M. Fenwick, took place from the family residence, 148 Victoria Avenue. The service in the home was conducted by the Rev. W. J. Walker, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, assisted by the Rev. Dr. James Semple, minister of Bridge Street United Church.

Interment was made in Belleville cemetery; the service at the graveside was conducted by the Rev. W. J. Walker.

The bearers were Messrs. Harry C. Thompson, William Leslie, John Carr, Hugh Ross, John W. Cook and David T. Martin.

MRS. ELEANOR C. MARTIN
(Thurlow Township)

The funeral of Mrs. Eleanor Christina (Whyte) Martin, widow of William Albert Martin, took place from her residence in the 5th concession of Thurlow Township, to St. Andrew's United Church at Gilead where an impressive service was conducted by the Rev. W. J. Davis. Many friends were present.

Interment was made in St. Andrew's Cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Edward Treverton, Charles Huffman, Lester Wyatt, Ernest Huffman, Ernest Leavens and Fred Yorke.

MRS. SUSIE THOMPSON
(Formerly of Belleville)

Mrs. Susie Thompson, widow of Charles Thompson, died at Ebenezer, N.Y., on Thursday, Nov. 28th.

The late Mrs. Thompson and her late husband lived here some years ago and old friends in this city will regret to learn of her death. Her husband died in Buffalo, N.Y., on April 27th., 1928, and the funeral took place here from Christ Church under Masonic auspices on May 1st.

The funeral of Mrs. Thompson will take place from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street; the announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

'Ted' Follwell Called to Bar

Well Known Belleville Boy Receives Formal Recognition as a Barrister

Realization of a youthful ambition came to Edward E. Follwell popular young lawyer of this city last week, when he was called to the Bar at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, and received formal recognition as a barrister and solicitor. "Ted" as he is familiarly known in legal and other circles, is associated with the Belleville law firm of Cameron and Sprague.

A true native son, Ted was born here some twenty or more years ago and with the exception of a few years spent in the employ of the Canadian National Railway at Fort Erie, and the Department of Northern Development at Madoc, has resided in Belleville all his life.

Edward E. Follwell, young Belleville lawyer associated with Cameron and Sprague, who was recently called to the bar at Osgoode Hall.

He received his early education at the old Grier Street Public School, and later graduated from the Belleville Collegiate Institute. Following his scholastic days he emerged from the Ontario Business College with a business and stenographic diploma tucked beneath his arm. Developing an expert knowledge of shorthand, Ted utilized this training in a court reportorial capacity and has "sat in" on many important cases and hearings during the past six years.

Associated With Cameron and Sprague

But the hum-drum routine of business did not appeal to him and the mysteries of the legal profession beckoned. From early boyhood he had cherished a secret ambition to become a lawyer, one that was realized last week. Diligent application to his studies marked Ted as the basis of a promising young legal light, and he became articled with Lieut. Colonel B. C. Donnan, Crown Attorney for Hastings County. Since early summer, he has been associated with Cameron and Sprague, having graduated from Osgoode Hall in May of this year.

Ted is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Follwell, and is a member of a family of six boys and one girl, all well-known in this city. He is a brother of the starry Argonaut kicking back Jimmy Follwell O.A.C. graduate now attending Toronto University, and a former B.C.I. grid ace. Other brothers include, Frank, St. Charles Supply Company, Belleville; Percy, Post Office Staff, Belleville; Harry, Detroit and Bill of Fort Erie. His sister is Mrs. A. S. Duffield of this city.

Member Argyll Regiment

Ted took time out from his studies and other activities to become associated with the militia regiments of the district. He served for six years, two of them as a Sergeant with the Argyll Light Infantry Regiment here. Later he transferred to the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment where he acted as Sergeant for two years and a Second-Lieutenant for the same period. He is still associated with the Second Battalion of the latter regiment.

A pleasing personality and an amiable disposition have earned for Ted a well-deserved popularity, one that will stand him in good stead in his profession. He is being warmly welcomed to legal circles by his confreres in the city.

RURAL HIGHWAYS QUITE SLIPPERY

No Drifts but Snow Has Been Packed Quite Hard by Traffic Wheels

Rural roads and highways are in an exceptionally slippery condition as the result of Friday's storm according to farmers attending market on Saturday morning. No drifts were in evidence as the result of the snow storm, but the snow has been packed by traffic wheels and motorists must exercise the greatest care in negotiating the highways. The highway department had not at that time sanded the hills, it was stated.

On Friday afternoon driving conditions in the city proved a considerable inconvenience to motorists as their automobiles slithered about the streets, despite the continuous efforts of the city sanding crew who were out all day spreading sand on the slopes and sidewalks. With last night's frost, however, conditions were somewhat alleviated and today the motorists are able to drive with a fair degree of safety.

There has been a raid on city garages for automobile chains since the arrival of snow during the mid-week and by Thursday evening not a tire chain was to be had at any price in the city. Hurry up orders for more chains were placed by local garages in an attempt to keep up with the demand but by Friday noon again the supply was depleted, with anxious motorists still making inquiries.

Kinsmen Bid Goodbye by Club Members

Honouring one of their most valued and esteemed members the Belleville Kinsmen Club and associated friends met at a social function last evening to present Kinsmen Max Waters with a nest of tables. The occasion marked the event of Mr. Waters' leaving Belleville, as he is being transferred to Simcoe by his employers. "Kin Max", as he is known to his associates, was the most capable chairman of the Kinsmen's eye clinic. The presentation was made by C. P. Miller as a gesture on the part of the club in appreciation of Mr. Waters' untiring effort of service to the community. After accepting the gift "Kin Max" assured his hosts that his stay in Belleville would linger long as the goodwill of the community is one of his cherished memories. President Jeff Marvell added his good wishes on behalf of the club in general.

Municipal Candidates Air Electoral Platforms at Slimly-Attended Meeting

Election Gathering Attracts Handful of Ratepayers—Utilities Candidates Stage Lively Debate—Ex-Alderman B. Jennings Enlivens Proceedings

NEARLY CALLED OFF

Despite the fact that only a comparatively few of the faithful turned out last night to hear the various candidates for municipal office air their respective platforms, there was some spirited action especially on the part of Commissioner Clifford Baragar and ex-Mayor George A. Reid, and Mayor Glencoe Thompson and ex-Alderman Charles Hyde.

There were exactly twenty-four people by actual count a few minutes after eight o'clock when Chairman W. A. Woodley called the meeting to order. In fact the attendance at that time was so small that the chairman requested a vote of the audience as to whether a meeting should be held or not. The majority assented and the curtain went up. Later, however, as the affair progressed, spectators trickled in one by one and the City Hall auditorium was sparsely sprinkled by the time the aldermen arose to speak.

Practically all of the verbal action took place when the candidates for the public utilities commissionership spoke. Commissioner Baragar and ex-Mayor Reid indulged in a spirited debate that drew several remarks from the audience. Both speakers addressed the audience twice and there was a marked note of excitement, the first show of enthusiasm since the nominations, during their addresses.

Mayor Thompson, the first speaker, paid a distinct tribute to his 1940 colleagues stating they composed the best council ever to represent the city of Belleville. Previous bodies, he said, had reduced taxation to a certain extent but the 1940 body had brought the rate down 4 mills. He stated it had been the custom of the ratepayers to return a mayor who had given good service, for a second term and he asked the ratepayers not to change that policy.

He warned the people not to pay any attention to seekers-for-office who promise to reduce the taxes six or seven mills. "Besides," he added, "it is not good policy to change horses in the middle of a stream."

In soliciting the support of the audience, His Worship said, "I want to be your mayor again and am willing to do anything for the people and the city of Belleville. Both are very dear to me."

Every one of the city departments will save money next year, the mayor predicted, "and these savings will help reduce the taxes of the city. Whatever council is elected will start with a clean sheet, but if I am included I cannot promise to reduce the tax-rate because the country is at war and we do not know at what time we will be called upon to give assistance to the Empire and the boys at the front," he said.

Referring to relief costs, the mayor stated that the city had noted a decrease of $13,274.48 for the first ten months of the year over the corresponding period of 1939. The number of individuals on relief last year was 436. This year they have numbered 179. Actual costs during the ten-months period of 1939 amounted to $46,662.94 while those of the first ten months of this year were $33,388.46.

Ex-Alderman C. L. Hyde.

"I have no personal feelings against the mayor," ex-Alderman Charles Hyde said in his opening remarks in which he drew attention to his years as a municipal servant. "If I am elected," he added, "I promise active loyal service to the residents of this city."

He charged the mayor and council with "having no policy—all they talk about is their love for each other. What is needed is action and we are going to get it. This is no time for sleeping sickness."

The ex-alderman advocated a reduction of council to nine or ten men as this number can do business more efficiently with more despatch and less confusion. He charged that a petition of 500 names to this effect was placed before the council and ignored. The gas business, he said, should be left where it is as it could not be under better management "but a little revision would not hurt". The gas works must be operated for industry and more industries brought in to use the gas. "This is the solution," he remarked.

Mr. Hyde said a 2½ year old petition containing 125 names of prominent ratepayers asking that the gas plant be turned back to the city had been sent to the council. "What happened to it? There must be some reason we have heard nothing of it."

The formation of an Industrial committee within the council to assist other bodies, was also advocated by Mr. Hyde. "The council is primarily responsible for the bringing of industries to the city," he said. He envisioned a Canada of 20 million people within the next five years. "We here," he said, "are in the centre of one of the greatest air centres in the world, and we must assist in providing work and wages for the influx of people which will come to Canada after the war."

"What we need is a live council, a spirited organization with more pep and action! Improvements on the water-front and in Memorial Park would be done," he said.

"My objective is to reduce the tax-rate to 35 mills. This can be achieved with the co-operation of a good council. Of that I am positive," Mr. Hyde declared.

Former reductions in tax rates were no credit to previous councils, he said. "The last council spent more than any previous one. Some will say that tax reduction can't be done. There is no such word as can't—it can, must and will be done."

He promised a cordial reception to delegations to the office should he be returned as mayor, "but I promise nothing else." He regretted that a training camp for the militia had been located in Peterboro'. "In all fairness to the boys of Hastings and Prince Edward we should have one in the fair grounds here." In closing, Mr. Hyde stated he would "give the best in me, and my unselfish devotion to duty."

Mayor's Rebuttal

In rebuttal, Mayor Thompson stated that he was disappointed in Mr. Hyde's platform. "When a man sits in council and helps to pay for an industrial commission, then comes out to say he will form one, it is ridiculous. If he says that this council did not help to reduce taxes and expenses, it is not fair. This council is one of the best the city ever had."

The mayor produced the much discussed petition regarding the gas plant and stated that it contained 175 names and was deposited in the council chamber in April, 1940 "which makes it legal for this council to handle."

Commissioner Clifford Baragar

As Commissioner Baragar arose to speak, ex-Alderman Burton Jennings presented a series of questions to the chair demanding that they be read and answered by the commissioner.

Commissioner Baragar did not answer the questions and Mr. Jennings demanded that they be published. Mr. Baragar charged the ex-alderman with not being able to answer intelligent questions during his tenure as an alderman.

Turning from the questions the speaker, in relating his stewardship of the various utilities, stated that the Hydro Department business had increased by $1,775 over that of last year, and had noted a profit increase despite decreased rates. Equipment which cost $15,000 had saved the ratepayers $12,000 and had proved a wise investment for Belleville. September had seen the highest peak and the commission had even thought of an overload in December. A transformer had replaced another one. It had twice the capacity and had cost $10,985.

Referring to the water works, the speaker stated that a profit of $18,000 had been made in 1938 and this had increased to $21,000 in 1939. The Commission had returned to the city its water rates amounting to $10,000 yearly. An unusual thing had happened the first time in Belleville, he said, and that was that a surplus revenue had been returned to the ratepayers. This policy was better, he said, than reducing the rates and later increasing them.

The Commission had estimated a five thousand dollar loss in the Gas Plant to the City Council, he stated, but that body criticized the Commission because it thought "we might actually lose that amount. I am glad to report," he added, "that we showed a surplus of $409 at the end of last month."

Speaking of the cost of operations, Commissioner Baragar said that of every $100 spent for administrative purposes, $53 was charged to the electrical department; $36 to the Water Dept. and $11 to the Gas Plant. The basis of distribution is computed on the number of consumers.

Responsibility for the expense of replacing meters has been partly the condition of the gas mains, the condition of which was pointed out to the council. The commission was told that their policy was to operate the gas plant to save expenses.

"It was never the suggestion of the commission," the speaker said, "to close the gas plant, although we may be forced to recommend it at some time."

"No merchants were dissatisfied with the co-operation received from the commission," Commissioner Baragar stated. Grievances had been aired and delegations interviewed and as a result the commission again sponsored a range campaign, knowing it would reflect against the gas department. "We have done our best to clear up the situation," he said, displaying a newspaper advertisement showing advertising co-operation between merchants and the commission.

"My policy has been economy as far as good service will allow, and my policy in the future will be the same. In closing I repeat we should all be thankful for democracy and I urge you all to get out and vote on Monday."

Ex-Alderman Jennings was given permission to speak at this point. "The questions I handed in were never published," he said. "I did not pop in with them, as Mr. Baragar stated; they are pertinent and were given to me by leading taxpayers." He charged the manager of the commission told the chairman not to answer the questions. "That is nothing but dictatorship," he said.

Ex-Mayor George A. Reid

Declaring it was his policy never to retract a statement once made, Ex-Mayor George A. Reid charged Commissioner Baragar with a change of face regarding the closing of the hydro shop. "He says he is not in favor of closing the shop but of closer co-operation with the merchants. Yet in April he made a motion to close the store. Why this change of mind? I believe he is converted," he said.

Belleville has the cheapest hydro rates of any city in the province or the Dominion, the speaker told his audience. "My friend has only been in office for a year. I was in there for eight years. I will not say I will reduce the rates next year but I will say I will turn back amounts of money that will help reduce the tax-rate. The province controls the power that comes into the city while the profits of the Hydro Shop are handed back to the province. I wonder why I did not think of this long ago."

"I will move at the first session that all profits of the Hydro Shop be handed back to the city to help reduce the taxes. This will mean at least $4,000 a year. If possible I will try and get back the profits of the last ten years. I will agitate for a financial statement of the front shop and if elected will give the public a detailed statement and have an immediate inventory taken of everything so you will know just where the shop stands."

Referring to the water rebate, Ex-Mayor Reid said he could not see why it was not given before. "They say they did not know how long the profit would last. That is all nonsense. I gave you a twelve-months' rebate."

"The gas works won't be closed as long as I am your commissioner," he continued. "In 1937-8 we had a profit of $12,109.31 over operating expenses. Last year and the year before the commission had a total of $2,000, a decrease of $10,000."

"They talk about relining the retorts," the speaker went on; "if the profits had been kept at the same level, the commission would not have had to ask the council for $8,000. When they tell you they can't sell gas, that is all nonsense—and if the mains are as bad as they say they are, the City of Belleville would have been blown into the bay years ago. The reason is, they are not giving you service, and if I am elected, there will be a service man to service you and you will get service."

"I wonder if the commission knows there is a war on. Of course there is overloading. Why is there daylight saving time? So that the government can conserve power for industries who are making war materials. Yet Mr. Baragar would have us overload so we will have to close the gas plant." He predicted that Canada might have to go back to gas and the woodstove before the war is over. "We must work together to keep the old flag flying—and There'll always be an England", he concluded.

In rebuttal Commissioner Baragar charged his opponent with having the same old platform as he had when the city bought debentures. "He didn't tell you that the overdraft when he was Mayor was $409,000. He has told you he will turn the profits of the Hydro shop back to you. Why didn't he do it during the eight years he sat as a commissioner?"

"I repeat, that as long as I represent you, I will keep the gas plant open until the time comes when it is costing money. When that time comes we will throw up both hands to get rid of it."

In a brief reply ex-Mayor Reid, stated that the city had received enough money from the Lake Shore Gas Company to pay off the city's debts during his tenure as Mayor. The rest went into debentures. "The city was congratulated on doing a fine stroke of business," he said.

H. J. Allin

As Chairman of Light, Alderman Jack Allin stated his department was well within the estimate of $10,500 set the department having spent to date $8,262.40. Speaking on the reduction of council, Mr. Allin stated that he voted for the reduction in the School Board but if he had it to do over again he would oppose the move because he said, "small councils border on dictatorship and that is something we are fighting against at the present time." The Alderman stated he was interested in the widening of the North Front Street overhead bridge and that the city had been promised by the Transport Board, that after the war was over the question would be given every consideration. The Alderman stated that the council should not be censured for not building a sidewalk on the west side of North Front Street from the Bridge to King George School as the Municipal Board had refused the request on several occasions. Ald. Allin was also in favor of reopening the room at Queen Mary School so that children living in Murney Ward did not have to go King George School.

Harold J. Armstrong

Alderman Armstrong endorsed the business transacted by the council of this year and gave an account of his stewardship as regards Regional Planning stating that the raceway had been filled in, a temporary roadway had been built, the sluiceway filled and accommodation made for nearly 300 cars. He thought the council should try to get an entrance into the back by way of Bridge Street as this would be advantageous to the merchants and relieve the congestion of traffic on Front Street.

E. O. Butler

"The report prepared by me after a year as Chairman of Relief in 1939 has been adopted by the Council of this year," said Alderman Butler and the recommendations made have been for a betterment in the handling of relief in this city. He stated as Chairman of Market and City Property this year his department had given all aid requested to the Belleville Beaches and he believed the Beaches should be assisted. Speaking on the question of turning the administration of the Gas and Waterworks back to the city, Ald. Butler stated it was not the wish of the council that this should be done unless the people voted to have it done. "If the departments are turned back to the city for administration they will be administered to the best of our ability," said Ald. Butler in asking for support at the polls on Monday.

H. J. Clarke

Ald. Clarke reviewed the work of his department that of Special Property, the speaker stating that over $10,000 worth of City Property had been sold while the estimates showed the Committee might raise $3,500 in the year. He explained that every sale carried a contract for the purchaser to erect a house in keeping with the houses in the locality in which the lot was located and in this way the city would derive revenue in the form of taxes. He stated that in the property sold this year and when the houses are erected the assessment in the city will be raised nearly $80,000. Ald. Clarke also gave a review of the work of the Chairman of Finance, a department the Mayor took over after Ald. Haig had left for war duties. He explained to the audience the difference between Serial and Sinking Fund debentures and showed that the net gross debt of the city was $1,203,000 but the city owned schools to the value of one million, waterworks of $648,504, Hydro $368,000 equity in the Ontario Hydro $153,000, Gas Works $190,000, sidewalks and improved roads which showed the city in a very enviable financial position and was so complimented by the independent auditor. "Incidentally the City Auditor was praised at the time of the outside audit for the fine record presented", said Ald. Clarke. He told his audience that the essential services of the city had not been neglected and that the taxes had been reduced by four mills but this was due to the retirement of a large amount of debentures and that the tax rate would be further reduced only when more debentures were retired. In 1941 an amount of $375,000 will be retired. He also showed that building in Belleville had steadily increased and this year the building permits amounted to $160,000

William Harvey

Alderman William Harvey thanked all for the support given him and reviewed the activities of the Tourist Camp for the past year stating that a fair profit was made and every courtesy extended to the tourist, who stopped in the city. He thanked the Horticultural Society for the interest taken in the Camp and other spots in the city and promised if elected that Memorial Park would be beautified and kept in a splendid state of repair.

A. M. Kennedy

Reviewing the Fire Department as Chairman of Fire, Ald. Kennedy stated the city was visited by only one bad fire in the year and in which two firemen were injured. He told his audience that a new fire truck had been purchased which will carry 1,700 feet of hose, the two fire halls had been amalgamated and that the one hall had been sold and revenue for the city was being derived at the present time. He stated that the firemen were taking First Aid and ladder drill, something they were unable to do when the two halls were separated. He showed that the expenses of the department in 1939 for ten months and one half were $27,231.80 while for this year the expenses were $25,301.71 a saving of over $1,000.

R. W. Pringle

Alderman Robert Pringle after thanking the people for their support stated that Belleville had been given a sound administration during the past year and asked for support for the ensuing year. He stated he did not have a department to manage and was therefore not in the red. He believed the council had taken every advantage to keep the tax rate down and this could only by accomplished by careful handling of funds entrusted to their care.

Harry W. Rollins

Ald. Rollins as chairman of Public Works, gave a comprehensive statement of the activities of his department for the year stating that the department would finish well within the estimates set at the beginning of the year and probably a surplus would be shown. He believed the council had practiced economy at every opportunity. He explained the two by-laws that were down for decision voicing his own opinion that he was not in favor of the two year term for Aldermen and Mayor and on the other by-law stating that the council was willing to abide by the decision of the people. He clearly stated that the Council had nothing to do with the putting of the question respecting the transfer of administration of the two departments from the Public Utilities to the Corporation but was only interpreting the wishes of some of the ratepayers by having the question submitted. A general survey of the work done by the Public Works Department was handed to the press and certain sections of the report are herewith given.

"In the 1940 estimates of the city of Belleville the Public Works Department was granted an appropriation of $30,000 and the expenditures up to Nov. 20 amount to $26,128, leaving a balance of $3,872 to carry on until Dec. 31. I shall endeavor to show you in the following statements just where these expenditures were made and for what purposes the work was undertaken.

"In addition to the routine duties of this department in carrying out construction and maintenance work on the city roadways, sidewalks, sewers and drains, there are other works which are undertaken for various civic departments, including market and city property, special property committee, fire department, department of health, regional planning committee, the street cleaning department, the garbage collection and the relief department. Co-operation has been afforded the Public Utilities Commission, the Fair Board, the Parks Commission, the Cheese Convention Committee, the Beaches Association, the Kinsmen Club and the Kiwanis Club throughout the year on various projects.

"Construction work has also been carried out for private parties, such as the construction of sewer connections, sidewalk repairs, driveway construction, weed cutting and snow shovelling, with the rental of different pieces of our equipment, such as concrete mixer, road rollers, graders, small tools, etc. In the renting of any equipment, one of our steady employees always accompanies the machine for the purpose of operating same. This work for private parties is listed as resale labor and the profits derived therefrom provide this department with a small surplus of funds which are set aside for the purchase of new equipment. The amount of $714 has been obtained for this fund so far this year and the sum of $590 plus a trade-in value has been utilized to purchase a new one-half ton pick-up truck for the public works foreman, to replace the present Ford truck that has given good service for the past seven years.

Storm Sewers.

"Sixteen new catch basins were placed in various parts of the city and fifty-six damaged basins were either repaired or rebuilt. All open ditches and storm sewers were cleaned out in the spring and in the fall.

Roads.

"New roadways were constructed on the southerly ends of South Church street, South John street and South George Street for the convenience of the garbage truck and for the local ice merchants who haul the ice from the Bay of Quinte at these locations. New roadways were also constructed on part of West College street, part of Ridley street, part of Catharine street and at the Belleville General Hospital. Repairs to roadways in the form of re-shaping and grading were carried out on St. Paul street, Wilkins street, South John street, Moodie street, North Front street, Gt. St. James street and a short piece of roadway off Brown street.

"The boulevard along the north side of Victoria avenue, between Pinnacle street and Church street, was removed to provide a wider roadway, which greatly improved the traffic conditions on this hill. Sections of boulevards were also removed from in front of the Bell Telephone office and the Belleville Sargent plant on the west side of Pinnacle street.

"The radius of the corners was increased at Bridge and Charles streets, Bridge and John streets, Bridge and Church streets and Victoria avenue and Charles street. Other sharp corners are to be improved in this manner each year.

"The entire area of the intersection at the corner of Bridge and Front streets was resurfaced with asphalt to replace the worn down surface of he pavement at this main intersection.

"A considerable quantity of loose stone was removed from the bed of the Moira River this year for road construction. Some of this stone was hauled to our crusher plant and crushed down to various grades, while other quantities were hauled directly to streets to build the roadway foundations which required coarse stone. This undertaking should be continued each year, as it not only reduces the cost of providing crushed stone for various civic works, but serves the purpose of clearing up the river bed and also preserving the stone in the city quarry, for future use.

"Street oiling operations were carried out during the month of June by our workmen on macadam roadways which required surface treatment.

"Many stop signs were repainted and this work will be continued next year until all the signs have been treated. Two new stop signs were erected at the corner of Victoria and Bleecker avenues and one new stop sign was placed at the corner of North Front and Evans streets.

"Traffic lines were painted on the street pavements in the business section of the city, but we were greatly disappointed in the quality of zone paint which was tried out this year.

"All streets were given a general clean-up in the spring and again in the fall in addition to the daily sweeping and flushing of the paved streets.

Snow Cleaning.

"All city streets were ploughed free of snow during the winter months and the roadways in the business section of the city were kept clear for traffic and parking by the hauling away of the snow in trucks. Much sanding of sidewalks and roadways was carried out during the season for traffic protection on hills and at main intersections.

"An open channel was cut through the ice at the mouth of the Moira River again this spring and this operation appears to greatly decrease the hazards of a flood when the river ice breaks up during the month of March.

Storage Yard and Equipment.

"An extra sand spreader was constructed by our shop mechanic this year and all machinery was given a general overhauling before the work got under way. The large metal clad building at the storage yard was painted with aluminum paint, which greatly improved its appearance. This will also preserve the metal exterior. A few new tools were purchased during the year and repairs were made to our existing tools and equipment.

General.

"Assistance was given this year to the Beaches Association in the construction of tile beds; to the Soft Ball Association in improving the ball diamond; to the Kinsmen Club in connection with the Soap Box Derby and to the Kiwanis Club in collection of scrap metals for war purposes.

"The purchasing of all materials for the department, as requisitioned for by the engineer and the chairman, is done by the city comptroller, subject to the approval of the city council.

"Many smaller jobs were undertaken during the year, but time will not permit me to give you all the details of these works.

"The total expenditures made by the Public Works Department up to Nov. 20 of this year under my chairmanship are shown in the following items and these totals can be compared with the amounts as set forth in the estimates for each individual class of work."

Clinton C. Brickman

Ex - Alderman Brickman, who served in the council in 1932-33-34, stated if he was elected he would recommend reduction of the alderman's salaries, make every effort to reduce taxation and work hard to bring more industries to Belleville. He asked for support on Monday.

Clarence R. Clapp

"I have given five years of service to the city, three [illegible] alderman and two as a member of the Parks Board and I ask your support at the polls on Monday," said Ex-Ald. Clapp.

Thomas Cushing

"This is the seventh time I have been on this platform asking for support," said Ex-Ald. Cushing, "and if elected I will promote the Beaches project in which I am very interested and will also support any measures that will continue construction of the esplanade."

Frank Follwell

"I have no sins to answer for as this is my first attempt to secure a municipal office," said Mr. Follwell. "I am a Belleville boy and a taxpayer and I think I can be of some service to my native city and would therefore solicit your support."

Thomas Marshall

Ex-Ald. Thomas Marshall told his audience that he had served for five years on the Board of Education and five years as an alderman and deplored the fact that St. Agnes Manor had been sold for $10,000 when it was making a good profit for the city and it was only sold to help reduce the taxes of the city. Mr. Marshall spoke against the paying of salary to aldermen and dwelt at length for the reduction of council. The Ex-Alderman explained that in 1937 the people voted to reduce the council from thirteen members to six by a majority of nearly 600 but the measure when it appeared before the Private Bills Committee. He showed that Chatham and Niagara Falls, no bigger cities than Belleville, had been allowed the privilege to reduce their membership in council. Mr. Marshall explained that he had later taken the matter up with Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Municipal Welfare and was informed to take up a petition and present it to the council. "I took up a petition signed by nearly 500 ratepayers," said Mr. Marshall and presented it to council and by an unanimous vote the council refused to entertain the petition and again I went to Mr. Cross but was informed that nothing more could be done. I again asked Mayor Thompson for a vote by the citizens on the question but was informed later that the council had refused the request." The speaker stated that if elected he would continue to work for the reduction of council and the cancellation of salary for the aldermen.

The school trustees were asked to stand and be introduced to the audience as the hour was growing late and William Harrison, Ross Stiver, Raymond Zufelt and George Wishart were introduced to the gathering. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Thumb Nail Sketches Municipal Candidates

On Monday the electors will go to the polls to record their franchise as to who shall be the Mayor, Aldermen, School Trustees and Utility Commissioners for the ensuing year and if the by-law carries, those elected as Mayor and Aldermen will sit for two years. Besides this by-law there will also be an expression of opinion as to whether the ratepayers wish the Waterworks and the Gas Department to be administered by the Public Utilities Commission or the administration be returned to the Corporation. There are two in the field for Mayor, seventeen for the thirteen Aldermanic seats and nine for the six seat on the School Board. There is a straight fight for the Commissionership, a post to be held for a two-year term. Thumb nail sketches of the candidates for office follow.

For Mayor

Glencoe E. Thompson—The present Mayor has been a member of the Council for four years and during that time has been Chairman of Public Works and other important departments of the city. At present he is not only the Chief Magistrate but also the Chairman of the Executive due to the absence of Alderman Mac Haig on war duties. Glen as he is familiarly known is well-known in the city being one of the prominent business men as proprietor of The Purity Bakery. The Mayor is ex-officio member of a number of Boards in the city and has given unstintingly of his time and ability to further the activities of this city.

Charles L. Hyde—A former Chairman of the Board of Education and a former Alderman of this city. Charlie Hyde is well known in this city having spent a number of years in the plumbing and heating business. The candidate has always had the interest of city at heart and his many years of public service fit him as a candidate for the high office of Mayor.

For Aldermen

H. J. Allin—A member of the council for the part two years. Jack Allin is serving this year as Chairman of Light. He is en employee of the Alemite Corporation and also proprietor of an extensive dry cleaning plant. He takes a great interest in civic affairs and as a former member and Chairman of the Board of Education knows the needs of the kiddies from a civic standpoint. Jack is fond of outdoor sports.

Harold J. Armstrong— A veteran in municipal affairs having been in the council on previous occasions and twice was a candidate for Mayor. Harold is railway clerk at the C.N.R. and is well known by a large number of people in the city. He has held many important chairmanships in the council, at one time serving as Chairman of the Waterworks Department. He is well versed in civic matters.

O. E. Butler—Chairman of Market and City Property. Ormonde Butler has served in the council for the past three years. He is a rising young barrister of the city and takes a keen interest in his department. He is well versed on corporation business and takes part in all the discussions of the council.

H. J. Clarke—Retired Inspector of Public Schools for South Hastings. Mr. Clarke has served for one year in the City Council. He accepted the Chairmanship of Special Property Committee and in this connection has given his time to disposing of city property so that it would be revenue bearing. Mr. Clarke is probably the best known man in the council due to his association with school matters in this district for a great number of years.

William Harvey—A former member and Chairman of the Board of Education he has served for a number of years in the City Council although his term has not always been consecutive. "Bill" Harvey sells insurance in the city and district and as Chairman of Tourist and Publicity has the management of one of the finest tourist camps, operated by the city, in the Province of Ontario. Mr. Harvey is a great labor man and never fails to speak on behalf of labor. He is always supported in this regard by the other members of the council.

Thomas "Derby" Jeffery — Has been a member of the City Council for the past two years and this year was a member of the Fire Committee. For some years he was manager of the United Cigar Store in this city and later has been proprietor of the Guild Restaurant. "Derby" has always taken a keen interest in sports and for many years was the regular goalie for Belleville teams.

Andrew M. Kennedy— Chairman of the Fire Committee and former Chairman of Public Works, Mr. Kennedy has served the city faithfully for a number of years. He is a retired C.N.R. Engineer and is well known by the railway trade and a large number of citizens as he has resided in Belleville for a great number of years. Being retired Mr. Kennedy is able to give his undivided time to his chairmanship in the Council.

R. W. "Bob" Pringle—is a barrister in the city and is serving his first year in the council. During the absence of Ald. Rueben B. Cooper, Mr. Pringle has assumed the Chairmanship of Printing and Stationery and did an excellent job. He is keenly interested in sports, having been a member of the University of Toronto hockey team, while attending Osgoode Hall.

Harry Rollins, is superintendent of the Houston Lumber Company and has served three years in the council being Chairman of Public Works during the past year. He came from Tweed to this city and in his residence here has made many friends. Mr. Rollins has taken a keen interest in sports and is at present an executive member of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association.

Thomas Marshall, a retired C.N.R. Engineer, Mr. Marshall was for some years a member of the council and while an Alderman served as Chairman of Market and City Property, many changes in the operation of the City Market being effected under his supervision.

C. R. Clapp, local motor car dealer, Clarence Clapp served as Alderman in this city for some years and after relinquishing his post accepted a membership on the Parks Board, a position which he has filled with credit to the board and himself. Mr. Clapp is seeking re-election to the Aldermanic Board.

Thomas Cushing—Retired C. N. R. Dispatcher, Mr. Cushing served in the council for four years most of the time being chairman of Market and City Property and many changes were effected under his management.

Russell Wotten, is a former member of the City Council and also a former member and Chairman of the Board of Education. Russell is a progressive merchant in the city and has served the city in many capacities and is seeking re-election to the city council on Monday.

Jack Holley—has been a resident in the City for many years and has always taken an active interest in the work of the Fair Board being Chairman of the Midway and the Poultry section. Jack is a plumber by trade and is seeking election to the Aldermanic Board for the first time.

Francis W. Potter—is an engineer on the C. N. R. and has been a resident of Belleville for some years. This is his first attempt at election for public office but in the councils of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Mr. Potter is well known as an able administrator.

Frank Follwell— superintendent of the St. Charles Automotive Paint and Glass is seeking election to public office for the first time. Frank is well known in the city, where he has resided all his life. He played hockey and football for the High School and since leaving school has always taken a keen interest in sporting activities.

Clinton C. Brickman—Flour and feed merchant, is seeking re-election after being a member of the council in 1932-33-34. Mr. Brickman served on several committees during his term of office and has a fine grasp of municipal administration.

For School Trustees

Carl W. Crosby — Insurance Broker of the city, he has made many friends since coming to this city from Prince Edward County. For many years he was foreman and salesman for J. B. Boyce in the motor car business. Carl is seeking election to the Board of Education for the first time.

W. J. Harrison — salesman with the J. B. Boyce Company, Bill Harrison served for some time on the Board of Education and served on many committees of that organization.

H. J. Legate—superintendent of the Canada Cement Company at Point Anne, Mr. Legate makes his home in this city and is seeking election to the Board. The candidate is well known in all circles and is especially prominent where anglers gather being a valued official of the Anglers' Association of this district.

P. C. McGuire—is an insurance broker and has served for three years on the Board being off the Board for the past two years. While a member of the Board, he served on many committees.

B. C. Sisler—bank manager of the City is a member of the Board of Education and is seeking election again to that body. Mr. Sisler has the interest of the children at heart and has served on the finance committee of the Board.

Ross Stiver—chief accountant of the Belleville Hydro Electric Commission has been a member of the Board of Education as an appointee since 1935. He has served in the Vocational department of the Board and has assisted materially in this department. This is his first time to seek election at the hands of the ratepayers.

George Wishart—entomologist at the Dominion Parasite Bureau is seeking election for the first time. He is well known in the city, being an official of the Quinte Skating Club and active in the work of that organization.

Rev. W. J. Walker—pastor of St. Andrew's Church needs no introduction to the citizens of Belleville. He has made many friends since coming to this city and is seeking election for the first time.

Raymond Zufelt — salesman for J. B. Boyce, was a former member of the Board of Education and brought to that Board a wealth of experience. Ray is also an ardent angler and a member of the Anglers' Association. He is seeking re-election.

For Hydro Commissioner

Clifford Baragar — manager of the Goodyear Tire Corporation has served as Hydro Commissioner for the past two years and during the last year has served as chairman. Mr. Baragar served as Alderman in the City Council and was active on many committees during his term of office.

George A. Reid—Insurance agent for the district and a former member of the City Council, former Mayor of Belleville and former Hydro Commissioner is seeking election to the Commission for the ensuing two years. Mr. Reid has served his city in many capacities during his residence and always with ability.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS ON MONDAY

On Monday Belleville electors will have an opportunity of voting on six ballots. Four of these are for the election of the mayor and thirteen aldermen, one Public Utilities Commissioner, and six members of the Board of Education and two are for an expression of opinion on the following questions which have been submitted:

> "Are you in favor as a wartime measure under the Local Government Act 1940 of the Municipal Council elected for the year 1941 holding office for the term of two years?"
> "Are you in favor of the Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville passing a bylaw for the removal of the control and management of Utilities known as the Belleville Water Works and the Belleville Gas Works from the Public Utilities Commission of the City of Belleville and revesting the same in the Council of the said corporation?"

As the ballot is one of the most cherished possessions of democracy it is the right and duty of every elector to attend and mark the municipal ballots so that the total vote in the elections may be representative. The ballot is secret and safeguarded so that it may be a true expression of the electors' will and opinion. The exercise of the ballot should therefore be looked upon as an obligation. It is essential not only in federal and provincial matters that the total vote be representative but also in the municipal field. In the local field the people know the candidates, the problems of the municipality and so the electors should turn out in the largest possible numbers to express their opinion.

NAZI SUBMARINE PLANTS HIT

British bombers on Thursday night and early Friday morning bombed German submarine plants at Stettin and Mannheim as well as hammering at an oil plant and other military objectives in the Reich. The efficacy of the British bombs is proved by reports which the airmen bring back of explosions and resultant fires.

In this way the British are striking at the source of the sea threat of the enemy. Another way is their constant pounding at the oil refineries and synthetic oil plants in Germany and another is the bombing of the roads, rails, canals and in general the communications of the German Reich.

The effectiveness of the R.A.F. has been felt all over Germany and over enemy military objectives in the most important parts of the industrial areas of Germany and of Italy. The record has been magnificent.

ST. ANDREW AND SCOTLAND

For twelve hundred years St. Andrew, the first disciple and one of the Apostles of Jesus, has been patron saint for Scotland. It was about the year 740 that Scotland made him her choice. He was not only the first disciple but he became the first missionary as he brought his brother Simon Peter to his Master. He was originally a disciple of John the Baptist. St. Andrew was a natural choice for the Scots people who have always been a deeply religious race and his faithful service in the early days of Christianity have made him one of the most venerated of the members of that small band who have been highly extolled ever since the church's foundation. He is a symbol of Scotland in his devoted service as recorded in Scripture and in tradition. His career after the death of his Master is not known but legend says that he preached the Gospel in Scythia, Northern Greece and Epirus. He was held in high veneration in Russia as the first to preach the Christian message in that land. Faithful unto death, he died the death of a martyr on the cross at Patrea, Achaia, in 62 or 70 A.D.

So great a figure was certain to inspire early Christians. A cross is named in his honor, a white saltire on a blue ground, to represent the x-shaped cross on which he met death. At any early date this cross was adopted as the national banner of the Scots. Today it is combined with the crosses of St. George of England and St. Patrick of Ireland to form the Union Jack. So deeply ingrafted into the life of Scotland is he that the Scottish Order of the Thistle is often known as the Order of St. Andrew.

The choice by the leaders of twelve centuries ago of a patron saint reveals to the world even today what the Scot liked best in manhood and Scotland's history proves that she has lived up to this ideal which has permeated her life in every sphere. The devotion, the loyalty, the industry, the mental alertness and sense of responsibility of the race show in their choice.

At this season of the year particularly, the name of St. Andrew inspires so much that is inspiring to the Scots race, in the manifestations of the St. Andrew spirit in the life of the people. About it have gathered traditions and customs which are indicative of the national character.

In many parts St. Andrew's Night was celebrated on Friday night, though the anniversary falls on Saturday, November 30, always a gala time in Scotland and wherever Scots meet anywhere in the world. The loyalty of the Scot to the land of his fathers and its traditions and ideals is marked by these little "Scotlands" in so many places on the globe. Canada has many of them and wherever they are there is good fellowship and a high standard of citizenship.

In this year of war thoughts naturally incline to the part of the Scot in the making of his nation and the Empire, in the preservation of the Empire and Scotland and in their ideals and traditions. Her voice has always been raised for the highest ideals.

The Scot is everywhere admired for his sterling qualities. He has left his mark on so many institutions of Europe, the New World and the East. He has been a gallant soldier and a military leader, he has been the preacher, the philosopher, the poet and the astute business man. He possesses a rare gift of good humor and is the soul of hospitality. He is noble-hearted. He has been rugged and kindly in his strength and gentle as a lamb, though an inveterate enemy of wrong and evil. His native land has left its mark upon him. He is a lover of freedom for the freedom of the hills and valleys of Scotland has worked its way into his soul. All in all, he leaves the impress on the world of a characteristic individuality which cannot be mistaken for any other.

The Scot is an apt member of a race which chose the first disciple of Christ as patron saint and St. Andrew's life of devotion and heroism on earth has found apt expression in the lives of millions of the noble race of men who have originated in Scotland.

Commencement Exercises For Trenton H.S. Held

Flight Lieutenant Denton Massey Addresses the Students and Awards Diplomas

Trenton, Nov. 30—"There'll Always be an England" because there will always be young boys and young girls graduating from school, who have the determination, that "There'll Always be an England," said Flight Lieutenant Denton Massey, at the Trenton High School, last night during the second half of the Commencement Exercises.

"You are leaving school to go out in the world an earn a living in the most critical days the world has ever seen," said Flt. Lt. Massey. "You are going out into the world where one force of bestiality and barbarism is attempting to stamp out all, that is sacred and decent in our lives."

"You, young men and young women of today, have your duty to perform. You must do your part and do it well."

"This is the Commencement Exercises and you are graduating from school. It is the commencement of your life in the world today. You are just commencing to begin. You are not going out into the world and beat it into submission but you must go out and mould your own future."

"The Collegiate or High School education will form a good basis to build on but it will only be a base for you to stand on for a time. You must continue to build. You must keep adding and learning. Do not think because you have graduated from High School that you do not need any more education because you will be sadly mistaken" said Flt. Lt. Massey.

Diplomas Granted

The Graduation Diplomas were presented by Denton Massey, to the following: Marie Allore, Audrey Anderson, Reginald Batchelor, Mary Bleecker, Shirley Bonter, William Burke, Phyllis Burrows, Frederick Burtt, Malcolm Campbell, Marion Chase, Raymond Dolan, Ida Fitzpatrick, Helen Franclik, Norma Funnell, Mary Martin, Nadine Morrow, Douglas Reid, Myrtle Reid, Nellie Scott, Aileen Sutcliffe, Jean Sutherland, Carolyn Vanderwater, Larry Whitley, Anita Wilson, Irene Wing.

The Robert Whyte Memorial Scholarship given to the student of the Trenton High School obtaining the highest standing in twelve papers of Middle School was Georgina May.

The general proficiency medals were presented to Grade IX, Doris Hogle, Shurie Trophy; Grade X, Agnes Campbell, the W. Clarence Saylor Trophy; Grade XI, Marie Gainforth, the N. J. McNair Trophy; Grade XIII, Character Scholarship, Leadership and Athletics, Ed. A. Simmons Trophy, Patricia Gorrill.

Found Guilty Under Act

Charged with a breach of the Defence of Canada Act, John Douglas Munroe was found guilty of making statements likely to cause disaffection to His Majesty's Forces, before Magistrate E. J. Butler in Police Court here yesterday.

Munroe is alleged to have made a number of subversive statements in a beverage room on November 25. Several witnesses, who testified at the trial were positive that the accused man was not intoxicated at the time he made the remarks.

"He started talking to everyone in the room concerning England and what he knew," stated C. Burley. "He didn't seem to care who heard him or who didn't. When I first noticed him he was sitting at a table by himself, then he moved to another table, where one man was sitting but he would not listen to him and the man moved away."

"Munroe stated that he had just returned from England and knew what he was talking about," stated another witness. "He claimed he was working at Frankford."

"The witnesses had misinterpreted his remarks," the accused man testified. "I had just returned from England about four months ago and I said that there was a shortage of skilled labour in England and it would take them a long time to build it up."

Monroe admitted that he had changed his name from Marino in 1936. "My brother and I did this as there were a number of Italians in Vancouver who had the same name and we didn't want to be taken as Italians. My parents are both Scotch and live in Scotland."

Accidental Death

Investigating the death of Mrs. Robert J. Clarke, who was instantly killed in an automobile accident, a coroner's jury last night returned a verdict of accidental death "owing to the muddy condition of the pavement at that point." No blame was attached to either driver who figured in the accident.

The jury recommended that the Department of Highways be notified of the conditions prevailing at this point on the highway.

The accident occurred according to the evidence of Traffic Officer C. Siple, a few hundred yards west of the intersection into the Trenton airport.

"The road was very greasy due to mud and clay being dropped from trucks working at the Trenton airport," he stated. "It had been raining hard and there was a slippery top left on the pavement. The car left the road on the right hand side and then went across to the left ditch. Just before the car entered the ditch the Anderson car collided with it."

No Indication of Speed

"There was no indication of speed on the part of either driver and there was no indication of liquor," said the officer.

Mr. Robert Clarke, the driver of the automobile in which Mrs. Clarke was a passenger, testified that he was unable to avoid the accident. "I did everything in my power to prevent it but was unable to do so."

"We were proceeding west from Belleville and had stopped at the traffic light at the Trenton Airport," he stated. "The car hadn't gone more than a quarter of a mile when the right rear wheel slid off the pavement. I pulled the car back onto the pavement and it seemed to strike over to the south side of the road at an angle, in front of the oncoming car."

Mr. Anderson, the driver of the other car, testified that the Clarke car coming towards him, seemed to be all right until it suddenly darted across the road in front of him. "I knew the road was slippery but I tried to turn to the left to avoid the collision. I was unable to do so and the right rear of the Clarke car collided with the left front of my car. The other car went into the ditch and I stopped mine immediately."

A number of witnesses corroborated the statements of the two drivers.

Death was instantaneous as the result of a fractured neck, two fractured ribs and a severe fracture of the right upper arm, according to Lt. John Marcus, medical doctor at the Trenton Air Station.

The deceased lady was a passenger in the rear seat of the car, with her brother-in-law, George H. Clarke. Mrs. Clarke, mother of Robert and George Clarke, was riding in the front seat and escaped injury.

The inquest was taken by Dr. W. B. Crowe, with Crown Attorney Gordon S. Robertson questioning the witnesses.

British Ships Come and Go In North Sea

From a Special Correspondent of the Manchester Guardian.

AN EAST COAST PORT.

Britain has complete control of the North Sea. Nazi claims that they have driven British shipping from our East Coast are like so many other boasts by Goebbels, completely without foundation.

For some days I have been on the North Sea on board a convoy escort vessel. We escorted two large, heavily laden convoys during my stay with her. Several others passed us. Merchant ships from our and the other convoys slipped in and out of East Coast harbors — all claimed by the Germans to be "bombed to ruins"—to load and unload their cargoes. The smooth running of the convoy was disturbed only by weather conditions, not by "enemy activity". And this in spite of the greatly intensified Nazi drive of the last few weeks against our North Sea shipping.

After a lull, bombing by the Luftwaffe has begun again. My convoy was bombed. The raid, like the vast majority of these German Air Force attacks on shipping, was completely unsuccessful. We were shadowed by a bomber and a seaplane until in the gathering dark we were passing another merchant armada. Both 'planes swooped down on us, dropping heavy bombs in three salvoes. The nearest dropped 100 yards from any ship. The seaplane seemed so low that it was skimming the water beneath the level of the bridge of my armed escort. They made only one attack; the concentrated barrage of the escort ships quickly put them to flight. It was all over in seconds.

I watched the 'planes as they dived. Guns from every ship turned the dark sky into a glitter of bursting shells and spangles of tracers. There were three heavy concussions. My ship shuddered with the shocks. The gunfire was deafening in intensity and then suddenly died into silence. The two convoys moved on their appointed courses. Not a merchantman deviated a yard.

A few days earlier, while I was on board a patrol vessel, I had seen a similar attack on another convoy. The result was the same. Nazi warfare against British shipping has completely degenerated into fugitive hit-and-run raids. The skipper of my ship, who has been escorting North Sea convoys for months, has been often attacked. His convoys have been bombed, machine-gunned, tailed by U-boats and E-boats. And the net result of all this German activity has been several 'planes shot down, a few E-boats chased away and probably damaged. Not one British ship has been damaged by these enemy actions. These convoys proceeded serenely and safely to their ports.

And so it is happening daily in the North Sea. Cargo ships laden to the Pemsoll lines arrive at their ports; they unload, load, and sail. It is monotonous in its undisturbed regularity.

LIVELY LINES

By Arthur L. Burke

Our City has a system old,
From pioneers descended
Its many laws, bereft of flaws
With safeguards are amended.

Blest be the man of any plane,
Who here decides to settle,
His life will be secure and free,
If he but shows his mettle.

Our citizens elect each year
From every ward and station
A man four-square to be our Mayor
Who keeps us from inflation.

With Aldermen of wisdom's ilk,
Experience long and trusted,
No wonder we have lived to see,
Our many ills adjusted.

Commissioners are in the field,
For lighting, gas and water,
They wage the fight by hydro light
The atmosphere grows hotter.

For school trustees we have our choice
Select from each vocation,
Avoiding debt they toil and sweat
For better education.

God bless these men and women all,
Whose lives are spent in giving Instruction true, that leads us to
A fuller form of living.

Then let us exercise the vote,
With careful contemplation,
From critics free, our town could be,
The greatest in the nation.

British Opinion On Bombing

A substantial number of British citizens are still opposed to retaliation against the Nazis by bombing the civilian population of Germany, despite the nightly raids over London, a survey conducted by the British Institute of Public Opinion, has shown. This was reported by Dr. George Gallup, director of the American Institute of Public Opinion, of which the British Institute is an affiliate.

The survey asked the voters this question:

"In view of the indiscriminate bombing of this country, would you approve or disapprove if the R.A.F. adopted a similar policy of bombing the civilian population of Germany?"

The vote was as follows:

Approve	46%
Disapprove	46
Undecided	8

"In the same survey," Dr. Gallup reported, "the British Institute conducted one of its periodic checkups on the popularity of the British Prime Minister. It found that support of Winston Churchill is overwhelmingly the highest ever recorded in any poll on the popularity of a man in public office.

"The survey on Churchill put this question to the voters: "In general do you approve or disapprove of Mr. Churchill as Prime Minister?"

"The results today as compared to a similar poll in August follow:

	Today	August
Approve	89%	88%
Disapprove	6	7
Undecided	5	5

"The highest vote of public confidence ever given to Neville Chamberlain in the British Institute surveys was 71 per cent in December, 1939. In the United States, in five years of polling, the American Institute has never found President Roosevelt's popularity higher than 69 per cent (February, 1934.)

"According to latest reports, the British public has responded freely to questions asked by the interviewers.

"Many observers have pointed to the British Institute's continued existence as evidence that British democracy is still very much alive. At no point has the work suffered from government censorship. Results have been published at regular intervals in The London News Chronicle."—N. Y. Times.

Vichy Reports French Official Killed by British Pursuit Plane

Vichy, Nov. 30 (AP).—The Petain-Laval government permitted disclosure today of the death of Jean Chiappe, new high commissioner for Syria, in a French air transport which crashed Nov. 27.

Chiappe was a former prefect of Paris police.

The airplane carrying Chiappe was brought down over the Italian island of Sardinia and lost with all occupants.

An official announcement said Chiappe was killed after the plane was machine-gunned in a naval engagement between British and Italian warships.

The plane sent out the message: "We are being machine-gunned. Plane on fire, SOS." The Vichy communique claimed that the transport was machine-gunned in flight by a British fighter plane.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

James W. Barton, M.D.

Heat and Exercise Prevent Pain And Stiffness Following Rheumatism

After an attack of rheumatism in joints and muscles, the patient finds that when he tries to move the joint to its full extent or put real strain on the muscles, the pain is more or less severe. He therefore is apt to not move the joint to its full extent or put real strain on his muscles.

What happens? He finds that joints and muscles are getting stiff but he is likely to feel that it is better to have a little stiffness than undergo pain. This is a mistake because little adhesions that are formed early can readily be broken up early with little or no pain if heat in some form is applied.

A common if not the commonest place for pain and stiffness to occur during or following rheumatism is the shoulder. The patient finds that placing his hand at back of neck or up the back to shoulder-blades causes pain. Pain is due to congestion and slowness of circulation. By increasing the circulation and removing congestion by heat, the pressure on nerve endings is removed and the pain is relieved.

A simple method of relieving pain and stiffness in shoulder or other joint is to apply heat to the joint—hot shower hot towels, heat lamp—for ten minutes, then move the joint to its full extent for two or three minutes. The patient is told to write a capital D all over a large globe. This means that he will have to reach upward, to each side, underneath, close to and far away from, his body. After two or three minutes of this writing, heat is again applied for three or four minutes.

Thus the heat given before the exercise helps to open up blood-vessels, relax the tensed nerves, and acts like an anaesthetic when exercise is taken. These patients find that the movement even to full extent causes little or no pain.

When more than one joint and group of muscles are affected, the use of a hot tub bath, temperature a few degrees above body heat—102 to 104 degrees Fahrenheit—can be used. After lying in bath for 15 minutes, the exercises should be taken and patient then rests in the hot bath for another ten minutes. I have already written about exercises in a pool where water is above body temperature.

ITALIAN SUB SUNK

Salonika, Greece, Nov. 30 (AP).—The Greek destroyer Eagle sank an Italian submarine, an official Greek announcement said today.

Details were not announced immediately.

(No Greek ship of the name "Eagle" is listed in Jane's fighting ships. The "Aigli", a 145-ton torpedo boat, launched in 1913 and refitted ten years ago, is probably the ship referred to.)

Having a plaster composition backing and a corrosion proof stainless steel surface, a new wallboard has been developed for use in bathrooms and other moist places.

Down south there's one frock already slated for fashion honors. It is a simple spectator sports frock in heavy white crepe de chine with gold buttons and gold kid belt.

3rd Sidney

3rd Sidney — The attendance contest sponsored by Aikens Adult Bible Class has closed and the entire school was treated to a hot supper at the church on Tuesday evening. Despite the wintry snow and winds a goodly number attended this pleasant gathering.

Those in attendance remained at the church for the Young People's meeting which was in charge of Miss Clara Wilson. The topic was given by Mr. Harleigh Hamilton on the life and work of Dr. Tucker of Africa. A cornet solo by Gordon Spafford, a vocal solo by Miss Barbara Hamilton with her mother, Mrs. H. Hamilton as accompanist, and a guitar selection by Burton Hubble were the musical numbers on the program. The Scripture lesson was read by Miss Jewel Bailey.

The Y. P. U. which has a small membership, appreciates the presence of the older citizens at their meetings. A splendid paper was given last week by a member of the executive, Mrs. Murney Jeffrey, the subject being: "Our Municipal Organizations".

The condition of Mr. Fred Spafford, who is seriously ill at his home, remains unchanged.

Mr. and Mrs. Selburne Westover and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hay of Belleville spent Sunday at Burnbrae, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Grills. They were accompanied by Mrs. Emily Tyler, who remained to visit friends for a few days.

Messrs. Bernard May and Clifford Cassidy, who are employed at the Trenton airport are ill at their homes, suffering from severe colds.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot Bailey and Miss Jewel Bailey spent Sunday in Peterborough with Mr. and Mrs. George Green.

Mrs. Scott of Cannifton is visiting this week at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Earl Bush and Mr. Bush.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Anderson of Campbellford, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Reid and daughter, Marybelle, Springbrook, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Hubble and family.

Elect CLIFF BARAGAR

For Utility Commissioner

It has been my pleasure to act as your Commissioner for 1939 and 1940 and I thank you for the privilege.

I would ask for your vote and influence so that I can continue in office for 1941 and 1942.

I believe if you compare my record in office with that of others you will find that the Utilities have been handled just as well if not better during the past two years.

I have endeavored to give a business administration and all questions which have come before the Commission have had sympathetic consideration and all decisions reached have been arrived at with the benefit to all in view.

I believe the water rebate of two months charges which has been given this year is the first time such a thing has occurred in Belleville.

It would appear from the financial statement of the water works department that the water rates can be further reduced and if relected it is my policy that supluses in the water department should be returned to the water users.

Many economies have been effected during my two years of office but nothing has been done which would effact the efficiency of the service even if it was less expensive.

PERSONALS

Mrs. A. Beauchamp Payne, East Bridge Street, who has been seriously ill, was reported to be slightly better last night.

On Thursday of this week, Rev. D. T. McClintock was the guest speaker at a Brotherhood Banquet in High Park Ave. United Church, Toronto. There were three hundred present. Mr. McClintock was associate minister in this church about twelve years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Groom spent the week end with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Swenor, before Mr. Groom left to join the R.C.A.F. at Mossbank, Sask., as draftsman.

Mr. and Mrs. Parkin Alton, Toronto, have returned home after spending the past few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cortland Alton, Turnbull Street.

Mrs. M. Kerr and Mrs. Clayton Sullivan returned from attending Ontario Beekeepers' Convention at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto.

Dr. F. R. Ross, Geddes Street, has returned to the city after spending the past two weeks vacationing in Northern Ontario.

Private Alex. Tisdale of the Dufferin and Haldimand Rifles, of Niagara, is spending the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Tisdale.

Under the auspices of the Holy Name Society an enjoyable card party and social evening was held last night in St. Michael's Auditorium. Bridge and euchre were enjoyed by the guests earlier in the evening after which refreshments were served. Following lunch the Tophatters provided an excellent dance program.

The Officers' Mess at the Armouries was the scene on Friday afternoon of the annual bridge, bazaar, and tea by the members of Argyll Chapter, I.O.D.E., and large attendance of guests for bridge and at the tea hour made the affair a splendid success. Mrs. A. B. Gribble, regent, and Mrs. H. Alford, vice regent, received. Chrysanthemums in charming profusion were used in the decoration of the rooms while the tea table was a lovely picture with its original decorative idea, the grouping of red, white and blue tapers in silver candelabra, and tiny flags. Mrs. W. C. Morgan and Mrs. Eric Keeler were in charge of the tea, and Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson and Mrs. George Caldwell, the bridge. Mrs. J. V. Doyle, Mrs. W. N. Ponton, Mrs J. F. Wills, and Mrs. R. B. Chadwick poured tea and members of the Chapter assisted in serving. The fancy work table was in charge of Mrs. Lester Shiels and Mrs. Fred Lazier, and the home cooking table was looked after by Mrs. Reg. Abrams, Mrs. J. Porritt, and Mrs. C. Cameron. Mrs. G. Miller was treasurer for the afternoon. Prize winners at bridge were Mrs. E. R. Hinchey and Mrs. Fred Jobson, the prizes being donated by Miss Dorothy Quick, and McFee's, jewellers. Tickets has been sold on three handsome prizes, a silver bowl won by Miss Gertrude Lazier, and a pudding dish won by Mrs. S. Licence. These were donated by Mrs. H. F. Bryson. Mrs. C. I White won the handsome purse donated by Mrs. Macoun, tickets having been in charge of Mrs. George Caldwell. The drawing for the lucky tickets was made by Mrs. J. A. McFee.

Fashion Flashes

NEVER SO MANY fur-trimmed suits as this autumn. A beauty of a suit is in black, rough heavy woolen with above the elbow length cuffs of black fox. The long jacket is gathered at either side of the waist, gathers that extend to hip-line pockets.

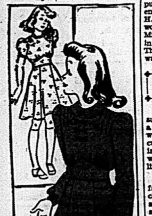
There's glitter aplenty in the fashion scene. Popular just now are clips done in series. For instance, a comet in rhinestones moonstones and sapphire stones is one clip and this is followed by a series of clips representing stars. Nice to clip along the neckline of a simple frock.

The big outdoors is bright with women in brilliant plaided woollens. A grand top coat is done in soft tweed in bold plaid and cross-bar design. The colors include brown, pink, mauve, taupe, gray and sulphur yellow. Collarless neckline has attached scarf ends. Coat is loose and boxy with brown leather buttons.

Many a frock done on simple lines is made by the addition of a beautiful jacket. A simple black velvet frock becomes a creation when worn with a long, fitted green faille jacket with a huge spray of real looking pink roses on long stems posed up the snug front. The roses are tied with an appliqued bow in rhinestones.

Girdle-Waisted School Style

By ANNE ADAMS



Pattern 4495

Schooled in fashion is this vivacious Anne Adams frock! Pattern 4495 has all the smart novelty details a girl could want, yet it's simple enough for the busiest mother to find time to make. The wide waistband that's "upped" in front gives a big-as-a-minute look to her waistline. Both the skirt panel and the waistband look smart on the bias. Bodice softness, so essential for a "growing-up" figure, is held in by shoulder darts and above-the-waist gathers. The becoming optional collar and pockets may both be in bright contrast for extra dash. Wh not make one frock in dark, wool-like rayon with long full sleeves and a collar; another in gay cotton with a square neck, short sleeves and lace or ric-rac trim?

Pattern 4495 is available in girls' and junior sizes 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16. Size 12 takes 3 1-4 yards 35-inch fabric.

Send twenty cents (20c), in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS and STYLE NUMBER.

AIKEN'S W. A.

Mrs. Arthur Saylor opened her home for the November meeting of the Woman's Association of Aikens United Church.

There were eighteen present to partake of the hot dinner served at the noon hour.

The afternoon meeting opened with a hymn, with the president, Mrs. Selburn Westover in the chair. The Bible lesson was read by Mrs. Earl Bush, and the Devotional on the Scripture by Mrs. Fred Moon. Letters of appreciation were read from Mrs. Perry Hamilton, Mrs. Vardy, Mrs. Harley Hubble and Mr. Wm. McMullen and family for expressions of sympathy received during illness and bereavement.

During the business period, Donald Hubble was appointed to build fires at the church throughout the coming year. Readings were given by Mrs. Wm. Bush, Mrs. Allan Latta, Mrs. W. H. Kells and Mrs. Urvan Perry. A memorial service, in loving memory of the late Mrs. Wm. MacMullen, a past president of the Society, closed with the hymn "For all the Saints who from their Labours Rest".

The election of officers was conducted by the Pastor, Rev. L. W. Scott and the following members were elected for the year 1941:—

President, Mrs. Perry Hamilton; vice president, Mrs. Wilmot Bailey; 2nd vice president, Mrs. Leon McMullen; Secretary, Mrs. Cyril McMullen; Treasurer, Mrs. Murney Jeffrey; Pianist, Mrs. Harleigh Hamilton; Assistant, Mrs. Lee Grills; Convener for Flower Committee, Mrs. Wilmot Bailey; Press secretary, Mrs. E. K. Hubble; Buying committee, Mrs. M. Jeffrey, Mrs. S. Westover, Mrs. Fred Westover and Mrs. Sam Marshall and Mrs. Perry Hamilton; Auditors, Mrs. W. H. Kells, Mrs. U. Perry; Conveners for homes for meetings, Mrs. Earl Bush and Mrs. Stanley Spafford.

The retiring president, Mrs. Selburn Westover expressed appreciation of the co-operation and loyalty of the members throughout the year. Rev. Scott extended a vote of thanks to Mrs. Westover, for the successful year's work, and her untiring efforts during her term of office.

The attendance contest which has been carried on during the year, ended at the November meeting, with the "True Blues", the winners. The birthday boxes that had graced the tables at each dinner meeting were opened and found to contain over six dollars which will add to the treasury.

The Red Cross leader, Mrs. Arthur Saylor gave a fine report of the work accomplished by the ladies and the money raised during the Red Cross campaign.

The Stars Say—

For Saturday, November 30

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

WHILE THIS is bound to be a lively day, with probably much moving about, change, and variation in plans and objectives, judging by the influencing planets. Much precaution and sagacity will be needed to avert pitfalls, treachery, fraud, all sorts of undercover efforts to thwart and undermine pretentious ambitions. Keep alert to several petty snares and schemes, meeting such with corresponding vigilance, intrigue and smoothness, possibly on the "dog-eat-dog" policy, prenicious but sometimes enforced or justified.

Those whose birthday it is although having a lively and exciting year, will be obliged to exercise much strategy, discretion, and vigilance. To avert snares, schemes, treacheries and other forms of sinister intent.

A child born on this day may have sufficient intelligence to handle difficult and tricky situations, but its own strategic and secret propensities may plunge it into peculiar or questionable involvements.

BETHANY Y. P. U.

The weekly meeting of the Bethany Y.P.U. was held at the church on Tuesday evening, Nov. 26, 1940. The president opened the meeting with quiet music and the call to worship. Hymn 356 was sung followed by prayer by Rev. Davis. The Scripture was given by Mrs. A. Miller. The secretary's report was read and adopted. Business was discussed. Hymn 358 was sung. Rev. Davis showed slides on Missionary work in Chengtu and gave a very interesting talk of the work there.

ANCIENT GRIST MILL DESTROYED

Port Dover, Ont., Nov. 30.—(CP) —A grist mill dating back before 1812 was destroyed by fire of unknown origin here late last night.

The mill, owned by Charles G. Ivey, was operated by the Norfolk Co-operative Company of Simcoe and the loss was estimated at $10,000. There was a large stock of Grain and flour in the mill when the fire occurred.

Flames spread to rapidly that firefighters were not able to save the building. It was believed the fire started in the wheel house containing the waterwehel that operated the mill.

MOIRA W. A.

The November meeting of the Women's Association was held on Thursday Nov. 21st at the home of Mrs. Blake and Mrs. Ross Ketcheson with twenty-four in attendance. A delicious pot luck dinner was served.

Mrs. McInroy called the meeting to order and after the devotional exercises, Mrs. Arthur Mumby read the Scripture lesson. A letter of thanks from Mrs. Fred Ketcheson in appreciation of flowers was read. Readings were contributed by Mrs. J. Williams, Mrs. Geo. Foster and Miss Doris Mullett. Mrs. N. Welsh, Mrs. A. Mumby and Mrs. D. Holbert rendered pleasing solos. Mrs. J. F. Herity gave a very instructive talk on war conditions in England to-day.

Hymn 231 was sung and the meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. C. Ketcheson.

TYENDINAGA EAST W. I.

The November meeting of the Tyendinaga East W.I. met at the home of Mrs. Wm. Pinney on Friday evening, Nov. 15th, with a good attendance of members and visitors. After the usual opening business was discussed. It was decided to have a quilting in the basement of Empey Hill Church and that a pot luck dinner be served. Bea Mowers gave the Current Events. The guest speaker was Dr. Blackwell of Deseronto. He spoke on "First Aid", paying particular attention to hemorrhages caused from cut arteries. Afterwards he gave everyone present the opportunity to ask any questions they wished.

Mrs. R. McMath had charge of the program. "There'll Always be an England" was sung. Readings were given by Mrs. R. Tucker, Mrs. F. Hutchinson and Mrs. C. Akey. The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem.

Lunch was served and a social hour enjoyed by one and all.

MRS. MADELINE DAY
Lecturer

As conducted by Mrs. Madeline Day and her assistants, the current "edition" of the Cooking School furnishes enough inspiration in a single session to keep the average home-maker happy in her work for a month of Sundays.

The Cooking School is not merely the demonstration of fresh, new, thrilling recipes and formulas for cooking and baking. It reveals a wealth of information about new wrinkles, short-cuts, new ways to do things—food values—makes glad the heart of every-one who keeps house.

● Women who have attended the past sessions of the Cooking School say they wouldn't have missed them for anything. You'll feel that way, too. You'll enjoy everything every minute; the entertainment, the housekeeping hints you'll pick up; the magical way Mrs. Day does things—the hampers—the gifts — a thrill a minute! Make up a party to attend the Cooking School now. You'll all have a good time every minute. Admission 10 cents.

CREW TAKEN FROM STORM-BATTERED EUGENA CAMBANIS

British Freighter Stands by for 36 Hours as Cambanis Smashed Into Helpless Hulk

GREEK CREW SAVED

Halifax, Nov. 30 (CP). — Shore sources lacked definite word today on the fate of 29 men of the foundered Canadian freighter Lisieux, but the crew of a Greek steamer caught in the same storm off Newfoundland was safe aboard a British vessel.

Leaving their waterlogged craft to the seas that had been pounding it for three days, the seamen of the 3,470-ton Eugena Cambanis were taken off yesterday by the Urla, a British freighter that had been standing by for 36 hours while the storm-driven Cambanis was smashed into a helpless hulk.

The Urla later reported all of the Greek crew had been transferred safely. She did not give the number of men who had faced death aboard the Cambinis after boiler trouble 125 miles southwest of Newfoundland had left her prey to the storm of Tuesday and Wednesday. Nor was it disclosed where she was heading with the rescued seamen.

Meanwhile, the wartime curtailment of sea communications kept Canadian relatives unaware of the situation of the men on the Lisieux. A Norwegian freighter reported on Thursday she had picked up some of them in a lifeboat, but no names were given.

Navigation Season Formally Closes; One Of Busiest in Years

Detroit, Nov. 29 (AP)—Midnight Saturday will end one of the busiest shipping seasons in the history of the Detroit River. Insurance on Great Lakes shipping ceases at that hour with the approach of winter, and the 1940 navigation season formally closer.

Some boats, however, will remain in service until ice clogs the Great Lakes and the river. Most of the big freighters and ore carriers are now in dock.

The J. W. Wescott Company, marine reporters, said today that vessel passages on the river for 1940 so far totalled 20,188. The final total probably will be less than that of either o fthe big years of 1929 and 1937, but greater than 1938 or 1939. In 1938 there were 16,912 passages; in 1939 there were 17,502.

Shippers say that a jump in ore and coal trafic because of armament production in the United States and Canada accounted to large extent for the increase in passages, along with generally improved business conditions.

ABSENT-MINDED PEDLER

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 30 (AP).—The pedler handed the waitress a little card and a package of needles. "These the only kind you have?" she asked. "No, I have a lot more in my basket," said the pedler. Then he turned and fled the premises with all the speed he could muster. He'd forgotten that the card said he was deaf and dumb.

Team That Jack Built Showing No Signs of Collapsing as Red Wings Defeat Black Hawks 3-1

Detroit Only Two Points Behind Leafs and Getting Better Every Game

GOODFELLOW STARS

Playing Coach Scores a Goal and Assists in Another—Mowers in Goal Brilliant

By JACK MITCHELL,
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The team that Jack built is showing no signs of collapsing.

Maestro Jack Adams' reconstructed Detroit Red Wings are riding the crest of a National Hockey League unbeaten streak that has kept them high in second place. They're only two points behind Toronto Maple Leafs, and getting better with every game.

Ever since the Red Wings went into a nose-dive in the 1937-38 season after winning two straight Stanley Cups, Adams has been rebuilding. He infused some rookies into the line-up in the past two seasons and added another group to start this campaign.

Only a sprinkling of veterans of the Stanley Cup champions remain in the line-up and these are of the more solid brand—such as defenceman Ebbie Goodfellow and Winger Syd. Howe. Starting his 13th season, Goodfellow was elevated to playing coach this year when Adams became vice-president of the Detroit chain system.

The veteran Ebbie was travelling with a speed that belied his lengthy service last night as the Red Wings defeated Chicago Black Hawks 3-1, to consolidate their hold on second place over the third-place Hawks. Goodfellow aided in one goal and scored another to pace the youthful club.

Mowers Brilliant

Goalie Johnny Mowers, Detroit's brilliant rookie netminder, meanwhile blanked Chicago until late in the final period when Cully Dahlstrom scored on a double relay from Joe Cooper and Johnny Chad. But by that time the Red Wings had rapped home three counters to run up a safe lead.

The rookie line of Joe Carveth-Arch Wilder-Leo Douglas also was prominent in the victory. Carveth, right winger on the trio who performed last year with Indianapolis in the American League, opened the scoring at 18:06 of the initial period with his first goal in the N.H.L.

Detroit went two goals up about halfway through the middle session when Sid Abel scored on Herchenratter's pass after Jimmy Orlando had carried the puck up the ice. Goodfellow made it 3-0 early in the final period.

The game, only one played last night, was a prelude to a crowded week-end of five matches in which every team sees action.

Two games are slated for tonight with Montreal Canadiens playing the Rangers at New York and New York Americans meeting the Maple Leafs in Toronto. Sunday the Bruins play the Americans at New York. Toronto travels to Detroit and Rangers go to Chicago.

GOLAB, SPRAGUE THOUGH INJURED WILL START GAME

Coach Ross Trimble of Ottawa Believes His Team Will Win Right in Toronto

BEACHES ARE READY

Leo Deadey Will Play Outside in Place of Syd Reynolds Who is Out for Series

Toronto, Nov. 30—(CP)—Ottawa Roughriders arrived here last night with Coach Ross Trimble in a fine mood for anything but moaning.

Despite the fact that Halfback Tony Golab and Wingline Ace Dave Sprague are injured—neither seriously enough to keep him out of action—Trimble has nothing but enthusiasm for his club's chances in the two-game, total-points Canadian Rugby Union Championship series that will start here this afternoon between Ottawa and Balmy Beach.

Trimble says he isn't going to play this one safe—keep the score down in preparation for a coup de grace in the second game at Ottawa next week. He claims his Roughriders will build today a large enough margin to ensure the abode of the Grey Cup and the C. R. U. title for the next year.

Football's local fandom is divided on the series. On one hand they like the Balmies for their unbeaten and untied record this season. But on the other they compare the strength of the Ontario Rugby Football Union, Beaches' stamping grounds, with the powerful Interprovincial Union, from which Ottawa emerged as champion. The comparison is not flattering to the O.R.F.U., in most cases.

Beaches will be without outside Syd. Reynolds, who was lost for the remainder of the season when stricken last week with appendix trouble necessitating an immediate operation. Coach Alex Ponton will use Leo Deadey in Reynolds' spot, and places much confidence in him.

The weather likely will make a hard, fast field, which would favor Beaches. Temperatures were falling during the night, freezing the turf left soggy after a slight thaw Friday.

Juvenile Hockey League Calls for Registration

Completing their organization the executive of the Belleville Juvenile Hockey Association voted to invite all teen-aged boys who are keenly interested in playing Canada's national winter game of hockey, to convene with the powers-that-be at their next meeting to be held at the Y.M.C.A. on Dec. 13th. On that date registration of all minor-aged boys in Belleville will be taken and the various teams selected with the actual participants of the game taking an active part in the operation of the association, that was instituted last season and flourished with success.

Four clubs, wearing replica uniforms of the National Hockey League, will again compose the association, the teams being the Americans, Canadiens, Maple Leafs and Black Hawks. Uniforms, hockey sticks, goal-keepers' equipment, supervision and officials will again be supplied the league, the list of referees including Don Lee, "Red" Townsend, Cliff Howie, D. G. "Daw" Whalen, K. J. Colling and C. D. Tice.

Each team will be supervised by a business manager and coach, the following being named to supervise clubs: Fred Reid and Bill Dennis; Frank Follwell and Frank Cunningham; Art Rogers and Dick Beare, Orliff Lloyd and Herb Morris. In each incident the first named will act as business manager and the latter named as coach.

The schedule will be drafted and submitted at the meeting of Dec. President Schwab to attend and 13th when the players are urged by sign playing certificates.

The Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Syd Howe of Detroit broke a first place tie with Syl Apps of Toronto for the National Hockey League point-scoring leadership last night by picking up a point on an assist as the Red Wings defeated Chicago Black Hawks 3-1 in the only scheduled game of the night This was the only chance in the big seven.

BRIGHTS HANDED FIRST DEFEAT OF THE SEASON

Oshawa Generals Score Smashing 6-1 Victory With Ebbie Edmison Getting Two Points

SAILORS BEATEN

Port Colborne Defeated by Saints 3-2 While Hamilton Swamps London 9-3

(By The Canadian Press)

Niagara Falls Brights lost their first game of the season last night, and the way they lost is making other teams in the Ontario Hockey Association's Senior "A" series a trifle uneasy about future meetings with tracy Shaw's spirited Oshawa Generals.

For while Hamilton trounced London 9-3 and St. Catharines nudged out Port Colborne 3-2, Generals turned the heat on Brights unbeaten record for a smashing 6-1 victory. Following the lead of Ebby Edmison, who strengthened his position at the top of the league scoring standings with one goal and two assists, Generals shattered with a loud bang Brights' record of seven previous games without defeat.

But no matter how many threats appear on the horizon—and Oshawa's three straight victories this week constitute a definite threat—You can't get around the fact that Hamilton Dofascos haven't met a team yet this season they couldn't beat. Last night's rough exhibition with London was Dofascos eighth without defeat.

Jarv. Taylor, London defenceman, fell on his stick during the first period in attempting to make a check, and was injured seriously. Ten stitches were needed to close a cut near his left eye and sight of that eye may be lost, according to hospital authorities.

MAY BE LIEUTENANT JENKINS NEXT

Lew Jenkins, (civilien clothes), lightweight champ, enlisted in the U.S. army and becomes the first boxing titleholder to sign up for the U.S. defence program. He expects a commission soon, possibly a second lieutenancy.

New York, Nov 30 (AP)—Only thing that kept today from being a freezer around this town was the news that the Dodger deal for Mickey Owen is hotter than ever.. ....You'll all think we're plum daffy, but California vs Stanford today is the spot to end all upsets if there ever was one.... The Minneapolis papers are giving Tommy Harmon down the country for popping off here that the Michigan team (which lost to Minnesota 7-6) was three touchdowns better than the Gophers.

From Near and Far—

George Jessel, the comedian and his eye-filling wife, were at the Fordham football rally last night.. ....Latest info from abroad is that old Paulino Uzcudun, who hasn't been quite the same since Joe Louis popped him, will try it again with Max Schmeling in a German Red Cross benefit bout.

Gus Kilian and Heinz Vopel, German six-day bike riders, have asked the United States Government to extend their time limit here which has expired.... Kilian and Vopel, former soldiers in Hitler's army came here six months ago via Russia and Japan...... A practically unknown jockey last year, Earl Dew of Sac City, Iowa, will probably win the 1940 jockey title...... Already Dew has booted home more than 250 winners.... Jean Borotra, the Petain regime's national director of sports, has put a ban on all pro sports but cycling ....Borotra, former French tennis player, at present is enjoying the California sunshine....

CONN'S PUNCHING NOT GOOD ENOUGH TO DOWN SAVOLD

Pittsburgh Light - Heavy weight Scores Decision Over Opponent in Twelve Rounds

SAVOLD WINS THREE

Jacob Thinks Conn Will be Ready for Shot at Louis Next Summer

By GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Nov. 30 (AP)—Billy Conn added no stars to his fistic crown in beating up befuddled Lee Savold in Madison Square Garden last night. As was reasonably suspected, the punch that used to do no worse than wound middleweights is only a minor irritant to a heavyweight—even to a heavyweight no better able to defend himself than Savold.

The Pittsburgh profile punched the Des Moines boy with everything he had for most of the 12 rounds. At times he even leaped off the floor to see if he could get a little extra weight behind his blows. But nothing happened, and at the end Savold actually looked better than the lad who wants to fight Joe Louis next summer.

Conn had a cut under one eye, whereas Savold bore no mark on his contenance except an expression o honest bewilderment.

"He is a pretty sharp puncher," Savold said of the light-heavy champion. "Naw, he never dazed me. He might do as good against Louis as Pastor did, I dunno."

Jacobs Still Has Faith

Promoter Mike Jacobs, even though he saw the fight and heard the boos presented Billy by the crowd after it was over, refused to concede that his candidate had not furthered his campaign for a title shot. It was pointed out to him that Savold was only a 187-pounder, and in appearance a trifle musclebound, whereas in Louis, Conn would be meeting a great, big, limber fellow.

"I thought he did all right," Mike insisted.

"He licked the guy, didn't he!"

"We'll be ready for Louis next June," chimed in Johnny Ray, who manages Conn. "Maybe we didn't look so good tonight, but we been having boils up to six months ago."

Pinkey George, Savold's pilot, wouldn't speak to his gladiator for some time after the battle.

"You had him hurt two, three times," he finally yelled, "and what did you do? nothin'."

It was true. Savold finally did come out of his trance in the late rounds and hit Billy back a few times, and Billy didn't appear to like it much. But Savold didn't know what to do next.

For these occasional spurts some of the boys gave Lee a couple of rounds, and another when Conn fouled him. Conn won the others.

A LITTLE PRIVATE FIRE

Seattle, Nov. 30 (AP)—Fireman Roy Barkley, gazing listlessly out of the fire station window, came to attention abruptly. An elderly man strolled by, unconcerned as smoke poured from his pocket. Barkley's shouts brought no response. He slid down the pole, overtook the passer-by and beat out the fire. Between thanks the man said he had not heard the calls. "Matches," muttered Barkley as he returned to his window.

COME EMPTY HANDED

Vichy, France, Nov. 30 (AP)—Marshal Philippe Petain reported in a broadcast today that 70,000 residents of Nazi-occupied Lorraine have arrived in the uoccupied zone of France.

Urging that they be received warmly "by their French brothers," he said they lost everything they had, adding:—

"They accept their unfortunate fate without complaining and without recriminations."

Unless there is some Indian Summer lurking around some hidden corner, the City Junior Interscholastic Football Championship will not be determined this year. St. Michael's Academy and the Belleville Collegiate six-men squads finished their group schedule with four wins and two losses each, necessitating a play-off for the league title. With the sudden advent of winter and a blanket of snow covering local grid irons, little chance of the group championship being decided is anticipated by the teams concerned. However, they could wait until next spring and give us some California football for a change. Incidentally Convener Pete Beach tells us if the opportunity arises he will order a sudden death game at the slightest suggestion of mild weather.

The Belleville Junior Interscholastic football group proved such a success this fall that the mentors of the league agreed to continue into hockey with the same set-up. In the Junior Interscholastic set-up every player must be under 17 years of age on Sept. 1st of the playing season. The grid group ran into three cases of over-age players, but Convener Beach promptly squelched any future repetition of this nature, when he awarded all games won by teams playing over-age players to the losing club and promptly disqualified the offenders. Four local clubs compose the compact little group, Belleville Collegiate, St. Michael's Academy, Albert College and the Ontario School for the Deaf. With Mr Beach at the helm of the Junior Interscholastic hockey loop nothing but success can be looked for.

Merely as a suggestion from an outsider we would like to put in our oar and say the main secret of success in minor hockey, or any minor sports, is to abide by the age laws with a severe penalty for any player or team trying to use players over the limit. Permitting even one over-age player to take part in a game often makes a bad impression on boys and generally has unsatisfactory results. An over-aged player on a team deprives an eligible boy from a chance to play and also retards his own advancement.

Operator No. XIAK informs us to keep an ear to the ground while snooping around the B.C.I.V.S. in the future. The grapevine route informs us the boys up around the Church street seat of knowledge are casting covetous eyes towards a senior interscholastic C.O.S.S.A. title. Of course they harbored the same fond hopes at football. However, maybe the local "collegians" are hoping for sweet revenge in the hockey realm. Several players who are being counted on by the Belleville juniors attend the B.C.I.V.S. and the question now arises whether or not they will be available to play interscholastic and O.H.A. hockey in the same season. Cronk, McBride, Row, Warren and Sharpe all played juvenile hockey last season, while Ross Clare has been with the juniors for three seasons. Their hockey decisions of the future are anxiously awaited by the junior O.H.A. mentors.

Do you remember when Joe Louis fought his eleventh professional bout at Chicago six years ago tonight, defeating Charles Massera by a third-round knockout. The Brown Bomber, who won the world heavyweight title from James J. Braddock three years later, collected 1,100 for the nine minutes. For flattening Maxie Baer in four rounds ten months later he got $217,337.

The standing of the Kingston Van Horne Memorial series on Friday morning was as follows:

	W.	L.	F.	A.	Pts.
Queens	3	0	26	1	6
3-47 Battery	2	0	12	5	4
Belleville	1	1	9	17	2
Kingston	1	1	10	5	2
Perth-Smiths F.	0	2	3	13	0
Signals	0	2	0	19	0

The Reliance Aircraft pucksters escaped elimination in the Van Horne series by beating the combined hockey efforts of Perth and Smiths Falls the other night. Kingston scribe Bill Walshe says the Reliance team "displayed improved work with newcomers on the team working together much better and some of the old-timers showing the result of a few workouts." All "Speedy" St. Louis needs is another defenceman and a scoring forward, plus some hard practice. Attendants at the Hume Arean sprayed the skating surface for the past two nights, permitting the water to soak through slowly and thereby assure a solid foundation for the ultimate playing surface. If the present winter-like weather continues the Reliance sextette will be able to practice in Belleville before the Van Horne play-offs roll around.

Did you know that: If the Boston Bees are not sold, watch for a deal sending Shortstop Eddie Miller to the Reds for Billy Myers and $60,000 in folding money. . . . In grabbing 41 of their 100 victories by a margin of one run this year, Cincinnati established a record for the league. Old mark was 37 one-run wins made by Cubs in 1907. . . . Kenny Williams, Babe Ruth's chief rival as a home run walloper in the A. L. nearly 20 years ago, is chief of police at Klamath Falls, Ore. And Swede Risberg of the 1919 Black Sox is tending bar in the same town.

SPORT SLANTS — Babe Ruth just ain't the toughie he was when "King of the Swat." . . . The ex-Bambino is confined to his bed with a throat infection which he contracted in a recent hunting expedition in New Brunswick. . . . Apparently the sponsoring of a senior "A" hockey team runs into large peanuts. . . . The London "Streamliners" are headed towards a hurried retirement. . . . If so we wonder where their players will continue their hockey during the present season. It will be interesting to watch the finals. . . . Local puck fans should appreciate the 1941 O.H.A. hockey groupings in the junior series, it's Port Hope, Cobourg, Trenton and Belleville, while five clubs will line-up in the Eastern Ontario senior "B" group with Whitby, R.C.A.F., Peterboro, Belleville Reliance and Kingston included. . . . After winning the intermediate "B" title last year, Whitby asked to be stepped up.

"North West Mounted Police"

Cecil B. DeMille, master producer-director, has assembled the greatest cast of stars ever to appear in any of his productions for his new picture for Paramount, "North West Mounted Police," which will have its first local showing today at the Belle Theatre, with Gary Cooper and Madeleine Carroll in the stop starring roles.

An epic-sized tale of blazing and indomitable courage. DeMille has seen fit to place such good players as Paulette Goddard, Preston Foster, Robert Preston, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman, George Bancroft, Lon Chaney, Jr. and Walter Hampden in important roles, rounding out a top cast which ranks with any ever seen in one motion picture. Moreover, because of the backgrounds and the importance of the story, he has filmed the picture entirely in technicolor, the first time DeMille has ever made a complete picture in the medium.

The import of the story can only be judged from the fact that it has its basis in a real revolt against the Canadian government back in 1885 by a tribe of people known as the Metis, made up of half-breed voyageurs and the like, and a murdersome group if there ever was one. The revolt of the Metis, as a matter of record, amounted to a civil war which almost rent Canada asunder, and might have if it had not been for the courage of five hundred loyal Mounted Police.

Uprising Starts

Unfoldment of the narrative based on this revolt starts as one might therefore expect with the organization of the Metis under three leaders. Duroc (Tamiroff), Corbeau (George Bancroft) and Riel (Frances McDonald). When word reaches the Mounted that the Metis are organizing at Batoche, two policemen, Sergeant Jim Brett (Foster) and Ronnie Logan (Preston) are sent to investigate.

Brett receives the Metis' demands and when his life is threatened by the Metis, Ronnie's sister, April (Carroll), nurse at the settlement, comes to the rescue by announcing the birth of a son to one of the half-breeds. During this scene, it is also established that Brett is in love with April, while Ronnie is interested in Louvette, Indian girl who is about as tame as a wildcat, and who is Corbeau's daughter.

In a series of swiftly moving events, Brett, Dusty and McDuff (Overman) a specially sworn-in constable, move to prevent Corbeau from persuading the Cree Indians to join the Metis. Corbeau has a strong argument — a gatling gun, but Dusty dares Corbeau to tackle him with each man free to draw—and Corbeau backs down. The result of the dickering is that the chief promises to make war if Corbeau will bring him the red coats of the Mounted before three suns have set.

With the small force of fifty Mounted at Fort Carlton still threatened dangerously, Inspector Cabot (Montagu Love) decides to go after large stores of abandoned ammunition at Duck Lake. Suspecting an ambush, he sends Ronnie and another Mounted Policeman to a deserted cabin half way there to watch for the Metis. Meanwhile, April has heard at Batoche of an ambush planned for the Mounted. She sends Louvette to warn Ronnie and the Mounted.

Louvette, however, is only interested in Ronnie. She tricks him to a cabin where he is set upon by Indians, his arms bound. The Mounted, unwarned, ride into an ambush, with thousands of the Metis and Corbeau, blazing away with the gatling, to wipe out the Mounted entirely.

The Mounted's brave stand, the vindication of Ronnie's honor by Dusty, the capture of Corbeau and the other leaders of the Metis, and the winning of April bring the picture to its conclusion.

PUBLIC NOTICE
VOTING ON QUESTIONS
Two-Year Term for Council and Control of Water Works and Gas Works by Municipal Council.

NOTICE is hereby given that a statement of the questions to be submitted to a vote of the electors at the Annual Municipal Elections for the Corporation of the City of Belleville to be held on Monday, December 2nd., 1940, are hereinafter set forth.

FIRSTLY

Electors will have the opportunity of voting on the following question:

"Are you in favour as a war time measure under the Local Government Act 1940 of the Municipal Council elected for the year 1941 holding office for the term of two years?"

SECONDLY

Electors will have the opportunity of voting on the following question:

"Are you in favour of the Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville passing a By-law for the removal of the control and management of Utilities known as the Belleville Water Works and the Belleville Gas Works from the Public Utilities Commission of the City of Belleville and revesting the same in the Council of the said Corporation?"

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the Mayor of the Corporation of the City of Belleville or a member of the Council duly appointed for that purpose shall attend at the Mayor's Office in the City Hall in the said City of Belleville on the 27th. day of November, 1940, at the hour of three o'clock in the afternoon and if requested so to do, shall appoint in writing signed by him two persons to attend the final summing up of the votes given for and against the Questions, and one person to attend at each polling place on behalf of the persons interested in and desirous of promoting the proposed Questions and voting in the Affirmative thereon, and a like number on behalf of the persons interested in and desirous of opposing the proposed Questions and voting in the Negative thereon.

TAKE NOTICE that the foregoing is a correct statement of the questions to be submitted to the electors of the City of Belleville at the Annual Municipal Elections to be held on Monday, the second day of December, A.D., 1940.

Dated the 6th. day of November, 1940.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Melody and Moonlight"

A new film musical, "Melody and Moonlight", opens next at the Capitol Theatre.

Johnny Downs, well known for his typical "American Youth" roles is co-starred with Jane Frazee, until recently heard with her sister Ruth on various coast-to-coast radio programs of which the best known was the "Sensation" cigaret program.

Johnny and Jane find their experiences a bit trying in this comedy but finally, after a series of rib-tickling experiences, the film is brought to a close that should disappoint the cynics who insist upon the all too common heart-breaking fade-outs that usually bring tear jerkers to their welcomed conclusions.

Jerry Colonna and Barbara Allen, better known as "Vera Vague" on the radio, are featured prominently in the cast which includes many of the better known zanies of radio and movie fame. Mary Lee, Frank Jenks, Claire Carleton, Jonathan Hale and "The Kidoodlers" and on the same programme.

"Men With Wings"

"Men With Wings", the Technicolor cavalcade of the air presents a bird's-eye view of the progress of flying over three decades in the story of three young Americans who devote their lives to the development of aviation. Its all-star cast is headed by Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland and Louis Campbell.

The story opens with the historic flight of the Wright Brothers over Kitty Hawk in 1903 and traces the progress of flying through the early heartbreaking years of experimentation, through the tumultuous World War years, the fabulous boom days of the Coolidge era, the bleak years of the depression and down to the present of round-the-world flights at lightning speed.

MacMurray and Milland will be seen as two fliers who typify the birdmen who have made aviation what it is today. MacMurray is the devil-may-care adventurer who blazes trails across the sky but cannot stay in any one place long enough to make lasting contributions to aviation. Milland, on the other hand, is the patient experimenter, the far-visioned man who builds the plans for tomorrow's fliers. Miss Campbell, in her first big dramatic role, plays the pioneer airwoman whom both love.

Barbara (Vera Vague) Allen and Jerry Colonna in a scene from "Melody and Moonlight," the musical comedy hit coming next to the Capitol and on the same program "Men With Wings," in technicolor.

THE GORGON'S MASK

by Van Wyck Mason

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

The downward path led on towards the lazy rollers that creamed endlessly over black lava and gray-white coral.

Apparently overcome with sheer joy, Nadia, in her native Russian, began to sing one of those quick, irresistibly joyous songs which the moujiks sing on feast days. A few feet ahead of him she was striding along the path, drawing faint echoes with her rich contralto voice.

"And how was that?" she demanded, looking back over her shoulder at him. The smile faded from her lips when she read the expression on his face.

In an instant that boyish, carefree look had vanished; like a man who sees his doom upon him, Hugh North was peering fixedly past the wall of rock which had concealed an amazing sight until this moment.

Not half a mile away, moved a powerful slate-gray cruiser; smoke curling from her funnels to cast a sinister pall over the smiling blue-green waters through which she plowed.

Majestically behind her came a sister ship, and behind her still another; each with a high scroll of foam under the bows. More similar sleek and efficient killing machines, six in all, sped into sight . . . the Jap fleet!

Three of the battle cruisers passed so near Kauai that North could read their names, Haruna, Kirishma, and Kongo; nor had the parade ended with the juggernauts; they preceded a division of swift and deadly destroyers and a flotilla of twelve shark-like submarines.

Sharper grew the lines about Hugh North's mouth as he read aloud the numerals painted on the side of the submarine conning towers. "Fifty-three—letter I; 55, 56, 60 and 63 . . ."

It was twenty minutes before the last of the visiting squadron had passed on their fateful voyage to Oahu; twenty minutes in which the two stood in miserable silence.

Finally Nadia said, "Let's go up to the house, Hugh. I'm frightfully hungry; I'm sure Tsing has lunch ready."

After lunch, Nadia cast a quizzical look at her wrist watch.

"It's nearly two o'clock, mon cher, and it'll be hot awhile. Does a nap appeal?"

"Fine," he sighed. "I wouldn't mind forty winks at all."

"Then," she pleaded, "before you start winking, please hand that woolen red blanket over the lanai. I noticed it smelt musty."

"Right—it will be done, your majesty!" Walking just a trifle stiffly, North started for the door.

"Wait!" Nadia suddenly called as she arose and hurried after him. "I'm going to sleep in the sun—the—the blanket can dry that way."

"Here it is, dear," he smiled as she took it from beneath his arm. At the same time he was indefinably aware that something had stirred Nadia to her depths.

"Oh, look, Hugh," she cried presently, "there—there's a motorboat off the point."

Groaning in protest, North roused himself in time to notice the appearance of a swift black launch such as sportsmen customarily employ in tuna fishing. A party of five or six men were on it.

"Nothing to worry about," he drawled as he settled back again, "just a fishing party, I guess."

Nadia, however, was not to be reassured, and she got her marine glasses which she focused with great care.

From his position on the steamer chair the intelligence captain could not be sure whether her supple figure had stiffened a little or not—perhaps it was only concentration that prompted her to tuck her soft lower lip between her teeth.

"I say, Nadia," he called indolently, "pass me the glass; want a look-see, too."

"Eh?" Startled, Nadia spun about and the binoculars slipped from her fingers to shatter themselves on the rocks some thirty feet below.

"Oh!" she gasped ruefully. "My wonderful glasses! They're gone!"

"Too bad," cried North with quick sympathy. "I'll get you some more first time we go in to Waimea."

Half-closing his eyes, he stretched again in the deck chair, and so apparently saw nothing of that sudden pallor which had robbed Nadia's cheeks of color as she caught up her blanket. Crossing to the lanai's rail, she started to unfold it.

"So you're going to sun it after all?"

By the rail she paused as if undecided; then cast him a curious smile. "Can't seem to make up my mind." "You're sure of one thing, aren't you?" he queried tranquilly. "I am."

"Of that, always, she nodded as to herself. "Well, I've decided I'm not going to sleep, Hugh." She dropped the red blanket onto the matting beside her steamer chair and seated herself on it. "I want to talk, dear. I want to tell you, to explain many things—"

"Don't," he said gently, but a look of interest stirred in his eyes. "Let's forget everything. We'll pretend we're dwellers in Nirvana — nothingness."

But he was startled at the earnestness with which she spoke.

"All my life," she began, "I have thought of nothing but what we Russians call the 'Cause'. For its sake I tried to kill in myself every normal feminine instinct—no, you must listen," she said, when in protest he tried to raise his head. "I have squandered, used this alleged beauty of mine as—well, you know. Until two days ago, I have never been troubled, have never questioned life as I know it."

A little convulsively, Nadia pressed closer to him. "I—I am afraid. Mon Dieu! I, who have been brave all my life, have become a coward."

Then she poured out the story of her vivid career, told of a dozen desperate missions undertaken, of the terrors of the O.G.P.U. . . . "I thought no more of ordering the death of that treacherous Teodora than that!" She snapped her fingers lightly.

"Did you order her body cast adrift off Kalua?"

Vigorously the girl's coppery head was shaken. "No—that brute Karen thought it would frighten you—and certain others. Bogu! but I tongue-lashed him when I heard of it."

North started. Had a stick snapped somewhere back of the bungalow?

"What's that?"

"It's just Tsing; he's tending to a few things before he turns in for his siesta," she soothed, and her eyes shone with a sudden glow. "Forgive me, Hugh—I have been talking too much. But remember this one thing: I love you, Hugh; I will love you through eternity . . . even after I am gone."

Aroused by her inexplicably fierce earnestness, North raised himself to a sitting position.

"Good Lord, Nadia, what in the world makes you talk like this?"

"Because," she whispered, "I love you more than anything else in this world and I know you would never be happy having lost your honor. Now I will make it possible for you to win yours back . . ."

"Look here," he interrupted, "you're talking sheer nonsense, Nadia. You're upset from what we've been through."

Again, behind the bungalow, a branch threshed a little noisily. Her eyes glowing, Nadia got to her feet.

"Dear me," she cried, looking at her watch, "it's time for fishing, you'd better get the rods ready. You'll come back for the lunch basket? I'm afraid it'll be too heavy for me."

"Of course, how soon?"

"Oh, in about ten minutes." And as he was about to walk off, he heard her call, "Hugh!"

Turning, he saw Nadia standing in the centre of the sun-bathed lanai, a glorious vital figure with both soft arms held out to him, an uncertain smile hovering on her bright lips. Out of a whirlwind of emotions he beheld a new expression on her exquisite face and knew it was the face of the Red Gorgon—she on whom men looked and died!

"Hugh, my very dear one," she called, "you must kiss me before you go."

Fiercely she clung to him; he was amazed to find that her face, usually cool, was now almost icy cold in spite of the warm sun.

"I'll be back soon," he assured her, and ran lightly down the coral walk. Rounding a clump of bamboos, he leaped from the path into the shelter of a green tangle to his left.

"The Gorgon!" he muttered bitterly and pulled out the compact automatic which had never left him.

There was, North decided, an occasional uncertainty in Nadia's singing voice, as he flattened himself on the ground, while patiently waiting for her group of killers to take their posts. She would be expecting him to come walking joyously back to his death. . . .

Well, he could be hard, too. Eight shots. With his marksmanship he should accomplish a lot before he went under.

Familiar sensations returned when he discerned the outline of a man's head and shoulders stealing down along that walk leading from the slopes above; those same slopes on which he and Nadia had exulted in the peace and beauty of the morning sunshine. One — two — three more shapes, distorted by shadows and sunlight, crept into the back doorway of the bungalow.

Nadia's song faded suddenly in something like a gasp. On the lanai above, feet trampled furiously, a piece of furniture crashed, and then footsteps, running like mad, impinged on the amazed intelligence captain's hearing.

Why, those killers were leaving before the trap had been sprung! Who had bungled

Quite before he knew it, Captain North was bounding back up the coral path, his .32 automatic flashing in his hand.

"Nadia!" he cried sharply. "Nadia! Nadia!"

Complete stillness ruled in the pretty vine-grown bungalow. With his foot on the lowest step North suddenly checked himself. . . . Most likely this was a homicidal trap!

Inch by inch his eyes rose above the level of the bungalow floor. They encountered something—a pale green shape.

Great grief! Nadia, lovely Nadia, was lying on the grass matting of the bungalow's hall . . . half on one side and half on her back. Nadia! Could that be a black dagger handle projecting at a deadly angle from her side?

Nadia! Could that be she who, perfectly conscious, lay looking steadily, sadly at him from wide pain-filled eyes and with a tired smile curving her lips

She flinched when North slipped into the room. "So—after all, you never really trusted me?" Her voice was weak, faltering. "Ah, Seigneur Dieu, I—I—oh, Hugh—Hugh—come to me—there is no danger—they've done all they came to do to . . . me."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 30 (CP)—The firm to strong opening today changed to a soft tone before noon and prices were lower generally an hour before the market closed. Trading was quiet as prices eased off except for a half dozen of the cheaper golds which moved in considerable volume. Only 50,000 shares changed hands in the first hour.

O'Brien was again weak and the price touched 1.05 before staging a mild rally in which part of the loss was recovered. It closed Friday at 1.22. Kerr-Addison, MacLeod Cockshutt, Malartic Gold Fields, Preston, Chesterville and East Malartic were other weak issues.

Base metal issues, including Smelters, Pend Oreille and Jack Waite weakened moderately.

International Petroleum, Walker's Common, C.P.R. and some of the steels eased off narrowly.

Butter Prices Rise To New 1940 Peak

Toronto — Steady demand and light offerings pushed butter prices to the highest level of the year during this week's session of the Toronto open produce market. Prices were slightly irregular in eggs. Poultry held quietly steady.

Day-to-day buying was fairly steady on the butter market this week, with yesterday's activity reported as active. This effected a cleanup in the daily light arrivals of fresh receipts and the small offerings of storage stocks, and in turn strengthened prices on the Ontario product ⅜c a pound. Ontario No. 1 grade creamery solids traded yesterday at 31c a pound, with most holders endeavoring to obtain ¼c higher near the close.

Buyers concentrated on the lower grades on the egg market, resulting in weaker prices for top grades. Light deliveries of fresh eggs proved ample for the generally slow local demand. Storage eggs moved well on a basis of 32c for original grade A-large. Two cars went forward to seaboard for shipment overseas in the course of the week's activity.

Though sales were slow on the dressed poultry market, fair quantities moved into local consumer channels, the demand being better than in the previous week. Offerings were plentiful and the surplus was being packed for storage. Fowl were the exception and receipts of this kind of poultry were on the light side. The demand for turkeys which were offered in heavier volume, was not so keen.

Montreal Produce.

Montreal, Nov. 30—Produce market prices here, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 32c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 31¼c.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Nov. 30 (CP)—Dressed-weight were down 10 cents at Hull and prices were unchanged at Barrie, Peterborough and Stratford in bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Dressedweight: Barrie $10.6⅞, Hull $10.10, Peterborough $10.25 plus transportation, Stratford $10.25 plus transportation.

NOVEMBER COLDER THAN NOV. LAST YEAR

More severe temperatures were recorded during November, 1940, than for the same period during 1939, according to figures kept at the Belleville Purification Water Plant. During November, 1940, the thermometer dropped almost to zero with 1.5 being the coldest recorded, while in November, 1939, 10.9 was the minimum. Maximum temperatures were practically even however, with 61.5 being recorded this year as compared with 61.9 for the same period during 1939.

5-Cent Decline In Egg Prices

City Market Slimly Attended Because of Poor Roads in Country

Slippery roads resulting in treacherous driving conditions were responsible for a slim attendance on the produce market. Attendance on the outside market was exceptionally slim, with vendors for the inside market being somewhat later than usual in making their appearance.

Eggs declined another five cents in price from last week's quotations, selling at 40c per dozen for grade "A" large. Other grades were quoted at 38c and 35c per dozen. Butter held at the price quoted for last week, selling at 65c per two lb. roll. The chicken offering was not large. Prices, however, were steady, with large well-finished fowl selling at $1.50 for six-pound birds. Others ranged down to $1.00 each. Broilers sold from 75c to $1.00 per pair. A few ducks were offered at approximately 25c per lb. with $1.50 being top figure asked. A few turkeys were also offered at 25c per pound.

Outer Market Unchanged

Prices on the outside market remained practically stationary with winter apples being featured. Spys and MacIntosh, No. 1's, sold at $1.75 per hamper, Snows were $1.50 with Talman Sweets being held at the same figure. Cooking varieties sold at the usual price of $1.00 per bushel.

With the arrival of colder weather, butchers are doing business again with headcheese being offered at 15c per lb., sausage at 20c and pickled pork, in pieces, at 18c or 20c sliced. Several bacon sides were offered at 12c per lb. for fronts and at 14c for hinds. There was no fish offered.

Prices remained steady on the vegetable market with onions selling at 40c per peck, carrots, beets, parsnips and turnips at 30c per peck. Potatoes retailed at $1.00 per 75-lb. bag.

The offering of young porkers was also cut to a minimum with only one or two vendors having "squealers" for sale. Prices remained at the usual figure, ranging from $3.50 to $4.50 each, however. Stove wood sold at $10 per cord for hardwood or at $7 to $7.50 per cord for mixed lots.

Vehicular Calisthenics Seen as Cars ,Trucks Travel Slippery Roads.

Slippery roads caused motor cars and trucks to indulge in many vehicular calisthenics along city streets and driveways yesterday. Drivers, on the whole, however, excerised more than ordinary caution and no serious results were reported.

A large transport failing to negotiate the East Bridge Street hill was forced to turn around in the middle of the road. Some expert handling of the huge trailer and tractor was necessary before the driver finally made the turn.

A Church Street motorist had his car swerve up on a small icy bank a moment before he entered the garage. He closed his eyes and waited for the crash, but a second or so before the car would have come in contact with the side of the garage, the vehicle struck another slippery bump, and slithered into the building untouched.

Another sedan spun around dizzily at the Pinnacle-Bridge Streets intersection, but fortcnately no other traffic was there at the time and a frightened driver finally straightened his car away and sped along Pinnacle Street in safety.

It's an ill wind that doesn't blow somebody some good and serious fender damage might have resulted had it not been for the slippery condition of the streets early yesterday. The fenders of two cars clicked as they swung past each other at the Front-Bridge intersection, but the icy condition of the road caused them to slide away from each other after the slight impact.

PREMIER

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

At the Hungarian - Rumanian frontier, Nov. 30 (AP).—Predictions that the riotous Iron Guard may seize this day as the one upon which to exact bloody "total revenge" for the slaying of Corneliu Codreanu, its "martyred" founder, reached the border today from strife-torn Rumania.

Premier Antonescu struggled to keep control of the country, which dispatches hinted to be on the verge of a civil war, while Guardists arranged to attend the funeral services in Bucharest for Codreanu and thirteen comrades who were killed two years ago today (while trying to escape from Jilava Prison, the official account at the time said.)

Eighteen-year-old King Michael was reported to have fled his capital. There were reports of heavy loss of life in fighting at three Transylvanian cities. German and Rumanian troops were said to be massing in Bucharest. The death list in the Iron Guard blood slaughter, which started Wednesday, was said to be mounting.

Some reports trickling through the strict Rumanian censorship said Michael, who came to the throne when his father, Carol II, abdicated Sept. 6, was headed for the Yugoslav frontier. Others said he was waiting on the outskirts of Bucharest until the situation cleared.

Guards Trying to Seize Power

These border-dispatches said that despite stern counter-measures taken by Antonescu to put down the spreading terror from the Iron Guard's purge of its enemies, Guardist Legionnaires were trying to seize power at Turnu-Severin, Craiova and Brasov, in Transylvania. Heavy loss of life was said to have occurred in those cities in a fight for possession of public buildings.

The Guardists were said to have captured the Post Office and telephone building at Brasov before being driven out by soliders of the local garrison.

(At Ruse, Bulgaria, on the Rumanian frontier not far from Bucharest, artillery fire could be heard across the Danube River and travellers from the Rumanian border village of Giurgiu reported the Antonescu government was using heavy guns to crush the Guard rebellion.

100 Persons Assassinated

(These travellers said "at least 100" persons had been assassinated in Bucharest and that reports were current there that as many more had been slain in the provinces. Widespread anti-semitic activity was reported.

(The police chief of Giurgiu, reached by telephone from Bucharest, said he had heard no explosions of artillery. The Government set the total dead in Bucharest at 67 and denied the reports of street fighting in provincial cities.)

Death Is a Mystery.

One sharply-censored dispatch reaching Budapest from Bucharest said Antonescu had sought the aid of Juliu Maniu, peasant leader, and army corps commanders.

"The bodies of seven Jews were found today along a railway track between Bucharest and Ploesti," the dispatch said. "How they met death is reported to be a 'mystery'."

Anti-Jewish violence was reported at Galatz and Braila and Guardists were said to be in control of the latter city.

The disorders began Wednesday when the remains of Codreanu and his thirteen comrades, hailed as "martyrs" by the Iron Guard, were disinterred from Jilava prison yard and 64 members of the old regime slain in vengeance at the grave.

(Cordreanu, 39-year-old chieftain of the Iron Guard, was sent to Jilava prison on May 28, 1938, for treason.)

The Iron Guard, now led by Vice-Premier Horia Sima, had a long struggle for existence. It was banned repeatedly. Many of its leaders and members were jailed and slain. At best, it was authoritatively estimated to have had 50,000 members, but many more Rumanians were sympathizers. The most votes the party ever polled was 478,378 — in 1937—or 15.58 per cent of the total.

TRAPPED MINERS

time of the explosion in section "north 12" escaped, officials said. The shaft mine employs about 500.

Rescue Work Slowed Up

Repeated slate falls and excessive gas slowed rescue operations. Five workers, wearing oxygen masks, were carried from the mine unconscious shortly after midnight but were revived and able to walk to their homes.

The superintendent emphasized there was no evidence of fire following the terrific detonation, tentatively attributed by miners to ignited gas. He asserted the workings had been thoroughly rock dusted to prevent explosions and that only "permissible" explosives and machinery were used.

Ambulances from nearby towns waiting at the mine's two entrances were outlined in an eerie glow from a huge burning slag heap nearby. State highway patrolmen kept anxious relatives of miners and spectators from the mine property.

The mine disaster was Ohio's second this year. Seventy-two men were killed in the March 16 explosion at the nearby Willow Grove mine.

CHINESE PUPPET

The way was left clear, however, for continued Japanese military action against Chiang's troops still battling for the interior.

Nine Articles of Protocol.

Japanese reports said the nine articles and protocol of the treaty provided principally:

1. Mutual respect for sovereignty of Japanese and Chinese territories;

2. Political, economic and cultural co-operation;

3. Joint defence against Communism, and the elimination of Communist elements, saying specifically that Japan, in order to carry out defence against Communist activities shall station the requried forces in specified areas of Mengchiang and North China for the necessary duration;

4. Specific permission for Japan to station naval units in China.

5. Chinese co-operation in giving Japan all necessary facilities for development of economic resources and promotion of trade with Japan; Japanese financial aid in rehabilitating Chinese economy.

No Further Territorial Claims.

6. Japanese renunciation of any further territorial claims in China and restoration of China's former concessions, China allowing freedom of entry and residence to Japanese subjects.

The Japanese were said to have agreed in the protocol to withdraw their armies from China within two years after fighting ends, "with the exception of troops stationed in accordance with the treaty".

The Nanking government pledged to compensate Japan for damages to Japanese rights and interests "suffered because of the China incident." Details of such reparations were left to be worked out later.

Manchoukuo, Japanese - created state sliced earlier from the north of China, recognized the Nanking government immediately.

Japanese sources predicted earlier that Japan's axis partners, Germany and Italy, also would exchange ambassadors with Nanking.

(Britain and the United States recognize the Chungking government of Chiang Kai-shek as representing China.)

Chiang To Increase Resistance.

Chungking reports predicted Gen. Chiang's forces would answer the new pact by increasing their resistance.

Military dispatches told of increasingly fierce fighting between Chiang's troops and the Japanese north west of Hankow and south of the Yangtse below Hankow. The Chinese said 3,000 Japanese have fallen in fighting along the Han River on the front northwest of Hankow. Japanese said their troops had engaged and beaten back 300,000 Chinese.

Only a few hours before the signing of the Nanking-Tokyo treaty a Japanese operated train bound for the Nanking ceremonies was dynamited—reportedly by Chiang's forces—at Soochow, 50 miles west of Shanghai.

Between 100 and 400 persons were killed and injured as the blast hurled five cars from the track and blocked traffic.

For Japanese Consumption.

Chungking, China, Nov. 30 (AP). —The "peace pact" signed by Japan and the Japanese dominated government of Wang Ching-Wei at Nanking was described by spokesmen of the Chungking government today as "a performance obviously for Japanese domestic consumption only".

"If this step would make any difference in China's ability to resist Japan," the spokesman said, "then the Japanese would have taken it long ago."

All Request Band Concert To Be Given

The Municipal Band deeply appreciate the continual interest in its efforts to please the band loving public. So many calls have come in requesting numbers to be repeated that have been played on previous programs. Mr. Reg Hinchey has composed a new march and dedicated it to the Argyll Light Infantry Battalion (Tank). This march will be played for the first time in Belleville Sunday evening. The Overture requested during the summer will also be given its first Belleville rendition. Mr. Harold Barrett, Belleville's popular baritone will also present two groups of songs.

Lieut. Fred Jobson is pleased to present the following all request program:

March — Argyll Light Infantry (Tank).
Overture—Orpheus.
Vocal Solo, Selected—Mr. Harold Barrett, Baritone.
Selection—Squires Popular Songs.
Trombone Solo—The Trumpeter—Mr. Reg. Wardle.
March—Sons of the Brave.
Vocal Solo, Selected—Mr. Harold Barrett.
Intermezzo—In a Monastary Garden.
Fantasia—Military Tattoo.
Finale—There'll Always Be An England.
God Save The King.

FIRE DRIVER PAYS

Acton, Engand, —(CP)— Hurt when the firetruck on the way to a fire collided with a trolley-bus, Fireman F. G. Winter was awarded £2,500 ($11,125) damages against the driver of the truck.

CAPITAL IMPROVES

Widespread damage to houses in the London area and "a few deaths were disclosed in the communique.

It said lesser raids were carried out virtually to the four corners of the island kingdom and mentioned Liverpool, focus of the air attacks the night before, as visited again. However, it said, neither casualties nor damage were heavy.

Some British sources attributed the severity of the raid on London to a German hope that the capital's anti-aircraft defences had been weakened to rush guns to hard-pressed cities in the midlands and northwest.

Curtain of Steel Greets Raiders

If the Nazis entertained such thoughts they must have been unpleasantly surprised by the curtain of steel that greeted them, these sources added.

Abandoning formation flying, the raiders approached London from various directions and dropped flares, flame bombs and high explosive bombs.

A suburban shopping centre, hospital and movie theatre were among structures hit by bombs. In one London district German planes roared over at the rate of two a minute.

A mother and her two children were killed when six bombs demolished a housing development in a southeast coastal town. Six were known dead and others injured in a district near London.

Daylight raiders smashed again at London during a one-hour forenoon alarm and dropped a bomb which damaged two buildings in a residential district.

RESTRICTIONS

From the fact that the Throne speech debate is to be suspended to consider these resolutions, members deduced they were of more than ordinary importance. It was widely assumed that the exchange situation would be involved in the matters.

There were reports that a strict limitation of importation of citrus fruits would be one method used by the government to conserve foreign exchange. Purchases of such fruits normally send about $14,000,000 a year out of the country.

Limitation Will be Compulsory

A week ago the Canadian Fruit Wholesalers' Association suggested in a circular letter to dealers that importation of various fruits and vegetables might be limited voluntarily. However, any government limitation on citrus fruit imports would be compulsory.

Stiff restriction on the use of certain luxuries was also believed a likely proposal. It was believed the tariff on several classes of British goods might be substantially eased, to facilitate Britain's payment for war purchases in Canada and to allow more concentration on war production in Canada. On the other side, it was believed that restriction of imports of certain non-essentials from the United States was probable, now or early in the new year, to aid Canada's exchange relationship with the United States

Suspend Throne Speech Debate

The matter came before the Commons yesterday when the Prime Minister moved suspension on Monday of the Throne Speech debate which has been running three weeks, to deal with "a resolution or two" by Finance Minister Ilsley.

Responding to a request from Conservative House Leader Hanson for some indication of the nature of the resolutions, Mr. King suggested that after the resolutions were introduced, giving a general idea of the content of the measures to come, the debate might be resumed to give members time to study the resolutions.

Four speakers engaged in the debate yesterday. The Government's administration of the Defence of Canada Regulations came under sharp criticism from E. G. Hansell (N.D. MacLeod) who claimed it tended to instil fear in a free people.

Farmers Discussed.

"I believe there is a fear which characterizes people in Canada today," he said, "the fear lest in talking about politics, talking concerning what the government is doing or not doing, they may turn around and find themselves face to face with a row of brass buttons. That sense of fear is characteristic of a dictatorship; it is the very antithesis of democracy."

Mr. Hansell submitted that the government's "hush-hush" policy regarding the war program was responsible for the listlessness and lack of enthusiasm which had marked the debate. That policy was having an effect on the public, too. It appeared that the rights of a democratic people ended with the ballot box.

Two Ottawa Valley members, R. W. Warren (Lib. Renfrew North) and Russell Boucher (Con. Carleton), discussed the present lot of the Canadian farmer. There was no great discontent among Eastern Ontario farmers regarding prices, Mr. Warren argued, "because they feel that they are working in a world cause and they are satisfied if they can get along, provided that there is equality of sacrifice among all the classes of people."

Farmer Shouldering Heavy Load.

Mr. Boucher, in his maiden speech held that the farmer, "more than anyone else, is shouldering the responsibility for our war effort," with valor and loyalty which merit the praise and admiration of the house.

He urged the distributon of a greater share of war contracts to smaller industries, instead of concentrating them in large industries.

With R. W. Gladstone Lib. Wellington South) he contended that the government should make use of the ability of the members of parliament, who were anxious to do everything possible in the war effort.

Runs Into Snag.

Mr. Gladstone said he would speak on "the supremacy of parliament", but he at once ran into a snag provided by parliamentary rules.

On the long list of resolutions by private members, now on the order paper, is one by Mr. Gladstone asking the government to give consideration to "the matter of continuous participation by additional members of parliament in the responsibility of directing our war effort and of planning on after the war program for Canada."

Although he realized this motion might not be debated until next year, Mr. Gladstone said he would lay the groundwork for the debate when it does come.

This brought an interruption from Prime Minister Mackenzie King who suggested there was nothing in the rules of parliament permitting debate of a private motion except at the time it was being moved. Mr. King said he had no wish to restrict discussion but feared a precedent might be established.

Conservative House Leader said the point was well taken. "Rules are rules," he said. Mr. Gladstone then proceeded with other sections of his speech.

ITALIAN PLANS

Communications Difficult

For weeks the Italians have found it impossible to make steady use of the direct route across the Mediterranean from Taranto, Brindisi or any other Italian port to Libya.

Now the whole Mediterranean seems to be under British control, not only with Admiral Somerville's big force in the west but with strong British forces firmly established on Crete, the Greek Island which blocks off the Italians from the Aegean Sea and from their bases on the Dodecanse Islands.

These islands have been under British blockade for weeks, their value to Italy miminized if not nullified by the possession of Crete and by fairly steady air attacks by the Royal Air Force and the fleet air arm, and occasional shelling by fleet units.

In the early days of the war the French navy was used to guard the western end of the Mediterranean, leaving the eastern basin to British warships operating out of the naval base at Alexandria. Collapse of French resistance upset this arrangement and other factors combined to make it impossible for the British fleet to keep the whole Mediterranean under control.

But it now is becoming more and more evident day by day that Sir Andrew Cunningham's force has gained a sufficient margin of superiority over the Italian fleet to permit a much wider section of the Mediterranean to be patrolled and guarded, and correspondingly to restrain the use of the commercial sealanes between Italy and North Africa.

The actions of the Admiralty seem to hint that a full dress offensive has been turned on in the hope of knocking the weaker end of the Axis out of the war—the sort of offensive urged last Wednesday in Commons by former War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha.

Skidding Car Hits Sanding Machine

Skidding on the icy highway two miles west of Belleville, an automobile driven by Mike Yosepanko, of Point Anne, collided with the Department of Highway sanding machine Friday evening. The force of the impact hurled the trailing "sander" into the air with such force that the machine dropped directly into the windshield of Mr. Yosepanko's car. The only injuries sustained were minor cuts about the driver's hands. Considerable damage resulted to the car, however.

Horse Injured

Injury to a horse and considerable damage to a motor car driven by Lester Culkin was the result of an accident which occurred on College Street when a mail delivery wagon, driven by Frank Miller, Thurlow, is alleged to have crossed the street in front of Mr Culkin's car. The horse drawing the mail wagon was injured and damage to at least $75 resulted to the automobile.

Fracas in Restaurant

A disturbance was reported in a local downtown restaurant early this morning where a fistic encounter was being indulged in between a local citizen and a member of the R.C.A.F. Constable H. Wright investigated and apprehended the offenders, both whom were reported to have been intoxicated. Damage to the amount of $70.00 to the restaurant property was reported. The matter will be thoroughly aired in Monday's police court proceedings, Chief Kidd revealed today.

Tweed Milling Truck Turns Over in Ditch

When the Tweed Milling truck, which he was driving, turned over on Highway No. 2, a few miles west of Kingston, yesterday, Mr. A. Tugnett, of this city, escaped serious injury early Friday. The snow-covered highway was exceedingly slippery and the large truck skidded into the ditch, where it turned over. Only minor damage to the side of the truck resulted, but several bags of feed were lost as the result of the accident.

HAMILTON COMPANY GIVEN CONTRACT

The Pigott Construction Company of Hamilton has been awarded the contract for the construction of hangars at the Bombing and Gunnery School at Mountain View, according to a story in the Picton papers. Weather permitting, this work will be started in the immediate future, it is announced. Contracts for other buildings will soon be let.

The announcement that the construction of buildings at the Mountain View Airport will commence this autumn will come as welcome news to labourers and carpenters of this district, as men who otherwise would not be employed during the winter months will have work during the slack period. Influential Prince Edward County men were partly responsible for getting this work started this fall, as they put forth every effort to get the building program commenced as soon as possible. It was originally the intention not to start these buildings until next spring.

Christmas Concerts

QUEEN VICTORIA SCHOOL

BEFORE an audience which filled the spacious auditorium to capacity pupils of Queen Victoria School on Friday evening presented their annual concert, the high standard of which was in keeping with the excellent entertainments of which this school has been famous in past years. In welcoming the parents and friends, Mr. A. C. Wilkin, principal, explained that the children had been engaged in this project for about three weeks. Two hundred and eighty pupils were taking part in the program, the purpose being to have as large a number as possible participate. The lighting and stage effects were in charge of the children, and the very capable way in which they carried out this important part of the program was a great credit to their capabilities.

Fine Program

The program stressed music in the solo, operetta, chorus and choir work, and in the performances of Queen Victoria School Band. The singing of the children, particularly the choral work, was splendid, the operetta being a perfect medium for the demonstration of the choir. It was a joy to listen to the voices lifted in the lovely songs and hymns of the evening and the careful training by Miss Phyllis May was responsible in no small part for the success of the evening. Mr. William Connor assisted as accompanist, and the teachers of the school by their patient coaching in the various items on the program shared in the success that the concert attained.

Opening with numbers by the Queen Victoria School Band, a fine group of young musicians, who also contributed later in the program, the concert continued with a selection by the Rhythm Band of Miss Horton's Class. These tiny boys and girls were a picture in their red capes and pill box hats, and played their numbers perfectly.

Solo numbers during the evening were the dances by Arlene Dickey a dainty fairy in blue and white, a dance by Beverly Jean Blue whose winsome charm was enhanced by her blue and gold costume, and a vocal solo by Barbara Joan Latta; who sang very sweetly.

The choruses by members of Grades II and III were very well done, and the little windmill drill was a delightful part of this number.

"Going to School in Mother Goose Land" by the Primary Department was carried out with faithful attention to every detail concerning the peculiarities of certain folk of nursery tale fame. The stage setting, a miniature house, was beautifully executed. At the call of the Master, a part taken with remarkable stage ability by James Simpson, the children of Mother Goose Land were summoned and one by one they were introduced to the delight of the audience. A chorus added to the interest of this part, while the clever lines, clearly given by the young actors were most amusing. The Bunnies were particularly fascinating and captured all hearts.

Operetta

"The Christmas Waif" an operetta which carried with it a story of particular significance at this time of year was admirably presented by the fine cast. In the title role, Gordon Williamson, gave a very fine performance as the waif who wanders into a home to sleep on Christmas Eve. Other members of the cast from the grandfather to the littlest grandson took their parts with ease.

The scene in which the little waif dreamed of the Christmas story told him by his mother years ago was very touching. The tableau at Bethlehem beneath the gleaming star was shown in a dim light that heightened the dream effect, and was reproduced in a manner that was a tribute to those behind scenes as well as the cast.

The choir, grouped offstage, the girls wearing black gowns, gave the beautiful musical setting for this number and their work received sincere praise from the audience. Excellently trained and containing many very fine voices, particularly that of Jack Shaddock, the choir deserves much credit for the evening's success.

Pupils and their parts:

Ottawa, Nov. 30. — (CP)—The name of Jean Desy, Minister to Belgium and The Netherlands before the German invasion of those countries, is being mentioned prominently in speculation on forthcoming appointments to new diplomatic posts in Argentina and Brazil.

The Government's decision to exchange Ministers with the two South American countries was announced in the House of Commons a fortnight ago by Prime Minister Mackenzie King. He said appointments would be made as soon as possible.

It is believed the government will continue its recent practice by appointing "career" men to the posts and Mr. Desy fits into this category.

L. B. Pearson, counsellor to Hon. Vincent Massey, Commissioner to London, and Escott Reid, Second Secretary at the Legation in Washington, are mentioned as being in line for promotion.

Col. George P. Vanier, former Minister to Paris, is in Canada at present but the government has expressed its intention of sending him back to France as soon as favorable opportunity arises.

Sessional Sidelights

It was 5.50 p.m., 10 minutes before the set adjournment hour for the House . . . Anthony Hlynka, young New Democracy member for Vegreville, stood up . . . said he. "I call it six o'clock". . . . Setting the clock ahead like that is Speaker's Glen's privilege so the House laughed . . . Speaker Glen thought it a joke too, put on his three-cornered hat and left the Chamber, signal that Hlynka had the right idea.

R. W. Mayhew (Lib.-Victoria), got his metaphors mixed . . . . "Shoulders to the task", he put it, instead of "shoulders to the wheel" . . . . The debate was so quiet one day that J. F. Pouliot (Lib.-Temiscouata) later said the House was "like a mortuary chamber".

Tom Reid (Lib.-New Westminster) still plays the bagpipes in his third-floor office every night . . . The whole floor likes it . . . Dr. H. A. Bruce (Con.-Toronto-Parkdale) wears a dark gray morning coat like the one Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett wore sometimes when he was Prime Minister.

Robert Preston and Paulette Goddard provide one of the romantic high spots in the new Cecil B. DeMille technicolor epic, "Northwest Mounted Police," featuring Gary Cooper and Madeleine Carroll, now on the Belle screen.

The New Zealand State Forest Service will experiment in the production of charcoal from native woods to be used as a substitute for gasoline in motor vehicles.

Covers made of a transparent rubberized material are being manufactured in New Jersey to protect pages of books, photographs, documents and important papers.
